SECOND REG'T REVIEWED

More Than 5,000 Witness Military Event in Which Co. K. Participates.

GOVERNOR PRESENTS MEDALS.

Major Martin A Member of Team Receiving Columbia Trophy —Second Battalion Applauded.

The military social event of the year in the National Guard of the State was the official review of the Second Regiment in the Trenton armory, last night, by Governor J. Franklin Fort. Co. K, of this city, attached to this regiment showed up well in the drill and received many flattering comments. In addition to the drill, Governor Fort presented various medals and trophies, won by members and teams from the regiment. More than five thousand persons were present to witness the drill.

Co. K joined Companies C and I, of Elizabeth, and M, of Somerville, in making the special trip to Trenton, under the command of Major W. B. Martin. Prior to the review, General Dennis F. Collins gave a dinner in honor of the Governor and his staff at the Hotel Windsor.

After the review, Governor Fort made the presentations, and this was followed by a regimental parade. The affair closed with an informal dance, and the spacious drill shed was covered with hundreds of merry dancers, who glided to the tuneful music of Winkler's Second Regiment band.

Governor Fort personally presented the medals for long and faithful service in the guard, making a few appropriate remarks to the recipients. The shields and other trophies were presented to the successful contestants by InspectorGeneral of Rifle Practice Bird W. Spencer, who also complimented the winners for their success. A luncheon was served in the squad room while the dancing was in progress. It was the first official visit made by Governor Fort, with the exception of the one at the Sea Girt encampment last summer, and in his honor, and because of this fact, the event was of unusual brilliancy.

Major W. B. Martin is a member of the team receiving the Columbia trophy. Captain W. Kempton Browning, formerly of this city, was among the battalion officers assisting the majors in the drill. It is considered doubtful whether the guardsmen ever showed to better advantage than last night. The close order drill was gone through and the men executed the various manoeuvres with a precision that elicited commendation on all sides.

The Second battalion, in which is Co. K, of this city, followed the Trenton battalion, and received frequent applause for its fine work, showing complete mastery of the tactics. The local soldier boys arrived home at 1.20 o'clock this morning. Practically the full company, fifty-eight members, took part in the drill and parade.

BOROUGH COPS BUSY ROUNDING UP DRUNKS

An argument between two drunken men as to which should take the other home, caused both to be landed in the borough jail, from which they were released this morning, having been incarcerated since Saturday night. They were Michael Reddington, thirty-five a hod carrier, and Joseph Donnelly, thirty-six, a driver.

Marshal Kiernan saw them on upper Somerset street about 11:20, pulling each other from one side of the street to the other, and saying over and over: "C'mon, Mike, y'urdrunk—I'll sho'th'way." "G'long, y'ur drunk y'urself, omtakin'you home. Jo, y'urallrightbuty'urdrunk." "Yu lie, y'ur drunkesh!." The marshal headed them towards the station, but found it difficult going and signalled for assistance, Marshal Pope coming to his aid. At the hearing, Recorder Dolliver fined them $2 or two days. They preferred to board it out, which they did, ending the affair this morning.

George Jacobson also was arrested at Somerset and Greenbrook road, where he was found in a dopey condition by Marshal Pope. He said he was a blacksmith fifty-two years old, and that this was the first time he had been arrested. He was given a suspended sentence.

Joseph Doyle, was found helplessly drunk yesterday morning lying in the snow on Somerset street, barely across the line in the borough. He had a dinner pail with him and had started for work when he felt the need of fuel to start the inner fires. Marshal Kiernan gathered him in, and as it was not his first offience Recorder Dolliver fined him $2 or two days this morning. Doyle decided to take the days. He had the money but didn't like to part with it. The man has a wife and several children. The recorder told him he would give him a heavy sentence, if he appeared before him again.

NEW JERSEY TEACHERS TO MEET AT TRENTON

The morning session will include a trip of inspection either to the plant of the John A. Roebling's Sons' company wire mills or to the Cook potteries. Following the assembling at the State schools at 10:30 a. m. the members will decide upon which plant shall be visited. Luncheon will be served at the State schools at 12:30.

The afternoon session will include an address of welcome by Dr. James M. Green, principal of the State schools, and a discussion of the New Biological Syllabus for High Schools, led by Dr. Clifton Morrison, of the Passaic High School, and Dr. R. G. Leavitt, of the State Normal School.

"Industrial Education" will be the subject of an address by William Wiener, of the Newark High School, and a discussion of "Labratory Aims and Methods" will be led by Dr. W. N. Mumper, of the State schools faculty.

Frozen Feet Yarn.

According to a story in the Newark morning paper, a Mrs. Harper, of this city, had both of her feet frozen while a passenger on a main line trolley car from Plainfield to Elizabeth. She was said to have received treatment in an Elizabeth drug store. It was also reported that she has threatened to bring suit against the P. S. C. Inquiry at the office of Superintendent Gettings, today, failed to bring confirmation of the story. He declared that he had not heard of the matter, adding that no report of such a happening had been made to him or to his office. George Luhr, the local superintendent, also stated that he had heard nothing of the alleged incident.

Woman Drunk Let Off.

Mrs. Annie Woodruff, forty years of age, who was arrested in the borough Saturday night for being drunk and disorderly, was given a suspended sentence by Recorder Dolliver. Her offense had been in shouting to two men across the street, neither of whom knew her. Marshall Kellatestified that he had tried to persuade the woman to go home, but received the torrent of abusive language and was obliged to take her to a cell, before she could be silenced. She gave a number on Grove street as her home and said her husband was a mechanic. The clothing she wore was of fine texture.

GIVES PARENTS ADVICE

S. St. John McCutchen Speaks at Largely Attended Meeting in Borough School.

EXPLAINS SCHOOLS' REVENUE.

Points Out to Parents Their Responsibilities—Dr. Krebs Also Gives a Talk.

The parents' meeting in the Somerset school last night was the best attended and most enthusiastic of the kind ever held in the school. The entire assembly room was filled when Samuel St. John McCutchen began to speak at 8:15. Mr. McCutchen called attention to the largeness of public school work in New Jersey, involving as it does 200,000 children and an expenditure of $12,000,000 per year. During the past six years the amount spent on the public schools of this State has been nearly doubled.

Three years ago, Mr. McCutchen said, an increased railroad tax was levied by the State. In all probability the bills for the purpose would have failed of passage through the Legislature but for the proviso that the whole resulting tax should be devoted to the support of the public schools.

Turning to another line of thought Mr. McCutchen stated that the responsibility of parents was not ended when the child was turned over to even a first class teacher. Much in the way of encouragement and co-operation should be given the child in his home study. Even if parents are unable to solve the problems with which the child is struggling, their attitude of interest and sympathy will be most helpful and stimulating to the child.

Superintendent Krebs also made a few remarks, after which the time was passed in conference between teachers and parents. Refreshments were served.

SUM UP FARBMAN CASE

Defense Called Witnesses to Disprove That Hotel Was Disorderly Resort.

THE WOMEN GIVE TESTIMONY.

The Accused Proprietor Not Put on the Stand—Verdict Likely to Be Rendered this Afternoon.

The taking of testimony in the Farbman disorderly house case came to a close shortly before noon today at Somerville, when the last witness was put on by William G. DeMeza, counsel for the accused. It was announced that there would be no further rebuttal and Judge Schenck announced adjournment until 1:30 this afternoon when the summing up commenced. The probabilities are the case will go to the jury about 3 o'clock.

The defense devoted yesterday afternoon's session to disproving the testimony of the two detectives, Fred Bowers and William Blazier, who had been engaged to get evidence against the Arlington hotel proprietor. They asserted that they had gone to the place with women and also that what took place there was sufficient grounds for the disorderly house charge.

Mrs. Bertram Sherman, who is generally referred to as "Gertie" Coddington, and Mrs. Eva Sparks, were mentioned as the women they had taken to the hotel and Lawyer DeMeza placed the former on the stand in rebuttal. Mrs. Sherman said that she had gone to the Arlington with the men but that nothing improper had taken place. Mrs. Sparks was subpoenaed but when her name was called she was not in court. It was stated that although she is under bonds her whereabouts are unknown.

Mrs. Fanny Jentrowitz, of Philadelphia, a middle-aged woman of attractive appearance, was called by the defense and asserted that she and her husband and children were living at the hotel on the night it was raided. She stated that they had been there for a month but that the police ignored their explanations and locked the husband up until late the next afternoon. Her story was given to show that the hotel was conducted in a legitimate manner and that the officers had acted hastily in their descent.

Another witness for the defense was Mrs. Gertrude Goodwin, who was alleged to have been at the hotel with the detectives. She stated that she had met the men and conversed with them but that she had never accompanied them to the Arlington. They had gotten her mixed with Gertrude Sherman, she said, and that the statements made with reference to her were absolutely false.

Farbman was not placed on the stand, neither was Mayor Samuel Townsend, who had been subpoenaed by the defense and who has been in attendance since the trial began. It is expected that the lawyers on both sides will make strong addresses in the summing up.

FOURTH NIBLO TALK AT THEATRE TONIGHT.

At the New Plainfield theatre tonight, the American humorist-tourist, Fred Niblo, will present "Russia, from the Black Sea to Siberia," the fourth of his delightfully entertaining series of zig-zag journeys around the world. Those who have had the pleasure of accompanying Mr. Niblo on his personally conducted pictorial pilgrimages during the past few weeks, will welcome the announcement that Russia is considered by Mr. Niblo to be the most intensely interesting travel-talk in the entire series, offering as it does, the strongest appeal in a pictorial way, as well as in the subject matter accompanying the illustrated features.

There will be hundreds of colored views, absolutely original flashlight, snapshot and panoramic photographs, liberally interspersed with rare motion pictures, showing Russia as it is today, from one end to the other, embracing many hitherto prohibited and absolutely unattainable subjects. All the pictorial features incident to this travel-talk represent the personal work of Mr. Niblo, taken at great expense and in constant risk of personal safety during a lengthy sojourn of many months within the domain of the Czar.

In the City Court.

Thomas Waldron, colored, was arrested at Neshanic by Detective-Sergeant Flynn, last night, charged by his wife with non-support. He was arraigned in the city court, this morning but his case was adjourned until tomorrow. George Capers, colored, of Bound Brook, arrested last night by Patrolman McGinley, as a suspicious person, gave a satisfactory explanation to Judge Runyon and was discharged.

President McAdoo, of the Hudson-Manhattan Railway Company, said his compensation in the line of his welcome as a speaker amply repaid him for crossing the North river by the present obsolete methods."

The Hudson river, he said, has grown narower, until it was now practically only about 150 feet between the Pennsylvania Railroad terminal and New York, and soon this gap would be closed up and land communication would soon be established between this city and the Manhattan skyscrapers.

H. M. Wooters, of New York; William H. Corbin, president of the New Jersey Title Guarantee and Trust Company; F. D. Beyer, of Newark; Judge Robert Carey, of the Hudson County Court of Common Pleas; J. L. Glazer, of the Publicity Bureau, and Vice-President William A. Lambert also spoke.

BANQUET AND FUN AT SAENGERBUND HALL

Something more than cold weather would be necessary to keep the members of Gesang and Turn Verein away from Saengerbund hall when a jolly time is scheduled. Last night's gathering proved to be one of the gayest the society has held this season. There was an unusually large attendance and everybody enjoyed a fine time. Early in the evening these newly elected officers were installed: President, S. H. Schleit; vice-president, Frank Jellig; treasurer, B. A. Paroubek; financial secretary, Aug. Wolfe; recording secretary, Walter Koppie. Speeches were made by former presidents John Retzer and Charles Dressel, Jr., while Messrs. Klinsman and Carl Felber, all of whom were heartily cheered.

There was a variety of entertainment, which included dancing, bowling and other games. One of the most enjoyable features of the evening was the supper, which was provided by a committee composed of Mrs. Mathias Menzenbach, Mrs. Antone Stanzenberg, Mrs. John Retzer, Mrs. B. A. Paroubek, Mrs. Alfred Luthman and Mrs. Charles Meyers.

THE DAILY PRESS CARRIERS ENJOY ANNUAL STRAW-RIDE.

The Daily Press carriers to the number of nineteen, accompanied by four guests, enjoyed a fine strawride, last night, the outing being arranged by the proprietor of the paper. The boys gathered at the office at 8 o'clock, where they jumped aboard one of Conover's big box sleighs for the trip. Westfield was the destination and when that place was reached, the lads were generously supplied with refreshments.

It was about 11:30 o'clock when the boys returned home, all thoroughly delighted with the sleighride. It is needless to say that the boys had no trouble in making their own fun throughout the trip. The minor details of the affair were in charge of "Hub" Reynolds, dean of the newsies.

Mrs. Sarah Caldwell.

Mrs. Sarah Caldwell, colored, died yesterday morning at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Philips, on West Fourth street. She is survived by two children, four sisters and father and mother. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from Shiloh Baptist church.

MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION BANQUET BIGGEST AND MOST SUCCESSFUL EVER HELD HERE

Three Hundred Enthusiastic and Representative Men Listen to Happy Speeches, Enjoy a Fine Menu and Have a Merry Time Generally at First Annual Feast.

FORMER MAYOR SAUNDERS MAKES A CAPITAL TOASTMASTER

Marcus M. Marks Scores a Hit as Chief Speaker—Peter Daly, Father Bogan, Rev. G. A. Warner, J. E. Martine and Charles J. Fisk Keep the Crowd in Good Humor.

Though organized a little less than a year ago, the Plainfield Merchants' Association fully demonstrated it is a wide-awake and healthy youngster, last night, by conducting what was undoubtedly the largest and most successful banquet ever held in the city. It took place in the Hartridge auditorium, formerly the Casino, and was attended by a few short of 300 representative business men, city officials and invited guests from out-of-town. Every walk of life and every line of mercantile trade was apparent in the assemblage and the variance of interests and professions was a subject for comment on the part of speakers.

The guests were seated at individual tables, eight to each one, arranged about the main floor, while the speakers and guests of honor were grouped on the stage. American flags formed the greater part of the decorations but a mass of palms and plants in one corner added greatly to the effect and partially screened Suhr's Imperial orchestra from view. The musicians rendered a program of popular airs during the evening and toward the close gave the accompaniment to numerous familiar songs in which City Judge William N. Runyon acted as chief vocalist. The several menu cards and the novel song cards prepared by David J. Carney were favorably commented upon.

Mr. Saunders Toastmaster.

A. E. Force, who is the president of the Merchants' Association acted as master of ceremonies, while former Mayor William L. Saunders was toastmaster. At the speakers' table were Marcus M. Marks, president of the New York Civic Federation, who gave the principal address; Peter Francis Daly, surrogate of Middlesex county; Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, Rev. George A. Warner, Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Hon. Samuel Townsend, Judge William Newcorn, City Judge William N. Runyon and James E. Martine.

Mr. Mark's Speech.

With the completion of the dinner, served by DeMolli, order was called by President Force, who introduced Mr. Saunders as the toastmaster. The latter prefaced his introductions by a witty address in which he declared the banquet to be the largest and most enthusiastic of the kind he had ever attended in Plainfield. It was a great tribute to the merchants, he added, from the fact that though they had been organized but a short time, they certainly knew their business and were most assuredly in touch with the people. He ended up by calling upon Mayor Charles J. Fisk and the latter voiced his sentiments in a pithy, three minute speech. Both men were frequently interrupted by rounds of applause and cheers.

The address of Mr. Marks, who is a retired clothier but a director in numerous enterprises and a man noted for his efforts in behalf of municipal improvement, was on the subject "Get Together." At the outset he demonstrated that he is in touch with Plainfield and its politicans by telling a couple of stories at the expense of several leaders, which brought a big laugh. Continuing Mr. Marks declared that where there are two elements in the residential life of a city such as Plainfield, the business men and commuters, cooperation is necessary for the development of the community, for what is the gain of each is the gain of all. He declared Plainfield to be a beautiful city and that it has many handsome homes on the average of any place he had ever visited; that there are so many of them that it will be necessary for the dwellers and their neighbors to look outward for expansion.

"There are many things that you can all do to develop the city," Mr. Marks continued. "First, there is the profit to be derived from co-operation. By the new system of arithmetic, one plus one equals three and just so when two men get together they have the power of three through an exchange of ideas. Each gives the other the value of his experience and thus is one step taken forward in the march of progress.

Favors Shorter Hours.

"And right here," said the speaker, "let me say a word in favor of shorter hours in the stores. When I was in business in Passaic many years ago, we used to open up at day-break and hang up the shutters anywhere between ten and twelve o'clock at night. We were always on the job if a customer was in sight, but we can't stand such long hours nowadays because of the increased excitement in business—the telephone, the telegraph and the ever-increasing competition. If we agree upon a shorter day it can easily be accomplished and no one will be the loser."

"We are not living today to do business but doing business to live. We should close as early as the trade permits and suspend business on every holiday. But at the same time, the stores should be kept well lighted in front and according to information given me, Plainfield should have are lights on its business streets. The trolley cars as a rule are run through the well lighted streets and there is nothing like illumination to draw outside trade toward the merchants."

The Merchant's Duty.

Continuing on Mr. Marks said that the business men owe a service to the city and it is a part of their duty to assist the mayor in his municipal undertakings. The public business should be their business, and by hearty co-operation all share alike in the development of the community. Mr. Marks also asserted his belief that every man who has a competence should retire from business and make room for some one else. There is nothing to the continual running around like a squirrel in a cage, he said, and if retirement isn't made early it is never done. He also declared that business men should take two vacations a year, one in summer and one in winter, a policy that he and his brother laid down when they were in partnership and which they strictly observed.

"The man who can't leave his business," he said, "hasn't got the right sort of head clerk. He should have his affairs arranged so that he can get away at any time and he should also incorporate his business after he has succeeded in order to give his clerks a chance. By all means retire when you have a modest competence and instead of worrying about your children, enjoy life and let them do a little hustling the same as you did."

In conclusion Mr. Marks expressed the belief that from the auspicious beginning of the Merchants' Association it would eventually become a great force in the city. He advised the members to "get together" once a month, not on a large scale, but just to get acquainted and rub off the sharp edges of competition. He was enthusiastically applauded before resuming his seat.

Others Respond.

Mr. Marks was followed by Peter F. Daly, of New Brunswick, who gave a general talk on the progressiveness of Americans and the activities characteristic of the merchants of Plainfield and elsewhere. He spoke in complimentary terms of the city as a whole and referring directly to the merchants asserted that their business life should be governed by the ten commandments of God, but that co-operation and Christianliness should not be overlooked. He was followed by Rev. Father Bogan, of St. Mary's church, who spoke on American citizenship, and Rev. George A. Warner, of the Church of the Holy Cross, the latter making a decided hit" with one or two quips at the expense of the guests and by calling attention to the need of proper expansion to meet the growth that is sure to come this way through improved transit facilities to the metropolis.

Martine the Climax.

The last speaker was James E. Martine, the "Farmer Orator," and

RECEIVER FOR PLUMBER

V. W. NASH, JR., IS APPOINTED.

Defendant Cited to Appear Before Special Master— Court Issues Injunction.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed in the United States District Court at Trenton against David S. Dunavan, of this city. In the petition, which is filed by Horan H. Beals, of New York, whose claim is $375.92; Public Service Corporation's claim of $6.64, and Dunham Grocery Co. with a claim for $51.92, it is alleged that while insolvent Dunavan transferred to Simon Roth, the sum of $700, for the purpose of preferring Roth to his other creditors, and that he did also transfer and conceal other of his properties, with intent to hin*der and delay payment to his other* creditors.

In a petition that was filed asking for the appointment of a receiver it is alleged that Dunavan has plumb*ing materials, etc., worth $500, and* that he has due to him from a contract on the Silbert job about $1,500, and that there is due to him from the Stokes job $400. After *this petition was filed Judge New*corn, as counsel for the petitioning creditors, applied to Judge Cross, and Judge Cross appointed V. W. Nash, Jr., as receiver and placed him under $2,000 bond for the faithful performance of his bond and gave D. W. Littell and Armstrong Mulford as his bondsmen. Judge Cross also made an injunction restraining Simon Roth and Marcus Silbert from making any payments of any money to Dunavan or his agents or attorneys until this case is finally determined.

Judge Newcorn has also filed with Judge Cross a petition asking for an order requiring Dunavan to appear before Atwood L. De Coster as a special master, for the purpose of being examined, and in his petition Judge Newcorn alleges that it will be a long time before a trustee can be appointed and that in the meantime it is necessary that evidence should have some information about Dunavan's assets, and Judge Cross has made an order requiring Dunavan to appear before the Special Master De Coster on a day to be fixed by him. This is an unusual proceeding and is seldom used.

A notice of appearance has been filed by Robert Newton Crane as the solicitor of Dunavan, who has also filed an admission of his insolvency, and says that he is unable to meet his debts.

There has not been any statement of account filed yet, so that it is impossible to tell what are Dunavan's liabilities and assets.

There is now pending before Judge Bergen in Elizabeth a suit by Horan H. Beals against Dunavan, and these bankruptcy proceedings will now take precedence over that case and it is said it will not be tried.

David S. Dunavan was engaged in the plumbing business and has his place of business next door to the building, corner Park and Front street, and has been in business there for many years.

WILL A PLAINFIELDER WIN THE BABY PRIZE?

It is possible that a Princeton graduate residing in this city may receive a handsome silver loving cup. Mr. Wilson entrusted the awarding of the cup to a committee of classmates, consisting of William F. Meredith, George W. Williams and J. McN. Thompson. Mr. Thompson, who was at one time curator of the university, died at Albany, N. Y., five days before Mr. Wilson. There are several Plainfielders who were members of the class of 1894, including Edward Petrie and Alfred Holmes.

Of late years he has devoted his time entirely to the lecture platform. Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., in conjunction with all the Grand Army posts in the country, is active in preparing for a general observance and celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln on Friday night, February 12. Programs recommended and prepared by a National committee of the Grand Army for use in all the colleges, public schools and for all other assemblies have been issued. At the request of the Grand Army, Governor Fort will issue a proclamation recommending that February 12 be observed as a spe*cial holiday.*

In connection with the general orders issued by the National commander of the Grand Army, John Foran, department commander, has caused circulars to be sent to all Posts in New Jersey. It is recommended that the commander of each department appoint immediately a committee to arrange for the celebration, that ev*ery Post shall recognize the day in a* fitting manner, either in special meeting, or in attendance as a body where a public celebration is held, that the co-operation of the Women's Relief Corps, Ladies of the G. A. R., Sons and Daughters of Veterans and other patriotic societies be invited to participate.

The circular contains a provisional program to be used at such celebrations. While the local Post has not decided on its program, efforts will be made to secure speakers of prominence, and it is the intention of the veterans to send invitations to State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, as well as the city officials to be present and make the celebration a fitting one. Commander H. Craig Smith is in charge of the arrangements and within a few days he will appoint a committee to undertake the details. Exercises will also be held in the public schools of the city and borough.

$77,000,000 JOKER IN COFFEE DUTY SCHEME

A gigantic scheme by which London and American speculators and financiers expect to make $75,000,000 or more stands revealed, accord*ing to information* given to the New York World, by the powerful agitation now begun at Washington for an import duty of five cents a pound on coffee.

If the plans of this syndicate go through not only will from $75,000,000 to $77,000,000 be taken from the pockets of American consumers of coffee, for the enrichment of the speculators, but the latter will have the added satisfaction of fooling the United States—inasmuch as, under the proposed scheme, this country will get, for the first year or more, *practically none of the im*port duty which it is planning to levy.

On the contrary the import duty, or its equivalent, will flow into the hands of the syndicate, and the State of Sao Paulo in Brazil will have carried its famous "valorization" scheme to a successful conclusion at the entire expense of the hoodwinked American coffee consumers.

Inside History of the Scheme.

The inside history of the whole scheme—one of the biggest and cleverest ever put up in Wall street—is in brief as follows:

Brazil produces nearly 90 per cent. of the coffee drunk in this country. Practically all of the Brazilian coffee used here is grown in the State of Sao Paulo. There was an enormous crop in Soa Paulo in 1901. It demoralized trade. Early in 1906 there were indications that Sao Paulo would produce another bumper crop, with the probability that the market would be glutted and prices reduced to a ruinous level. The State of Sao Paulo decided to "valorize"—in effect, to equalize the market prices, by buying and storing the surplus crop. The idea back of the scheme was that lean years would follow fat ones and that the stored berries could then be fed into the world's maw judiciously and prices maintained.

But nature disposed otherwise. Normal crops followed the abnormal one, and the stored coffee could not command the price necessary to meet the debt which Sao Paulo had contracted in order to carry the surplus. Shrinkage and storage charges and other expenses began to eat in mercilessly and there was no end ahead. The Brazilian Government thereupon came to teh aid of Sao Paulo and agreed to assume that State's "valorization" debt and also to float the whole scheme on its own account.

Herman Sielcken, the millionaire coffee importer of New York, is credited with having originated the Sao Paulo valorization scheme, and it is said he was largely instrumental in inducing the Brazilian National Government to assume the plan. Accordingly, the $75,000,000 indebtedness of Sao Paulo, against which the excess coffee had been put up as collateral, was refunded, through the Rothschilds, Schroeders and other foreign bankers.

Bonds Issued by Brazil.

Under the enlarged plan the Brazilian Government issued $75,000,000 in bonds, pledging Sao Paulo coffee as collateral. The bonds were handled in this country by J. P. Morgan & Co. According to a statement published in Nov. 18 last, by the Interstate Grocer, of St. Louis, over the signature of Mr. Sielcken, Arbuckle Brothers, the Brooklyn coffee grinders, had taken over the calorization coffees.

"We are fully secured," he said, "on the advances we have made. My firm (Company of Sielcken) will gladly take over all the coffee at the advance made on it."

And now, when the "valorization" plan is just nicely arranged, comes the strong cry before the Ways and Means Committee of Congress for the imposition of an import duty on coffee of five cents a pound." It is regarded as deeply significant that no protest is heard from Brazil against this proposed tax. Under ordinary circumstances countries are quick to protest when the American Government proceeds to lay a tax on their imports.

LADIES' AUXILIARY, A. O. H.,

DANCE COMPLETE SUCCESS.

The annual dance of the Ladies' Auxiliary to Division No. 4, A. O. H., was held in Saengerbund Hall, last Thursday and despite the disagreeable weather was a complete success. The attendance was large and the program arranged by the committee was greatly enjoyed.

Paroubek's orchestra furnished the music and in addition accompaniment for Irish jigs and reels was provided by John Fitzpatrick, of Jersey City, one of Erin's best pipers. Tim O'Connor, of New York, who has been a feature in other years, was engaged for the occasion but died suddenly at his home yesterday morning. Fitzpatrick's piping was such that would be desired, especially his rendition of "The Wind that Shakes the Barley."

The committee in charge of the affair comprised the Misses Kate Keogh, Kate McGrath and Bridget Gillespie. Edward McCann was floor manager and Robert McCormack was in charge of the door.

TO BUILD ON THE OVAL

Settlement of Smalley Estate Will Mark the End of Athletic Field's Day.

USED FOR TWENTY-FOUR YEARS

Crescent Wheelmen Held Bicycle Races as far Back as 1894—

Since a Diamond and Gridiron.

The heirs of the Smalley estate, owners of the property which includes Crescent Oval, are about to make a settlement, and in view of the fact, it is said, that the field will no longer be available for athletic contests, The Clinton Avenue Baseball Club, which together with the Y. M. C. A. jointly leased the field, is now looking about for another suitable property. Efforts are being made to secure the vacant land located on West Front street, owned by Brady brothers, of Bayonne. This it is considered, would make an excellent field for ball games. It is plenty large enough and besides offers the attraction of being easy of access. It is on the main line trolley and within a few minutes of the Grant Avenue station of the New Jersey Central. While the Oval was an attractive spot it was hard to reach by the single track trolley road and the general accomodations were poor.

Crescent Oval has for a great many years been the scenes of varied sports. It was originally opened by the Crescent Wheelmen and for several seasons bicycle races, with the *circular track as a center, attract*ed thousands of people there. Later it was leased by the Y. M. C. A., then the Alps club, the Plainfield Baseball Association and finally by the Clinton Avenue and Y. M. C. A. teams. The oval will be cut up into building lots.

It is not known what the Y. M. C. A. will do for a field, but if the Clinton Avenue's are successful in getting the Brady property, it may be able to make arrangements to use it jointly with the other club.

The Crescent Wheelmen, which developed the oval, making it one of the most famous race tracks in this part of the country, was in the hey-day of success in 1894. On June 2 of that year the oval was opened for bicycle racing. The egg-shaped track was the idea of F. A. Dunham, engineer. It was one-third of a mile in length, with 100 feet radius at the small end and about 220 feet at the large end. It was considered an exceptionally fast track and some of the best bicycle records were made there.

The officers of the club at that time were as follows: President, William H. Rogers; vice-president, L. B. Woolston; secretary and treasurer, Clarence E. Teel; captain, Joseph A. Haynes; engineer, F. A. Dunham.

MISS CHARLOTTE M. CAVE BRIDE OF ALBERT SCHOMP

In the presence of only the immediate families, Miss Charlotte Augusta Cave, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene M. Cave, of East Front *street, was married Thursday after*noon to Albert Linden Schomp, of West Front street. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride at 5:30 and was performed by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. There were no attendants.

The parlor was tastefully decorated with palms, ferns and cut flowers, the young couple standing before a background of green and white in bower form.

Following the ceremony, a wedding supper was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Schomp left for a wedding trip to be gone until February 1. On returning they will reside in Plainfield.

Both Mr. Schomp and his bride are well known in the city and borough. The former is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Schomp and is employed by a New York wholesale house. Both young people received numerous handsome presents.

Children and Dogs.

"I saw a woman coming across Stuyvesant Park," said she, "holding a string with a little white dog at the end of it. She said: 'You darling little precious baby, you!' to the dog.

"I like dogs all right enough, but about half a block from the park there are the raggedest sort of children who haven't enough to eat half the time. It seems a sort of pity they can't dress them up in white, tie strings around their necks and say, 'You darling little precious baby, you,' to them."—New York Press.

THINGS TO KNOW.

That wet shoes should not be dried by the fire. If there be time it is well to dry them on shoe trees, later rubbing in a little vaseline to soften the leather.

That dress goods and laces should not be measured with a tape line as it stretches the material. A yard stick is indispensable in every sewing room.

LEARNING TO COOK

SOME SIMPLE DISHES FOR THE BEGINNER.

It is far better for the girl who is employed during the day to learn a little about cooking now and then, when she has few household responsibilities, than to wait until she assumes the role of housekeeper in her own home. A few dishes well made and made often enough so that one undertakes the recipe with ease will prove of great value later on.

The best way for her to be assured of all due appreciation when serving the results of her first attempts in the mysteries of the art of cooking is to have it understood that she will be responsible for the Sunday dessert or for one dish for the Sunday night supper.

Now that apples are fairly reasonable a dish that is generally liked is:

Apple Tapioca.

Saturday night remember to soak three-quarters cup of pearl or coarse tapioca. If the tapioca is very fine, three hours of soaking will suffice. If you wish the pudding hot, one hour before dinner drain off the water for the tapioca and place it in a double boiler with a quart of hot water in the boiling water. Let it boil until the tapioca becomes transparent—30 minutes is the usual length of time. Stir it several times and add one-half teaspoonful of salt just before removing from the fire.

Pare and core about seven apples, or the apples may be quartered and then added. If cored, place in each apple a generous teaspoonful of sugar and squeeze a little lemon juice if desired. Add a dot of butter to the top of each and pour the tapioca from the double boiler around or over the apples. Bake until soft, usually 30 or 40 minutes. Serve hot or cold with cream or sugar or any preferred sauce.

Plain Pudding Sauce.

One pint boiling water, one tablespoonful butter, two tablespoonfuls flour, one cup sugar. Salt and flavor with lemon, vanilla or nutmeg. Mix the flour with a little water and free from lumps. Add the butter, sugar and salt, and then the smooth flour and stir till clear. Take from the fire and flavor. The yolk of one egg can be added to this; if so, it must be done very gradually as you stir quickly, or it will cook and if it mixes with the boiling mixture and show in strings. After adding the flavoring, stir in the whites of the egg beaten stiff and it will cook as it is stirred in and then preserve its shape as froth. Do not well remember that, whenever a hot pudding calls for the whites of eggs, they should be beaten stiff and stirred into the boiling mixture just as it is removed *from the stove. Thus all such pud*dings are made flaky and more attractive in regard to both looks and taste.

Spanish Cream.

Soak one-half package of calves' head gelatine in one quart of milk ten minutes, then put on the stove in a double boiler. Beat the yolks of three eggs and one cup of sugar light and stir it into the milk, when it is good and hot. Cook a few minutes, then remove from the fire and add the whites of three eggs beaten stiff and a teaspoon of vanilla. Pour into a mold or bowl, first wet in cold water. Make the day before serving. This will serve six or eight, but I have no trouble disposing of it when there are only three or four at table. Serve cake with it.

Useful Cooking Hint.

Most people understand that the placing of a marble in a kettle prevents furring, but few seem to know that a large, clean marble boiled in milk, porridge, custards, sauces or stews will automatically do the stirring as the liquid cooks. Any chance of burning will be prevented and thus the fatigue of constantly stirring and the cook's time can be saved, as by this means the cook is free attending to other things instead of having to give her whole time and attention to one.

Lemon Queen Cake.

On and a half cupfuls of sugar, half a cupful of butter, half a cupful of milk, two cupfuls of flour, three eggs beaten separately, rind and juice of one lemon and 1½ teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat butter and eggs till light and creamy, add yolks, lemon rind and juice; next flour and baking powder; then milk, and beat well. Add whites, well beaten, last of all. Paper your pan, bake three-quarters of an hour. This recipe was recently received from a Vermont housekeeper nearly 80 years of age.

Banana Marmalade.

Put into a porcelain saucepan two cupfuls of sugar and one of water. Cook until it spins a thread when poured from the tip of the spoon. Now stir in slowly the crushed pulp of four or five bananas with a tablespoonful sweet cider or lemon juice and simmer about 20 minutes until thickened. It is wiser to keep an asbestos lid under the pan so there will be little danger of burning.

CITY FATHER TO RESIGN

Robt. E. Hall's Business Plans Will Make Vacancy in Common Council.

R. H. McCREADY SUCCESSOR.

Having accepted an offer from one of the largest firms of contracting engineers in Pennsylvania, Robert E. Hall at an early date will probably tender his resignation as a member of the Common Council. He is one of the two ward members from the Second and during the brief period in which he has been a city father has made an enviable reputation.

Mr. Hall is chairman of the Councilmanic committee on fire and buildings and is also a member of the police committee. He has accomplished much for his constituents. One improvement for which he fought hard and successfully is the new fire house on South avenue in the Northwood section. He enjoys the reputation among his fellow members of being a painstaking, conscientious and persevering representative and his colleagues say that he will be much missed.

When it became known that Mr. *Hall had decided that his new posi*tion might seriously handicap him in his councilmanic duties and that he desired to sever his connections with that body for that reason, influential citizens began to persuade his brother, Henry L. Hall, to succeed him. The latter, who is probably better known than the councilman, declined, giving as his reason that because of his business in New York it would be impossible for him to devote the proper attention to the city affairs.

Today, Henry L. Hall confirmed the report that he had been asked to succeed his brother, but he declined to say anything about the report that Robert E. Hall had decided to resign. Any latter could not be reached before going to press. The councilman has been associated with his brother, H. L. Hall, in the New York Steamfitting Company, a large corporation in Washington street, New York, of which H. L. Hall is president and Robert E. Hall secretary and treasurer of the concern. On February 1, the councilman will assume the positions as assistant consulting engineer and assistant to the president of the firm of Francis Brothers and Lehnert, of Philadelphia, one of the best known contract*ing concerns in the Quaker City.* It is understood that he will likely retain his residence on Park lane until the summer.

Since Henry L. Hall stated that *his business affairs would not per*mit him accepting the honor, strong pressure has been brought to bear on Robert H. McCready, of Bellidere avenue. Mr. McCready is a New York publisher and according to his many friends is a crackajack fellow." He has been a hard worker for the Republican party in Plainfield and at the present time is vice-chairman of the City Republican Committee.

Speaking of his candidacy, H. L. Hall said today: "Mr. McCready would make a first rate councilman and would be a great credit to our ward. He is a thorough-going, hard-working and able business man. You can always tell where he stands on any matter for he has a mind of his own that is capable of arriving at the right decision every time. He would be right on his job and I hope he will be the choice of the city fathers when the vacancy occurs."

Another boom, and a strong one, has been started for another most capable and popular Second warder. He is Edward E. Iremonger, of Belvidere avenue. Mr. Iremonger was until recently a member of the City Republican Committee and also until recently worshipful master of Anchor Lodge, F. & A. M. He is in the dry goods business in New York and is a man of exceptional business ability.

SUCCEEDS THE LATE HARRY B. SUYDAM

The Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest met Thursday and the rector, Rev. Thos. Townsend, appointed Juan Babcock as president to succeed the late Harry B. Suydam, who died and occurred shortly after his election. The club now numbers forty-five, seventeen new members being added to the roll last night.

During the evening an address was given on the subject, "The Working Man and the Russian Revolution," by Henry Melonardo, of this city. This was greatly enjoyed by the large gathering of men. There were also musical selections by Harry Bennett, accompanied on the piano by Juan Babcock, and refreshments and cigars were enjoyed during a social hour. The club has decided to meet every two weeks on Thursday night.

GREENE'S FIRM EXPELLED

FIRST CASE IN MANY YEARS.

Considerable surprise was occasioned in the Street Thursday, when further disciplinary measures by the Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange was taken in the case of Clarence M. Cohen, floor member of the firm of Cohen, Greene & Co., and Mr. Cohen was expelled by the committee. Cohen's partners include John H. Greene, Jr., of 101 West Seventh street, this city. The firm was not organized until March 11, 1902, and one of the members said yesterday that they had no knowledge of any irregularity in Cohen's application for membership. Cohen would not explain what the misstatement was of which the Exchange authorities complained.

Following the expulsion of Mr. Cohen the explanation was made in a statement given out by Secretary Ely that this action was taken because Cohen made "a statement on a material point" in his application for membership on September 27, 1900.

No decision has yet been reached by the other partners as to forming a new Stock Exchange connection and continuing business. Mr. Greene is prominent here, being a member of the Fair Acres Riding and Driving Club. He formerly owned several fast horses and is now the possessor of a handsome automobile. Before engaging in the stock brokerage business he held an responsible position with the New York Telephone Company.

IMPORTANT RULING IN EXCISE MATTERS

In the Camden County Court, Judge Joline has made a ruling which is important to bottlers of malt liquors and to persons living in prohibition communities. The ruling was made after the grand jury had made its first presentation of the term to Judge Joline.

A few weeks ago several bottlers were held in bail, charged by agents of the Law and Order Society with selling liquor in prohibition communities. These cases were considered by the grand jury on December 10. Later it failed to return indictments.

The Rev. E. J. Kulp, pastor of the Broadway M. E. church, and a member of the grand jury, addressed the court:

"If your Honor please, may I ask you to give the grand jury instructions regarding the law covering sales of liquor in prohibition territory?" he asked.

"Do you refer to Haddonfield?"

Mr. Kulp replied that he did, and Judge Joline explained the law, saying:

"I understand, gentlemen, that with regard to Haddon township, local option prevails there, and at this time the people have declared that liquor shall not be sold in that township, therefore it is places in which spirituous liquor cannot be sold except contrary to law. The law does not recognize the sale of liquor legally in that township.

"Therefore no one has a right to sell liquor in that township, as the law now stands, and if any one does sell liquor in that township, as the law stands, is liable to indictment, and if convicted upon trial, is liable to punishment.

"In 1907 the Legislature of this State passed an act concerning sales of liquor. According to this act, a sale is not complete until the goods have been delivered to the buyer or the goods have reached the place agreed upon. Then it is a sale within the limits of that township."

Orders by agents of the Law and Order League had been delivered by telephone in Haddon township. When the driver brought the wet goods he took orders for more, and is was on the delivery of the second order that complaints were made.

The grand jury considered its action in bringing bills against local bottlers accused of selling liquor in prohibition territory, and then found indictments against each of those so charged. This action was the result of teh interpretation of the law given by Judge Joline in response to a question.

ISLAM HARD TO ANSWER

SO MINISTER TELLS C. E. U.

Rev. Mr. Janvier, Former Missionary, Addresses Mass Meeting at Trinity— Warren Wins Banner.

Mass meeting of the Christian Endeavor Union was held at Trinity Reformed church Thursday, and despite the disagreeable weather, the different societies did well, each in its effort to secure the banner which had been offered as an award to the one having the highest percentage of members present.

Warren chapel society carried off the honors, leading in the roll call with a percentage of eighty-two, having thirty-one members present out of a membership of thirty-eight. The Temple Baptist society, with fifty-three per cent., was second, and Hope chapel third, with forty-eight per cent. There were ten societies represented. They were: Warren chapel, Temple Baptist, Hope chapel, Dunellen Presbyterian, Seventh-Day Baptist, Trinity Reformed, Park Avenue Baptist, First Baptist, First Presbyterian and Grace chapel.

William J. Kricy was chairman of the meeting. Clarence La Rue, president of the C. E. U., presented the banner to the winning society. The devotional service was led by Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. He read a scriptural lesson, Philippians 4th chapter, concluding it with a prayer. A letter of regret from H. A. Kimpost, secretary of the Young People's Department of the New York Dutch Reformed church, and president of the New York State C. E. S., who was to have delivered an address, but was unable to be present, was read by the secretary, Charles Windham. Letters of greeting were read from the secretaries of the Union county and the Paterson societies. Musical selections were rendered by an orchestra, consisting of Martin A. Korff, director; E. D. Young, cornet; Nathan Warner, clarinet; Arthur L. Titsworth, organist.

The speaker of the evening was Rev. C. A. R. Janvier, pastor of the Holland Memorial Presbyterian church of Philadelphia, his theme for his subject, "The Prophet of Arabia and His Religion." Rev. Janvier served fourteen years as a missionary in India, and in fact the greater part of his life has been associated with that country, having lived there during his childhood while his father was a missionary. He was therefore able to talk interestingly on the Mohammedan religion, called by the natives Islam. Mohammedanism is a factor to be reckoned with by Christianity, he said, as it dominates Persia, Arabia, India and Turkey, and there are mosques in London and other European cities. It was also a question whether Africa should not accept it.

Islam was declared to be the only progressive religion beside Christianity, and in fact, was its next kin, as the beliefs were the same in many particulars, which included Christ's birth and his miracles. The Mohammedans claim that their prophet superseded Christ, but nevertheless they are willing to accept Christ as the son of God, to whom they are very loyal. So devoted were they that no man would dare be heard using such profanity as is used in this country. Many of their doctrines are so plausible that they are hard to answer, and because of that, Mohammedanism is Christianity's most difficult opponent. Being stubborn to an excessive degree they were hard to convince. They believed in the books of Moses and in the gospel, with modifications.

Speaking of the sources of Mohammedanism, Rev. Janvier said that Mahomet, the prophet, originally an honest, conscientious man, had come in contact with a degenerate Christianity which was in vogue at that time, and that this was to blame for Mohammedanism. Digressing from his subject, the lecturer took occasion to say that Christian Science would not now be as it is had it emphasized the spiritual side of its basis.

Mahomet was declared to have been an honest man so far as he followed the truth as revealed to him. He began to have spiritual messages and finally the time came when he was tempted. He was led up into a mountain, figuratively speaking, and unlike another, yielded to powers of evil, to conquest and lust.

What Mohammedanism lacked was an adequate conception of God's love and holiness, and also of sin. It admitted no need of a Saviour or of an atonement. It was a fatalistic religion. When a follower sinned he declared that the command to do so had been written on his forehead and he obeyed. If he killed a man it had been written on his forehead that he slay, and on the dead man's forehead had been written that he should die. It was fatal and a fatalistic belief destroyed sense of sin.

Woman's position under Mohammedanism would alone condemn it, he declared. A man could have as many wives and concubines as he wished. The only thing necessary to secure a divorce was to pronounce the word "illiah" three times. The wife had no recourse. The custom was declared to be immoral polygamy or worse.

Rev. Janvier believes that the British will continue to control In*dia, because they have the Mohamm*edans on their side. When they first took possession they happened to favor the Mohammedans, which is the aggressive party against the Hindoo malcontents, who, though more numerous, are less capable.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL FIVE MEETS FIRST DEFEAT

The girls' basketbal team from the Plainfield High School played, its most exciting game of the season on the local court, Friday afternoon, with the girls' team from the East Orange High School. It was the first defeat for the Plainfield girls in two years and naturally there was much gloom and disappointment not only on the part of the team, but its many supporters. The game was witness*ed by the largest crowd of the sea*son and there was constant cheering.

The Plainfield team suffered greatly by the loss of its captain, Miss Helen Moody, who was not able to play, and the fact that the locals were obliged to conform to the East Orange custom of using two centres, also materially affected their work. The best work for the Plainfield team was done by Dorothy Merrill and Barbara Fleming.

The East Orange girls gave a fine exhibition, their passing being quick and accurate. F. Dewson and E. Butts were the star players for their team. "At the end of the half the score was 7 to 3 in favor of P. H. S., but at the end of the second half the tables were reversed and the final score was 10 to 8 in favor of East Orange. Charles B. Morse refereed the game. The lineup:

Takes a Fine Position.

Oliver A. Reed who, for the past four years, has been employed by Mr. and Mrs. Percy Stewart, of West Seventh street, has resigned to take a position of responsibility with the DeDion Bouton French Automobile Company, of New York. Mr. Reed formerly devoted his time to automobile racing, having made several fine records, and he gave that up to enter the employ of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart in the care and operation of their automobile.

And in mild June,

The Popular Amethyst.

The amethyst is the fashionable stone for 1909. It is pronounced by the jewelers Zadkiel, to be the "lucky stone."

If the love and friendship which the amethyst represents are of no account to wearers let them remember that it is also a charm against the evils of intoxication? Anyhow the art jewelers have seized upon this Oriental superstition and set the stone in a myriad of designs which make it peculiarly lovely and attractive.—Boston Herald.

Handicapped

"Handicapped." I think I hear you say, "that is the central note of my life." It is encouraging, however, to read of the many people in the world who have had handicaps in life and yet who have been successful in spite of them. The man who accomplish*ed more than any one of the other* disciples was Paul who labored against a serious handicap to his usefulness. So great was this disability that in the midst of his ministry did he petition the Lord to remove it. He prayed, "Lord, I am so burdened with this thorn in my flesh that I cannot perfectly do the work Thou hast given me to do." I do not know what that thorn was. There is a strong probability, however, that it was defective eyesight. Whatever it was, it seemed to stand in the way of a perfect ministry. This is the way the Lord answered his prayers. "Paul, I recognize the fact of your bodily affliction is a great bother for you to bear with this thorn. I will make you more effectual with it than without it, for "my strength is made perfect in weakness." Then this handicap was not the worst thing that could have happened to Paul. God used it as a means of giving his servant greater power. The continued presence of that thorn made him more effectual for God. Paul was naturally a presumptuous and daring man, a Pharisaic aristocrat, and he needed just this disability to develop a humble dependance on God and, give the proper balance to his life. He learned afterwards to glory in it, for it meant that God's power would rest on him in greater measure.

The story of Paul and his thorn is a story for the man who feels that he has been handicapped in life by the fact of his infirmity. The fact is that the world's greatest men have accomplished their great tasks in spite of some physical defect.

Darwin said: "If I had not been such a great invalid, I could not have done nearly so much work." Carlyle spoke of Dante's miseries as the basis of his greatness. "Had it not been for them" says Carlyle, "Florence might have had another prosperous Lord Mayor, but the world would have lost the Divine Comedy." It was the death of his dear friend, Arthur Hallam, that caused Tennyson to write his wonderful poem, "In Memoriam." One of the greatest of the world's historians was Prescott, who was blind from his boyhood. George Eliot and Mrs. Browning were invalids throughout their lives. Louis Pasteur, at forty-six, had a stroke of paralysis, but in the seventy-seven years that followed, he developed those theories of bacterial infection and inoculation which have revolutionized medical and surgical sciences."

Dr. Luther Gulick says "one of the lovliest women I ever knew was an epileptic hunchback. She goes through life with what appears to be complete unconsciousness of her physical deformity. It is not that she does not know all about it, but she has simply placed it in the background of her spiritual life. She is doing her part in the world's business; her work interests and fills her heart. She has periods of intolerable pain, then she simply goes to bed, and gives up everything, but when she is on her feet again she plunges directly into her work without any *loss of time. Her life is predomi*nantly happy. It is victorious and beautifully." She had her disabilities but she ind likewise her abilities and she used these to the utmost. What shall therefore our attitude to the handicaps in our lives? Put them as this woman did in the background. Our impediments do not constitute the whole of our existence but only a part. Let us not, therefore, keep the thorns forever before our mental vision. Paul even learned to account his a blessing, for the reason that it was the means of making him a stronger man. There are some of us whose main business in life is the "pursuit of health." Such is certainly not the noblest ambition. Paul had effective vision but his whole time and thought was not spent in consulting eye specialists. Think of the many great souls in this world who have achieved their greatness in spite of the thorns of their lives.

Yes, you are handicapped. We know that. But you are not the only one in that predicament. You are not handicapped in every part of your being. Therefore use your ability to the utmost and forget all about your disability. It is said of the birds that their wings were first weight. The weights were transformed into wings as the birds struggled to lift them. That was true of Paul's infirmity. Was not God's strength made perfect in his weakness? What about your infirmity?

LOVE THE PRETTY SNAKE

LADS PONDLE LIVE ONES.

Suit Case of Specimens from Bronx Zoo Displayed by Lecturer at Y. M. C. A.—Stereopticon Views.

An audience of boys was given an object lesson on the lovable qualities of snakes at the Y. M. C. A. Friday night. Allen S. Williams, an ophiologist, of New York, had a suit case full of live ones, and exhibited stereopticon pictures of a great many varieties found in different parts of the world. He professed a fondness for the snake, declaring it to be a much maligned and misunderstood animal.

He said that to touch one would have a tendency to allay the natural fear and dread that a person has of the snake, and taking a wriggling two-footer from a bag he carried it through the audience allowing all to caress it as prescribed. In an effort to get to cover it almost became lost up one lad's sleeve, but by the time it had gone the rounds it had made a friend of every boy in the room. This friendly specie was known as the "Jersey Pighead," because of its peculiarly shaped head.

A youth selected from among the spectators bravely submitted to being entwined with snakes from four to seven feet in length and was pronounced the official snake charmer of the evening. The lecturer said he had borrowed them from the Bronx Zoo, and doubted whether they had ever been handled before except when they were captured. His views included the poisonous southern moccasin, diamond back rattler and the copperhead. These were said to be the only venomous snakes in North America, all others being harmless. The bite of the black snake, the largest in this country, would be as harmless as the scratch of a pet kitten.

As an explanation of the cause of so many deaths from snake bites in India, the belief of the natives in the transmigration of souls was given. They believed that each reptile was the transmigration of a dead relative and feared to bring upon themselves the wrath of the departed, by resisting its attack.

The ugly cobra, the huge python and anaconda, and the coral, which is the most beautiful snake in the world, were shown in the pictures. There was a picture of a King snake swallowing a whipsnake. He declared that after the photograph was taken and the whipsnake had disappeared, except its tail, it had turned at its head about and came out again, thus cheating the king of a meal. Newspaper snake stories were often true, he said, though seemingly unbelievable. He had heard of a rattlesnake showing its gratitude to a man who had saved its life, and of a rattler killing another man. The snake followed him home and called itself under the bed. When a burglar entered the room, one night, it hung its tail out of the window and rattled for a policeman.

The chief point that the speaker endeavored to bring out during his lecture was the harmlessness of the ordinary snake and to emphasize the absurdity of running for a stone or club, with which to kill it, when one was seen. They were useful in destroying rodents and changing in*sects and some varieties, such as the* king snake, fed upon the venomous reptiles.

ENGLISH CLASS TO GIVE SHAKESPEARIAN PLAY.

Inspired by the success of one English class in giving amateur Shakesperian plays, Principal Ira W Travell's division of the senior English class at the high school, has decided to give two scenes from the plays they have been studying this year. One will be the banquet scene of Macbeth and the other the duel scene of Hamlet.

The play will be given in the school auditorium after the mid-year examinations in February and the pupils have been assigned parts as follows: Macbeth—"Lady Macbeth," Harriet Moody; "Macbeth," Charles Prior; "Lennox," David Thickston; the murderer, John Lyness; "Ross," Richard Harrigan. Hamlet—"The Queen," Caroline Lambert; "Laertes," Stanley Robins; "Hamlet," Clyde Doane; "King," Guion Fountain; a lord, George Durar.

PLAINFIELD LIBRARY NOTES

Annotated List of Non-Fiction Books

Brooks, John Graham—As Others See us: a study of progress in the United States. "Here are woven into most readable and intertaining form the opinions by way of approval, of censure, or of warning, which visiting critics have expressed concerning America since the beginning of national life. In the light of these objective estimates the author discusses topics and problems which bear upon present-day progress."

Fagan, James O., The Confessions of a Railroad Signalman. "Mr. Fagan's confessions are the outgrowth of his experience as a signalman during twenty years. His shrewd observations and logical deductions regarding mismanagement of railroads and incompetency of employes may well cause railroad officials disquieting moments. The book aims to stimulate reform; it does not content himself with an idealist's statement of what ought to be, but takes into account existing conditions in the operative departments of our great railroads, and attempts to show how with all the recognized difficulties of administration there may yet be worked out a scheme that will assure a far smaller proportion of fatalities in the running of our trains."

Ferrero, G.—Greatness and Decline of Rome. "It is well that the translation of this great work, a study of Roman history, is coming from the press simultaneously with Professor Ferrero's lecturing tour in this country. Any person who attends his lectures or reads his book will find the means at hand of understanding him thoroughly, of comprehending his largeness of vision, his soundness of scholarship, his sense of proportion, his power to measure life that has been by his observation of life that is, his possession of the true historical sense."

Flint, Josiah—My Life; with an introduction by Arthur Symons. "The self-written life of the man, who, insolent with human curiosity, sounded the depths of the under-world and brought back experiences which he casts in the document form. His early life, his rebellion against order, his days in a reform school, his escape and early tramping experiences, his voyage to Australia as a steer*passer, his life and wanderings in* Europe, the friendship with Arthur Symons whom he called his literary god-father, his meeting with Tolstoy are full of human interest."

Greenslet, Ferris—Life of Thomas Bailey Aldrich. "Material from a wide range of sources has entered into the structure of this biography. While letter memorials form the ground work of the sketch, the authors personal knowledge of Mr. Aldrich, gained during a period of close friendship, form the basis for estimates concerning his career, temperament and character, which narrative is supplemented by reminiscences. The biography in addition to being an authoratative 'life,' sets Aldrich among a group of his contemporaries."

Hubbard, Nina Benson. Woman's Way Through Unknown Labrador; an account of the exploration of the Nascaupee and George rivers. "To correct and misleading accounts of Mr. Hubbard's ill-fated expedition organized for the purpose of exploring the interior of the Labrador peninsula, and of the Nascaupee and the George river draining the northern slope of the plateau to Ungava bay, his wife went over the same ground in a more favorable season. This is a record of her journey, to which she adds her husband's latter-day diary and a narrative by one of his party, Geo. Elson."

Lucas, Edward Verrall—Over Bemerton's; an easy-going cronicle. "Naturally the whole narrative savanters through a bookish atmosphere at a pace of leisured ease, with here a gleam of gentle humor, alternating with nice points of observation and kindly human touches."

Mackaye, Percy Wallace—Mater; an American study in comedy. "It is a little too fine, perhaps, for the popular theatre, but will surely appeal to the reader of taste and intelligence. Its satire is keen, and the character of 'Mater' has unusual charm."

Pennell, E. R. and J.—Life of James McNeill Whistler, with over 120 plates in half tones and photogravure, 2 vols. "Mr. and Mrs. Pennell speak with authority of Whistler as a man, as well as with full appreciation of him as an artist, and it is not too much to claim that this book has artistic and human interest such as few biographies have."

Schurz, Carl T.—Reminesciences, 3rd vol. "The third volume completes this magnificent biography and brings Mr. Schurz's life down to its close. Gen. Schurz died while this volume was being written, leaving, however, behind him a great number of notes intended to assist him in its completion. The delicate task of concluding the work from the middle of Grant's administra*tion has been successfully* undertaken by the historian, Francis Bancroft, who enjoyed Mr. Schurz's confidence and to whose thoroughly competent hands the voluminous material was intrusted by Mr. Schurz's son. This third volume, therefore, completes one of the most remarkable and most noble lives lived upon American soil."

Taft, William Howard—Present day problems; a collection of addresses delivered on various occasions. "Matters of public policy and public interest are discussed in Mr. Taft's informed and persuasive style, and whether one is for or 'agin' the administration and its policies, the collection provides valuable and interesting reading."

Wendell, Barrett—Privileged Classes. "In the four essays that make up this volume Professor Wendell discusses the deeper problems of higher education in their relation to present-day American life."

Winter, William—Other Days; being cronicles of the stage. "His volume will be a welcome addition to every dramatic library. It is full of fresh and illuminative detail, of analytical character studies, of sound theatrical philosophy, of witty comment, eloquent appreciation and wholesome scorn."

Satin Much Used With Cloth.

Among many of the very elaborate costumes will be seen a lovely combination of cloth and satin. The beautifully decorated skirt of cloth is generally plain and cut with a view to snugness around the hips, though the lower portion of the garment is wide, flaring and raching stitched. A coat of contrasting color is made of satin in the Directoire patterns, and every imaginable kind of copper-green leaves, in shades mixed gold and tanished green, another suit of exceptional beauty was buff. The coat was trimmed with cream lace and gold buttons.

RECKLESS BOY SHOOTS GIRL WITH AN AIR RIFLE

Rosie Easoldi, a little Italian girl living in the East End, appeared in the city court, Saturday, as complainant against George Perrine, 15 years old, of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, who she charged with deliberately aiming an air rifle at her and shooting her in the back. The bullet struck her just below the left shoulder and caused her to scream with pain. It left a mark that was still in evidence today.

The Ferrine boy admitted the charge and offered as an excuse that he and his brother had shot at each other and he didn't think it would hurt the girl to make her a target. Judge Runyon looked at the offense in a serious light and placed him on probation for the indefinite term. He will have to report at headquarters each Saturday. Chief Kiely gave instructions to his sister to take the rifle back to the store where it was purchased and have the dealer refund the money. In case of his refusal the rifle was told to bring it back to headquarters as under no circumstances would George be allowed to keep it.

The Chief declared after the hearing that the small boy and air rifle combination is getting to be a serious one, and that "my word for it," he'll be exercised in the use of the weapons he would have his officers confiscate every one in sight.

ECRU WAISTS THAT WERE AND ARE NOT.

Cream waists soon cease to be cream after the energetic laundress has once finished with them and not every one knows how simple a matter it is to give it the ecru tint.

The tone that it so desirable in net blouses and curtains just now must not be confounded with dirt. Only the tint is more serviceable than white, washing is soon necessary.

After washing bleaching is inevitable unless means are taken to preserve the creaminess. This can be done in several ways. The easiest is to put a little tea in water to which saffron has been added until the desired shade is obtained.

Dip a small piece of net or muslin into the tawny water as a test before putting in the bigger articles, for the work of washing may have to be done over again.

Hay water is used to preserve the creamy tone. The hay is boiled and left to cool in fresh water. Strain it before using. Soak the lace or net thoroughly to remove most of the dirt before washing in the colored water.

Bands in Favor Once More.

"We had to bring back ornamental bands," explained a clever modiste, "for too many frail dresses were too plain without this trimming. Now, here is a dress I have just finished for a young girl. It is square-meshed net, trimmed with bands of embroidered tulle and lace. Yet the blue satin sash does look girlish on this dress, also that narrow bit of blue satin that heads the collarless yoke, but only a very young girl could wear a color scheme like this."

Shipping.

"Some girls," remarked the caustic citizen, "can't notice a steamer trunk in a window without going after a bunch of steamship folders and a lot of samples for going-away gowns."—Louisville Courier-Journal

WANT TO BE CITY FATHER

Five Candidates and There May Be Some More for the Single Vacancy.

UP TO THE ORGANIZATION.

The "Who's Who and Why" May Guide You—Election by Common Council in March.

Here are the candidates for vacancy in the Common Council when Robert E. Hall tenders his resignation at the February meeting as city father from the Second ward:

Robert H. McCready, publisher, Denmark road.

Edward E. Iremonger, dry goods, Belvidere avenue.

William L. Alling, hosiery, East Seventh street.

William M. Clark, lawyer, South avenue.

Sidney S. Schuyler, broker, Belvidere avenue.

Now take your pick. They are all running well and each one is bound to win, so their respective boomers tells us confidentially. We'll let you in on the secret, announcing at the same time that there is some reason to believe that when the proper time arrives a man who has been friendly to the Republican organization, who has shown some interest in city and party affairs and who is capable of discharging the duties with credit will be agreed upon.

You want the "who's who and why?" Here you have it.

Robert H. McCready is a favorite among the political bookies and is in splendid form with good chances to win. In fact the odds, are on him. McCready is vice chairman of the Republican City Committee. He is well and favorably known; is an or*ganization man, and has shown* marked interest in the city's life and prosperity.

Mr. Iremonger—you all know him —is an active organization Republican. He has long been conspicuous here and has a bunch of friends that anyone would be proud of. "Ed" was until recently worshipful master of Anchor lodge, F. & A. M., and like McCready owns his own mind. Either one of them would be "one best bet."

Here's another good fellow in the person of Mr. Alling. He's sound as a dollar politically and otherwise, and he's an organization man too. Had he said the word, he could have been a city father long ago, but they say that he is rather timid about assuming the responsibilities although he would make a "crack-a-jack" municipal legislator.

Mr. Schuyler has many admirers. He hasn't mixed much in politics for stocks are his long suit and he generally takes the "jack-pot" in that game. Some say he will win. If he does, the city will not be the loser. It will take the "kitty" for he is a level-header adviser.

Lastly, there is Mr. Clark. You don't know him for he's a quiet fellow, but "my word for it," he's got a chance. "Bob" Hall among his name on the city fathers last night at the "tete-a-tete" held by the administration. Like "The Big Stick," Mr. Hall has started to campaign for the man he would like to be his successor. But Mr. Hall's brother, Henry L., is just as active for "Ed" Iremonger, and he said Henry L. knows how to turn a trick.

"So there you are."

P. S.—Tush! A friend of a friend of ours, who says he has a friend on the inside tips us off that he knows the winner. Possibly he'll tell us soon. But that's another story.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD'S FIREMEN ARE IN DEBT

The monthly meeting of the Middlesex volunteer fire company was held at South Plainfield Friday night. Reports were received from the auditing and ball committees. The auditing committee reported the company to be in debt to the extent of $109.55. There is now $120 in the bank and of this amount $100 was generously given by A. C. Bechstein toward the fund for the purchase of an apparatus.

The ball committe reported receipts of $105.67, disbursements of $23.62, leaving a balance of $73.05. The resignation of Charles Brantingham was accepted and in view of the fact that he was a charter member, his name was placed on the honorary roll. Rev. C. W. F. Attlee was also elected an honorary member. The names of E. J. Springer and Ellis Shive were dropped from the roll. The company is hopeful of being able to purchase a suitable apparatus within a short time, the recent big fire at South Plainfield showing the great need for proper means to combat conflagrations in the future.

FIRE HEADQUARTERS STARTLED BY A BULLET

Just as if they didn't have enough excitement to liven them up at intervals, some individual on East Front street threw a scare into the men at fire headquarters about 9:30 Monday by sending a .38 calibre bullet through one of the rear upstairs windows. The crash of glass made the laddies jump in all directions and two or three who had gone to bed early tumbled out in the belief that a new kind of alarm had been sounded. A hurried investigation revealed the missile embedded in the wall and the police were notified.

Patrolman Nolan was delegated to look into the shooting and rubber-heeled it up and down "One Story Terrace," as the block on East Front street between Park and Watchung avenues is known, but he failed to get a line on who did it. A freak family lives directly back of fire headquarters and the members were put through a course of sprouts under the supposition that one of them fired the shot. The inference was indignantly denied, however, and the cop finally gave up the quest.

So far as known, there was no "narrow escapes from being hit" at headquarters, but the firemen want it understood they nor the building are to be used as a target.

MRS. CHARLES CAMPBELL DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Charles Clement Campbell died suddenly at her home on lower Central avenue, Monday morning about 11 o'clock. Although she had been in poor health for several years her condition was not considered critical. Death was due to a clot on the brain and Mrs. Campbell passed away within an hour after the attack.

Mrs. Campbell, who has been a resident of this city, two years, was the daughter of Mrs. T. A. Traber, of Cincinnati. She was a native of the latter city and lived there for a number of years. She also traveled extensively and for several years she lived abroad, principally in India. She was a communicant of Grace church, and always attended the services when her health permitted.

Mrs. Campbell's husband holds a position of great responsibility with the Standard Oil Company, being connected with the London office of the big corporation. He is now on his way home and is expected to ar rive soon. Besides a husband, Mrs. Campbell leaves a son, C. L. Campbell and a daughter, Miss Theo B. Campbell, both of this city.

THE BEN GREET PLAYERS.

With the Russian Symphony Orchestra in a Midsummer Night's Dream.

One of the most important events of the musical and dramtic year, and one entirely unique in character, is that of the Russian Symphony orchestra, of New York, Modest Altschuler conductor, and the Ben Greet Players, under the personal direction of Ben Greet, who will appear jointly at the Krueger Auditorium, Newark, Saturday afternoon and evening, January 23, in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" with the complete Mendelssohn music.

The Ben Greet organization has been especially augmented and strengthened for this tour and will include Ben Greet, Irene Rooke, Violet Vivian, Beatrice Mills, J. Sayer Crawley, Milton Rosmer, Le Gal Robinson, Frederick Sowell, George Vivian and Percival Seymour.

A special feature will be the dances. Lou Wall Moore, who has made a special study of the ancient Greek dance, very appropriate to this play, and who is also well known as a sculptress will dance to the music of the Spring Song, which is interpolated and the Nocturne. In addition a group of children will render the fairy dances.

A special setting has been designed and painted by the well known rural painters, Troy and Margaret Kinney. The performance will not be given in the Elizabethan manner but in the style of Mr. Greet's open air plays.

The sale of seats for these performances will be at the Lauter Co.'s piano warerooms, 617 Broad street, Newark.

Fanwood Township's Attorney.

The Fanwood Township Committee has appointed Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of this city, as township attorney. He succeeds W. R. Codington, who held the office for several years.

AMUSEMENTS.

Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan Company in "Salvation Nell," will begin their final week at the Hackett theatre, New York, Monday evening. The following week the production will be transferred intact to the West End theatre to give the inhabitants of Harlem an opportunity to see this graphic play of slum-life, while the following week Mrs. Fiske will appear in Brooklyn. In "Salvation Nell," Mrs. Fiske scored the greatest hit of the present season. Her performance of a scrub-woman surrounded by vice in its most terrible form, into whose life comes the redeeming power of a great love, has been universally recognized as one of the finest achievements of her career. The Manhattan Company supporting Mrs. Fiske numbers fifty people, every one of whom was chosen because of his or her peculiar fitness for some particular part. Unlike most plays of this type, the characters in "Salvation Nell" are indigenous to the slums, and to this fact the piece owes not a little of its gripping power. Not in years has a play enthralled its audiences. The teaming life of the tenements and streets is depicted with unequalled faithfulness, and not a detail that makes for realism has been omitted. "Salvation Nell is an animated crosssection of East Side life. The setting of the play represents the highest attainment in stagecraft. Particularly is this true of the street scene of the last act which pictures five-story tenement houses with their over-laden fire-escapes, squalor, misery, and basement shops while the multifarious population of the East Side throng the streets.

David Belasco announces a limited New York engagement at the academy of Music of David Warfield who is reappearing for short period in the tender, human play, "The Music Master." The present engagement at the Academy marks Mr. Warfield's first appearance in New York since his season at the Belasco Stuyvesant, the distinguished star was seen in "The Music Master" and "A Grand Army Man," which again will be seen during his engagement at the Academy. Mr. Warfield has returned from a trans-continental tour which began early last August in Denver, and included several cities of the west where he appeared for the first time since his early starring days under Mr. Belasco's direction. And in that city, where "The Music Master" was presented for the first time, he was greeted with loud acclaim, and he received from the people ovations not unlike the welcome with which returning popular heroes are greeted. In the Academy of Music two years ago, "The Music Master" in which Mr. Warfield began his Academy engagment last Monday night. He was supported by a company of well known stock players whom Mr. Belasco selected for the original New York production.

Thomas W. Ryley's great success, "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," continues its sensational career at the Circle theatre, New York, and Paul M. Potter's play depicting the fast night life of Paris, promises to be a bigger money maker than even "Florodora," Mr. Ryley's production that gave to the stage its present elaborate musical comedies. While "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" is replete with sensations, its greatest is the "Apache" dance of the underworld of Paris. It does not take the American public long to judge the merits of "something new" and Joseph C. Smith and Louise Alexander are already famous for what is termed "the most artistic dance ever seen on the stage" and for years." In the last week several well-known players have been added to the cast. Fletcher Norton now plays the part of Sacha, the young King of Orcania, around whose night of revelry the story centers. Grace Cameron plays the Princess Marotz, Isabelle D'Armond, George O'Donnell and Harold Kennedy are also among the principals. Two new songs have been added to the score and a new dance is in preparation which is said to be most sensational in its novelty.

At the Colonial this week ensuing, Percy G. Williams will present the fine bill at the head of which is Miss Henrietta Crosman, who will make her metropolitan debut in vaudeville, appearing in her own playlet entitled "Peggy O'Connor." As the name suggests, Miss Crosman will appear as an Irish lass in the 17th century. Peggy's lover is a follower of Charles the second, who is a fugitive from Cromwell. Peggy hears and succeeds in frustrating a plot which endangers the life of the king. Miss Crosman has had a special production built in order to present her little play in suitable environment. The part provides her with an opportunity to don male attire and swing a sword in her own delightful and feminine swashbuckling style. For the first time in New York, Pat Rooney will present his new musical comedy in one act entitled "Simple Simon Simple." Another important event is the appearance of Bert Levy, the well-known cartoonist whose act is carried on through the medium of an ingenious electric apparatus and whose caricatures are selected from types with which he has met in his wanderings around the globe.

TIMBOOTEES ENJOY THE SEASON'S FIRST SMOKER

The first entertainment and smoker of the customary mid-winter series arranged by The Timbo Social Club was held in the organization's rooms on North avenue Monday night. It was attended by 75 of the members and continued from early last evening until well after midnight this morning. The affair was a big success in every way.

Harry Wetton, of Elizabeth, the well known monologist, expert and piano monologuist, was the principal entertainer during the evening and introduced several new specialties that were well received. Vocal numbers were rendered by William Dove, Erwin Y. Neighbor, Erwin Y. Neighbor, John P. Hall, W. J. Counihan, Thomas Fay and Thomas M. Muir, while Messrs. Counihan and Fay gave soft shoe and Lancashire clog dances that brought rounds of applause. Another feature of the evening was exhibitions by Henry Wierenga and Richard Bittle. An oyster supper was served in conclusion.

The committee in charge of the affair comprised Erwin Y. Neighbor, William Doud, Henry Wierenga, Thomas M. Muir and John DeNise. A similar smoker will be held the latter part of next month.

Senator Ackerman has announced the appointment of Charles S. Sminck, his private secretary, as clerk of the Senate Committee on Corporations. Clarence L. Case, a Somerville lawyer, will be clerk of the Senate Committee on Judiciary, of which Majority Leader Frelinghuysen is chairman.

INTERESTING SESSION OF PLAINFIELD Y.W.C.A.

The Young Women's Christian Association rooms were crowded Monday night, the event being one of the most important of the year, the annual meeting, when was presented by the various officers the review of the work done during the year just ended. About 150 members of the association were present. In the hall was erected a speaker's platform, with seats arranged in the rooms opening therefrom.

Mrs. Frederick Mead, the president of the association, presided over the meeting. The reports of the committees showed a wonderful and steady growth of the association.

The report of the treasurer was most gratifying. With all outstanding bills paid, the association begins its new year with $500 in its treasury. Much of the praise for such a splendid showing is due to the work of the treasurer, Mrs. James R. Joy, who has been untiring in her efforts to make the association's business dealings worthy of its name. Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, as chairman of the finance committee, told of the money raised and of the conservative policy of the association in carefully planning its finance work. One of the best reports of the evening was that given by Miss Elsie Goddard, as chairman of the religious work department. Miss Goddard told of the splendid work that had been done by Miss Susan Hubbell, her predecessor. She also spoke of the good vesper services held during the year with an average attendance of 40. Of the Bible classes that have played such an important part in the association life, of the $20 given to missionary purposes, and the "home missionary" work of the personal service committee in making calls and helping the younger girls. Mrs. John Grey Foster, as chairman of the house committee, spoke of the use that had been made of transient rooms and of the value of the library of 532 volumes which had been loaned 1,099 times during the year.

The report of the physical department was read by Mrs. William F. Taliaferro, who spoke of the gymnasium classes under the direction of Miss Margaret Mosher, and of how much they are doing to develop the physical life of the hundred or more girls enrolled. She also told of the doctors' lectures that are being given this winter, and of how much real benefit they are to the young women attending them. The exhibition in this department was announced for next Monday evening in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

The educational committee, beside the splendid story of the work on exhibition, was reported by Mrs. W. D. Murray. The English classes for foreign speaking girls, the French class, the cooking classes under Miss Mary Farrell, all show a marked improvement over the classes of last year, both in enthusiasm and enrollment. The dress-making classes, under Miss Isabel Searborough; the millinery under Miss Edith Capron, and the embroidery, with Miss Amy Lough, are all doing splendid work. Mrs. Edward Darrow, as chairman of the social committee, told how the social spirit is growing in the association. She spoke especially of the June supper given last spring. Mrs. David Titsworth gave a summary of the printing that had been done by the association, such as cards, folders, prospecti and year books. Miss Lillian Force, as chairman of the membership committee, told of the work of getting out renewal notices, and reported about 40 members at the present time. An election of officers and committee, appointed from the association membership, Miss Ethel Titsworth proposed the following names for re-election to the board of managers. They were elected to serve until 1911: Mrs. Frederick Andrews, Mrs. Robert Gowdy, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. Charles King, Mrs. Percy Stewart, Mrs. Henry De Forest, Miss Marion McCutcheon.

The report of the general secretary, Miss Amy Pryor Tapping, told of the walks and outings that were enjoyed by members of the association; of the Silver Bay conference that was attended by eleven delegates, and of the junior work in the association that will soon become a full-fledged department.

Mrs. Mead, the president, beautifully summed up the various reports telling how grateful was the association membership at what had been accomplished and that the work for the coming year was to be conducted along the same lines with new developments continually. Mrs. Mead introduced Miss Helen Alling Davis, who spoke especially for city associations, who spoke most forcefully and enthusiastically about the meaning of the association movement. She told of the organization of the association in London over fifty years ago by Sir George Williams, how it has rapidly spread in this country, and was taken up first by the college associations; then as college girls had gone back to their homes, they had desired to carry the same privileges to city girls—and so the association began. She told some amusing incidents in connection with her own work as local secretary at Rochester, N. Y.; and of the new development of the Y. W. C. A., the work among the country girls who comprised 55 per cent. of the girlhood of the nation.

Miss Davis told what a dollar invested in the Y. W. C. A. for membership would mean: A part in everything that is being done by every association in the world. Because the association can help young women you would like to help but have neither time or money to—for the association is not merely a building, nor a board of managers, but a group of women banded together to help their women." She said each member should be proud to say "Of which I am a part."

After Miss Davis had finished the members were given an opportunity to meet her and to view the splendid showing of the domestic arts department. In the dressmaking classrooms was a showing of the hand and machine work done in the various dressmaking classes. The pupils may be proud of what has been accomplished; they may well be proud with the citizens of Plainfield that there has grown up in our midst such a worthy organization as the Young Women's Christian Association.

PROCLAMATION FOR LINCOLN CENTENARY

On the twelfth day of February next will occur the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln.

By the law of our State his birthday has been made an annual legal holiday; but, the coming anniversary of his birth demands more than the customary observance.

Born in obscurity, when the place of his birth and early manhood, that is now a part of the great middle west, was on the frontier of the Republic, and reared amidst privations and hardships, with few, if any, of the advantages now obtainable by the youth of our day, he surmounted all difficulties and rose by sheer personal merit to the Presidency of the Republic and died a martyr's death when but fifty-six years of age.

His life and work are unique in American history. To recall his humble birth, his privations, sacrifices, virtues, utterances, principals, and public services, is to encourage youth, strengthen the cause of truth and right, love of liberty and elevate our standards of political honesty.

Therefore, I, John Franklin Fort, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby call upon all municipalities in the State, all public organizations, clubs, Posts of the Grand Army of the Republic, Public schools and all civic societies to cause suitable exercises to be arranged for on said twelfth day of February next, or near thereto, that the memory of this great American may be suitably commemorated; and I do further recommend that the clergy of the State shall, either upon the Sabbath preceding or succeeding the anniversary of his birth, devote one service in their respective places of worship to appropriate exercises.

Given under my hand and seal, at the Executive Chamber, in the city of Trenton, this eighteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and nine and, of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and thirty-third.

BLUES' POET CENTENARY CLOSE LIGHTING PLANT

Edgar Allen Poe's Hundredth Birthday Observed in the Public Schools Today.

PRINCIPALS' BRIEF TALKS.

Henry C. Krebs and Ira W. Travell Tell Pupils Something of the Bard's Life.

Edgar Allen Poe's one hundredth birthday anniversary was celebrated at the public schools Tuesday special exercises being held. At the Plainfield high school Principal I. W. Travell made a ten minutes talk to the pupils on the poet's career, making special mention of the poem, "The Fall of Usher."

Superintendent H. C. Krebs, at the North Plainfield high school, reviewed Poe's life, and read the most famous of his poems, "The Raven." Mr. Krebs also gave a brief account of the life of General Robert E. Lee, whose one hundred and second birthday anniversary is today.

There has been no one great central celebration in America of the one hundredth anniversary of Edgar Allen Poe's birth. A number of separate celebrations, however, were held in his honor—one in Boston, where he was born; one at the University of Virginia, where he was educated; another in Providence, R. I., where after the death of his wife he used Mrs. Sarah Helen Whitman, also a poet; another in New York, where he lived the closing years of his life, and one in Baltimore, where he died three score years ago.

The exercises at Poe's cottage at Fordham consisted of a reception in the poet's tiny home, where his wife died, and the dedication of a tablet in Poe park.

Poe is the most interesting figure in American literature, and his life furnishes the most extraordinary instance on record of systematic misrepresentation on the part of a biographer. Lambert A. Wilmer, the first editor of a magazine called "The Messenger," paid this tribute to Poe, with whom he had associated. Writing after a lapse of years, he said:

"The late Edgar A. Poe has been represented by the American newspapers in general as a reckless libertine and a confirmed inebriate. I do not recognize him by this description, though I was intimately acquainted with the man and had every opportunity to study his character. I have been in company with him every day for many months together, and within a period of twelve years I did not see him intoxicated—no, not in a single instance. I do not believe he was ever habitually intemperate until he was made so by grief and many bitter disappointments. And with respect to the charge of libertinism I have every reason to doubt it. Of all men that I ever knew he was the most passionless, and I appeal to his writings for a confirmation of this. * * * Poe never wrote a line that gave expression to a libidinous thought. The female creations of his fancy are all either sisters or angels. His conversation was, at all times was a chaste as that of a vestal, and his conduct while I knew him was correspondingly blameless."

Decadent writers of France, England and America have more or less successfully imitated Poe's style, but in every feature but that purity. Only in Woodberry's biography is there any such attempt at defamation.

P. S. C. ANNOUNCES CHANGE.

Connection with Metuchen Plant to Be Maintained—Considered an Improvement.

Electricity consumers in Plainfield and South Plainfield beginning with Monday, will be served from the enlarged plant of the Public Service Corporation at Cranford instead of from the local generating station without the assistance of the Metuchen plant at times, as formerly. The power station equipment has been installed and has been actually operating for several days, but it was deemed advisable to make a few minor changes before the plant was regarded as finally completed.

With the operating of the Cranford plant the Plainfield station will be closed and current will be supplied from Cranford to the Plainfield district direct. A connection with the Metuchen power will be maintained, and the Plainfield plant, although closed, will be kept in condition to be started at a moment's notice. This will provide against all emergencies, so far as future service is concerned for the lighting district will have three plants instead of two to rely upon, all being tied together so that current from any one may be sent to any part of the territory served by either.

In the equipment of the Cranford station there were installed three new boilers, a turbine generator of 3,000 horse power, condensing apparatus, a new switchboard, and transforming apparatus making it practically a new plant of nearly stevenly per cent greater capacity than the old equipment. With the facilities now available the company will be able to give better service without the temporary drawbacks which were unavoidable when it was necessary to change the load from one plant to another before the improvements were made.

The damages, however, will not cover faults due to improper interior wiring, and actual investigation has demonstrated that there are a number of houses in Plainfield that are wired inadequately for the number of lights installed. Incidentally, the operation of the improved plant will be a rigid test of the wisdom of better service made by President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service Corporation, in a speech at the Plainfield Board of Trade dinner two years ago. Another benefit that will accrue from the change will be the elimination of the present coal smoke from the present Plainfield plant.

MORRIS PLAINS ASYLUM MENACED BY FLAMES.

Fire was discovered in a linen-room in one of the woman's wards, on the fourth floor of the State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains, late Friday afternoon. The prompt action of the managers of the institution and their assistants, all of whom, without confusion or loss of time, assumed the duties assigned them, the State was saved a great loss, and only a few of the patients were exposed to excitements incidental to an alarm of fire.

It is supposed the fire started from a curtain being ignited by a gas jet, and when discovered the contents of the room, filled with cotton fabrics, were ablaze. The flames swept far out into the corridor when the door was opened. Dr. Britton D. Evans, Dr. Peter Mallon, Harry A. Van Gilder, secretary of the board of managers, and Freeholder George T. Allen, of Morristown, were in the board room when the alarm was brought to the officers, and, with Drs. E. Moore Fisher, Blase Cole and Louis K. Henchel and others, hastened to fight the flames.

An immediate examination of the timbers under the great roof of the building at this point showed that they were but slightly charred.

Locating about forty patients in the corridor when the firm alarm was given, the attendants instantly beginning to remove them through the three exits. Very few of the balance of the 658 female patients on that side of the building learned anything about the affair, although the hospital fire department, under the leadership of Chief George Mulford, raised several ladders to the windows at the danger point.

The loss by the flames is not heavy.

Mr. and Mrs. John Scott and Miss Julia Scott, of this city, were among those who attended the twenty-third wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Scott, formerly of Newark, but now of Fairville, on Saturday.

SCHUYLER THE FAVORITE

Broker Will Succeed R. E Hall as a City Father Unless Unforseen Happens.

WHAT KNOWING ONES SAY.

—Clark Is Not In It.

Within the course of a few weeks, the "Who's Who and Why in Plainfield" may contain this item of interest:

"Sidney Schieffelin Schuyler, member of the Common Council, New York Stock Exchange broker; has one of the finest homes in 'The City Beautiful' at No. 792 Belvidere avenue; native of Hudson county; resident of Union county ten years, a and of Plainfield six; staunch Republican, and an 'organization man;' thirty-second degree Mason, member of Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar, of Plainfield, and of Mecca Temple (New York), Ancient and Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine; senior partner in the Stock Exchange firm of Schuyler, Chadwick & Burnham, No. 100 Broadway, New York."

They say that two things are certain—death and taxes. But politics is also an unknown quantity for in it the "x, y, z's" are plentiful. As a matter of fact, however, Mr. Schuyler is said to have a "cinch" so far as his chances of succeeding Robert E. Hall in the Common Council are concerned. Counting noses there are at least five of the eleven members of that most august body favorable to him, according to a friend of a friend of ours who says he is on the inside in politics.

Edward E. Iremonger, who loomed up strong for the job, has withdrawn in Mr. Schuyler's favor. To be more exact the genial Edward never was a candidate, although his friends tried hard to make him one. To the man on the inside he is reported to have declared yesterday that he did not seek the position and would not take it even if offered on a silver platter garnished with roses. Mr. Iremonger takes to Mr. Schuyler's candidacy like a duck takes to water and like many others he believe he has hit on a sure thing."

Among the others who are already placed in the 'also ran' class are Vice City Chairman Robert H. McCready, Wm. M. Clark and W. M. Ailing. Ailing has never said that he would become a candidate, although his friends have boomed him strongly and he would make a first rate man for the place. And it is said, that as for Mr. Clark, he won't even get a look in to make use of the significant slang. When it comes to Mr. McCready, our friend says that he is seriously handicapped. You know he was rather conspicuous as an anti-organization man within the memory of man, and this possibly accounts for the political bookies placing the word 'scratched' after his name.

So Schuyler's the man unless the unforeseen happens.

THIEF STEALS SATCHEL WITH VALUABLE CONTENTS

Miss Virginia Lawrence, a chorus girl in "The American Idea" company, which played at the New Plainfield theatre, Monday, reported to Patrolman Nolan shortly after 2 Tuesday morning that a brown leather satchel, which she left in the North Avenue station a short time before, had been stolen. She placed it on a seat, she said, while she walked over to North avenue to get some lunch, pending the arrival of the 2:49 train, and when she returned it was gone. According to her statement it contained articles which she valued at $200.

The officer made an investigation and learned that three men were in the station when Miss Lawrence put the satchel down. They were seen by Patrolman McDonald who had also noted the young woman place her property on the seat. He was able to give a good description of the trio and it is believed they may be reached.

Miss Lawrence made the cops sit up and take notice before she took her departure by telling them to notify District Attorney Jerome, of New York, if they found the satchel or located the thief.

Holy Cross Loses.

The Holy Cross basketball team was defeated by the Rutgers Prep five Saturday night, 29 to 11. Although the church boys started at 6:45 they did not arrive at the college gymnasium in New Brunswick until 9:15, owing to the storm. Because of the late hour, only fifteen minute halves were played. The regular local team lined up against the preps, except that Corle was substituted for Marsh. The boys report a courteous reception by the head master and the boys of the school and were given an invitation to stop over night, on account of the severe weather. They decided to return, however, and arrived home safely after a cold ride.

TURKISH COLLEGE HEAD PREACHES ON HIS WORK

An address of unusual interest was delivered at the Congregational church Sunday, by President John E. Merrill, of the East Turkey College, at Aintab, Turkey. It was a masterly address and Mr. Miller being a brilliant speaker was able to present an unusually clear view of the present-day situation in Turkey from a missionary, educational and political point of view.

He dwelt at some length on the political revolution which has been in progress in Turkey and he predicted that it would open the way for the missionary in a way never dreamed of, and would afford a rare opportunity to reach the Mahammedans. Mr. Miller has been president of East Turkey College for ten years and during that time has been in close touch with every phase of life in that country.

He speaks in the highest terms of the students at the college and their ability to grasp the most difficult studies. At the same time there has been a strong religious wave sweeping through the country, which has been a source of much encouragement to the missionaries. He says that the hope of Turkey today lies in the young men and they will undoubtedly be in control of affairs.

HOLY CROSS CLUB IS PROSPEROUS NOW

Reports from various committees and a discussion of general matters made the meeting of the Holy Cross club one of interest Saturday night. Its membership is now 94. The secretary reported new property acquired by the club as follows: Pool table and equipment, valued at $250; gymnasium outfit, two pairs of boxing gloves, basketball, medicine ball, twelve new volumes for the library, six new banners, also many periodicals.

Arrangements are being made for an indoor athletic meet to be held Saturday night, 7:45 o'clock at the parish house. The events will include a fifteen yard dash, running high jump, standing broad and high jumps, shot put, pole vault and potato race. The competition will be divided into three classes—A, B and C. to be ranked according to size and ability. There will be no handi*caps. The club medal and other* prizes will be awarded. There will be first, second and third prizes in each class, the scoring to be based on the total number of points. About twenty-five entries have been received.

The dancing class, which meets Thursday night, now has a membership of forty. The special committee reported on the plans for the minstrel show to be held within the next month for the benefit of the library and general fund. A vote of thanks was extended to Edwin S. Hooley for the Christmas dinner and entertainment given to the boys. The club now supports the local basketball team, two baseball teams and two football teams. The house and rules committee in charge of the clubrooms has arranged to keep the rooms open Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons and all day Saturday. There is a good sized balance in the treasury.

BONJULATTI'S FRANKNESS COST HIM A $3 FINE.

Joseph Bonjulatti, an Italian living on East Fourth street, evidently believes an honest confession is good for the soul, but it proved expensive to him Monday. He was arraigned in the city court, Monday, on Patrolman McDonald's charge that he was rendered helpless, Saturday night, through lingering too long over the cup that cheers and gives headaches. When Judge Runyon asked him if the officer's statement was true, Joe said:

"Sure, Mr. Judge, I was drunk; I had a good bun on."

The magistrate opined that it by Patrolman McDonald who had also noted the young woman place her property on the seat. He was able to give a good description of the trio and it is believed they may be reached.

Miss Lawrence made the cops sit up and take notice before she took her departure by telling them to notify District Attorney Jerome, of New York, if they found the satchel or located the thief.

Death of Miss M. A. Lunger.

Mrs. A. V. Lunger, of Watchung avenue, has returned from Sunnyside, Hunterdon county, where she attended the funeral service of her sister, Miss Mary A. Lunger, who died at that place on Sunday, January 3. With the exception of Mrs. Lunger, she was the last member of that family. She was a woman of exceptional Christian character and beloved by all who knew her, not only at Sunnyside, but throughout Hunterdon county. The burial was at Whitehouse.

DISCOURSES ON UNREST

Rev. Dr. Henson Says People Need Grace of God Not Legislation or Reform.

PREACHES TO THE BAPTISTS.

"They Cannonade the Preachers of Today and After They Are Dead They Canonize Them.

Rev. Dr. P. S. Henson, one of the best known preachers in the Baptist denomination, occupied the pulpit at the First Baptist church, Sunday morning. Despite the inclement weather there were between 300 and 400 in the congregation, including members of the Temple Baptist church and of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, who gave up their services for the morning to hear the distinguished divine.

Dr. Henson had a continuous pastorate for fifty-five years, his last charge being at Tremont Temple, Boston, which he resigned to represent the Northern Baptist convention for world evangelization. The object of this convention is to organize all of the various Baptist societies under one head and to undertake the evangelization through united co-operation. The purpose is to raise a million and half dollars for this work.

After briefly outlining the work he has undertaken, Dr. Henson said that he would preach a sermon, that being the purpose of his visit to Plainfield. He took his text from Hagai 2-7: "The Desire of All Nations Shall Come." This text he interpreted to mean that Christ is the desire of all nations, yet when he first came to earth he was not wanted, in fact he was despised and persecuted. But He was what the world wanted and today He is wanted more than ever.

"You find people today who are forever complaining that the old days were the best, that there was no political corruption then, that the preachers were far ahead of those of the present day. This makes me weary. I think such people should by remanded to the old days for awhile and I think they would be glad enough to come back again. They cannonade the preachers of today and after they are dead they canonize them. The trouble with the people of today is that they are restless. They feel as though the iron heel of oppression is on their necks even in this country where we have so little government that we don't know we have one.

"This feeling of unrest is demonstrated by a demand for shorter hours on the part of workingmen and increases in wages, but there is no limit to the demands made. When I was in Chicago an Anarchist was hanged, a pitiful sight, but that did not terminate anarchy. I think that there are just as many Anarchists in Chicago as ever. It is not legislation, reform movements or politics that the people want, but it is the power of the grace of God. The individual soul needs Jesus Christ. He it is that tells us all we want to know."

DEATH OF FORMER BOROUGH RESIDENT

Gilbert L. Douglass, a former well known resident of North Plainfield, died Friday morning at his home in Buffalo, N. Y., general debility being the cause. He was seventy years old and at the time of his death was one of the most prominent men engaged in the transportation business about the Great Lakes, and a factor in the world of commercial traffic.

Mr. Douglass was a native of Troy, N. Y., and from the time that he was a boy engaged in transportation work, principally with the New York Central Railroad, the Merchants Despatch Transportation and the Western Transit company. He came to Plainfield about 1890 and resided for four years at Sycamore and Willow avenues. Later he moved to the Musgrave place at Sycamore and Mercer avenues where he remained until his removal to Buffalo in 1896. At the time of his death he was vice president and general manager of the Western Transit Company and had entire charge of the business of that concern.

Mr. Douglass is survived by his wife, five sons and one daughter, the latter being Mrs. Arthur E. Crone, of College place, this city. Mr. and Mrs. Crone attended the funeral, held Sunday at the late home.

Met Inventor's Brother.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, of Fairview avenue, and Mrs. George Fisher, of Park avenue, spent last month at Dr. Denis hotel, New York, where there they met Mr. and Mrs. Charles DeForest, the former brother of Dr. Lee DeForest, the inventor, who equipped twenty-six vessels in the Pacific fleet with wireless telephone apparatus and introduced it in the foreign navies. The brothers are working together. Their father was president of Talladga College, preceding Dr. Andrews, who resigned last October on the seventy-fifth anniversary of his birthday.

OLD ENGLAND'S MARTYRS; THEIR CASTLES AND CELLS

An instructive pictorial lecture under the title, "Historical Castles in England," was given by George N. Cross at the Plainfield high school auditorium Saturday night. Numerous views were shown of the famous London Tower, both inside and out, bringing to mind the many deviltries enacted therein during the struggles of England's early Kings and Queens centuries ago.

The tower, still standing, is used as a museum, and in it are gathered many relics of those days. Mr. Cross had been permitted to photograph the exhibits as well the dungeons and other interiors of the prison in which England's martyrs had been confined.

The gorgeously furnished rooms of state of Windsor Castle, said to be the finest king's palace in the world, were depicted on the screen in their actual colors. Other famous castles were shown and described, by the speaker. Two more entertainments will be given by this lecturer at the high school. On next Saturday night the subject is to be "Queen Victoria," and on Saturday January 30, "Abraham Lincoln."

AMERICANS, AROUSED, HALT WEALTH'S MISUSE

The attitude of the American people toward the dominating power of great wealth was discussed by Edward Russell Perry, of New York, at the men's meeting Monday afternoon at Y. M. C. A. hall, under the suggestive title, "Sampson Aroused." The money kings had not secured their enormous wealth by labor or by industry, he said, but by legislation in their favor, and that this power to influence law-making was rapidly being overcome. The American people were composed to Sampson, who when aroused, arose in his great strength and slew all before him.

It was not greed which prompted men to amass wealth beyond their needs, but the desire for power. The lesson he drew was that every man should live an honorable life and thus do his share towards making America a nation of honest, sincere people. He declared that this country today is in exactly the same stage as regards riches as was Rome before the fall, but had no fear that we would meet the same fate as the Americans were not given to luxury and vice as were the Romans.

As an excuse for Sampson's predisament, the speaker explained that it was due to his love for the young Philisitine girl, and what man would not yield to the entreaties of the girl of his choice. "A woman is weaker than man," said he, "and a weak woman can worry a man into doing anything."

Bride and Groom Like Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. William Yoost, of New York city, who were recently married at the Hotel Marseille, Broadway and 103d street, New York, and who are returning from their honeymoon, were the guests Friday and Saturday of Joseph H Wright, of West Front street. During their visit Mr. Wright drove them about the city and borough and they were so much pleased with the city that they will no doubt locate here in the near future. Mr. Yoost is prominently connected in the banking and brokerage business in New York. The wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Yoost was a quiet one and was attended by a host of guests.

JERSEY'S GREATEST ENEMY

PLAINFIELD'S RATE IS 17.25.

—New Brunswick 16.81.

Some suggestive mortuary statistics are given in the annual report of the State Board of Health. A chart showing the death in New Jersey from certain diseases for the last twenty-nine years indicates that, consumption is the most fatal malady. Next in order of fatality come diarrhoeal diseases of children, the deaths in the same period numbering 23,984. When follow diseases of the heart and circulation, 23,369; digestive and intestinal disease, 42,887; renal and cystic diseases 41,751; violent deaths, 38,175; diphtheria and croup, 35,172; cancer, 22,417; typhoid fever, 15,026; scarlet fever, 11,845; puerperal fever, 7,637; whooping cough, 6,819; malarial fever, 4,866; measles, 4,515.

Deaths from consumption in New Jersey for the last seven years numbered 21,514. Of these deaths 352 occurred to children under one year of age. The largest number of deaths from this disease during this period occurred to persons between the ages of 25 and 30 years, being 6,606. The next sized number was between 30 and 40 years, being 6,292; between 40 and 50 years the number was 4,657; then from this period there is progressive decline from decade to decade, there being 145 deaths from this disease to persons more than 8 years of age.

Deaths from consumption in New Jersey have not increased at all in proportion to population. In 1879 the percentage from consumption for each 10,000 population was 27.32, in 1889 it was 24.50, in 1899 it was 19.31, in 1907 it was 16.67. The decrease of fatalities from this disease has been progressive, and it is believed by sanitarians to be due to the general dissemination of modern theories in the successful treatment, particularly with reference to fresh air and sunlight.

The percentage of deaths from consumption for each 10,000 of population in different municipalities in this state is illuminating. In Atlantic county last year the percentage was 11.05; in Union county, 15.12; in Bergen county it was 10.03; in Englewood, 10.48; in Burlington county, 15.09; in Bordentown, 19.71; in Burlington, 7.23; in Camden county, 17.46; in Cape May county, 12.96; in Essex county, 20.89; in Somerset county, 12.15; in Plainfield, 17.25; in Bloomfield, 4.81; East Orange, 10.50; Irvington, 12.58; Montclair, 9.81; Newark, 23.68; Orange, 25.66; Gloucester county, 9.83; Hudson county, 9.95; Bayonne, 16.93; Harrison, 22.60; Hoboken, 24.15; Jersey City, 23.03; Kearny, 10.90; Town of Union, 13.53; West Hoboken, 13.03; West New York, 21.34; Hunterdon county, 10.99; Mercer county, 13.96; Princeton, 7.27; Trenton, 18.50; Middlesex county, 12.12; New Brunswick, 16.81; Perth Amboy, 8.91; South Amboy, 17.68; Monmouth county, 12.19; Asbury Park, 8.33; Morris county, 15.06; Ocean county, 11.25; Passaic county, 14.43; Paterson, 15.52; Passaic city, 16.01; Salem county, 14.30; Salem city, 23.89; Sussex county, 10.43; Elizabeth, 17.07; Rahway, 11.19; Warren county, 13.27; Phillipsburg, 10.91.

DUNELLEN'S PEACE DISTURBED BY THEM

Two drunks were arraigned before Recorder David Campbell in the Dunellen court Monday night. Harry Wilson, of Plainfield, a bricklayer, had disturbed the peace of the borough. Another man, Andrew McCutchen, a track walker, was arrested by Marshal Silney, while pushing people off the sidewalks and trying in other ways to start a fight. They was not much doing, but him then the water had cooled and he was compelled to pay a two dollar fine.

The discovery of the robbery was not made until this morning, when Mr. Rielly went to open up. He found everything about the place disturbed showing that the burglars had generally ransacked everything. The authorities have been notified, but thus far there is no clue.

Offered Will for Probate.

Francis J. Blatz, counsel for the estate of Mary Paul, offered her will for probate in Surrogate Parrot's office, Elizabeth, Monday. The estate is a small one. The estate will probably little more than cover hospital and burial expenses.

PINTO NOW A THESPIAN

Joe Weber Has Secured Talented Plainfielder to Appear in "The Climax."

OPENS AT ALBANY FEBRUARY 1.

Effingham A. Pinto, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Pinto, of this city, who on a number of occasions has appeared with great success in amateur theatricals, here and elsewhere, has joined Joe Weber's stock company. He has been named for one of the important parts in "The Climax," a dramatic production which Weber is about to make. The new play is by Edward Locke, an unknown writer. The incidental music, which plays an important part, is by Joseph Carl Breil, heretofore noted only as a composer of church music.

Two casts of players are rehearsing the play now and it will have its initial performance at Albany, N. Y., February 1. Mr. Pinto is a member of the first cast. After appearing at several of the large cities in New York State, also Montreal, it will be brought to New York.

Mr. Pinto has unusual ability and talent in the dramatic art and besides being a pianist is a clever a dancer. His first efforts in dramatics was while a student at John Leal's School. Later he appeared in amateur productions at the Park Club, the Casino and he was one of the strong attractions at the Kirmess given at the New Plainfield theatre for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital a year ago.

It is not unlikely that "The Climax" will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre during the present season according to Joe Weber's plans.

COURT PLAINFIELD ENTERTAINS BIG CROWD

Complete success attended the annual entertainment and dance of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, I. O. F., Friday night. Saengerbund hall, where the affair was held, had a capacity crowd in attendance from early in the evening until well after midnighttand if the gathering included anybody who didn't have a good time it's no fault of the committee.

The entertainment was opened by an overture by Heinemeyer's orchestra, of Elizabeth, and was followed by professional artists from H. R. Thorn's vaudeville company. They completely filled the bill, headed by "The Irish Count," who tickled the risibles of his audience with Celtic wit; Emil Closs, the pantomimist and entertainer, who is well known to Plainfielders; Professor Donar, magic mystifyer; Beach and Bechler, musical team; and Eddie Clark, the comedy juggler. All the acts were well received and the performers had no complaint to make about lack of applause.

After the vaudeville numbers, the floor was cleared for dancing and it was continued until 2 o'clock this morning. Louis J. Feiring was the efficient floor manager and he was ably assisted by Frederic D. Wilbee, James M. Smith, James T. McCarty and Charles J. McCarthy.

The committees in charge of the affair included Edward J. McCue, chairman; Louis J. Feiring, James M. Smith, Frederic Breem, John R. Cline, Thomas Monsell, Henry Hansen, Charles J. McCarthy and Frederic D. Wilbee.

Football vs. Prayer.

Willie, aged 5, was taken by the father to his first football game. The feature that caught his chief approval, however, did not become evident till he said his prayers that night. To the horror of his parents Willie prayed, with true football snap:

"God bless papa,
God bless mamma,
God bless Willie;
Boom! Rah! Rah! —Success.

Tony Pastor
By Harry S. Sanderson
in "Variety."

In a recent issue of Variety, a periodical devoted to theatricals, Harry S. Sanderson, who is now associated with F. F. Proctor, Jr., in the management of the local Proctor theatre, tells an interesting story reminiscent of the late Tony Pastor. No one knew the dean of vaudeville better and in the practical operation of Pastor's theatre Mr. Sanderson was an important factor. He was associated with Tony Pastor for thirty-seven years.

"My first knowledge of Tony Pastor dates back to 1867," says Mr. Sanderson, "when quite a youth I left Wilmington, Del., to pay a visit to Philadelphia on a sight-seeing expedition. It was my first visit to a large city, and I was desirous of seeing all "the sights." At that time there flourished in Callowhill street a place of amusement known as Rivers' Melodeon, a variety theatre of the class of New York's famous "444" Broadway. There was a small auditorium with two circles and an orchestra floor, or, as called in those days, the "parquette." In a musical-mad town as Philadelphia it was indeed a sort of fairy land.

"Beautiful women danced upon the stage. Ausing negro comedians created much laughter, and dexterous acrobats held me in breathless yet fearsome delight. After a while a movement in the audience presaged the coming of the principal attraction—Tony Pastor. Can I ever forget my sensations? I had read of Tony Pastor, had purchased his song books and essayed to sing his songs, and indeed had created an ideal. Fancy my surprise when a dapper little chap of about 110 pounds came on the stage dressed in the garb of a circus clown, and sang "Everything Is Lovely and the Goose Hangs High."

"I remember the song was pointed in its hits at current topics while it breathed a patriotic sentiment, and told us that "Old Abe would be seen in the White House, and everything would be lovely and the goose hangs high." Inasmuch as we were on the verge of civil war, this sentiment was cordially endorsed and re-demanded.

"Some years elapsed before I again met Tony Pastor. I was making a call on a friend when Tony came in during the conversation. The ill-fortune of a worthy old lady was mentioned, and as it was Christmas time there was a change on the change in her circumstances. Tony soon took his leave, and after his departure my hostess exhibited a ten-dollar bill that Tony requested her to hand to the old lady. Billy Delehanty (the well-known Delehanty and Hengler team- remarked "Oh, that's nothing for Tony; he's always doing that." And now after forty years of close association, I can say that he was "always doing that."

"My own relations with Tony Pastor began in a most unexpected way. Happening into his theatre a day in April, 1872, he requested me to come and fill the place of his brother, Fernando, for two weeks. The connection thus begun with but few words as to terms continued thirty-seven years, except for a few intervals when my attention was called to other theatrical enterprises.

"This reminds me of an occasion when on the road with my own show I went short of funds, and ran on to New York to "raise the wind." I called upon Tony about 10 a. m. He came to the head of the stairs in his pajamas. I told my story, and he exploded. 'Do you think I keep a bank in the house?' No, I said, but I am in a hole, you know, and I turned to leave. 'Ah, what's the matter with you?' he said. 'Don't get mad. Go to the theatre, write a check for what you need and I'll sign it.' I started for the door. He called after me: 'Say, Henry, it's all right. I would as leave have the money in your keeping as in the bank; but don't wake a fellow out of his morning nap again.'

"A striking illustration of Mr. Pastor's character was an occurrence in 1884. A mutual friend lost his wife. When I told Tony he said: 'I don't like to go into a house of mourning. You go, Henry, and express my sor*row, and take a couple of hundred* dollars with you. Money is always useful at such times.' I tried to explain how embarrassed I was until the donation were declined. 'Well, just say I thought he would not care to go to the bank at this time, and this is a loan.' I did as directed, the friend thanked me kindly but said he was in no need. I reported the fact. 'Well, then if he won't have it, put it in your pocket. Poor fellow, his heart must be sore.'

"Handicapped with a small theatre, in a rapidly declining neighborhood, with age approaching, the last years of the career of the struggle against odds that would have swamped even a young man. But his demeanor was ever cheerful; his hope bright; his faith abiding.

"I cannot refrain from mentioning while I have opportunity, the erroneous impression which has gone forth that Mr. Pastor lost his fortune and was deprived of his lease. Neither is true. He was simply tired, and went calmly and peacefully to rest; a righteous man; a true and noble friend, and this world is the better for having known Tony Pastor.

PARK AVENUE BAPTIST S. S. ANNUAL MEETING

The annual election of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school was largely attended. George C. Hall, president. Secretary Henry F. Cuming submitted his report which stated: "We now have a membership of 9 officers, 19 teachers, 42 scholars in the elementary department, and 171 in the main school, making a total of 241, an increase of 16 during the year. The average attendance during 1908 was 110."

*The report of the elementary su*perintendent, Miss Elmira C. Runyon, stated: "We began the year with a membership of 48, 14 in the junior department, 17 in the primary department, and 17 in the beginners' department, and with a cradle roll membership of 8. We have lost 12 scholars by removal, but have gained 15 new ones, and 5 new names have been added to the cradle roll. The average attendance for the year is 32. Our birthday offerings are the largest we have ever had."

Mrs. A. E. Finn reported for the missionary committee. Mrs. D. M. Runyon, superintendent of the home department, gave an interesting report of that branch of the work, stating the present membership to be 41. Six new visitors have recently been added. R. Coles Treadwell, chairman of the music committee, submitted a pleasing report in the line of vocal music.

The treasurer, Joseph M. Hawkins, reported total receipts for 1908 $933.99, and disbursements $919.96.

These officers were chosen: Superintendent, George E. Hall; assosuperintendent, Miss Florence G. Hawkins; secretary, Martin B. Stutsman; assistant secretary, Henry F. Cuming; treasurer general fund, Joseph M. Hawkins; treasurer benevolent fund, Willard M. Maxim; librarian, E. Frank Wall; pianist, Miss Mary E. Clark; blackboard artist, Charles Van Winkle; superintendent elementary department, Miss Elmira C. Runyon; orchestra leader, Arthur S. Mosher; chairman music committee, R. Coles Treadwell; temperance secretary, Charles E. Dayton.

These are the new committees. Missionary, Mrs. A. E. Finn, Mrs. S. A. Krom; music, R. Coles Treadwell, Miss Mary E. Clark, Arthur S. Mosher; finance, Joseph M. Hawkins, Theodore J. Runyon, D. Runyon, Crom, Charles Van Winkle, Willard M. Maxim, Joseph M. Hawkins; entertainment, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Miss Cora R. Brokaw.

At the request of the pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn, each officer and teacher present attached his or her signature to a birthday letter which he had written to William Tallman, one of the deacons of the church, who has reached the age of ninety years. Following the business of the session, refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour followed.

LINKED EYEBROWS.

It is popularly believed that if one's eyebrows meet it indicates deceit. Charles Kingsley indorses this belief, but Tennyson has other ideas and poetically speaks of "married brows."

In Turkey meeting eyebrows are greatly admired, and the women use artificial means to bring the brows to this condition, and if art cannot induce thin eyebrows to grow they make up by drawing a black line with paint.

It would appear that the Greeks admired brows which almost met, and the fashionable inhabitants of Rome not only approved of them, but resorted to pigments to make up the lack which sometimes existed.

Some authorities state that the person whose eyebrows meet will always have good luck, while others state exactly the reverse. The Chinese say that "people whose eyebrows meet can never hope to attain to the dignity of a minister of state." and in Greece of today the man whose brows meet is said to be a vampire, while in Denmark and Germany it is said he is a were-wolf.—London Standard.

Nets May Be Dyed.

A simple little dress of this sort was of blue net in rather coarse mesh. The modest round corsage was edged with a Greek key braiding of soutache, easily done at home and the same simple design bordered the little sleeves and decorated the high empiire waistline. Tucks finished the lose.

In blue, mauve, maize, palest canary or the smoke and taupe grays these simple net frocks are really delightful, both for their simplicity and the ease and economy with which they can be devised at home.

COUNTY TAX BOARD "O.K."

Governor Fort's Suggestion to Abolish Present Plan is Unpopular in Union.

MR. ACKERMAN IS INTERESTED.

Senator Regards Union's Board as Excellent Body—Attorney Connolly Fi-ors It.

During the past few days there has been considerable comment in official circles anent the recommendations of Governor Fort with a bearing on county tax boards; and the discussion started a year or more ago as to the efficiency of such boards has been revived. In this connection the Union County Tax Board occupies an unique position in that it is supported almost unanimously by those competent to discuss tax affairs. It is contended that any official dereliction or irregularity in other counties throughout the State should not result in the elimination of a board with which Union county is satisfied and which has carried on its work creditably in the face of many confusing situations. On these grounds any definite movement to have the present county boards deposed and the tax matters adjusted under the old regime will undoubtedly meet with strenuous opposition throughout the county.

The ratables of Union county are more fairly fixed now than they have ever been in the past in my opinion," said City Attorney Connolly, of Elizabeth, yesterday, "and I am certain that we could not improve matters by wiping out the present system. The Union County board has obtained excellent results in a general way and I believe that it will continue to do so."

It has developed that Senator Ackerman has directed many questions bearing on the tax matters of Union county and the operations of the board to City Attorney Connolly, of Elizabeth, who has furnished all the information possible in each instance. Senator Ackerman has displayed a deep interest in the tax matters of the county, and, it is understood, will introduce resolutions, be regards the Union county board favorably. More than a year ago Senator Ackerman made inquiries into the results obtained under the existing board in Union, and he has since secured all the data obtainable along the same lines.

WIFE READ NEWSPAPERS; "GOT HEP" TO HUSBAND.

Mrs. Bertha Beckers, of Weehawken Heights, recently saw a story in the newspapers that Alexander Beckers was named as the co-respondent in a divorce suit. Her husband's name was Alexander, and she instituted an investigation. It proved that the man mentioned as co-respondent was not her husband, she was married. She promptly sued for divorce. Special Master in Chancery Linn advised a decree and the Court of Chancery has now granted it.

The suit which prompted Mrs. Becker's petition for divorce was brought by Henry Wellman, of New York, against his wife, Lydia Wellman, also of New York. The New York courts granted a decree of divorce.

Miss Ida May Tier Surprised.

Miss Ida May Tier, of Bard place, was given a "ruching shower" at her home, Friday night, the affair being a complete surprise. Everyone who attended brought various lengths of ruching and Miss Tier found herself well supplied with this useful neckwear. The young people spent the evening playing games and enjoying vocal and instrumental music, after which refreshments were served. A feature of the evening was the presentation of a box of paper ruching, of various colors. On the edge was printed the inscription "To Ida from Bill." There were about thirty-five guests.

CITY NOW TO RETRENCH

Economy to Be the Keynote of Local Administration This Year.

CITY FATHERS TO DECIDE.

Mayor Fisk Approves of Going Slow With Expenditures—Informal Discussion Held Last Night.

Economy was the keynote of the first of the series of conferences held Friday night by the members of the Common Council with Mayor Charles J. Fisk, and it was the general opinion that great care must be exercised this year in the expenditure of money not only for improvements, but for the maintenance of the various departments. The necessity for this was impressed upon the city fathers by Chairman Herbert Buxton of the finance committee and they agreed with him.

It was during an informal discussion about the annual budget that the finance committee suggested that all the departments practice economy in making up the figures amounts to be asked for. It was a little too early to decide on the amount to be raised for all purposes, but some progress was made in this direction. It is safe to say that each committee will keep the figures as low as possible so that the general amount will come within what is considered a reasonable figure.

The consideration of matters of finance took up practically the whole evening, and several other questions to be presented by Mayor Fisk were left for another conference. Mr. Fisk assured the Council that it would have his hearty co-operation in conducting the city government on an economical basis. The members were gratified over the statement of the finance committee that this year's taxes were paid promptly and the delinquent list is unusually small. The financial condition of the city was reported to be most satisfactory.

SCHOOL BOY'S SUCCESS AS A COMPOSER OF MUSIC.

Clarence R. Lawrence, of East Front street, has just published a composition in the form of a song and those who have heard it have no end of praise for this useful addition in the musical field. The song is entitled "When Stars Are in the Quiet Skies," and is very melodious, showing good taste and style. It is dedicated to John Leal.

Mr. Lawrence is the son of Mrs. M. J. Lawrence and is sixteen years of age. He attends Leal's School as a junior and is captain of the best basketball team the school ever had. He is a brother of Russell Lawrence, the crack athlete, *who has been breaking many rec*ords during the past year. He is also talented as a violinist and has been heard as a soloist on different occasions. His friends are pleased over his achievements. Mr. Lawrence is a violin and harmony pupil of George C. M. Smith, of Crang place.

VESTED CHOIR LIKELY AT CHURCH OF HEAVENLY REST

Improvements are now underway at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, which will make that edifice more attractive and comfortable. The interior of t he church was greatly improved last fall by redecorating and carpeting, through the gifts of friends who worship there. A new brass altar rail has been given in memoriam, new red velvet seat cushions to associate to match have replaced the old gray cushions and noisy knee benches, while a coat of varnish gives a finish to the interior.

New altar linens for use at the communion service, as well as some new ones being made by the everfaithful altar guild, are greatly appreciated by the worshippers there. The church is now looking forward to having a vested choir in the near future.

Big Demand for Tickets.

The Plainfield Merchants' Association has found it necessary to call in all tickets not sold for the banquet. The demand has been so great for them that there was no trouble in selling a number to meet the accommodations of the Hartridge School auditorium, where the banquet will be held.

Will Elect Officers.

The directors of the Plainfield Trust Company will meet Thursday afternoon, January 22, for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year.

Explained.

SUPERINTENDENT'S PLAN FOR TEACHERS

At the last regular meeting of the Union County Principals' Association, held at the home of County Superintendent Savitz, that official reported that in his visits to schools he finds a great many teachers who do their work in a mechanical way. He said that they do not seem to be thoroughly alive or interested in their work. As a means of interesting and instructing teachers he is arranging to have conferences of teachers of the various departments for informal discussions. Arrangements are also being made to have some lectures given for the help of teachers. It is proposed to give especial attention to interesting pupils in school gardens during the present year. A competition will be arranged for next fall and prizes offered for the best exhibits of flowers or vegetables raised by the children.

Brief reports were made by the various committees on the Union county course of study. At the next meeting the course for nature study will be presented more fully and discussed.

The following were present: Principals Johnson, of Cranford; Townsend, of Scotch Plains; Updyke, of Garwood; Soehl, of Kenilworth; Davis, of Roselle Boro, of Roselle Park; Woodfield, of Lyons Farms; Savits, of Westfield, and Headley, of Linden.

HELD BELATED PICNIC IN CHURCH BASEMENT

Under the auspices of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church "A Belated Picnic" was held in the basement of the church Friday night. The affair, a novel one, was in charge of the social committee, of which Miss Frances Weed is the chairman. She was assisted by Miss Martha Humble, Miss Edith Randolph, and Miss Edna French.

The room was elaborately decorated with wisteria and made to look as near like a garden as possible. Numerous small trees were placed about the room to assist in carrying out the scheme. As the young people entered they introduced themselves to each other and in this way became acquainted.

The evening was spent in playing all sorts of outdoor games, including croquet, quoits, ten pins, bean bag, while picture puzzle games proved enjoyable to all. At the conclusion of the games refreshments were served while seated on the floor. More than one hundred young men and women were present and the social was considered one of the best of the season.

THE IRISH BIRD CHARMER.

Wid more or less o' tuneful grace,
As fits a Celtic singer,
I've praised the "great bird of our race,"
The stork, the blessin' bringer.
When first to each poor roof he came,
How sweetly he was sung to!
I called him every dacint name
That I could lay my tongue to.
But, glory be! that praise from me
No pleased the simple craythur.
His visits here have come to be
A sort o' second nature.
I'm glad to see him now and thin,
But, glory be to heaven!
If here he isn't back again,
An' this is number seven!

Och! though this gift o' song may be
In many ways a blessin',
It brings some popularity
That gets to be distressin'.
Now, mind, I love this Irish bird—
We couldn't live widout him—
An' shure, I'll not take back a word
I ever said about him.
But now when all these months to feed
Ate up our little savin's,
The birds whose visits most we need
Are ould Elisha's ravens.
Begor', if they were 'round these I'd sing them such a song o' praise
'Twould keep them always near me.

Cleaning Wall Paper.

The spots that find themselves on wall paper more frequently in summer than at any other time can be quickly and easily removed by making a stiff dough of graham flour and boiling water, knead the dough thoroughly and break into small pieces.

As each piece is used it should be doubled in on itself so there is a clean surface at each rub. When one piece is soiled throw it away and take a fresh one.

Always rub the paper in one direction and do not go over the same surface twice.

LIE TALKS ON NORWAY

AT THE PLAINFIELD SEMINARY.

He Varies His Lecture With Some Folk Song of his Native Land Pictures Its Beautiful Scenes.

A lecture on Norway, of unusual interest and charm, was given before the pupils of the Plainfield Seminary on Friday morning by Jonas Lie. The public is already familiar with this artist's power of interpreting upon canvas the solemn and tragic beauty of his native land; but those who listened to him yesterday realized that his word-pictures were hardly less graphic; though modified by a temperament which combines poetic imagination with delicate and fanciful humor.

Mr. Lie did not attempt to give the conventional tourists description of the land of Bjornson, Ibsen and Grieg. It was rather as though his audience were privileged to take the leaves of a travellers' sketch book, in which glimpses of ice-locked fjords; of snow-capped mountains and gloomy forests, were mingled with the picturesque variety and color of peasant life. They heard the shrill notes of the wedding fiddle rising above the rhythmic sound of the dancer's feet; listened in the security of the ingle-roots to tales of trolls and ocean demons, as the July snow drove over the whitened landscape; bade farewell to the summer sun, and watched the Northern lights stream across the sombre heavens; or looked over the illimitable wastes from Gjendin, where Peer Gynt leaped on the maddened stag to the depths below.

Mr. Lie varied his lecture with six folk songs, which were characterized by the native minor harmonies that haunt the music of the great Norwegian composer. The interest of the morning was further enhanced by the presence of Mrs. Lie, who wore a gaily colored Hardanger dress, which illustrated one of the many peasant costumes to be found by the traveller, who visits the remote country districts.

YOU DISLIKE TO MEET.

She who makes it a point to say, "Why haven't you been to see me?" Your excuse may be good or bad, but you prefer to offer it unforced.

The girl who is ever hunting trouble. Some people are like the porcupine; they go around with bristles out.

She who has the staring habit. There are girls you hate for no other reason than because of the roving eye. To be taken in from head to foot in a five-minutes' conversation is more than a shower bath with the thermometer at zero.

The girl who rubs in her invitations. You may have turned down Jack's invitation indifferently, but do have the other girl say with an air, "Jack has just asked me for supper at the dancing class" gives you a spiteful desire to let him know she was second choice.

The girl who croaks. What if you have lost ten pounds or your complexion has gone back on you? You would rather meet the flatterer who says, "How well you are looking"—even though you know she is dallying with fact.

An Evening Coiffure.

A neat way of dressing the hair for evening is to arrange all over a circular mount, which must be supplied for this purpose. The hair can be curled after or before this arrangement is made. The round pompadour in front is one good model, though the hair slightly parted at the right or left gives a youthful appearance. Fasten the loose ends a little below the crown of the head to cover the coils with the loose curled ends of hair, then pin each strand of hair with small invisible pins. The loose ends should be decorated with small hair puffs. These puffs are inexpensive, and at present are seen on the most stylish coiffure. If one has sufficient hair, it will be necessary to even pad the little rolls, which are more substantial in appearance than mere curls. The rest of the hair may be lose and wavy, though the coils and puffs are securely fastened. Any desired hair ornaments may be worn, though set pieces are neatest.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 24, 1903.

By REV. H. H. DOYLE.

Topic—Life lessons from the book of Genesis.—Gen. i, 1-8, 26-31.

Twelve books of the Bible, one for each month, have been selected for our study in the present year. In a note on the United society's topic card it is explained that these books were "selected by a large company of leading clergymen and laymen on the way to the Seattle convention, who chose the books of the Bible most helpful to them." It is also added that "in each case the entire book is open for comment." This gives to all Christian Endeavorers an excellent opportunity to study twelve of the most important books of the Bible, not in parts, but as a whole. This opportunity should be improved. Each month the entire book should not only be read, but also studied. Such study will prove most interesting and do away with much ignorance that exists concerning the Bible because of the tendency to study but short passages of each book. (1) Get a good general outline of each book. (2) Then familiarize yourself with the details under each head of the outline. The results will amply pay for the time and study given in following such a plan.

The book of Genesis, as its name implies, is a book of beginnings. In it we have recorded the beginning of the heavens and earth, the beginning of the Sabbath, of the human race, of sin, of God's punishment of sin and of the life of the chosen people of God from Abraham down to the death of Joseph. Its contents may be divided into four parts:

1. The creation, including man and his fall—i, 3.

2. The antediluvian history of mankind—iv, 5.

3. The deluge and subsequent events —vi, 11.

4. The patriarchal age, including the lives of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and his twelve sons to the death of Joseph —xii, 50.

Under some such outline the contents of the entire book stand out clearly before us and may help us greatly in the more detailed study of the book itself.

But Genesis is more than a simple statement of the early facts in human history. It reveals God as the Creator of the universe and all that is within it. It thus lays the foundation of our faith in our God as the Creator and Preserver of all things. It tells the sad story of the corruption of the entire human race through the disobedience and sin of the first Adam. It tells how sin entered into the world, but not why it entered. Then with these things and what follows up to Abraham as a background its chief design is revealed in that it is to show how God revealed Himself to the first fathers of the Jewish nation in order that He might make to Himself a people who should be His witnesses on the earth and through whom the second Adam, or the Saviour of the world, was to come.

Genesis, above all, should speak to us of God—of God in relation to us, we having been created in His own image; God in the human race and God in a people especially chosen to witness to the world of Him and to lead a lost world back to Him. "In the beginning, God."

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. ii, 1-3; iii, 1-13; iv, 3-7; vi, 1-8; vii, 1-7, 17-24; xi, 1-9; xii, 1-9; xxii, 1-17; xxviii, 10-22; xlvi, 1-7.

A Miracle of History.

The latest book by the popular pastor of Broadway Tabernacle, New York city, Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D. D., is entitled "The New Crusade." One of the chapters is on "Young People of the Church," and in the chapter is the following cheering and inspiring word about Christian Endeavor:

The century was more than three-quarters gone before the third great movement of our age was born. It was in 1881 that the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor started upon its phenomenal career. At the end of eighteen years it had 67,000 societies and 4,000,000 members. But these figures do not tell the full story of its conquests. Like the river of old, it overflows its banks, and in all parts of Christendom new societies with new names spring into existence, begotten by the spirit which the Endeavor movement has created and strengthened and instructed by its examples and its methods. A million and a half of young men and women, although marching under other banners, belong to the great Endeavor army. Five millions of the young people of the world organized into a training school for Christian service is less than two decades. It is one of the miracles of Christian history. The future historian of the Christian church will say that Christendom entered upon a new era that February night when in the city of Portland the first Endeavor society was formed.

Spirituality and Success.

The gibe that we sometimes hear that a man who is eminent for his spiritual life is a weakling in human affairs is as untrue as it is silly. The road to true success here on earth, the road that leads to well balanced, sound, unerring judgment in earthly matters, is the road that leads to God. True spiritual mindedness does not unfit a man for this world, while it is fitting him for another. To be saintly toward the heavens is not to be sickly toward the earth.—Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D.

In Old Glasgow.

The Glasgow Christian Endeavor union is about seventeen years old and numbers 180 societies, of which sixty-three are Juniors. The total membership is more than 6,000.

Growth In India.

India in two years has added 10,000 members to the Endeavor societies.

WHEN STARTING TO KEEP HOUSE.

If one has little money it sharpens one's wits to invent, and make the necessary furniture

Two girls who took two small rooms this winter were at a loss how to fit their necessary furniture into a small space. The one room was used as a bed-room and the other had to do duty as living room, dining-room and kitchen.

Each girl owned a desk, with which she could not dispense; the box cot occupied one side of the room, a kitchenette was behind a screen in another corner and with one or two rockers there seemed to be no place for a table big enough for a comfortable meal.

The grandmother of one of the girls solved the problem by offering an old kitchen settle of yellow pine that had been in her outer kitchen for years. This quaint piece of furniture had a top that could be turned down into a table when needed, and at other times was used as the back of a seat.

The girls rubbed up the wood with a mahogany stain, and placed the settle against the wall between two doors, where it held a few pillows except at meal time, when the top was converted into a good-sized table.

If one is not fortunate to own, or to be able to pick up in some out-of-the-way place, one of these old-fashioned settles, they can sometimes be found in the modern mission furniture.

Such a settle is especially liked in bungalows or on the porches of country houses, where one room must do duty for several purposes. Even when used entirely as a table they are useful, as the seat part is often a box in which can be stored work, books or even the table ware that is in daily use.

FLOWERS AND TRIMMINGS.

Flowers in metallic colorings shot with beautiful shades woven into gold or silver backgrounds are being used with great success for millinery purposes, and look particularly well on the large fur toques and the hats in soft marabout which are enjoying so great a vogueu just now.

On a large turban toque of brown marabout, for instance, a spray of giant roses may be seen in gold tissue shot with crimson, or again, upon a chinchilla toque, a big bunch of silver grapes will make a most effective trimming, with three or four silver vine leaves resting lightly on the soft gray fur.

Upon other hats, carried out in smoothly stretched velvet in a rich shade of ile de vin, wreaths of roses will be arranged with centres of gold thread and outer leaves in silver shot with pink. In the case, too, of floral garnitures for ball gowns, and wreaths for wearing with evening coiffures, these gold and silver flowers promise to be very popular, and there can be no doubt that they are quite unusually effective. They have another great advantage, too, from the fact that they look well with gowns in any and every color, as well as with toilettes carried out either in black or in white.—Philadelphia Record.

COSTUMES IN THE CITY.

*One sees so many new dress ar*rangements that is is often really difficult to decide exactly what is best worth telling; again, it is almost impossible to pick up a new idea that has not sold value in it. One of the newest little articles was a fur scarf of white, unmarked fur that rounded the neck, crossing under the chin. The tabs were about eight inches long and were trimmed with tiny fur ball fringe. The hat which matched this was a soft white fur trimmed with a plain band of black; the dres was black.

One of the dressy street costumes was a French model of fine wine-colored serge. The coat was not unlike the usual half-length, with plain sleeves and frog fasteners at the left side, but the skirt was quaint and novel. It was severely plain and close fitting to the knee line, and was trimmed beneath with a straight flounce of extremely wide inverted box pleats. These pleats were plain, straight, and the seam was distinctly outlined at the knee, with no attempt to cover it with a trimming. There was no button trimming. The collar fastened at the back and was headed with a wine-colored satin fold. The cuffs were trimmed with the satin fold, one inch wide.—Woman's National Daily.

Papal Etiquette.

Most people know that it is etiquette at the papal court for women, whatever their rank, to appear in black, but few know that an exception to this rule is made for the Pope's sisters and niece, all of whom are privileged to wear white at the audiences and church ceremonies, but the old ladies do not avail themselves of the relaxation of an ordinarily rigid regulation, though the niece makes a point of wearing white when attending papal functions, her mantilla as well as her dress being as white as snow. Another little known point of papal etiquette is that women who come to the public or private audiences must keep the right hand uncovered; indeed, it is even more correct for both hands to be ungloved.—Lady's Pictorial.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Nothing great is ever done on doubts. All masterful influences are builded on faith.—Bishop William Quayle, Methodist, Chicago.

Value of Hard Work.

Hard work never spoiled anybody. It teaches independence, begets courage, fosters self reliance and inspires self support.—Rev. W. W. Bustard, Baptist, Boston.

Soul Growth.

The mind will not develop without thought and knowledge, and there can be no soul growth without God.—Rev. Dr. Edward Young, Presbyterian, Brooklyn.

Soul Food.

The truth is food for the human soul, by which it grows and becomes strong and noble. Truth is instrumental. It is through a knowledge of the truth that we find freedom and peace and strength.—Rev. John W. Howlett, Unitarian, Atlanta, Ga.

Life's Rich Tableland.

Most people look upon middle age as upon an oasis. They call it a rich tableland, harvest clad, sloping backward toward a desert named infancy, sloping forward toward an unpredicative desert named old age.—Rev. Dr. N. D. Hillis, Congregationalist, Brooklyn.

Moral Law.

There is a moral law as truly as there is a law of gravitation, and this great law in time will stand for no trifling with itself, and with both the individual and the nation nothing endures that does not rest on justice and decency.—Rev. Thomas B Gregory, Universalist, New York.

What Love Will Do.

Love is the cornerstone of every truly happy home. It is the invisible bond, knitting heart with heart in an indissoluble union. It is the motive power which will send a father to exhausting labor for the sake of others. It is the inspiration of all that is noblest in art, in drama, in poetry and of all that is most heroic in history.—Rev. E. S. Woodring, United Evangelical, Philadelphia.

Secret of Perpetual Youth.

To learn is also to unlearn. To grow is to outgrow. In advancing we leave something behind. The soil is enriched by dead leaves and dead forests. Civilization has been enriched by old empires that are dead and buried. The old gods are mummies, and some of the new ones are being mummified. "We rise on stepping stones of our dead selves to higher things," this is the secret of perpetual youth.—Rev. Dr. Charles G. Ames, Unitarian, Boston.

The Church's Mission.

The church has no business in politics. Its business is to make men good. When it shall have done that it shall have done the full measure of its duty both to mankind and to the state. When all men are good there will be no need for the interference of the church in politics to better conditions. The mission of the church is to bring to all men the teaching of Christ, and its mission is divine, not political.—Rev. Percy S. Grant, Episcopalian, New York.

Love's First Duty.

Now, if the whole essence of love is to put the joys and the blessings and the happiness of others above all selfish happiness and joys and blessings, what is then in its crudest form the first duty of love? First, never to give another pain; never do anything which will bring the tear to the eye or the quiver to the lip or the sob to the aching heart. Then it will take much to wound the sensibilities of another. And, if your first duty of life is to learn not to hurt yourself, so the first duty of love should be never to hurt or to wound the feelings of another.—Rev. Dr. Henry De Valinage, Presbyterian, Los Angeles, Cal.

Not Enough Religion.

Benjamin Franklin once said, "Time is money," but it is much more. With some of us it is only money, for it is spent with money getting wholly in view. But what is money compared to nobler virtues and pleasures of life? At best time is short. It is important, therefore, that it be well redeemed, for the night cometh when no man can work. Not only should the young be actively engaged, lest youth, providing thus in the springtime of life for a time when they perchance may be incapacitated for work, for, after all, when one is sick and has no money he is usually nothing more than an object of pity. Let some men and boys learn a lesson from the ant and provide for a time of need. Important as it is to provide for the body, it is still more important to make provisions for things eternal, the soul, which will survive the perishable body. Death knocks at the door it is too late to think about making such necessary provision. Religion that does not make a man or woman kind and loving in the home is a sham and a mockery. Shame on those who pretend to be Christians who in public life and in the church assume the smile of a saint and in the home wear the mask of the devil and, still worse, act like the evil one! There is too much pretense in this world and not enough of genuine religion in everyday use. Some who kneel at the mourners' bench to point others to life eternal should first kneel there themselves and be saved before seeking to save others. This thing of being an angel on the street and a devil in the house is all wrong.—Rev. Dr. L. M. Zimmerman, Lutheran, Baltimore.

A CLEVER GIRL WITH A PAINT BOX.

There is a dainty work quite interesting to the average girl who enjoys making little trifles such as her own cards, menus, calendars and other articles which are quite expensive when purchased in the stores.

To make leaf prints, it will first be necessary to purchase a few oil paints—probably only leaf colors need be bought—and it will also be necessary to get a rubber roll. This is a cheap article that can be purchased for a few cents at any art store. The roll is frequently used in mounting pictures. The roll is three inches long and is attached to a handle. If you have any pressed leaves, such as a small grape, oak, skeleton geranium or chrysanthemum, you can easily make beautiful prints. The small ferns are equally pretty.

Put a little paint upon a small piece of window glass—say one of the cards to be used—with one hand a little turpentine, then rub the roller back and forth on the glass to get it evenly coated with the ink. Place the leaf to be used as a subject upon a piece of paper, with the vein side of the leaf uppermost, then hold the stem firmly with one hand and roll the roller over the entire leaf and stem. Pick up the leaf, lay it with the painted side upon the card. Put over it a piece of paper or thin cloth, press the leaf with the fingers or hold on from on it for a second, when the leaf is lifted it will leave a perfect outline. With a fine tracing brush, the veins and outlines can be touched and made more realistic. Gold paint can be used for the purpose.

Another method of making place cards with the color scheme is to lay a blank piece of paper (for the space on the card) on the cardboard, put a leaf on the card and then stipple over both. Lift the leaf and piece of paper and you will have a perfect leaf spaceon which the menu and name can be written. To stipple, use a cheap bristle brush. Black and white subjects are made with India ink, diluted with alcohol, or printer's ink thinned with benzine. The latter is better for place card designs, but paint or India ink can be used on a porous paper.

THE BARRYMORE HOME.

Three little flats all in one make up the Barrymore home on West Fortieth street, New York. There is an apartment for Jack, now in Chicago, another one for Lionel, who is studying art in Paris, and adjoining these is the home of Miss Barrymore's own living room, where are her books—everything from Luara Jean Libbey to Ruskin—her piano, covered with Grieg, Chopin, and ragtime, favorite bits of statuary—everything from a Dante to a Winged Victory—and duplicate on typical Japanese living room. It is done entirely in black and gold. And on all sides are books, books, and still more books, with only photographs of Lionel, Jack and Uncle Jack to give a little humanness to the place. The rooms for the boys are all ready for them should they ever drop in unexpectedly. Ethel Barrymore has mothered her brothers as long as she can remember. They are her only sweethearts. She is sure Lionel will make a great artist, and as for Jack—think of the rapid advancement he has made." She talks of them with an enthusiasm that would be rapture if they were only friends, but seems almost ecstasy since they are her brothers. They are never in such good company as when by Ethel Barrymore's fireside. They like to think of themselves as a singing and dancing trio. With Ethel at the piano, Lionel and Jack can do a very creditable serio-comic "When strolling in the lane act," at the end of which there is a lively clog dance in which Ethel, 'jumping up from the piano, joins in. When they were last together, Miss Barrymore wishing very much to do a little benefit performance for The Sisters of the Sacred Heart School, where she was educated, and Charles Frohman, then in Paris, an urgent request that she and her brothers be permitted to appear at a benefit performance as the "Three—Barrymores—Three, in an old fashioned song and dance act." Mr. Frohman's reply was,—"I am sure you would enjoy it, but would the audience?"

CHILDREN SHOULD HAVE CAREFUL EXAMINATION.

It is not so customary as it was a few years ago to attribute a child's backwardness to a dull brain. Nowadays most big schools have specialists who make careful physical examination to each pupil.

Nervous irritability, slowness of mental grasp, are often the direct results of poor eyesight.

The child of brilliant parents appeared almost an idiot, so dull was she in her lessons. Her teachers wrote despairing notes to the mother and everyone had given her up as hopelessly stupid.

One day during a recitation the teacher asked the child to spell a name on a sign across the street.

"I do not see any sign," was the reply.

Before you berate your young son or daughter for lack of brain power see that it is not some physical lack that is at fault.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

Service is the simple path to saintliness.

He always appears orthodox who hits our neighbors hard.

Taking the church as a fad does not make the life of faith.

It is the bowed heart that Heaven sees rather than the bent knee.

Friendships never are the better for being punctured and then patched up.

It is always easier, and often safer, to preach on old saints than on modern sinners.

You may dodge the courts, but you cannot dodge the law of consequences.

People who fear trouble are not going to be troubled with too much force.

Pride is the fear of what folks will think; honor the fear of our own hearts.

We may not determine our circumstances, but we do determine our vital environment.

When a man gets beyond the pangs of conscience there is not much left in him to punish.

Many a man has been cured of any desire to join the Heavenly choir by hearing the earthly ones.—Chicago Tribune.

DYSPEPTIC PHILOSOPHY.

A sharp appetite can get along with a dull knife.

If you don't get the best of it, make the best of it.

If you are going to call a man names, use the 'phone.

Some people have their good points without being very sharp.

Even in fishing for compliments it's the big ones that generally get away.

There are two kinds of friends; those we need and those who need us.

Some people always want to have a finger in the pie so no one else will eat it.

All the alarm clocks ever made wouldn't enable some men to get up in the world.

When a woman says her husband is the light of her life he probably doesn't go out much.

If you are going to throw yourself as a girl's head you needn't be surprised to find yourself under her thumb.

The reason some men never get along is because they spend all their time trying to prove that luck is against them.

EVE'S EPIGRAMS.

Once a man told a secret to a dumb woman. He forgot she could talk on her fingers.

People who live in air castles are seldom troubled with any sort of "draughts."

At the foot of life's primer class stands the mistaken man who thinks he knows it all.

The most fascinating thing about being a woman is wondering what fool thing she will do next.

One of the psychological mysteries is what makes a blondined woman always wear blue earrings.

If he be not nice to me, what care I how nice he be?—is the way a girl sizes up the man proposition.

The red-headed girl adores the considerate person who speaks of her carroty crown as being "auburn."

Sometimes absence maketh the heart to ponder on whether a permanent change wouldn't be an improvement.

Even now, before the spring poets are packing up to go, the summer student, with his library-of-the-world's-best-literature on the installment plan, is unfolding his prospectus.

DO YOU KNOW—

That salmon, pike and goldfish never sleep?

That almost all birds like biscuit broken up small?

That there are more than 7,000,000 leaves on a big oak tree?

That robins and sparrows like eating almonds and dried currants?

That marsh marigolds and water lilies last longer when cut and put in water than any other flowers?

That when moorhens dive they swim with their wings, practically flying under water? Most birds that swim do so with their webbed feet.

OWE LIVES TO HERO

DEED OF BRAVE MAN THAT SAVED HUNDREDS.

Captain Scott, New York Sailor, Used His Own Body to Stop Leak in Crowded Ferryboat—All on Board Saved.

One morning in January, when the ice in the Hudson river ran unusually heavy, a Hoboken ferry boat slowly crunched her way through the floating floes, until the thickness of the pack choked her paddles in midriver. It was an early morning trip and the decks were crowded with laboring men and the driveways choked with teams; the women and children standing inside the cabins were a solid mass up to the swinging doors. While she was gathering strength for a further effort, one huge cake, floated to avoid her, veered a point, and crashed into her side, cutting her below the water line in a great V-shaped gash. A moment more, and the disabled boat careened from the shock and fell over on her beam, helpless. Into the V-shaped gash the water poured a torrent. It seemed but a question of minutes before she would turn keel long below the ice.

Within 200 yards of both boats and free of the heaviest ice, steamed the wrecking tug Reliance of the Ocean Shore Wrecking Company, and on her deck forward stood Capt. Scott. When the ocean tug reversed her's engines after the collision and backed clear of the shattered pilothouse of the ferry boat, he sprang forward, stooped down, ran his eye along the water line, noted in a flash every shattered plank, climbed into the pilot house of his own boat, and before the astonished pilot could catch his breath pushed the nose of the Reliance along the rail of the ferry boat and dropped upon the latter's deck like a cat.

With a threat to throw overboard any man who stirred, he dropped in to the engine room, met the engineer half way up the ladder, compelled him to return, dragged the mattresses from the crews' bunks, stripped of blankets, snatched up clothes, overalls, cotton waste and rags of carpet, cramming them into the great rent left by the tug's cutwater.

It was useless. Little by little the water gained, bursting out first in one low, then on one side, only to be calked out again, and only to mash in once more.

Capt. Scott stood a moment as if undecided, ran his eye searchingly over the engine room, saw that for his needs it was empty, then deliberately tore down the top wall of calking he had so carefully built up, and before the engineer could protest, with his own body into the gap, with his arm outside, level with the driving ice.

An hour later, the disabled ferry boat, with every soul on board, was towed into the Hoboken slip.

When they lifted the captain from the wreck, he was unconscious and barely alive. The water had frozen his blood, and the floating ice had torn the flesh from his protruding arm from shoulder to wrist. When the color began to come back into his cheeks, he opened his eyes and said to the doctor who was winding the bandages:

"Wuz any of them babies hurt?"

A month passed before he regained his strength, and another week before the arm had healed so that he could get his coat on. Then he went back to the Reliance.—From Hopkinson Smith, in Everybody's.

Two Horses Struck by Bolt.

An unusual incident occurred at Clark's Corners, two miles north of Conesus Lake, when a recent electrical storm passed over the place. The barn on the Bartlett farm was struck by lightning during the night, and the bolt passed from the roof of the barn in the morning he found that the post between two of the horses stalled in the barn was smashed to splinters. Although the horses must have been rendered senseless by the shock, they did not show any injury until after being hitched up. When Bartlett began to gee, haw and cluck to the horses they paid no attention whatever to him, but as soon as he touched his whip to them they responded. An examination showed the animals had their eardrums broken by the crash. Both horses are now stone deaf.—Geneseo Cor. Rochester Herald.

Installing a Telephone in India.

A Simla official, proud in the possession of some shooting Turkhanan rags, leaving his station on a business visit, ordered the installation of a telephone system.

On his return he found that the system had been installed, but the coolies had performed the shortest job work in his house and had pushed the wire down the leg of his writing table and through his best rug, cutting it generously in the process. The rug has thus not only been damaged, but it is rendered useless, for the hole cannot even be taken out to be brushed.—Calcutta Statesman.

No Time to Lose.

"What!" exclaimed the first summer girl, in a tone redolent with surprise. "You don't mean to say you became engaged to that young man within three hours after being introduced?"

"That's exactly what I said," replied summer girl No. 2. "I'm going to make a record this season, and can't afford to devote any more time than that to one man."

DETHRONED.

Chicago Ill., Jan. 18.—Walter Wellman, in a dispatch to the Record-Herald from Washington, says:

"It is not often a good story of national interest comes out of the Washington Police Court. Today a colored preacher was waiting his turn to testify in Judge Kimball's court room. While waiting he told of a dream he had had:

"'Ah dreamed Ah was in heaven the other night. As Ah stood jest inside de golden gate dar came a rap and George Washington was announced by St. Peter.

"'"Let him come up an' sit on mah right side," said the good Lawd, who was sittin' on de throne.

"'Pretty soon there was another knock, an' Abraham Lukum wus announced by St. Peter.

"'"Let him sit on mah left side," said the Lawd.

"'Den Ah heard a terrible knockin' at de gate and de angels all trembled.

"'St. Peter opened the gate, slow like, and de she turned roun' an sed to de Lawd:

"'"You'll have to git down an' give him your seat, Lawd. It's Mistah Roosevelt."'"

Furnishing the Room.

There is just a certain wedgewood blue that is exquisite with a putty colored wall. It is not well to use this combination in a north light, which needs the warmer cheerful yellow, but it may be held in reserve for the room having a southern or western exposure, with its softer light.

The putty color is colder and less yellow than the colonial shades—as it a touch of gray had been dashed in—but there is still enough of the creamy tone left to blend with the wedgewood blue of the hangings.

These curtain goods may be found in such inexpensive materials as Galatea, cotton poplin and Japanese crepe, each of which are more recent arrivals on the decorator's counter than denim and burlap.

Several pieces of old mahogany, a peacock screen and a bowl of polished brass are the needed touches in this chaste little room.

SOUTHERN ETIQUETTE.

It was the third or fourth day out from Santa Marta, Colombia, and Carthagena in the morning, when one of the South American passengers came on deck. Another South American arose from his deck chair, extended his hand, and as the men shook hands inquired after the health of the newcomer, his wife and his children.

As they had parted company only about 8 hours before in the smoking room, this seemed like unnecessary that this happened in the case of all the Colombians on board, so he asked one man about it.

"It is a custom of the country," said he. "On the occasion of meeting a person for the first time each day it is etiquette to shake hands and to make inquiries about the health of the person so greeted and of his relatives. It would not be considered polite to do otherwise."

Continuing, this man told of taking a walk one day in Bogota with a merchant of the place. They were bent on business and were to cover a distance that might be made rather easily in ten minutes. Because of the necessary stops to make the customary inquiries and to shake hands with friends of the merchant, the trip took nearly an hour.—New York Sun.

THEY WANT ARC LIGHTS

Merchants Ask City Fathers to Sign Contract Which Means $20,000 Expense.

TO LIGHT UP THE STORES.

A. E. Force is Re-elected President of the Merchants' Association At His Annual Meeting.

The election of officers and a discussion of the proposition to illuminate the business section of the city with arc lights comprised the chief business at the annual meting of the Plainfield's Merchants' Association, Monday night. The lighting question was introduced through a communication received from Francis L. Montgomery, chairman of the councilmanic committee. Mr. Montgomery informed the association that when the proposed electric light contract was taken up for consideration by his committee, its approval was defeated by one vote.

It was suggested that the members of the association examine the proposed contract on file at the office of City Clerk J. T. MacMurray.

The discussion brought out the fact that the association wants arc lights installed in the business section. The members favor a five years' contract with the Public Service Corporation for fifty arc lights at the price of $80 a year. This would cost the city a total of $4,000 a year, but the merchants believe that it would be a wise expenditure of city funds. Remarks endorsing the proposition were made by Herman Schwed and George O. Stevens, and a resolution offered by J. V. E. Vanderhoof and adopted, approved the contract for arc lights and pledged the association to urge its adoption by the Common Council.

These officers for the coming year were chosen: President, A.E.Force; first vice-president, Herman Schlundorf; second vice-president, F. A. Duttenhofer; secretary, H.P. Greenwood; treasurer, John S. Johnston; executive committee, M. C. VanArsdale and Herman Schwed.

The committe on the first annual banquet to be held tonight at the Harrlidge School auditorium, reported that all the details for the affair were completed and there was every indication that it would be a success.

CROWLEY NOT FROZEN; HE WAS ONLY DAZED

David Crowley, of West Fourth street, was found in a dazed and apparently half-frozen condition at an early hour Tuesday on the porch at Peter Hriscoe's home on South Second street. Mr. Hriscoe saw the man as he was leaving the house to go to his work as a brakeman on the New Jersey Central. He learned his name and also that he lived on West Fourth street, to which place he assisted him. Dr. A. K. Brenna was called and Mr. Crowley quickly responded to treatment. He will be all right in a day or two.

Mr. Crowley visited some friends at Dunellen Monday for a celebration and he stayed so late that he missed the last trolley car. Being anxious to get back to Plainfield so that he could go to work at 7 o'clock he decided to walk. It was bitter cold and by the time he reached this city about six Tuesday morning, he was half benighed. He walked through Grant avenue and mistook South Second street for West Fourth although he was only one number out of the way in the street address, his being 940, while the house where he stopped was 941.

Members of the family were alarmed over the continued absence of Crowley and they started out to find him. While they were searching, he was brought home and his condition was found not to be serious.

PRETTY GIRDLES FOR LIGHT DRESSES.

Since fashion is steadily repeating the Byzantine epoch the jeweled effects are coming more into favor. The new thing is a six inch girdle or ceinture of cloth of gold or silver or of metal lace lined with the metal cloth.

This does not quite reach down to the waist line or it would throw the gown into false lines. It starts over the bust and reaches to within an inch or two of the waist line proper.

On this foundation immense col ored stones are sewn. Blue, yellow, coral and crystals are all mingled. None of them are small and they follow some barbaric pattern.

These are worn on black gowns of satin, velvet or crepe de chine. They are considered smart on the outra fash lonable frocks of topaz satin.

Above them is a drapery of lace or tulle. It is safe to say that the fabrics of the gown itself are never repeated above the bust. This is true of high and low gowns.

Everything over neck and shoulders is transparent. Even colored laces dyed to match the cloth are more fashionable for shoulder draperies than the cloth itself.

ACKERMAN'S NEW BILL

IT IS A CONSERVATIVE ONE.

But One of Many Before the Legislature as Result of Monday Night's Session.

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman introduced an employers' liability bill in the State Senate, at Trenton, Monday. Senator Osborne, of Essex, also introduced one. Mr. Osborne's is the broad measure indorsed by labor organizations, and has the backing of Democrats. Mr. Ackerman's is more conservative.

Senator Ackerman's bill is similar to that of Osborne's, regulating the employer's liability for injuries to his men caused by defective tools or machinery in the absence of contributory negligence. His bill follows:

"1. Where, after this act takes effect, personal injury or death results to an employee who is himself in the exercise of reasonable care at the time:

"I. By reason of any defect in the condition of the place, ways, works, machinery, plant, tools or implements connected with or used in the business of the employer, which arose from or had not been discovered or remedied owing to the negligence of the employer or of any person in the service of the employer and entrusted by him with the duty of seeing that the place, ways, works, machinery, tools or plant or implements were in proper condition; or

"II. By reason of negligence of any person in the service of the employer entrusted with and at the time of the injury exercising superintendence, whose sole or principal duty is that of superintendence, or in the absence of such superintendent of any person acting as superintendent with the authority or consent of such employer; or

"III. By reason of the negligence of any person in the service of the employer who has the charge or control of any signal, switch, locomotive engine or train upon a railroad; the employee, or in case the injury results in death, the executor or administrator of a deceased employee who has left surviving a husband, wife or next of kin, shall have the same right of compensation and remedies against the employer as if the employee had not been an employee of nor in the service of the employer engaged in his work. The provisions of law relating to actions for causing death by negligence, so far as the same are consistent with this act, shall apply to an action brought by an executor or administrator of a deceased employee suing under the provisions of this act.

"2. No action against an employer for recovery of compensation for injury or death of an employee under this act shall be maintained unless notice of the time, place and cause of injury is given to the employer within one hundred and twenty (120) days and the action is commenced within one year after the occurrence of the accident causing the injury or death. The notice required by this section shall be in writing and signed by the person injured or by some one in his behalf, but if from physical or mental incapacity it is impossible for the person injured to give notice within the time provided in said section, he may give the same within ten (10) days after such incapacity is removed. In case of his death without having given such notice his executor or administrator may give such notice within sixty (60) days after his appointment, but no notice under the provisions of this section shall be deemed to be invalid or insufficient solely by reason of any inaccuracy in stating the time, place or cause of the injury if it be shown that there was no intention to mislead and that the party entitled to notice was not in fact misled thereby. The notice required by this section shall be served on the employer or if there is more than one employer, upon one of such employers, and may be served by delivering the same to or at the residence or place of business of the person on whom it is to be served. The notice may be served by post by registered letter addressed to the person on whom it is to be served at his last known place of residence or place of business, and if served by post shall be deemed to have bee nserved at the time when the letter containing the same would be delivered in the ordinary course of post, and in proving the same it is a corporation, notice shall be served by delivering the same or by sending it by post by registered letter addressed to the office or principal place of business of such corporation.

"3. An employee by entering upon or continuing in the service of an employer shall be presumed to have assumed all risks necessarily incident to his occupation or employment. The necessary risks of the occupation or employment shall in all cases arising after this act takes effect be considered as including these risks, and those only, which are inherent in the nature of the business, and which remain after the employer has exercised due care in providing for the safety of his employees, and has complied with the laws affecting or regulating such business or occupation for the greater safety of such employees. In an action maintained for the recovery of damages for personal injuries to an employee received after this act takes effect owing to any cause for which the employer would otherwise be liable, the fact that the employee continued in the service of the employer in the same place and course of employment after the discovery by such employee, or after he had been informed of the danger of personal injury therefrom, shall not, as a matter of law, be considered as an assent by such employee to the existence or continuance of such risks of personal injury therefrom or as negligence contributing to such injury. The question whether the employee understood and assumed the risk of such injury, or was guilty of contributory negligence by the continuance in the same place and course of employment with knowledge of the risk of injury shall be one of fact, subject to the usual powers of the court in a proper case to set aside a verdict rendered contrary to the evidence. An employee, or his legal representative, shall not be entitled under this act to any right of compensation or remedy against the employer in any case where such employee knew of the defect or negligence which caused the injury and failed, within a reasonable time, to give, or cause to be given, information thereof to the employer, or to some person superior to himself in the service of the employer who had instituted a system of general superintendence, unless it shall appear on the trial that such defect or negligence was known to such employer or superior person, or could have been discovered by reasonable and proper care or inspection by such employer or superior person prior to such injury to the employee.

"4. An employer who shall have contributed to an insurance fund created and maintained for the mutual purpose of indemnifying an employee for personal injuries, for which compensation may be recovered under this act, or to any relief society, or benefit fund, may prove in mitigation of damages recoverable by an employee under this act such proportion of the pecuniary benefit which may be received by such employee from such fund or society on account of such contribution of employer, as the contribution of such employer to such fund or society bears to the whole contribution thereto.

"5. Any statory existing right of action for negligence or to recover damages for injuries resulting in death is continued and nothing in this act contained shall be construed as limiting any such right or action, nor shall the provisions of this act, or notice provided for in section two (2) of this act, be a bar to the maintenance of a suit upon any such existing right of action.

"6. This act shall take effect September 1, 1909.

ELIZABETH TROLLEY LINE TO PERTH AMBOY

The Traction Development Company has been incorporated at Trenton with a capital stock of $100,000, for the purpose of securing franchises, rights of way and engineering plans for the Elizabeth and Amboy Traction Company, a new trolley line to operate between the Union House in Elizabeth and Smith and State streets, Perth Amboy.

The route of the line is to be through the Standard Oil Works, near Elizabeth, the East Linden Development Company, crossing the Rahway river over the cantilever bridge of the Short Line Trolley Company; thence into Carteret, Chrome, Port Reading and Woodbridge to Perth Amboy, going into that city by way of Amboy avenue.

The incorporators are Richard M. Pettigrew, former United States Senator; Richard M. Montgomery, president of the East Linden Development Company; Dr. H. B. Hoagland, W. J. Lansley, of the Hudson and Manhattan Telephone Company; C. A. Trimble, of Elizabeth, and Peter A. Peterson, of Perth Amboy, representing the organization syndicate.

The corporation will begin at once securing rights of way, consents, franchises and laying out engineering plans for construction. The actual work of building the line will begin within the next sixty days, probably at Linden, where the company has a private right of way of several miles. The road will be built there while the franchises are pending at Elizabeth, Roosevelt and elsewhere.

J. A. McClary, of Rahway, has charge of the rights of way and engineering plans of the company. Percival E. Jones is general counsel for the company, with offices at 27 Pine street, New York. This project was started a year ago, when many of the rights of way were secured, but was suspended owing to the money panic.

FLEET'S TRIP DESCRIBED

Frederick Palmer Tells of His Tour on Flagships of Admirals Evans and Sperry.

STAFF CORRESPONDENT'S TALE.

The world around trip of the American fleet has excited so much popular interest from its inception until its execution that it was no matter of surprise when the illustrated lecture by Frederick Palmer on the subject, "With the Flagship of the Fleet," given Monday afternoon, called forth a large audience. The lecture was given before the Monday Afternoon Club in the Harridge School auditorium. Mr. Palmer accompanied the fleet in the capacity of correspondent, and the many stereopticon views, taken by himself, gave a very realistic idea of the unique journey.

The skill of Admiral Evans in the management of the sixteen battleships and accompanying cruisers called forth the lecturer's highest praise, comparing it with the ability of one who handles cavalry horses. Like praise was given also to his successor, Admiral Sperry, and a single word of censure during the whole cruise. With the battleship Connecticut in the lead, Mr. Palmer described the eventful journey, the life on shipboard, where the officers are seen at their work, the entry of the fleet into different ports, the ceremonies and festivities attending it with the nations which gave them a royal welcome, and the entertainments planned for the fleet in various countries. The pictures of the target practice, showing the rapid fire of execution and certainty of aim were full of interest.

In comparing the battleship Connecticut with the Chicago built twenty years previously, Mr. Palmer said that twenty years hence battleships might be built as superior to the Connecticut as that is now in advance of the Chicago.

In conclusion the lecturer said our navy is hottest, its men sound and the strong man armed is the safest way to ensure peace.

MERCHANTS' BANQUET

no sooner had his name been announced than he was cheered to the echo. Every man in the room jumped to his feet, and it was almost a minute before "Jim" could be heard. When quiet was finally restored he soon had everybody laughing with his good-natured jesting at the expense of Mayor Fisk and Mr. Saunders, and finally launched into one of those vociferous addresses that have earned him his sobriquet. A second demonstration followed when he ended his talk by reciting Thomas Moores poem, "Good Fellowship."

The committee in charge of the banquet comprised M. C. Van Arsdale, Frederick A. Duttenhofer, T. J. Shirley, Herman Schwed and Robert H. Bernard. The officers of the *Merchants' Association are A. FOR COFFEE THAT IS GOOD.

Beverage Easy to Prepare if Directions Are Followed.

The secret of good coffee is an immaculately clean coffee pot, fresh boiling water and good material. It is better to pay a little more for your coffee and use less in quantity than would be necessary in the cheaper grades. The coffee pot should be thoroughly washed and scalded after every meal and coffee never allowed to stand in it. If it gets discolored, put a little baking soda in it once a week or so, fill with cold water and let it come to the boiling point. Take care that the spout and strainer are perfectly cleaned. Rinse and dry thoroughly. Unlike most cooking utensils which do better work when their newness has worn off, a coffee pot is better when new, whether made of tin, granite ware, nickel or aluminum. Many good housekeepers advocate frequent renewals from the tin-cost store, discarding the old coffee pot as soon as they become discolored and cold water is wet by, add a clean, freshly-broken egg shell if you have it, or a teaspoonful of the white of egg, pour on the boiling water and let it just come to the boil. Take away from the fire, give a second shake up with the ground coffee, then replace and let it come again just to the boil. Do this three times in succession, then push back on the stove to settle and clear. Some persons prefer to make the coffee by the cold water method. In this case cover the coffee with the required amount of cold water, allow it to reach the boiling point, then proceed as before. The coffee must not be allowed to boil hard, but merely reach the boiling point each time. It is not perfectly clear when ready to serve, pour in a tablespoonful of cold water.

Carrot Pudding.

One cupful grated carrot, one cupful grated raw potato, one cupful sugar, one cupful ground raisins, one cupful (large) of flour, two level teaspoonfuls soda dissolved in juice of potato, spice to taste; I use nutmeg. Turn pudding in buttered bucket, five pound lard bucket answers nicely, and place bucket in large kettle containing boiling water. Cover outside kettle and steam about 3½ hours. The water must not fall below the boiling point. Good with any kind of good pudding sauce, vanilla or brandy sauce, or may be iced when cold and used as fruit cake.

Sauce.—Two cups milk, one-third of a cupful of sugar, tablespoonful butter, tablespoonful flour; flavor with vanilla.

Apple Bread.

Make up two quarts of dough as for rusks, two when it is rolled out cake of it, half an inch thick; spread stewed apples over it and over this another cake rolled like the first; put in a pan to lighten for a short time, bake it; have some thin slices of apple ready to put on when the cake is baked; lay these apples all over the top, sprinkle them well with sugar, some small bits of butter, and either cinnamon or nutmeg; put it back in the oven long enough for the sugar to run; sprinkle on the top, take it out, and when cold slice it up. This is an excellent bread for tea.

Chocolate Walnuts.

One cup sugar, two squares chocolate (melted), two eggs (beat white and yolks separately), one cup milk (sweet or sour), four cups flour, one teaspoon soda (level), one teaspoon vanilla, half to one cup walnuts broken, but not too fine), one pinch salt. Mix in order given above. Roll out into quarter inch thickness and cut with small round cutter (top of a salt shaker may be used); fry in lard, a few at a time, and as soon as they rise to the top stir with long fork so that they will cook evenly. When cool roll in powdered sugar.

Potato Dumplings.

Mash fine half a dozen good sized hot boiled potatoes or put them through a ricer and beat afterward. Add a rounding tablespoon of butter, one beaten egg, two cups of milk and let cool before adding. Add a yeast cake dissolved in a little water and enough flour to make a stiff dough. Cover, let rise, shape lightly into little cakes, and let rise light again. Take up with a broad knife and lay around on top of the boiling pork or pot pie. Cover and steam until done. The cakes may also be set in a buttered pan and baked a light brown; serve hot.

Creamed Celery.

Scrape and cut the celery into inch pieces; stalks which are not sufficiently blanched for use raw or in salad will do. Drop them into boiling water and simmer until tender, about 30 minutes. Drain and to one pint of celery add one cupful of white sauce. Simmer 20 minutes.

Bavarian Pie.

Line pie tin with a rich crust. Fill with sliced tart peaches or apricots. Beat together one cup cream, one cup sugar, one egg. Cover fruit with this mixture and bake slowly for one-half hour.

Broiled Tripe.

For this use the thickest, fattest tripe procurable. Wipe dry, rub both sides with soft butter, dust with salt and pepper and broil over a clear fire. Turn on a heated dish and lay on bits of butter, then serve.

NEW ORGAN DEDICATED

ARTHUR GIBSON'S RECITAL.

Inspiring Program Given on Memorial Organ After Its Acceptance by Trustee C. F. Abbott.

The members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church were delightfully entertained last evening at an organ recital in their home church by Archer Gibson, organist of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York. The occasion marked the dedication of the new church organ, previously described in these columns of The Daily Press, which was recently presented by Mrs. Elizabeth Hyde in memory of her husband, Charles Hyde. Mr. Gibson treated the congregation to music such as Plainfield has never before been fortunate enough to hear.

Every seat in the spacious edifice was filled and many who applied for tickets of admission were disappointed. After the invocation by the Rev. Dr. J. C. Bliss, a former pastor of the church, Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, Dr. Zelie's predecessor and now pastor of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York, gave a short address during which he spoke very highly of the late Charles Hyde, who was for many years a member of the church and one of the most generous givers towards the fund which made the beautiful church building a possibility and of Mrs. Hyde's motives in giving the superb instrument to the church. "An organ," said Dr. Richards, "is the most appropriate of gifts to a church." Continuing he said that his conception of heaven is a place where exquisite harmonies prevailed, a place where the very language is beautiful music. He then formally presented the organ to the church, C. F. Abbott accepting in behalf of the trustees. Mr. Abbott voiced a few very appropriate words of gratitude for the congregation. The dedication was by the pastor.

The entire program was rendered as only the master musician can and it was unusually well chosen to show the powers and the possibilities of the organ. Soft, sweet selections predominated, although there were several heavy pieces and one or two of the "musical gymnastic" order. The favorites were those which showed rich contrast between the individual organs of which the whole instrument is composed, it being especially pleasing when the echo organ, high in the rear of the church, was used in this manner. Then it was that the air and accompaniment, different in quality but richly blended, both soft and sweet, but varying in volume at the touch of the master, would seem to come from two distant instruments and would mingle in one exquisite harmony. Mr. Gibson was at his best if that can be said in music of his own composition. These selections he played from memory with rare feeling and expression.

Bach, Fantasia in G minor; Mendelssohn, Sonota in F, (a) Allegro moderato e senoso, (b) Adagio, (c) Recitative, (d) Finale, allegro assai vivace; Purcini, Gibson, Rhapsody on "Madam Butterfly;" Chopin, Funeral March; Offenbach, Gibson, Barrarolle; Nevin, (a) Gondoliert, (b) Canzone amorosa, (c) Buona notte (New transcriptions); MacDowell, (a) Moonlight, (b) To a Wild Rose; Tschaikowsky, Melody; Widor, Toccata; Gibson, (a) Spring Song, (b) Liebestraum (new), (c) A Love Story (new), (d) Improvisation; Wagner, Gibson, (a) Bridal Processional, (b) Prelude 3rd Act, "Lohengrin," (c) Pilgrims' Chorus, "Tannhauser."

All numbers on this program were transcriptions for the modern organ by Archer Gibson.

After the recital Mr. Gibson furth entertained a smaller company of music lovers who gathered about the organ. He did some delightful improvising and imitated the music of oriental shepherds, Scotch bagpipes, the singing of birds and other seeming increditable things on the instrument.

Will Postpone Cooper Trial?

Although Thursday, February 4, has been fixed as the date for the trial of Floyd Cooper, of Westfield, on a charge of manslaughter for which he was indicted, it is doubtful whether the case will be called on that day for the reason that neither the State nor the defense will be ready to proceed. Counsel for the defense will on February 4 ask for an adjournment.

Sesame Club to Meet.

The Sesame Club will meet with Mrs. Chase at 916 Putnam avenue, tomorrow morning. The subject will be "George Eliot."

Julius Siegel, who conducts a small grocery store on West Third street was arrested last night by Humane Officer William Pangborn, charged with having left a horse to die by the roadside. He was released on $150 bail furnished by his parents and the hearing set for 2 o'clock this afternoon before Justice Schnapp.

Siegel was driving the animal hitched to a grocery wagon, out the Warrenville road Monday afternoon, when it became exhausted and sank to the ground. It had lain several hours shivering in the cold, and almost drowned by the melting snow unable to raise its head out of the water, when it was discovered by a passing man named Hyde.

The women and men of the neighborhood brought blankets and made every effort to revive the horse. William Pangborn, agent for the S. P. C. A., was notified, and took the matter in hand. Finding that the animal was beyond human aid, and suffering intensely, he caused it to be shot yesterday morning.

Siegel, on being arrested, stated that he had called a veterinary to care for his horse, and considered that having done that his duty towards the suffering beast had been fulfilled.

DR. NORMAN PROBASCO TO TALK ON CONSUMPTION

Dr. Norman Probasco will give the third in a series of lectures on the "Care of the Body" tomorrow night at the Young Women's Christian Association. Dr. Probasco's subject is "What is Consumption? How to Avoid it and Prevent its Spread. Care in contagious diseases." These lectures are free to all young women and this one should be especially well attended on account of the wide-spread and growing interest in tuberculosis. The lecture will begin at 8 o'clock and close at 8:30. Dr. Probasco will show his microscopic slides.

The term of gymnasium classes closed with an exhibition Monday evening. Registration for the new term is now open and classes will commence next week. The new class for young girls will meet at 3:30 on Monday.

ENTERTAINMENT AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

A mid-winter social and entertainment was held at the First Baptist church last night, under the auspices of the Sunday-school officers and teachers. Every member of the school was invited and judging by the attendance they were all there and had a good time. The program of entertainment was planned by Howard Carey, and he was most successful in devising ways and means to keep everyone entertained.

One of the large rooms was devoted to salamagundi games and those who played became so interested that they continued to play during the whole time alloted for the games. In another room was an art gallery, through which observation parties were conducted. They were kept busy guessing the correct names of the various articles displayed.

The rooms were attractively decorated for the occasion, southern smilax being used almost exclusively. A novel feature was the scheme whereby all the members of the main school and junior department wore a red ribbon or flower of that color, the adult Bible classes were distinguished by blue and the Home department wore white ribbons. This patriotic display of colors added much to the sociability of the occasion. During an intermission ice cream and cake were served by a committee from the school and an informal program of music was enjoyed.

Don't Forget Turkey Supper.

Don't forget the turkey supper to be given at Trinity reformed church tomorrow and Friday night, under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Society. The various committees in charge have arranged for an abundant supply of turkey with all the fixins' and everyone patronizing the supper are assured of a good time.

MR. GILBERT TO PRESIDE

Y. M. C. A. ORCHESTRA TO PLAY

N. P. H. S. Pupils Will Recite Gettysburg Speech—Big School Chorus to Sing "Captain, My Captain."

Rapid progress is being made in the perfection of plans for the Citizens' Lincoln Centenary celebration to be held at the First Baptist church on Friday afternoon, Feb. 12, at 3 o'clock. The speakers committee waited on former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, president of the New York Clearing House, today and he consented to preside. The orator of the day has not been announced, but Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, chairman of the speakers' committee, hopes to be able to make a selection within the course of a few days.

Dr. Henry C. Krebs is training fifty pupils of the North Plainfield High School, who are to unison the Gettysburg speech, while at the request of Dr. Henry M. Maxson, Charles L. Lewis is rehearsing a large pupils' chorus from the city and borough public schools, St. Mary's school and the private schools to sing Walt Whitman's "Captain, My Captain." Through the leader, Professor Martin A. Korff, the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, twenty-five pieces, has consented to play an overture and provide any other part of the program desired.

Handsome medals bearing the Lincoln medallion will be given by the committee to all pupils taking part in the program. Exceptive Chairman Gilbert has announced another committee. It is on decorations and consists of J. Herbert Case, chairman; William S. Tyler and Harold Serrell.

Through her advertisement in The Daily Press, a valuable diamond pin set with pearls, was returned yesterday to the owner, Mrs. H. P. Talmadge, of Belvidere avenue. It was found by Aaron Higgins, one of the speed boy messengers at the postoffice, while riding a wheel through Belvidere avenue. Not knowing the value of the pin, the boy stopped at a jewelry store on West Front street and asked the proprietor to tell him what it was worth. A value of $450 was placed on the article. The messenger delievered the pin to Postmaster E. H. Bird who, of course, reads "Plainfield's leading newspaper" and seeing the advertisement, returned the jewel. Young Higgins took the discovery to the Talmadge home and was liberally rewarded.

Halted in Long Journey.

Howard Carey, a middle-aged man who claimed to be making his way from Billings, Mont., to Salisbury, Md., was arrested on suspicion by Patrolman Nolan, last night, who saw him trying to sell a coat on North avenue. The prisoner explained to Judge Runyon that the garment had been given to him by an East End woman and that he was trying to realize a little money on it because it did not fit him. He added that he left Billings because he had met with a severe accident that crippled one hand and relatives in Salisbury would look after him. The magistrate let him go.

Two "Try-Outs" Next Week.

"Try-out" at the New Plainfield theatre again drew a crowded house, last night, and as on the previous occasion, the sale of tickets had to be stopped. The program gave great satisfaction. Because of the popularity of the "try-outs" and in order to give patrons a better chance to see them, two will be given next week, one on Tuesday and the other on Friday night. Vaudeville and pictures will hold the boards every night but Thursday and Saturday. "The Bijou Mouse" will be the attraction on the former and "The Wolf" on Saturday.

Druggists Elect Officers.

The Union County Retail Druggists' Association at a meeting in the court house in Elizabeth yesterday afternoon, elected the following officers: President, Joseph G. Smith, of Rahway; vice-president, R. J. Schreiner, of Plainfield; secretary, William J. Richart, Elizabeth; treasurer, Louis P. Lamgheinz, Elizabeth.

Rev. Dr. John C. Bliss, of New York, a former pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, is spending the day with friends in the city.

PUPIL STABS A TEACHER

THE CAUSE IS A MYSTERY.

Nomer Gray, of 1138 West Front street, a teacher of the graduating class in Public School 62, Hester and Essex streets, New York, was stabbed in the right side of the face and neck yesterday afternoon. When Policeman John A. Gilmore, of the Eldridge street police station, saw a Gouverneur Hospital ambulance standing in front of the school and went to the office of Principal Roberts to learn what had happened he was told that it was no affair of the police.

Gilmore explained that he had to make a report of every ambulance case on his post or else go up on charges at headquarters. He didn't get any information, however, nor did Lieut. Goldberg, who was put on the case. Every pupil was put on his honor not to tell anything about the assault. All that Dr. Axtell, the ambulance surgeon, could say was that Mr. Gray had been slashed twice by a boy. Mr. Roberts explained that the school authorities would attend to the boy.

It was said in the neighborhood last night that Mr. Gray's assailant was Michael Becker, who lives at 75 Eldridge street. Julius Becker, his father, said:

"I don't know whether my son did it or not, but I have been told by several boys of the school that today some of the boys received letters which told them that they would not be promoted, and I believe my son received one of these letters. I understand that he then scratched the teacher on the neck."

Several of Michael's schoolmates said they knew the boy was not to be promoted and that that was the reason for the attack.

Efforts to find Mr. Gray last night and today proved unavailing. A reporter for The Daily Press called at his home, but all the members of the family were away. A neighbor said that Mrs. Gray had been stopping in New York for some days and that Mr. Gray in consequence had been coming home at irregular intervals, occasionally sleeping here and dining elsewhere.

TWO PRESENTATIONS AT P. H. S. CELEBRATION

The Plainfield High School pupils today are rejoicing over a thoughtful and most appropriate gift made to the institution by former Mayor Alexander Gilbert. It is a large and handsomely designed bronze tablet containing the famous Gettysburg speech of Abraham Lincoln, the centennial of whose birth will be observed by the nation on February 12.

This memorial tablet, which is mounted on a walnut base, will be unveiled on the occasion of the Lincoln centenary celebration at the high school auditorium on Thursday afternoon, February 11. At that demonstration the grammar school pupils will join with the high school pupils, at the auditorium, W. E. Pulsifer, of New York, will deliver an oration on the Martyr-President. The school will sing "Captain, My Captain" as well as a number of patriotic airs. The Girls' Athletic Association will present a huge and ornate picture of the St. Gauden's statute of Lincoln at Chicago after the formal presentation of the Gettysburg speech tablet.

Miss Sallie Reavis a Bride.

Miss Sallie Reavis, of Virginia, and Clint Hoffler, of North Carolina, were married last night at 8:30 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Powell, of South Second street. Rev. P. D. Tildon, pastor of Bethel chapel, performed the ceremony. The bride was handsomely gowned and carried a boquet of bride roses. The bridesmaids were the Misses Gilbertha I. Reaves and Eva Anderson. The groom was attended by John Smith and Arthur Ross. A large number of guests, including several from out of town, witnessed the ceremony. Supper was served after the ceremony. The couple will reside here, where the groom has been employed for several years by a local coal firm.

Will Ride for Benefit Fund.

Miss Adele von Ohl will ride her famous pony "aristocrat" for the benefit of the earthquake sufferers at the Central Park Riding Academy tomorrow night. The affair is to be a benefit performance.

KILLED AFTER FUNERAL

CAUGHT UNDER FREIGHT CAR.

A sad ending to a trip to this city where she came to attend the funeral of a relative, was the tragic death of Mrs. Jacob Hirdman, of Port Morris, on Monday night, while she was returning home. She was first pinned down by the wheel of a freight car under which she attempted to crawl and then ground to pieces beneath the wheel by another job from a shifting engine. The fatality occurred in the sight of Mrs. Hirdman's granddaughter, Mrs. Viola Johnson.

Mrs. Hirdman came to Plainfield to attend the funeral service of Louisa E. Gaddis, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Gaddis, of Regent street, which was held on Sunday. She left here some time Monday for home.

Upon reaching Netcong, the nearest railroad station, Mrs. Hirdman sought the dangerous passage to avoid making a long detour. She was fifty-seven years old. The accident occurred in the Port Morris yard of the Lackawanna railroad opposite the postoffice. Mrs. Hirdman was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Frank Ike, of Port Morris, who had also been to Plainfield. The former is an aunt to Mrs. George W. Gaddis.

In order to reach Port Morris it was necessary to cross about ten tracks or walk three miles around to a crossing. One of these tracks is always filled with cars at night, and residents of the row are obliged in passing to and from home to go under or over the cars, which are moved only at infrequent intervals.

FARBMAN SELLS SALOON TO ITS FORMER OWNER

Morris Farbman, who was convicted by the grand jury last week of keeping a disorderly house, has sold the saloon on Somerset street, which figured in the court proceedings, to Charles Jensen, from whom Farbman purchased it a year ago.

The place is now closed and an application has been made by Jensen for a transfer of the license, but it is not likely that this will be granted. The borough authorities will oppose every effort to reopen the place. They declare that not only is a saloon undesirable in that neighborhood but there is not sufficient business there for a legitimate place; that sooner or later it would revert to the kind of patronage which got Farbman into trouble. The officials have the sympathy of the entire borough in the matter, and the granting of a license to any one for a saloon in the old Arlington hotel building will stir up a hot fight.

EAGLES AT PERTH AMBOY INSTALLATION AND BANQUET

District Deputy Moons substituted for the grand chief who was unable to be present at the installation ceremony was performed by a committee of grand officers, comprising Past Chiefs Kenney, Allen, Vail and Miles, all of this city.

Speeches were made by Grand Vice-Chief Horace J. Martin, of Plainfield, and Grand Master of Records Clark, of Trenton. The entertainment which followed the installation was pronounced first-class and the supper simply great.

In the City Court.

Frances McCarthy and Samuel Herman, of New York, were arraigned in the city court, this morning, charged by Detective-Sergeant Flynn with peddling without a license. RETURNS FROM TRAVELS TO RUN AFOUL OF POLICE

John Mottley, a former well known North Plainfield resident, dropped into town yesterday after a year's absence during which he has undergone some great experiences. He began meeting old friends and late last night Patrolman Nolan found him helplessly intoxicated. He was arraigned in the city court this morning, but when he related his troubles Judge Runyon let him go with a warning to climb on the water wagon.

Mottley, who is in his sixty-fifth year, was willed a piece of property by his wife at her death in the borough a year ago. He converted it into cash for the purpose of taking a trip to Ireland and left Plainfield with the intention of sailing from Philadelphia. He struck up some chance acquaintances in the Quaker City and after a few social drinks displayed the roll of bills that was to defray his European trip. When he woke up—a few hours later—he didn't have enough money left to buy the arm-hole of a vest and grouch out for Chicago to begin life anew. Nobody here heard any more from him until he blew into town yesterday. He declares he had a great time in the West but it's no place for a white man and here after he says in Plainfield.

PRIMARY INSTRUCTOR GIVES FINE RECITAL.

Miss Jeanie Rogers May, of the Plainfield Seminary, gave a delightful piano recital Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry de Forest on Park avenue. Miss May always pleases her audience with enthusiasm and she plays music such as the Philharkowsky Kindlitaion, that she can do reasonable rendering of which depends upon mastery of tone and rhythm.

For the past two summers, Miss May has been studying with Mager Wayne, of Paris, a distinguished teacher of the Leschetizky method and has followed her music closely attributed to this fact the almost perfect delicacy and finish with which she played The Arabesque of Debussy and L'Alouette of Balakirew.

The program follows:

"BIG BROTHERS" AT FEAST

Impetus Given to New Movement by Speakers at Y.M. C. A. Annual Banquet.

MANY GOOD SPEECHES MADE.

Association Now in Perfect Working Order, President J. W. Gavett Reports—Wants Athletic Field.

That the Y. M. C. A. is a most popular institution was demonstrated Thursday at its annual banquet in the association auditorium. One hundred and twenty men enjoyed the excellent dinner and heard with satisfaction the sound expressions and bright sayings of a number of good speakers. As each yearly banquet has been bigger than the last, so this year's was grander than the rest.

Five long tables accommodated the guests, while the speakers' table occupied the platform. Vases of cut flowers and large globular lamps adorned the feasting boards, and added beauty to the brilliantly lighted room.

Joseph W. Gavett, president of the association, was toastmaster, and seated at the speaker's table, besides Mr. Gavett, were: H. A. Wheeler, of New York, general secretary of the Big Brothers' Association; H. O. Williams, secretary International committee; W. D. Murray, Rev. John Y. Brock, Henry M. Maxson, H. O. Newman, A. B. Beers and E. L. Bonney.

The address of H. A. Wheeler was an interesting explanation of the "Big Brothers Movement," which has for its object the aiding and encouraging of unfortunate boys who either have no parents or have indifferent fathers and mothers. Each member of the association devotes his attention to one boy and becomes a "big brother" to him. If the lad is old enough to work he secures a position for him, and for the other members of the family as well, and helps them in other ways if they are needy.

Having secured the boy's friendship and confidence, the "big brother" finds out his weak points. In the case of a school boy, sometimes his studies have become a burden to him and he stumbles along, finally abandoning them altogether and giving away to idle companionship. With such a youth the "big brother" wins out by helping him to overcome the thing that was a bugbear at school and every way possible he helps the boy to fight against harassing troubles, and to fortify himself against temptations. He takes him to clean shows and places of interest, thus giving the lad a cheerful view of life.

Mr. Wheeler pointed out that if there were great temptations and pitfalls for the boys who have good parents, it must be even worse for the tempted children who have none, or are being reared by drunkards. He stated that more than ninety per cent. of the criminals are unskilled workmen, and asked how, if the boys grew up without any training for work, they could be expected to be anything else but criminals. They would naturally resort to crime to gain a livlihood, he declared.

One of the most satisfactory and fruitful plans that had been adopted in New York, Mr. Wheeler said, was the gymnasium class for small boys. At each association building classes for these lads were being accommodated, and the interest that the youngsters displayed in them proved their great value, furnishing innocent and healthful amusement and giving the young minds something to occupy their attention and look forward to.

W. D. Murray, former president of the association, in a brief address, mentioned the wonderful growth of the Y. M. C. A. in this city and in the State. He announced that the thirty-fifth State convention, which is held every two years, would take place this year at Atlantic City, February 11 to 14, inclusive.

The annual report of President Joseph W. Gavett showed that the association is having an unprecedented growth. He praised all connected with the organization, from the officials to the janitor. The latter, Henry Weller, he considered to be a prize. "The entire association is now in perfect working order for the first time in its history," he said.

Mr. Gavett's chief desire now is to secure an athletic field, and he announced that splendid progress had already been made. A $200 donation had been received from Mr. Hooley, who is very much interested in the project, and who has promised to assist in raising the balance of the money needed. Mr. Gavett has in mind a tract of land which is near a car line and can be bought for $4,000. An energetic effort is to be made to raise a sufficient proportion of the amount necessary to secure possession.

"To the Members of the Y. M. C. A.—The most notable feature of the association's religious work for the year has been the maintenance of the Sunday afternoon meetings with an average attendance of 128 men for 31 Sundays. Since the Religious Work committee adopted the policy of bringing to this service speakers whose personalities and whose themes had a particular appeal to young men, it has become more and more a place where young men come to find help and inspiration. Following the appeals of Dr. Munhall, and William Phillips Hall, three men decided for the christian life. Our Bible study work has been weak. A total attendance of 150 in three classes is reported. One of these classes, however, ought to furnish the nucleus of a Bible study committee which is essential to the promotion of vigorous work in this department. Seven shop classes at the Scott Press Works have been held with an attendance of 675.

"We have looked forward for years to the time when we could support our own representative on the foreign field. This would mean the raising of $1,200 annually, that amount being the foreign secretary's salary. As previous contributions of the association to foreign work have never amounted to more than $400, it would be necessary to provide $800 additional to realize this hope. It is gratifying to be able to report that two generous friends offered last month to provide this amount, and that in the future, the Plainfield Association will have a representative on the foreign field. It is not at all improbable, indeed it is practically certain that this forward movement means at least the doubling of the volume of our work once the work in Santiago is well under way. Mr. Mott states in his annual review of the work of the foreign department, that through maintaining an educational director in Seoul, the Grand Rapids Association more than doubled its enrollment in educational classes; that Trenton multiplies by ten its adult work in its factory groups by maintaining a secretary in Madras.

"All the departments of the association are intended to make for one end, the making of the young man a full size man. A boy that is taught to play a square game to extend himself to the limit to play to the finish under all conditions, and to take defeat in the right spirit has learned a lesson that will benefit him all his life.

"As in the past, we have had difficulty in keeping our committees filled, and the need of workers is a condition that is ever present with us.

"The physical department, under our efficient physical director, A. L. Listman, has done its accustomed good work. He has been liberal in giving all the members the benefit of the class work, and also all the different classes have been well attended in such as basketball, baseball, athletics, aquatics, wrestling, etc. Tournaments have been held, and groups and individual contests have been fostered. The classes in all the departments show a gain over the attendance of last season.

"Men in regular classes, gymnasium, 3,774; boys in regular classes, gymnasium, 4,375; total, 8,049; men in athletics, baseball and basketball, 1,245; boys in athletics, baseball and basketball, total 2,473; men and boys in Sunday-school athletics, 492; individual exercise (approx), 1,000; interscholastic basketball and athletics, 100; grand total, 13,114; examinations, 124.

"The basketball teams played 20 games, winning 17, losing 13. The two business men's teams and boys' team also had a series of games. The Sunday-school Athletic League started by Mr. Listman has been a great success. Fifty-three men and boys have taken part in the work of the league during the year. Athletic meets between the different churches were given, tennis tournaments and basketball contests were the interesting features of the league.

"The association should own its own athletic field. We have many hundreds of men and boys in our gymnasium in winter but have no place to offer them in summer for exercise. We have spent a large amount of money in the last 20 years in laying out baseball diamonds, tennis courts, etc., only to find we had to give them up on account of the short leases we have been compelled to sign. We are satisfied a field of our own could be turned into a place for exercise for many who cannot get the kind of recreation they want in any other place. One New Jersey city has all the newsboys in the city organized into baseball nines.

"The association is conducting three educational groups, the mechanical drawing class, the orchestra, and the class in English for Italians. The organization of the Italian class with the co-operation of the Young People's committee having the work for Italians in charge marks the association's first definite work on behalf of the most forlorn and least intelligent of the industrial groups of the community. One of the members of this class which has been most successfully lead by Mr. Cubberley has recently joined the association.

"The Ladies' auxiliary has been indispensible during the year. We can only begin to recite the different services this helpful ally has rendered. They have given dinners to the mechanical drawing class, baseball team, orchestra and Bible class. They have paid for the telephone, provided flowers for the Sunday meetings, purchased racks and magazine holders for the reading room, bought a new typewriter for the office and as a crowning achievement, the have refurnished the parlor handsomely at an expense of over $250.

"We are grateful to M. A. Korff, who organized and for many years lead our orchestra. It is one of the largest and best in the country, and we wish to thank its members for their help in so many ways. They have also given benefit concerts for the Rescue Mission, Salvation Army and some of the missions.

"Last June, we called C. B. Batchelor as boys' secretary, and this work for the first time has been in first class condition since Mr. Robbie left two years ago. We have now 138 boys in this department. The boys had a camp at Lake Hopatcong last summer, and six outings were given. A club has been organized for stereo boys with twenty-five members, each paying twenty-five cents a month, having two evenings for games, and one evening for gymnasium and pool. It is planned to get a big brother for each one of these boys, that is, one man will try to look after and help along one boy. The boys gave a minstrel show in December, about thirty boys taking part.

"Twenty-three leading high school boys were organized for Bible study under the leadership of William D. Murray, through the efforts of D. R. Porter and C. R. Scott. The class has been held eight sessions with an average attendance of fifteen. A graduate school Bible class was organized which has had an average attendance of ten.

"Our own light plant has been running full time all the year and we save in the winter at least $50 per month as we have helped.

"The past year was a difficult one in which to raise our budget. Many members could not afford to renew, and some of our regular contributors had to reduce their gifts. Our membership has fallen off. We have had to borrow to make up the needed amount. A total of $11,586 was received during the year, $700 being loaned on a note. $11,534 was expended, and we have notes amounting to $4,000 to be taken care of.

"We have been fortunate in having during the year each one of our three departments in charge of a most competent director, and the work they have all done has been excellent. The large amount of personal work done by our secretaries cannot be reported but the constant stream of men coming to our rooms for advice and help is a proof that we are expected to do this and in many diverse ways.

"We cordially invite all our friends to visit our building. Our books are always open, and the month's reports of our secretaries and committees are always on file."

General Secretary Herbert E. Parker was the next invitation from the toastmaster, addressed the toasters. He said that the success of the association had not been due to any one person but to the many, who had worked together. Co-operation was the great force which had accomplished it, and he was sure that the loyal spirit which had not permitted the association to suffer during the past four years would protect and support it in the future. C. B. Batchelor, boys' director, spoke briefly on the ambitions of his department. While there were 130 boys enrolled at the present time, there were 2,000 youths in the city between fifteen and seventeen years of age, and he wanted as many of them as he could get. There had been an erroneous impression, he said, that the membership was open to only a select clique. That was by no means the case and every boy was welcome.

The case of four boys who boarded and lodged in town and run away from home had been called to his attention recently, and he had since had a talk with one of them. From the boy he learned that a group of fifteen such youths had been banded together, but that all had dropped out except the four.

Mr. Batchelor said it was his purpose to interview each of the fifty. He thought there must be something in boys who were capable of organizing themselves and conducting their own club. The fact that their meeting place had been a cellar and under vicious circumstances was to be deplored. He would like to bring them into the Y. M. C. A.

A. C. Williams, who is one of the secretaries of the international committee, delivered a short address which was full of fun and poetry. It was also somewhat reminiscent as he is a former secretary of the local association. This was his second visit here in twenty-five years, and he was pleased to note great changes.

Speaking of the Y. M. C. A. work in general, he said that the association has a standing among large employers for genuineness and truthfulness. They want Christian men on the railroads and street cars, nowadays, he declared, because they find that the best work is done by them.

WANT A NATIONAL CHILD LABOR BUREAU

The Union county branch of the State Charities Aid Association, has sent to United States Senator John Kean a petition asking him to use his influence in securing the adoption of a bill providing for a national bureau for the care of children. This movement is in the interest of the child labor law which has aroused interest in all parts of the country.

In addition to the petition sent by the county branch, Miss Tiffany, of this city, who is also identified with the State Charities Aid Association, has personally written a letter to Senator Kean in the interest of the proposed measure. It is intended to improve and better the conditions of child labor and prohibit the employment of children under a certain age in factories and other places. The Plainfield Mothers' Association is also interested in the question and it will also send a petition to Washington urging the passage of the proposed law.

TO ENLARGE SCHOOL IN DUNELLEN BOROUGH

At a meeting of the voters of Dunellen held in the borough hall, Thursday, it was decided to build a two-story addition to the Whittier School, which will comprise two rooms, each 23x25 feet. To meet the expense for the improvement a bond issue was authorized. There will be ten bonds of $500 each maturing each year the sum of $5,000 being necessary for the work.

The meeting was called by the Board of Education to discuss and act on the proposition and J. Newton Apgar was made chairman with William Frederick, secretary. Several citizens spoke concerning the improvement and not a dissenting voice was heard. It is proposed to begin work on the addition as soon as the frost gets out of the ground.

PLAN TO CONSOLIDATE THE BOARDS OF TRADE

Milton Mendel, Hugh B. Sweeny and F. A. Duttenhofer, representing the Board of Trade, attended a conference held in the office of the New York and New Jersey Realty Exchange, Terminal building, New York, Thursday afternoon, upon the invitation of President Kempner of the Exchange. The purpose of the meeting, as outlined by Mr. Kempner was to adopt a plan for the consolidation of Boards of Trade and similar bodies within the section of the State known as Northern New Jersey, the idea being to develop this section. It was decided that every effort should be made to bring manufacturing industries to this part of the State.

It is also planned that each organization shall have a number of representatives in the central body, the number to be decided later and these representatives shall keep their various organizations posted as to what is being accomplished in New York and vicinity. It is further planned to advertise this section of the State as a whole, without mentioning any particular locality.

All inquiries to the organization will be open to all of the representatives to be used for the advancement of business interests. It was pointed out that this scheme would cause a strong organization, through their representatives so that it can be taken up at the respective meetings to follow soon. Later another meeting will be held to perfect the details for a permanent organization.

OBJECTED TO HUSBAND BUYING NEW GLASS EYE

Mrs. Rosie Cline, of Plainfield avenue, appeared in the city court, Saturday morning, with a grievance against her husband, Edward Cline, who she charged with failing to properly support his family. She related numerous instances of what she termed his neglect but to no avail and spectators in court appeared as though Cline was more sinned against than sinning. From the sample of rapid-fire talk that the plaintiff handed out it was a wonder to them how he managed to survive through his married life of twenty years.

Mrs. Cline admitted that her husband had not worked since last November but declared that he received the rent from two houses he owned and spent it foolishly.

"At Christmas time," she said, "he had some money and what did he do with it? He went to New York and bought himself an overcoat and bum glass eye."

The court opined that the purchase of either wasn't such a serious offense from a family point of view and that if he squandered his rents in drink it would be different. He ended the argument by directing Cline to bring the rent money to him each month and that after the tax and repair expenses were deducted he would try to make a division satisfactory to both.

SIDEWALK CYCLIST INJURES LITTLE GIRL

George Feller, a young man who conducts a milk business, was arraigned before Recorder Loliver in the borough court, Saturday morning charged with Special Marshal Martin with riding his wheel on the sidewalk and knocking down the six-year-old daughter of Carmock McDonough, Saturday afternoon. His case was postponed from the fact that he had continued on after the child had been felled to the ground and though instructed to be in court last night failed to do so. He was fined $3.

The accident occurred on Fairview avenue near Watchung, and but for the fact that other children witnessed it, Feller would not have been apprehended. They informed Special Marshal Martin, who carried the little girl to a neighboring house. She was badly hurt by the blow from the wheel and though eventually recovering still feels the effects today.

The marshall arrested Feller afterward but released him to finish delivering milk to customers on his promise to appear in court Friday night. When he failed to do so, a warrant was made out and he was arrested this morning. Feller explained his non-appearance last night by saying that he did not believe that he was required to attend him because he was in citizen's clothes.

THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF THE DAY NURSERY

The third anniversary of The Day Nursery was observed Friday afternoon under the auspices of the City Union of The King's Daughters, at the nursery on West Fourth street, and it was the most successful in the short history of this charitable institution. During the hours from 3 to 6 o'clock, nearly one hundred friends of the nursery called, each one bringing something for the store-room. In addition there were a large number of boys who, unable to be present, sent dry groceries, canned goods, etc.

The guests were received by Mrs. Frank W. Jones, president of the city union, assisted by Mrs. A. M. Most, Mrs. A. E. Faber, Mrs. E. F. Pelckert, Miss Hayes, Miss Olive DeLacy, the last named being the city nurse.

Members of the Charity Circle were in charge of the tea, those serving as a committee including Mrs. D. N. Van Vliet, president; Mrs. M. A. Zook, Mrs. G. Harry Squires, Mrs. W. C. Kinney and Mrs. G. A. Chapman.

At present the average number of children cared for at the nursery every day is twenty, while some days it reaches thirty-five. The oldest child is seven years. There is now an Italian baby and three tots old there while her mother is being treated at the hospital. Mrs. Emma L. Bird is the matron of the nursery and she has had great success in her work. Those who have charge of the nursery are grateful for the many remembrances which will help to feed the children brought there while their mothers are at work.

Enjoyable Sleighing Party.

An enjoyable sleigh-ride party was given Thursday night, the affair being arranged by the Misses Madeline Bilmun, Mary Wierenga, Adelaide Cole and Mildred Priemer. There were about twenty young people in the party and after a trip to Westfield and back all were entertained at the home of Miss Adelaide Cole.

MR. OTTERSON'S HOUSE IS DAMAGED BY FIRE

A fire at the home of A. L. Otterson, located at 1,333 Evergreen avenue, gave the city department a two-hour fight Thursday, and resulted in damage estimated at $1,000. The flames started in the basement, evidently from hot ashes placed in a can, and because of their location proved hard to get at. Despite the drawback, they were kept from getting through the first floor and most of the living rooms were not touched.

The alarm was first given over the telephone at 9:24 by Mrs. Howard Colby, who lives directly next to the Otterson residence, and Chief Dunn went out with No. 2 truck, the chemical engine and the ladder truck, arriving at the house. It was found there were not sufficient men to fight the flames and box 27 was pulled in, a second help. The basement was filled not and the smoke so thick at times it was impossible for anyone to enter until after the chemical stream had been played through a window for some time. The flames fed on the most part were in the forward part of the basement, directly beneath the reception room. It was 11:20 before the recall was sounded.

The damage estimate is quite large because of the fact that the greater part of the floor beams will have to be replaced, making it necessary to tear out the hard wood flooring and part of the side walls. The loss is covered by insurance.

Mr. and Mrs. Otterson are in the south at the present time and the only member of the family at home was the latter's father, who is partially an invalid. He suffers from heart trouble and the excitement affected him somewhat but not seriously.

W. H. WEBSTER DINES HOPE CHAPEL BOYS

William H. Webster, who is shortly to leave with Dr. Grenfell for Labrador, on missionary work, Club, of Hope chapel, of which he is leader, Friday night. The members and guests of honor numbered forty-four in all.

During the evening addresses were made by Mr. Webster, Rev. Frank S. Zeller, Rev. Mr. Howard G. Herbert ondict, Brockholst Kissam Miller and Hugh B. Sweeney. A response was made for the club by Clinton Firstbrook, the president, who also presented Mr. Condict with a handsome silk umbrella in behalf of the members. Mr. Condict was the leader of the club previous to Mr. Webster and is largely responsible for the rapid growth it has enjoyed.

Following the dinner, the young men enjoyed an informal social hour during which musical selections were given by club members. Mr. Webster will leave for Labrador in March and will assist Dr. Grenfell in his missionary work.

MEN'S BARACA CLASS HOLDS AN ENTERTAINMENT.

The Men's Baraca Class of the West End Tabernacle gave an entertainment and social at the home of L. A. Martin, of West Third street and Evona avenue, Friday night. Music was furnished by the Crab Band, composed of the men of the class, leader pipes, zobos, bass and snare drums, mandolins, piano, cash boards, flute, guitars and several other instruments being used to make up the orchestra. A good sum was realized from the affair for the benefit of the work. The program follows:

A Surprise Party.

A surprise party was given in honor of Bertha Hune, of 522 West Fourth street, on Thursday evening. An enjoyable evening was spent. Games were the feature of the evening, after which refreshments were served. The surprise was a big success. Those present were the Misses Louise Cooper, Florence Washington, Dottie Wadley, Martha Greene, Josephine Steward, Bertha Hunt, the Masters Luther Kline, Fred Kline, Harry Kline, Charles Miller, Leslie Kingston, Fred Walsh, Ralph Greene, Harold Washington and Arthur Saunders.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Country Club will be held early in February, when trustees will be chosen, officers elected and plans for the coming season will be discussed. Extensive improvements have been made at the clubhouse and grounds will be planned before the golf and tennis season opens.

WHITE-PLAGUE CAMPAIGN

Plainfield Tuberculosis Society Plans to Establish a Camp for Victims.

AT THE ANNUAL ELECTION.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson Chosen President of Local Society Which Is Doing a Noble Work.

Believing that the time is right for the establishment of a camp in the vicinity of Plainfield for the care and treatment of people suffering from tuberculosis, the Plainfield Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis in its annual meeting, Friday, decided to take steps in that direction. Just where this camp will be located has not been determined, but a suitable site will be selected, one where patients suffering from tuberculosis will have every opportunity to recover, provided the disease has not reached the advanced stage.

In this connection the society will

at once begin the work of increasing its membership, the idea being to interest as many Plainfielders as possible in this work. The payment of a dollar will make a person a member and money secured in this way will go directly toward the alleviation of the ravages of the terrible disease. There are now about twenty-five cases of tuberculosis on record at the office of the Board of Health and the society wants to provide ways and means for their care before the disease reaches the helpless stage.

These officers were elected yesterday for the coming year:

President, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson; first vice-president, A. V. Heely; second vice-president, Henry L. Hall; secretary and treasurer, Leon R. Thurlow. The committees were appointed as follows:

Camp—Henry L. Hall, chairman; Miss Marguerite Holly, Mrs. C. E. Ryder, Duncan W. Taylor, Finance —Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, chairman; Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany, Dr. F. J. Hughes, A. V. Heely. Visiting nurse —Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, chairman; Dr. William H. Murray and Leon R. Thurlow. These committees together with the officers comprise the executive committee.

SURPRISE PARTY IN HONOR OF MISS McDONOUGH.

Young people from this city tendered a surprise party to Miss Margaret McDonough at her home in South Plainfield Friday night. The affair was arranged by Jerry Walsh, Frank McInerney, Edward O'Loughlin and Earl Moran and the trip each way was in the nature of a straw ride. Music, games and dancing were features of the party and refreshments were served at midnight.

Among those who were present were the Misses Sadie Lee, Gertrude Smalley, Lillie McInerney, Marion Blimm, Ruth Moore, Ruth McCarthy, Nora Maguire and Margaret McDonough, Harold Rogers, Harry James and John Casey, Thomas Bebout, Joseph Miller, John and Andrew McDonough, Jerry Walsh, Frank McInerney, Edward O'Loughlin and Earl Moran.

Miss Swackhamer's Surprise.

Miss Bertha M. Swackhamer, of West Front street, was surprised at her home Friday evening by about thirty friends. Among those present were some from Lake Hopatcong, Middle Valley, Newark, Patterson, Elizabeth, Goodbridge, Rahway, and Scotch Plains, as well as a number of Plainfield friends. The evening was spent with games and music and refreshments were served about midnight. The affair was a complete surprise, especially as a number of those present were campers and boarders at Lake Hopatcong last summer, where Miss Swackhamer spent her vacation.

Uncomplimentary.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Every mission field has had its heroes. Indeed, every true missionary is a hero, especially those who in the years gone by left their homes and countries to go to foreign shores then scarcely known that they might preach the gospel of Christ. But to some missionaries more than others opportunities have come to show the heroic mold of which they were made. No one doubted the heroism of the missionaries of Paotingfu, but it was only when at the time of the Boxer movement, when they so bravely and calmly met death, that the opportunity was presented to demonstrate it. Among our missionaries there are many devoted men who would have shown their heroism by facing the cannibals of the New Hebrides, but to John G. Paton alone did God give the privilege. Indeed, Christian heroism has not degenerated. Times have changed, but the devotion of Christians to Christ has not changed. Could a Roman persecution of the first century be reproduced in the twentieth there would be just as many of Christ's disciples ready to die for Him. The hour demands not martyrdom, but active, living service, and let us not come short of its demands.

India—great, gorgeous India—has not wanted for missionary heroes. From the beginning of the work there down to the Christian martyrs of the latest uprising against England some years ago India has had missionaries who were heroic in service and heroic in death when that was required of them. In that great empire where "every prospect pleases and only man is vile," heroism has played no small part in extending the kingdom of Christ.

But one name stands out in India above all other names—William Carey. His heroism was not displayed in martyrdom, but in long years of self sacrificing service which has forever linked his name not only with missions in India, but with the empire of India itself, as its true friend and benefactor.

William Carey was born in Northamptonshire, England, Aug. 17, 1761. For a time he worked with his father, a weaver, but was later apprenticed to a shoemaker and worked at that trade for five years. At the eighteen years of age he became a Christian and an earnest preacher of the gospel. His vision of the kingdom of Christ was a worldwide one. But he found no sympathy even from the ministry for he was considered and in derision he was called the "consecrated cobbler," a title which today is one of great honor. He was even derided as a "maniac," but there was "method in his madness." His great sermon on "Expectations," based on great things from God and attempt great things for God"—aroused great interest, and the Baptist Missionary society accepted him as its missionary. He preferred to go to Africa, but obeyed orders and went to Calcutta, India, arriving Nov. 11, 1793. To sum up even his forty years' work in India is impossible. As superintendent of an indigo factory he later supported himself and his family while preaching and studying and translating. He was afterward a professor in William college, Calcutta. He revealed India to the world. He translated parts or the whole of the Bible into twenty-four Indian languages or dialects. He brought about the abolition of the suttee, and the English government requested Carey to translate the proclamation declaring it punishable as homicide into the Bengali tongue. The order reached him as he was preaching for public worship on the Sabbath. Grieved by this bad taste, he secured a pulpit supply and went to work on the translation, saying, "If I delay an hour to translate and publish this, many an Indian's wife may be sacrificed." With the Sabbath sunset the translation was completed. This was William Carey. He died June 9, 1834, at the age of seventy-three. He was buried the next morning in the mission burying ground. May the spirit of Carey possess us and lead us to his great zeal for missions.

Isa. lii, 7; Matt. v, 11, 12; xxviii, 18-20; Rom. x, 14, 15; Acts i, 6-14; viii, 26-40; xv, 25, 26; xvi, 8-12; II Tim. iv, 1-8; Heb. ii, 36-40.

Busy Endeavorers In All Lands.

Dr. John F. Cowan while addressing a gathering which welcomed him to Hawaii spoke as follows concerning Christian Endeavor societies:

"In other lands than the United States Christian Endeavorers are active. In London there are 1,000 Christian Endeavor societies. They help the poor and sew all busy workers. Some societies sent a steamboat in pieces to Africa to do missionary work on the Kongo. So in Turkey, in India, in China and in Japan Christian Endeavorers are earnestly working for Christ. During the Boxer trouble in China one society put up the notice: 'This house belongs to Jesus Christ. He has not run away, nor do we.'

"In the islands of the Pacific there are many Christian Endeavor societies. I can hardly realize that I am now in one of the islands of the Pacific. But not only here, but in the other islands to the south, there are many societies, and they have done a great work."

Hungary's Good Work.

The Christian Endeavorers of Hungary raised over $1,200 last year and have started a fund for a building in Budapest to carry on Christian Endeavor work on a larger scale.

PAPERING THE ROOM.

We should not go about papering our rooms as we buy pins or order a luncheon. The luncheon is soon over and we order another one the next day. But no so with our wall-paper. It remains "put" for sometimes several years, and care should be exercised accordingly in choosing it.

In papering any room it should be remembered that light is the first consideration, and that the paper must be chosen accordingly.

Pure white is the best choice when a specially light room is wanted, as it absorbs only about 15 per cent. of the light thrown upon it. Dark green, on the other hand, is the greatest consumer of light, absorbing about 85 per cent.

Next to white as a light producer are the soft pastel tints and light blues, which absorb from 20 to 25 per cent. of the light; then comes orange at 30 per cent.; apple and gray green, almost 50 per cent., and the popular brown is almost as bad as dark green, as it takes up about 60 to 70 per cent. of the light it should throw out.

Fine Finish.

"I've got it!" he shouted, triumphantly. "I've got it!"

"Got what?" asked the surprised manager.

"Why, the sensation of the year. In the third act of my new play there is a mill scene. Harold Head, the hero, casts the villain down into the yawning jaws of two great emery wheels."

The manager grinned.

"Emery wheels!" he chuckled. "Then, I suppose, he has a fine finish?"

"Yes, very fine. In fact, he comes out a polished villain."—Chicago News.

Great Charger Near.

Mrs. Stubb—John, you overslept yourself this morning and had the nightmare. In fact, you alarmed the plumber who was working down stairs.

Mr. Stubb—The plumber? Ah, that accounts for my dream.

Mrs. Stubb—And what did you dream about?

Mr. Stubb—Why, I dreamed I was trying to get out of the way of a great charger.—Chicago News.

Christmas Counsel.

"My wife and I," remarked the young married man, "have agreed not to make any presents this Christmas."

"How is that?"

"So that we may save money."

"Better save plenty of it," advised the old married man kindly, "for if you carry out that program, my boy, it will take something handsome to pacify her the day after."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Tantalizing Trip.

Miss Astorbilt—What is the matter with Stubb—that he is suffering from seasickness?

Miss Yellowbacks—Oh, no; but it always makes pa blue to cross the Atlantic. It makes him so sore to think that he can't buy up the land under the ocean and charge the steamship companies big rent for the privilege of passing over it.—Puck.

Another Refutation.

"You say you never touched a penny that you did not actually earn!" said the investigator.

"That," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, "is precisely what I said. And I repeat it. I have numerous people in my employ whose duty it is to receive all the small change."—Washington Star.

He Was Sure.

The Old Lady—Have you got all my trunks in, porter?

The Porter—Yes'm.

The Old Lady—Are you quite sure I've left nothing behind?

Thought Transfer.

"So you believe in telepathy?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton. "My wife knows what I am going to think about some time before I have made my mind up on the subject myself."—Washington Star.

Cleaning the Tub.

When cleaning the porcelain bathtubs or wash basins, throw a handful of common salt into the basin before pouring in the gasoline or turpentine and all lime or sediment will be instantly removed.

A Slight Error.

Fastboy—Really dear, you should not wait supper for me this way when I'm detained at the office.

Matter of Taste.

"I like to visit there. They have three such lovely children."

"I'd rather visit a place where they have a lovely cook."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Isn't It So?

"A man ought to have as many wives as he can support and buy dry goods for."

"Most of us have."—Houston Post.

VISITING OVER SUNDAY AND THE CLOTHES PROBLEM.

We are oftentimes puzzled, when going away for the week end, about just what are the clothes we should take with us. And if the invitation comes late no wonder increases as the time grows shorter.

There are girls who are so popular that scarcely a week passes that they are not off somewhere for over Sunday or to spend a couple of days. This popularity has its drawbacks if bags must be constantly packed and unpacked.

One girl who does not have a maid and is given to getting into rushes has simplified her visits by keeping her suitcase stocked with all the *toilet necessities. She keeps a sep*arate set just for visiting, and they are not removed fro mthe bag on her return.

This plan proved such a convenience that the girl added to her bag several changes of underclothes, which were only taken out to be kept filled until immediately replaced. Thus, when an invitation came in a hurry, nothing need be done but slip in a frock or two that were to be worn.

A workbag, jewel box and a small collar box were also tucked in and kept filled until such time as collars and small pins to help out in an emergency. A pair of special patent leather pumps and silk stockings were ever in the bag, thus preventing the possibility for forgotten footgear.

The girl says she now enjoys visits, when formerly she went off in such turmoil that she and her family were half wild.

TO GIVE TO THE WOULD BE TRAVELER.

Do you wish to give the friend starting on an extended journey some little useful remembrance? You could make her no more acceptable parting gift than a safety pocket to be worn under the dress. In it can go extra money and jewels without fear of loss or robbers.

Such pockets can be made of *many materials and in several dif*ferent styles, but the following one will be found generally acceptable:

A pocket is made from gray suede or a piece of chamois, eleven inches long, six inches wide at bottom, and five inches at top. The bottom is rounded and the top is cut square across.

Two pieces of leather are cut and the edges stitched together on the machine, about half way up. An inner pocket of stout gray cambric is cut on the inside of the suede, the edges finished with nickel rims and a stout clasp.

One side of the leather is then cut shorter than the other, which folds down over the purse in a flap. This is fastened by snap clasps such as are used on gloves. One is sewed on each side of the flap for extra security.

On the under side of the case an extra piece of the leather or chamois is stitched to form a flat pocket. One is formed by the centre and has on edges to form two narrow pockets for bills or jewels. A shallow flap is added which also fastens with the snap clasps.

The finished pocket is stitched to two strips of gray belting, one at each edge.

THE MORNING MEAL—DON'T MISS IT.

Those who are "banting" in order that they may have the unutterable joy of wearing a directoire knicker, and those who are not—

There are a surprising number of people who do not break their fast each day until luncheon time. To this abstemiousness they attribute *wonderful health. To hear the de*votees of this breakfast fad talk one would rival Methusaleh if she can but refrain from eating in the morning.

To eat or not to eat, is, or should be, a personal matter; but the non breakfasters do not see it that way. They are not content unless all the world goes breakfastless too. They rub in their theories to boredom.

A man or woman should no more go without breakfast save by the advice of a physician than he or she should stop eating altogether.

Undoubtedly there are many with whom the practise agrees, but there are more who could not stand it at all. To advise the working man to go hungry until he could open his tin pail at noon would be to lay up for him scurvy and ill health. His active life demands nourishment be fore starting to work.

In the same way a girl who must sit in an office all day makes a mistake in starting forth without a substantial breakfast; to eat some all-day sucker and think it will do and is half sick morning for most women.

"But," says the non breakfaster, "you can get used to going without food!" Possibly you can, but why should you? The average wage-earner can not afford to pay for a heavy lunch downtown and to make the usual sandwich or sundae or slice of pie do duty until the late dinner—a folly on the face of it.

Lesson From the Past.

The Chinese were building their great wall.

"This will prevent unjust discrimination," they said. "It will keep everything out."

Thereby, too, they saved the trouble and expense of having to revise the tariff every few years.—Chicago Tribune.

A UNIQUE EXHIBITION.

There is shortly to be held in London an ideal home exhibition, to which the Queen will contribute various articles from the technical schools at Sandringham. The prospect opens up the question of what really constitutes an ideal home, says a writer in the Sketch. Will the exhibition be confined to such gross materials as chairs, bedsteads, pots, pans, and disheloys? Or shall we have an exhibition of the higher domestic virtues, with young persons, tidily and beautifully arrayed, personifying that annoying entity, the angel in the house? It is obvious that technical schools cannot (and ought not to be able to) supply an ideal home. A humorous friend of mine, who is also a famous writer, has recently built himself a row of small flats, with bedrooms like ship's cabins, and kitchens in which the proverbial cat could never, by any chance, be swung by the goddess who presides over the diminutive stove. The modern home, indeed, is too often only a place where one packs your boxes, removes motor travel stains and "look-up" Bradshaw; where you dress for the theatre, answer the telephone, and make your arrangements in illness for prompt removal to a sanitarium or nursing establishment. Perhaps the well-to-do fashioned people who hops that the coming exhibition will make home popular again among "the classes." Among the masses it has never lost its hold.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

WOULD LEASE SPUR TO TRACTION COMPANY.

The employes of the State Insane Asylum at Morris Plains want the asylum managers to give the Morris County Traction Company the right to use the railway spur running from Morris Plains Station to the institution. The asylum staff wants better connection with the Morristown. A petition signed by 429 employes of the asylum has been presented to the board of managers asking them to arrange, by lease or otherwise, for the use of the railway by the traction company. The railway is owned by the State.

The petition says the petitioners would like increased facilities for reaching Morristown and besides urging the use of the roadbed already laid, which is a branch of the Lackawanna railroad, from Morris Plains, they ask the management to further in every way possible the building of the trolley road. There are over 2,000 persons at the hospital, and while all cannot go beyond the wall of the institution, there are many patients who, particularly private ones, who are allowed to go as far as Morristown in charge of attendants.

It now costs about $1 to make the round trip of six miles, and if it is made entirely by carriage and the conveyance is kept waiting it may be more than that. It is possible that a State law will have to be passed to meet the request in the petition.

Why It Was.

A party of Northerners was touring Virginia, some years ago, and as the crowded train was crawling through Stafford County near Fredericksburg, an old and wizened woman, with a basket bigger than herself, came aboard, and edged diffidently into the vacant place beside one of the men. After a while her seatmate decided that it could be no harm to draw her out a little for the benefit of the rest of the party.

"This is very poor land that you have around here, madam," he began, humbly.

"Mighty poor," she assented, humbly.

"I never did see such worthless soil."

"No, sub," with an air of deep dejection.

"Don't you ever sow any crops at all?" he kept on.

"Naw, suh," she drawled. "This hyer land around hyer was sowed 'bout three foot deep with Yankees, long 'bout forty years ago, and we ain't been able to raise nary crap since."—Harper's Weekly.

Parties Should Begin Earlier.

Wise, indeed, is the promoter of a new idea who proposes to have dances, parties and the like begin early in the evening for the purpose of effecting earlier adjournment. Late hours are convenient for the business world only in that people can attend social pleasantries without interfering with business, but it makes a great difference "in the cold gray dawn of the morning after." A part of the young social contingent could conform very nicely to earlier hours, and the vastly rich who need not contend with business cares could also be included. Children's parties should be hours earlier in the afternoon, or very early morning.—Woman's National Daily.

Almost as Good.

Little Ikey came up to his father with a very solemn face.

"Is it true, father," he asked, "that marriage is a failure?"

His father surveyed him thoughtfully for a moment.

"Well, Ikey," he finally replied "if you get a rich wife it's almost as good as a failure."—Lippincott's.

DWELLERS IN ARCTIC REGION.

Peculiar Views of Life Entertained by Eskimo Men and Women.

These people of the white world, these children of the snow and ice, give themselves little concern regarding *what is going on in worlds be*yond their own. The climate in which they live and the limitations of their whole environment make it impossible, writes J. L. Harbour in Leslie's Weekly, that there should be much change in their own manner of life, and they do not care for the changes that soap and water might make in their domestic life, while the women of the family are not anxious to adopt changes in methods of cooking that might make some of the dishes they prepare much cleaner and far less deadly than they appear to be. But the best-filled larder in the homes of the most affluent of the Eskimos offers little in the way of variety in food and the question so vexing to the American housewife: "What shall we have for breakfast?" or for dinner or supper, never troubles the Eskimo housewife, since these meals may not vary for months at a time and are prepared in the primitive way in which they were prepared by the Eskimos of generations and generations ago.

The dress of the women and the men is so similar that it is a rare Eskimo lady's husband's clothes happened to be better than her own she might borrow them to wear to some Eskimo so*ciety function without exciting any* comment as to her dress.

In the Eskimo cabin lands, the man is regarded as as being vastly superior to the woman, and the birth of a girl is never regarded as a blessing. Indeed, it often happens that both the father and mother resort to that unavailing folly of tears and lamentations when it is announced that a newcomer is a girl. A boy can become a great fisherman or a great hunter, while a girl —of what use is she? A mere cumberer of the earth, regardless of the fact that she works as many hours a day as, and even more than, a man when she reaches the goal of her ambition and marries. Not to marry is as sad a misfortune as may befall her, and if she is married and widowed she makes all possible haste in securing a second partner.

He Took a Shampoo.

"Poor Jim has lost his reason," said the barber in a Hertford shop.

"Who's Jim?" asked the victim in the chair.

"Jim is my twin brother, sir. Jim has long been broodin' over the hard times, and I suppose they turned his head."

"H'm! Not unlikely."

"Yes. Him and me has worked side by side for years, and we were so alike you couldn't tell each other apart. We took in a good deal, too. No money in this business now."

"What's the matter with it?"

"Prices too low. Unless a customer takes a shampoo, it doesn't pay to shave or cut hair. Poor Jim! I caught him trying to cut a customer's throat because he refused a shampoo, and so I had to have the poor fellow locked up. Makes me very melancholy. Sometimes I feel sorry I didn't let Jim slash all he wanted to. It might have saved his reason. Shampoo, sir?"

"Yes, please."

They Simply Wouldn't Fight.

He was a poet; also he was very, very intoxicated.

Entering the restaurant, he looked about him with a malevolent eye. But nobody seemed desirous to quarrel with him, so he sat down, deeply disappointed. The waiter approached. The poet regarded him with a hostile scowl. But all the waiter desired was to know what the poet wanted. So the muse worshiper gave his order and shook his head sadly.

But the spirit of belligerency was strong within him. Again he glanced about. At last he fastened his eye on a young man sitting at a near-by table. Here, indeed, thought that poet, is a chance for a quarrel. So, still fixing the young man with a baleful glare, he growled:

"You don't love Rossetti when you are drunk!"

The young man absolutely ignored the remark. Completely crushed, the poet gave up the struggle, consumed his drink, and departed.

Present Day Literary Rewards.

The writer of a colorless short story in 1908 will receive for it more than Milton received for his "Paradise Lost," and those successful authors of the Indiana school are paid more for an ephemeral novel than Goldsmith received for his "Vicar of Wakefield." The search for ability is unremitting, and the duty of all magazine editors and literary "commissioners" of every degree is to seek out writers who can furnish interesting "copy." Indeed, one of the duties of these is the hasty and premature recognition afforded the immature writers. The fruits are to be perceived in their work. They give no intimation of that swarm of ideas which distinguished the full mind of Burns, whose mind was not freighted with the precious lore of the world; they follow no high tradition and have no background.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Will for Deed.

"But we have no powder," explained the military secretary.

The people thought this over a mo*ment and modified the demand.*

"Well, anyhow," they suggested, "it's up to us to declare that we would declare war if we had powder."

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Life without a definite port at the end, life unthrilled and unfed by the Father, life unsanctified, however sleek, is the veriest failure.—Rev. Dr. George Clarke Peck, Methodist Episcopal, New York.

Lesson From Politics.

The problem of politics in the final analysis is the individual voter. This is the secret of successful method in Christian work, getting at the individual man.—Rev. James J. Dunlop, Presbyterian, Roxbury, Mass.

Art of Living.

The greatest art in the world is the *art of living. The greatest thing in liv*ing is in knowing how to get along with others. The truest test of happiness can only come from the most perfect companionship.—Rev. W. W. Bustard, Baptist, Boston.

Knowing God.

We know because we believe. This it is in our attitude toward God. No one of us has ever seen him, yet we trust him and love him. We thus know him by faith, not knowledge.—Rev. T. P. Thurston, Episcopalian, Minneapolis.

Knowing Life.

No man knows life who has not been quickened intellectually, made sensitive to every high faith in him. Who conquered the beast within him and *been thrilled with a great love of di*vine beauty.—Rev. Dr. Edwin H. Delk, Lutheran, Philadelphia.

Spreading the Gospel.

A wonderful change would be wrought in the world if those who know the joy of being followers of Christ would go forth and tell it to each one they met. The world would soon realize that the Christian life was a vital matter and would be changed. —Rev. J. W. Baer, Presbyterian, Brooklyn.

True Faith.

He that has the true faith must, first, be able to give a reason for that faith; second, desire that others share it, and, thirdly, by comparison with other religions prove its superiority over others in the blessedness and excellence of its virtues and its influence and power for the larger number of the people in the world.—Rev. Maurice Ruben, Baptist, Pittsburg.

Kingdom of the Heavens.

Jesus came to bring "the kingdom of the heavens." We shall have this kingdom when we learn sky lives—to love as royally as sunsets, to trust as purely as stars, to order our society and government as smoothly as the punctual planets and to suffer as summer clouds. We leave this indoor, breathing freshness behind them.—Rev. Dr. Frank Crane, Congregationalist, Worcester, Mass.

Sacredness of Small Things.

We should realize the sacredness of *small things which we ignore or de*spise—the duties that uplift, although it is unheralded; the word that inspires, although uttered so gently that your neighbors do not hear it; the hand clasp which puts your brother firmly on his feet without public applause. Hence the small things dare not be despised by those of us who wish to rise to higher things.—Rev. Abram S. Isaacs, Hebrew, Paterson, N. J.

Effective Prayer.

Prayer to be true prayer must come from a penitent heart that has submitted everything to the will of God. It is only when you are in accord with the will that you are clothed about with his righteousness. When you have squared your life with God's laws, then you will have boldness to ask whatsoever you ask you will receive. Why? Because he has put his wishes in you, so when you ask you ask only for those things agreeable to his will, and of course you receive.—Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young, Presbyterian, Brooklyn.

Faith and Prayer.

Faith is the attitude of the soul. The soul where we surrender ourselves to it and are molded by it. It is opening the shutter of the soul and letting the heavenly image impress itself on the place. Days of darkness will be required to develop it. Temptations will test it there, and the image stays forever when once so fixed. Prayer is the attitude of the man by which he contemplates his own best self and for the moment surrenders himself to that. It molds in clay the statue to be carved in the marble real.—Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, Unitarian, Washington.

Cure For Worry.

Worry reduces our power of resistance. Hope is the best defense against a foe. The cure for worry is certain. There is no guess work. The prescription is not hard to take. Cultivate a personality. Get above merely trying to make a living and seek to make a life. Let some noble ambition thrill in your breast. Get out of doors in the fresh air. Consider the lilies of the field and by the chanting sea. To seek nothing but man's handiwork is enough to give a man the blues. Stop feasting at night and late hours, plan for seven or eight hours of healthful sleep, drink quarts of pure water daily, eat an abundance of plain food. Indigestion destroys more happiness and religion than atheism. Three-fourths of the worry of life is due to careless treatment of our bodies. Have a few good friends and yourself worthy of them. Many persons by neglect lose their choicest friendships. Read great books until their authors are your abiding companions. Look for the bright side of things. An advertisement appeared in a metropolitan paper: "Wanted—A companion; a Christian, preferably cheerful." A merry heart is a good medicine.—Rev. Dr. Charles Edward Locke, Methodist, Los Angeles, Cal.

STIFF JOINTS AND THEIR CURE.

Do you feel stiff and sore upon rising in the morning, and have you a rack of bottles of new-fangled liniment ornamenting your dressing table of chiffonier?

That old remedy, beloved of our grandmothers, goose grease—is still considered an excellent cure for stiff joints. Probably the friction and hard rubbing have more to do with the cure than the special variety of grease, and if the goose product is not at hand, hot vaseline, lard and sweet oil mixed, or even hot olive oil are excellent lubricators.

If the stiff joints come from rheumatism, internal remedies should be taken as well. Litha water will counteract the first tendencies, but should the pains continue it is best to consult a physician.

Should stiffness arise from overexertion, before rubbing with grease take a bath as hot as one can bear it. A few handfuls of rock salt added will heighten the good effects.

After bathing, special exercise for the joints affected help in the limbering process. If the shoulders are stiff, for instance, try the circular head and shoulder movements, first to the right, later to the left. The slower part of the back can be quickly limbered by raising the hands over the head and bending with them to the floor, thus bringing into play all the waist muscles.

A stiff knee should be rubbed with a circular movement, and the lower part of the leg should be moved backward and forward. Any *of these exercises may seem some*what painful at first, but will give relief if presevered in.

NATIVE HEADDRESS.

"One of the most interesting things that came under my observation was the odd manner in which the people wore their hair," said Dr. Harry Dorsey, describing a recent visit to New Guinea and the leading traits and characteristics of the inhabitants, known as Papuans. "One type wore the hair standing up from the head at a length of seven inches or more. It was trimmed with wonderful regularity and with mathematical accuracy. The hair was greased with cocoanut oil and painted red. At a distance it looked like a rising sun."

Another type of the inhabitants who wear their hair in an unusual fashion was described by Dr. Dorsey. "Starting from the forehead," he said, "the hair is brushed back over the scalp and hangs down to the waist. It is a perfect mass—an intricate jungle. I am sure it was never combed and it is impossible to run the fingers through it. At a distance it looks like a cap with the visor turned downward.

"One other odd type of hair dressing—coiffure, if you will—was observed on this visit. The hair was gathered at the front and back, then brought together above the head, where it was enclosed in a basket-like cylinder. The end spread out about two inches. Apparently these caps are never removed from the head."—Baltimore Sun.

The Horsemen.

The veterinary surgeon had pronounced the horse to be afflicted with an incurable disease.

"Well, sir," was the reply, "conscientiously speaking, I should part with 'im to another gentleman."—Ally Sloper's.

NEWARK MERCHANTS "GREAT WHITE WAY"

Owing to the success which has attended the brilliant street illuminating by merchants in the South Broad street section of the Newark retail shopping district two more organizations of business men have been formed and meetings will be held this week to arrange for similar permanent illumination of the northern section of Broad street and of the eastern and western sections of Market street.

When this has been accomplished Newark will have the best lighted business section of public streets in the country, extending north and south on Broad street and east and west on Market street, a distance of about two miles on the former and about a mile on the latter, in the form of a cross and embracing the section of the city in which are located the theatres, newspapers, cigar stores, leading cafes and ice cream and confectionery establishments and restaurants. The movement is regarded as a commercial awakening of the city and the municipal authorities will do all they can to encourage it. The lighting is done at the expense of the merchants.

CHILD HEROINE AT A FIRE.

Thelma Bowie, four years old, proved herself a little heroine at Trenton Sunday when she saved the life of one-year-old Walter Witters, by, put out a fire in his mother's house, and saved herself from being badly burned by jumping in the sink and turning on the water. Thelma happened in the house of the neighbor when the baby pulled over a bottle containing gasoline. A seven-year-old sister dropped a burning match in the gasoline, and the rug on which the baby was sitting began to blaze. Thelma grabbed the baby, took him out of doors, ran back and extinguished the rug by getting water from the sink. Her feet caught fire while doing this, and she climbed on a chair and jumped in the sink and turned the water on.

By this time the eleven-year-old sister of the baby had found the mother and brought her to the scene of action. She scolded Thelma for taking the baby out of doors. Then she petted her for turning on the water and saving the house from fire.

BURGLARS INVADE HOME OF ANDREW MATTIS.

Burglars entered the home of Andrew Mattis, at Fourth street and Arlington avenue, Sunday night, and made away with $50 belonging to John O'Brien, a boarder, and a gold watch and chain, the property of Mrs. Mattis. The loss was discovered when O'Brien returned home, Monday, being employed in the Public Service Corporation's night shift. Nothing else about the house was disturbed.

Detective-Sergeant Flynn was assigned to the case and is conducting an investigation. The manner in which the burglars forced entrance to the house has not been discovered.

Married in Synagogue.

In the presence of a large number of relatives and friends from this city and other places, Miss Fannie Rosenthal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Rosenthal, of Plainfield avenue, and David Robinson, son of Abraham Robinson, of Morristown, were married in the Children of Israel synagogue on New street, at 6 o'clock last night. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Ruthman assisted by Rabbi Davidson. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Plainfield Dancing Academy on West Front street. The young people will make their home at Morristown.

Sunday-School Officers Report.

Following the session of the Sunday school at Trinity Reformed church Sunday afternoon, the officers and teachers held a short meeting to receive the annual reports of the treasurer, Charles M. Dolliver, and the secretary, Chauncey F. Colthar. The treasurer's report showed a substantial balance on hand, and that of Mr. Colthar showed that there are 571 on the school roll of membership. The average attendance for the past year was 334. Yesterday's attendance was 402, excellent, considering the day.

Drying Kindling.

Some kindling wood placed on the stove to dry, in a rear room of Heberman's dairy Saturday night, created so much smoke as to alarm passersby. A still alarm brought the fire department whose prompt action averted a possible fire.

DR. BRUCE PREACHES FOR DR. CHAMBLISS

Rev. Dr. James M. Bruce, superintendent of foreign work for the Baptist denomination, occupied the pulpit at the First Baptist church Sunday morning, giving an account of his experiences with the foreigners when they arrive in this country. He reported steady progress in bringing the Gospel of Christ to these people and said that they are quick to respond to the appeals made.

Dr. Bruce took exception to the generally accepted theory that the foreigners coming to this country represent the dregs and scum of other countries. He contended that the majority of them make good citizens and are loyal. Without there foreigners, the speaker maintained that it would be impossible to build subways, tunnels and suspension bridges. In conclusion he told of the part being taken in this work by Baptists and made an urgent appeal for more united support.

JUNIOR MECHANICS ANSWER GOVERNOR

Councilor Grafton E. Day, of the Junior Mechanics today issued a circular letter condemning Governor Fort's proposition to divert the State's public school money for the other expenses of the State. The letter calls on members of the order to do all in their power to urge the Legislature to defeat the proposed scheme. The letter says in part:

"The excuse for this movement is the threatened imposition of the State tax. The State school tax will, however, necessarily be increased to every taxpayer in this State because of the cut in the annual appropriation to the schools above mentioned.

"It seems remarkable that the only suggestion for the avoidance of a State tax is to cut down school moneys. No retrenchment is suggested or recommended for any other department in the State. Why should the schools be asked to bear the whole burden? The friends of education should not be misled. The State tax can be avoided without modifying the principle of the act of 1906, or doing injustice to any one.

"The governor makes a severe attack upon the present law of this state, and proposed, dedicating to the schools the moneys from the tax from the main stem of the railroads over and above the amount theretofore received from the State from this source. This act received the unanimous approval of the State when passed. One illustration of its many benefits is to be seen in the governor's message.

"In 1905, he says, the district school tax raised locally for current purposes was $4,787,000; in 1909 the district school tax raised locally for current purposes is $2,730,000. Thus according to the governor's own showing, notwithstanding the increase in the number of children to be educated in four years the amount which the taxpayers of the school districts was required to raise for current school expenses decreased $2,055,000. This sum, is of course, made up by moneys from the railroad tax, which the governor proposes to take away from the local districts. In other words, this act, which the governor proposes to modify and ultimately repeal, has in one year 'according to his own showing saved the taxpayers of this State $2,055,000.' In addition to this it must be remembered that about half of the money due to the schools under this law has not yet been distributed. A bill has already been introduced for its distribution to the taxpayers of this State in full accordance with the law. Thus the full benefits of the act have not yet been felt."

WOMAN FALLS UPON UMBRELLA; PALATE TORN.

Mrs. Arthur Hopkins, of Buttzville slipped on a piece of ice while carrying a child in one arm and a closed umbrella under the other arm. In trying to save herself she twisted the umbrella so that the handle struck the pavement and the ferrule entered her mouth. She screamed as she felt herself falling. The furrule made a deep wound in the roof of her mouth and tore the soft palate so that several stitches were required to close the wound.

The accident happened several days ago, but Mrs. Hopkins still suffers great pain and experiences considerable difficulty in eating. It is hoped no permanent harm has been inflicted, but the physician is watching the case closely.

CIVILIZATION'S ADVANCE

THE WORLD IS PROGRESSING.

Considering the disagreeable weather there was a large congregation at Trinity Reformed church, Sunday, to hear Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer, representative of the "Foward Movement," tell of the urgent need of greater effort for the cause of foreign missions. He is a magnetic speaker and has almost an inexhaustible fund of knowledge concerning missions. He presented his subject in a business-like way and held the close attention of everyone.

At the outset he presented a vivid picture of the Crucifixion, adding that the cross of shame had now become a cross of glory, that today Christ is King throughout the world and is so recognized. He is King of Kings in the world and rulers and governments are measured by the standard of the yard stick of the sermon on the Mount. Christmas is now celebrated in Japan and the Bible is studied in every part of the globe.

"When my parents came from Holland to this country sixty years ago," continued Dr. Zwemer, "it required eighty days for the trip. Now one can make it in almost eighty hours. The world is constantly getting smaller when one realizes that the globe can be circled in sixty days, and the news of whole world is brought to your breakfast table each morning for one cent. We must not forget the great achievement of the wireless telegraph, the swee of the steam shovels at work in Panama and the commerce of the world is making all one vast neighborhood.

"We often hear people refer to the heathen world. You wouldn't call the Japanese a heathen people would you? Why, we send men there to learn ship building and military tactics. I say that Japan is the greatest intellectual centre in the world. There are more students there studying for the A. B. and A. M. than in any one country.

"China is also awakening with her 400,000,000 population and the morning light is breaking. A missionary recalled an interesting sign displayed in China, which read, English taught here." Compare our lives of selfishness with those of great sacrifice to be found in China and other foreign countries.

"India, which was tied up in water-tight compartments by castes, each one hating the other, is now open and today we find a national feeling there. Persia has also been stirred as never before, while in Arabia we find the Turks driving American spikes on Sunday and the revolution in Turkey has resulted in bringing thousands of people to Christ. When I was in Turkey one could not travel the distance between Newark and East Orange without a passport. Now the whole country is open through God's Providence. This is the day of God's power, the 'Forward Movement,' and the prospects for world evangelization is as bright as the Providences of God. Mission work is man's work, because it is a warfare. The 'Forword Movement' is on and its success depends upon the willingness of God's people to take it up. His Spirit is also moving in America. Last year there were 1,400 calls made ready to go to mission fields, but all could not be sent.

"There are 100,000 members of the Reformed Church in America and from this number the Board of Foreign Missions is trying to raise $225,000 a year. This should not be a difficult task. There are thirty or forty millionaires in the church living in New York and Newark, to say nothing of the wealthy farmers in the west, Long Island and New Jersey. Our church is not a poor church. Take the business proposition I bring before you. In Newark one man has for three years supported a missionary abroad at an expense of $700, equal to the pay of a trolley conductor in this country. Why cannot you do the same?

"It is expected that Paul Wilberforce Harrison, a graduate of John Hopkins University, will be appointed a foreign missionary and I would like to secure support for him in his work."

LINEMAN ELECTROCUTED WHILE WORKING ON POLE.

Killed in a twinkling by an electric current while he was at work on a twenty-five-foot pole, the body of Loyal W. Knower fell headforemost to the ground. The accident happened Friday night near the Linden Township plant of the Standard Oil Company. Knower who was in the employ of the company as an electrician, was thirty years old. He lived at 100 Prince street, Elizabeth, with his wife and a child, who were summoned from Waverly, N. Y., where they had been visiting.

For several years Mr. Knower was a wire inspector for the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company.

BIG TOURING CARS COLLIDE IN A FOG

A large touring car owned by Howard Colby, in which he was accompanied by Mrs. Colby and Mr. and Mrs. F. V. L. Jones, also of Evergreen avenue, collided with another big auto on the Springfield road, near Cranford, Saturday afternoon. Mr. Colby's car was damaged to such an extent that it had to be taken to Martin's garage on Park avenue. The other auto was able to proceed. None of the occupants of the two cars was injured, it is said.

The accident occured in a dense fog. It being impossible for the driver of either machine to see more than a few feet ahead. It is understood that the occupants of the other car were from Newark and were on their way home. The Plainfielders were returning from Orange.

CHAIRMANSHIP FOR CHARLES N. FOWLER

If Charles N. Fowler, of Elizabeth, retains the chairmanship of the Committee on Banking and Currency in the next Congress, it will be due to the magnanimity of Speaker Cannon, according to a dispatch from Washington. Mr. Fowler has not been in accord with the Speaker in financial matters for two or three years, and yet he was reappointed to the chairmanship of the committee in the present Congress. When the question of passing a bill to meet the situation resulting from the financial stringency a year ago came up, Mr. Fowler had certain ideas which he was anxious to have adopted. Members of the committee disagreed with him, and his plan was at variance with that of the Speaker.

Shortly after the election in November Mr. Fowler announced that he was a candidate for Speaker. There are members of Congress who felt that this was equivalent to butting against a stonewall, yet Mr. Fowler made an active canvass among some of his colleagues, but it does not look as though he would have very many votes if he should permit his name to go before the Republican caucus.

In some circles the course of Mr. Fowler is considered wise, but it would appear that he has his own ideas relative to what he wants, and if he fails to get the chairmanship again it will be his own fault entirely.

Mr. Fowler spoke the other evening at the regular quarterly dinner of the Board of Commerce to a large audience. Mr. Fowler thrust many a keen shaft at bankers in general, which went home and were appreciated by those members of the fraternity. But just to show that they bore him no ill will for exposing a vim a motion of Major Ford H. Rogers, at the close of the evening, that the assemblage recommend to President Taft that he make Mr. Fowler his secretary of the treasury.

SOME DON'TS FOR THE YOUNG MOTHER.

Don't kiss the baby.

Don't handle the baby unless your hands are very, very clean.

Don't talk, breathe, whistle, blow, cough or sneeze into the baby's face. We want him to live.

Don't use your handkerchief to baby's hands, face or mouth.

Don't allow a child to be continually eating between meals. If you do, the chances are that very soon his digestion will be ruined.

Don't forget that a child is sometimes persistently naughty simply because he is so tired that his poor little nerves are all on edge.

Don't punish a child one moment and kiss and pet him the next, unless he comes to you penitently and begs forgiveness. This quite does away with the good of the punishment.

Don't be impatient with the children when they ask questions, provided they are sensible ones, but try and answer them comprehensively and to the best of your ability. If you don't know the answer yourself, tell them so. This is far better than trying to put them off.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Cleaning the Mesh Purses.

Care must be taken to keep these purses and bags in good condition, else they will soil the clothes, to say nothing of their bad appearance.

These bags will grow dull in time, but they can be cleaned without removing the silk lining. Put the bag or purse into a saucer and cover it with ammonia, brush it with a small hair brush and wash in a suds containing bluing. Rinse many times to free the silk from strong ammonia, draw the silk up at the top and let the bag dry in the sun. Do not use hot water. A gold meshed bag can be cleaned in the same manner.

Will Repeat Entertainment.

The recent entertainment given by the Baraca class of the West End Tabernacle will be repeated at the meeting of Martha Washington council, D. of A., on February 27. The Crab orchestra, which made such a hit on the previous occasion, will furnish a new program of selections.

RE-OPEN THEIR EDIFICE

Crescent Ave. Congregation Gathers for Worship in Beautified Church.

REV. DR. RICHARDS SPEAKS.

Two great congregations attended the re-opening of Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday, morning and evening, filling the edifice to the doors. During the period the building has been closed, the interior has undergone a complete change and in addition there has been added a magnificent pipe organ, the gift of Mrs. Charles Hyde, in memory of her husband. A description of the improvements has already been published in this paper.

A notable feature of the night service was an address by Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, a former minister now pastor of the Brick church, New York. Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, the pastor, spoke briefly in relation to the re-opening, commending the generosity of the members, which had made possible the improvements, and praising the skill of the architect in producing such wonderful results. He said that there were but three things which had been left unchanged, the pulpit, communion table and collection plates. These magic plates had brought forth an abundance of gold in the past, he said, and hoped they would continue to exercise a similar influence.

The minister referred to Dr. Richard's pastorate here as being similar to that of David, who created the necessity for a great tabernacle to God. To this Dr. Richards replied, in his address, that he was unlike David, in that he had returned to view the completion of the edifice.

Continuing, Dr. Richards related an incident when Dwight L. Moody visited this city a quarter of a century ago. It was on a Sunday morning. Walking up the avenue as the church bell was ringing and a great stream of people was pouring in at the door, he had stopped to admire the sight, exclaiming: "Beautiful, beautiful." Dr. Richards declared that no prettier location could have been selected for a church. During his pastorate he had longed for the opportunity to make the inside as beautiful as the outside, but the other work being carried on at the time already taxed the resources of the church to the utmost. Sometimes the desire had been almost unbearable, and it was a trial that he had been called away before its accomplishment. It was, therefore, with a feeling of envy that he learned that another had accomplished the work, but enviousness had now given place to gratitude.

"But it is not in spirit of complacency that we come here; it is not to admire the beautiful building," he said. "We come in a spirit of worship. The true temple of God is the human heart."

A special musical program was rendered by a choir comprising Mrs Virginia Wilson, soprano; Miss Grace Carroll, contralto; Herbert Taylor, tenor; and James Stanley, bass, under the direction of William P. Dunn, organist. The selections were "Gullmant," anthem, "Appear Thou Light Divine;" offertory, Traumerel," Schumann; anthem, "Ho! Everyone that Thirsteth," Martin; postlude, "Marche Pontilcale," Lemmens.

In the morning there was a musical program and communion service. Twenty-one new members were received by letter and nine on profession of faith. Rev. Dr. Zelie was in charge of the service and assiting him were Rev. Lawrence R. Howard, Rev. John O. McKelvey and Rev. F D. Waldon.

The new organ of the Crescent Avenue church was built by the Ernest M. Skinner Company, of Boston, with Archer Gibson, of New York, as consulting expert. It embodies the latest methods of organ construction and no pains have been spared to make it the finest and most complete instrument in this section of the country. The action and motor power is electric. There are four manuals, the swell, the great, the choir and solo organs, and an echo organ in the roof of the church. There are forty-two speaking stops, which are readily controlled by the adjustable combination buttons (14 in number). The organ is equipped with three balance pedals, crescendo pedal, sporzando pedal and a radiating pedal board. A full set of chimes is being installed in the echo organ. The diapason stops are unusually rich and brilliant in quality. There are many stops of great beauty, such as the "unda maris," the concert flute, the orchestral oboe and, especially, the dulcet (brilliant string quality) in the echo organ. These make possible beautiful and varied orchestral effects. The body of the organ is built on two sides of the pulpit, but the stops are so distributed as to produce admirable balance and blending of tone.

UNION COUNTY MAY OPPOSE BOULEVARD

Unless it be allowed to pay its share out of the fund now appropriated by the State for State aid roads, Union county is against the Ocean Boulevard proposition suggested by Governor Fort September 3 last. This statement was made today by one of the officers of the Board of Freeholders. He said that Union county will oppose the Ocean Boulevard scheme if the State pays for the building of the highway, but is in favor of the proposition if it is to be paid for by the various counties. This stand is taken because if the State paid for the building of the road it would deplete the fund out of which the State appropriates sums to help the various counties build State aid roads.

The Ocean Boulevard scheme is the plan to build a road from Atlantic Highlands to Cape May, linking together all the New Jersey coast resorts, and also by a single road, system link all the inland towns of the State from county seat to county seat.

JOSEPH V. FARLEE STRICKEN BY DEATH

Stricken with heart failure while he was engaged in loading crates on his wagon at the Sunswick Poultry Farm, near South Plainfield, Saturday night, Joseph Vincent Farlee, one of the city's best known expressmen, sank to the ground unconscious and died within a few minutes. Rufus Delafield, proprietor of the place, and several assistants, carried the lifeless form to the house and summoned Dr. Frederick Hughes but he was beyond all aid before the message was sent. The physician declared the primary cause of death to be a rupture of the cardiac muscle.

Mr. Farlee had been engaged by Mr. Delafield to move some prize poultry exhibits from the farm to the Lehigh Valley depot at South Plainfield and was engaged in the task about 8 o'clock when stricken. It is believed that exertion in lifting heavy crates is what brought on the attack. Only a few minutes before he fell to the ground, Mr. Farlee remarked that he had never driven to South Plainfield again on such a foggy, disagreeable night.

Following the arrival of Dr. Hughes and his declaration that life was extinct, Coroner Harrison was called here from Perth Amboy and granted a burial permit. The body was later removed to the man's late home at 56 Grandview avenue.

Joseph Vincent Farlee was a native of Middlesex county but had lived in the city or borough practically all his life. He was fifty years old and for a long time had been engaged in the baggage and express business. He was considered the leader in this line, having built up an extensive trade to which he gave his entire personal attention. By nature, he was of a very cheerful disposition and he had hosts of friends in all parts of the city. He is survived by a wife, one daughter, Miss Mabel Farlee, and a son, Joseph Farlee, Jr. He also leaves two brothers, Harry Farlee, of Pearl street, and Milton Farlee, living in North Carolina.

TO END HORSE STEALING.

Chester, Morris County, Leads in Organizing Farmers and Owners Into Vigilance Committees.

Horse thieves have been operating in every section of New Jersey so freely of late, and particularly in the northern end of the State, that the movement has been begun for the formation of vigilance committees in every county of the State to co-operate with the police. The first one was formed last week in Chester, Morris county, and one arrest has already been made there. The man is locked up in the Morris county jail, at Morristown, on the technical charge of stealing an overcoat. The man says he has been in this country about four years and that until recently he lived in Scranton, Pa.

Circulars have been sent out by the Chester organization to police throughout the State asking that special effort be devoted to the detection and arrest of horse thieves. In addition to this the necessary steps are being taken to form similar organizations of farmers and other horse owners throughout the State.

ACKERMAN WILL TAKE TIME.

Not Prepared as Yet to Oppose Fort's Tax Scheme of Elizabeth.

Senator Ernest H. Ackerman has written Superintendent of Schools Richard E. Clement, of Elizabeth, that it will be necessary for him to consider Governor Fort's plan to reduce the school funds by diverting the tax from second class railroad property to other channels before he can act in the matter. Mr. Clement requested the Union Senator to oppose the scheme.

"I have a high regard for the public schools," said Mr. Ackerman, "for they gave me my education, but I am not ready to decide this matter off-hand."

TO CELEBRATE CENTENARY

Citizens Committee Effects Organization for Observance of Lincoln's Birthday.

COMMITTEES ARE APPOINTED.

Alexander Gilbert, Chairman Executive; A. E. Force, Merchants, and Rev. A. C. McCrea, Speakers.

Plainfield will vie with its sister cities in New Jersey in honoring the memory of the Martyr-President, the represen ative citizens of the community having responded to the call of the mayor to arrange for a formal tribute to be paid on the occasion of the centenary of Abraham Lincoln's birthday. Organization was effected and the working committees appointed at a meeting held at the mayor's offices on Saturday night. Only a few of the committee of thirty-five were absent and these in sending regrets at their inability to attend warmly endorsed the proposed celebration.

Mayor Fisk presided and after William S. Tyler consented to serve as secretary pro tem in the absence of Ralph L. Morrow, who had been appointed secretary of the general committee, there was a lengthy general discussion of plans. Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert was named as chairman of the executive committee and his colleagues are Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, Dr. Henry C. Kreps, Captain William C. Smith, Dr. James R. Joy, Dr. Henry M. Maxson and Rev. Bernard M. Bogan. The speakers' committee consists of Rev. Dr. Abel C. McCrea and the other members are George P. Mellick and Judge William Newcorn. A. E. Force is chairman of the merchants' committee with H. W. Marshall and James F. Buckle as his fellow workers.

The observance will take place at the First Baptist church on Friday afternoon, February 12. The edifice will be appropriately decorated. As for the program, it will not be announced until the next meeting of the general committee. The speakers' committee has in mind several notable men but it is a question whether any one of them can be obtained at this late date.

A committee will wait on Joel Stewart, who has one of the finest collections of Lincoln relics in the world, to request its loan for exhibition either at the high school or at the church.

The merchants will be asked to close their stores all day on February 12 as a mark of respect. There will be no sessions of the public schools on that day.

Queen Maud of Norway keeps a scrapbook bearing the inscription on the cover, "Things We Have Not Said and Done," in which she has pasted newspaper cuttings giving stories about herself and her husband which have their foundation only in the imagination of enterprising journalists. It is said, too, that among the German Crown Prince's most treasured possessions is a scrapbook containing over 5,000 pages of adverse newspaper criticism. The first 500 pages are inscribed with a gold lettered heading "I hope I am not like this!" while some of the most out-spoken comments are accompanied by marginal notes in the Prince's own handwriting—such as, "The enemy's voice is no less interesting than the friends," etc.

THEIR EDIFICE BEAUTIFUL

Description of Costly Improvements at Crescent Ave. Presbyterian Church.

WAS REOPEND ON SUNDAY.

Expensive Pipe Organ—Ornate Pulpit—Quartered-Oak Stalls—English Exposed Trusses.

The entire interior of the Crescent Ave. Presbyterian church has undergone a complete renovation and decorative treatment; so much so, in fact, that there are a few traces of the old church still remaining, excepting the pews and the old gallery rail. It was used for worship again for the first time in months last Sunday.

For several years the congregation has contemplated beautifying the edifice, and at different times suggestions for decorative schemes and alterations have been submitted to them. Dr. J. S. Zellie, the minister, and members of the congregation by a number of well-known architects and decorators. It was, however, finally decided to hold a competition and several firms of architects were invited to submit plans.

The church decorating committee wisely engaged the services of Professor A. D. F. Hamlin, professor of architecture at Columbia University, to act with them in making the award and the firm of James E Ware & Sons, of New York, was selected. Its plans have been executed almost exactly as originally contemplated.

Soon after the award had been made the family of Louis K. Hyde offered to present the church with a handsome new organ as a memorial to their late Charles L. Hyde. This beautiful gift was immediately accepted by the congregation and at once included in the decorative scheme, adding greatly to the richness and architectural treatment of the interior. The instrument as constructed by the celebrated organ builder, Ernest M. Skinner, of Boston, is divided into three parts. The great, the swell and the echo organ, and is one of the finest which has been turned out of his works.

Among the important features of the changes in the interior of the church is the introduction of old English exposed trusses with their tracery, carrying the lines of the interior up to the roof ridge. These trusses are entirely of chestnut, showing a handsome grain and have been given an antique wax walnut color. Under the ends of each truss are dignified Norman columns. The pulpit niche has been raised in height and beautifully treated in Old Norman architecture executed in Caen stone. On the back wall of the church is a handsome lacquered gold plaque framed with a rich ecclesiastical painted border. Upon the plaque is stenciled in glass mosaic the symbols Alpha and Omega, and a text from the New Testament.

Five new handsome Gothic pulpit stalls executed in black walnut fill the remainder of the niche directly under the plaque. The centre stall will be occupied by the minister of the church. The other four stalls will be occupied by the ministers of the Warren, Bethel and Hope chapels, and the missionary minister, Changteh, Hunan, China. Each stall bears a beautiful bronze inscription plate.

A complete new lighting scheme has been introduced, adding greatly to the beauty of the interior. From the ends of each truss hang cast bronze electroliers, made from original designs, and carrying out the combined Gothic and Romanesque intermingling of style. Around each fixture is placed eighteen amber tinted incandescent lights, producing a soft, mellow glow. The fixtures under the gallery and in the vestibules and staircases leading to the gallery are carried out in harmony with the large electroliers and the effect when illuminated is very churchly. All the side walls and gable ends of the church have been treated with glazed colors to represent old mediæval stone work. All the electroliers, organ pipes and plaque in pulpit niche have been finished in dull antique gold. The new windows, throughout the entire interior, have been executed in simple amber glass, producing an effect of warm sunlight within, on the grayest of winter days.

The woodwork, throughout, has been kept in harmony with the present finish and not even the gallery rail escaped the change. The church floor has been covered completely with fine quality quartered oak. Down the aisles will be carried strips of handsome Wilton carpet of a soft olive green color and the gallery will be covered entirely with carpet to correspond. The pews have been re-cushioned, throughout, with fine hair cushions covered with a soft olive green Venetian plush. The effect of the color scheme is extremely quiet but very rich and dignified, the aim being to produce quiet, restful effects.

Renovations have also been undertaken in the church vestibules, Sunday-school section, and other parts of the building, but the chief point of interest is, of course, the interior of the church proper.

The decorating committee, the trustees and Rev. Dr. Zellie, have worked most earnestly to produce a successful result and they have cooperated with the architects and the decorators in every way possible, to attain these ends. The work has been somewhat slower in reaching completion than was originally hoped but considering the work which had to be done and the quality of the final result it is believed that the delays were justifiable.

The Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church when entirely completed in its small detail will be one of the most interesting and successful of church interiors, considering the amount appropriated and the fact that it is an alteration to an old building which naturally limits the architect in a great measure.

Among the many firms who have contributed to producing the finished result were the Decorative Arts Company, of New York, represented by O. E. Pape, for many years with the Tiffany Studio; all the interior carpentery work and the large trusses were installed by Rimmer, Apear & Cuzner, of this city; the mason work was executed by B. F. Tallamy & Brother, of this city; the electric work was installed by Edwin A. Craig, of this city; the electrical and the gas fixtures were made by the Chase Company, of New York city; all the windows, throughout, were installed by Duffner & Kimberly, of New York city; the carpets were furnished by W. & J. Sloane, of New York city; the pew cushions by Sperry & Beal, of New York city; the pulpit stalls, communion chairs, hymn boards, etc., were installed by R. Geissler, of New York, from designs by the architects.

UNION ASSEMBLYMEN OPPOSE FORT'S PLAN.

Assemblymen Pierce and Kirstein have made known their positions with reference to the Governor's plan to drag upon the main steem railroad taxes for State purposes. While neither lawgiver is ready to go into details as to the stand he will take when the matter is brought into the Legislature, both admit that they are in opposition to the proposed change.

Senator Ackerman has the plan under consideration, but he is not prepared to define his attitude with the situation in its present stage of development.

LEGS CRUSHED BY TRAIN

Bayonne Young Man Fell Asleep on Freight Car and Was Jolted Off.

CRIES ATTRACTED PATROLMAN.

Removed to Muhlenberg Hospital Where Physicians Amputate Both Limbs—Will Recover.

Patrolman Arthur McGinley walked over from South Second street to Grant avenue station to meet the 3:35 a. m. train Tuesday, when his attention was attracted by calls for help coming from up the track. He hastened in their direction and a few hundred feet west of the depot, discovered George Ferguson, 22 years old, of No. 27 Fourth street, Bayonne, lying between the rails. Both legs had been crushed just above the ankles and he was in a serious condition from loss of blood and exposure.

McGinley hurried to the home of Frederick Thompson at 913 West Front street, where he telephoned for the police patrol and physicians. As he was returning to the railroad he encountered Drs. Pittis, Clawson and Lafuente, who had been answering sick calls and who accompanied him to the injured man. Ferguson was given temporary treatment pending his removal to Muhlenberg Hospital where the legs were amputated by Drs. Clawson and Elliott Hedges. The amputation at noon today was considered good although he is in a very weak state.

Ferguson retained consciousness up to the time of the operation and told the police and physicians that his plight was due to falling from a freight train. He had been to Allentown, Pa., he said, and was on his way home when the accident occurred.

Ferguson continued that he had dropped off to sleep somewhere near Somerville and that a sudden jolt just before Grant avenue was reached caused him to roll down the sloping roof of the car. He attempted to catch hold of the edge but his hands were numbed by the cold and their brief grasp only served to swing him down between the couplings. The wheels of one car passed over his legs after which he managed to pull himself to one side. He was unable to state how long he had remained on the ground before McGinley found him.

Word was sent to his relatives and several of them visited the hospital shortly before noon.

TEMPORARY QUARTERS FOR WEST END PUPILS.

In response to the demand for school accommodations for the small children in the west end section, the Board of Education has rented the large room on the east side of the McVey Hotel building, West Front street, near Clinton avenue, in which one or more classes will be started for the small children for whom the walk to the Irving school is too long.

At present, one class will be started and the children in the west end, north of the railroad, who are now in the first grade in the Irving, will be transferred to that class, and others who have not yet begun school will be invited to attend. Some of those south of the track and west of Clinton avenue will probably also be transferred to this class, in order to shorten their walk to the school.

The Board is now fitting up the room and hopes to open the class on February 3. Plans for the proposed new school are being made and the present arrangement is only a temporary one.

TO SERVE WINE AT LINCOLN DINNER.

Considerable feeling has been engendered over the fact that wine will be served at the Lincoln centenary dinner at Springfield, Ill., on February 12, at which addresses are to be delivered by Ambassadors Jusserand and Bryce, Robert T. Lincoln, William J. Bryan, Senator J. Duff Polderer, Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, Senator Shelby M. Cullom, General John W. Noble and others.

Despite protests by the Local Option Law Enforcement League and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in which they declare that Abraham Lincoln refused to permit wine to be served when he was informed of his Presidential nomination, and that to serve wine at his centennial would be an "insult to his memory," the committee empowered to decide this question met last night and ignored the protests.

For the Sake of Business.

A country woman was taking her son to school for the first time and after impressing the schoolmaster with the necessity of giving him a thoroughly good education, finished up by saying:

"Be sure he learns Latin."

"But, my dear woman," said the schoolmaster, "Latin is a dead language."

"So much the better," replied the woman. "Ye ken he's gaun tae be an undertaker."—Tit-Bits.

An Accepted Story.

"Surely not!" was the rejoinder.

ITALIAN MISSION PLANS

REV. MR. MELINO IN CHARGE.

Young People's Societies of Evangelical Church Support the Mission, Which Is in a Prosperous Condition.

The annual meeting of the Italian Mission of Plainfield was held Monday when officers for the year were elected and a resume of the work presented. Rev. Lewis Bond was chosen chairman; Herbert E. Parker, vice-chairman; Miles Roberts, treasurer and Clarence LaRue, secretary. These officers comprise the executive committee.

As treasurer, Miles Roberts gave a summary of the first year's work. This stated that Antonio Melino, formerly a Roman Catholic priest, but now a Protestant clergyman, was engaged at a salary of $30 a month to spend one-half of his time in work here among Italians. Fourteen young people's societies in the various churches pledged $15 each toward paying his salary up to January 1, 1909.

After Mr. Melino had worked several months in houses to house visitation, the need for a meeting place became apparent. A store on East Third street, next to the Temple Baptist church, was leased at a rental of $12. Chairs, tables and other necessary supplies were purchased. The rental of this room is paid by the young people's societies just as covers Mr. Melino's salary and the executive committee has raised the balance, about $100 to settle accounts. The new year was started free of debt.

For the coming year $600 is needed. This will cover Mr. Melino's salary of $360; rent of meeting place, $144; fuel, $10; janitor service, $12 and $74 for sundry supplies and incidental expenses.

Aside from the house to house visitation by Mr. Melino he has established a class which meets Sunday morning for religious instruction. The attendance has varied from one or two to eight or ten on Sunday. Educational classes were conducted through the autumn five evenings a week and were attended by from six to fifteen men. Now Mr. Melino has given up his classes in Italian, as the men prefer English and practically all his time is spent in work in the homes of the Italians, where he gives religious instruction where he can.

It is said by Mr. Roberts that the Italians appreciate this work. Edcational classes are conduced by Mr. Cubberly, a graduate of Brown University. The Y. M. C. A. has lent a square piano for the meeting-room. Several of the Italians are good musicians and play various instruments, and they are reached through their love of music. An impromptu entertainment was recently given, after which Mr. Bond and Mrs. Roberts gave a religious talk suggested by the music. There were thirteen Italians present and when some one suggested that they all join in some native folk song it developed that they spoke different dialects so that only some four or five could join in the same one. Plans are then made to each English songs, and to Americanize and Christianize them as fast as possible at the same time.

FOR FALSE ARREST ASK $5,000 DAMAGES.

Robert S. White and Mary White, his wife, have begun suit in the Supreme Court through their attorney, Frank Pfaff, against William H. Van Buskirk, an engineer in the Aeolian factory, of Garwood. The suit is for $5,000, the damage which White claims he suffered through malicious imprisonment.

Van Buskirk was the man who caused the sensation in the Aeolian factory several months ago by losing $1,085, which he carried in his pocketbook, $800 of which he was afterward found in the coal bin of the plant. White was an employe in the plant at the time the money was missed and was arrested on a charge of stealing it preferred against him by Van Buskirk.

White was locked in jail for several hours and when he obtained a hearing before Judge Toucey, of Westfield, the case against him was quashed. White now claims $5,000 for the damages that he suffered while in jail.

Meeker—Great Scott, man! You don't call that kind, do you?—Chicago News.

MEET, COURT, MARRY ALL IN THE SAME DAY

Scene I.

Railway station, Jersey City—stylishly dressed man sees a comely young woman burdened with two suit cases when one would have been as much as she could handle. When a real man would do in such a case is obvious.

Scene II.

Parlor car on Jersey Central Railway—The car may have been crowded with passengers but those in seats number 23 and 25 were oblivious to everything except themselves. The conductor collects two tickets, both reading: "Philadelphia," but what happens?

Scene III.

Justice Hand's office, Philainfield—"Do you take this woman to be your lawfully wedded wife, etc?" "I do."

De Lancey Fremont Nichols, who said he was a theatrical man, of Philadelphia, age forty-two, was married to Miss Annabel Croal, age twenty-six, of Jersey City, by Justice Hand Saturday. They were unattended. The groom explained that it was a chance acquaintance and that he had been on his way to Philadelphia to spend Sunday at home. The bride was a Jersey City girl and en route to Philadelphia to visit friends. Cupid stepped in and took charge of the situation, with the result that the couple decided to stop at Plainfield and be married.

That there might not be any hitch to take about the legality of the marriage the groom consulted Counselor W. G. De Meza. The fact that the bride was a resident of the State made possible the marriage at such short notice.

Brotherhood Active Again.

Following the morning service at the First M. E. church Sunday, Nelson A. Miller, president of the Brotherhood, called a meeting of the men to consider plans for greater activity. For some time the Brotherhood has been doing nothing of special interest, allowing the other societies of the church to provide entertainment. Several plans were suggested and another meeting will be held soon to decide on an entertainment.

THE SACRED TREE.

Woodman, spare that tree!
Touch not a single bough;
It has lovers dear to me.
And I'll protect it now.
'Neath it a hammock hung,
And there, when it was hot
I often gladly swung;
Thy ax shall harm it not.

Beneath that spreading tree
One in a grassy gown
Oft sauntered close to me
And let her feet hang down;
Woodsman, forbear to hack!
'Twas here a lovely maid
First dared to call me Jack,
As carelessly we swayed.

When I was free from care
And she was trim and slim,
We often dangled there
Beneath yon spreading limb.
'Twas there that first she laid
Her hand within my hand
And ceased to be afraid.
Pray, woodman, let it stand.

Harm not that sturdy oak;
One night—I mind it well—
The rope, grown fragile, broke,
And in a limp we fell.
She put the blame on me,
And said she'd have me not.
So, woodman, spare the tree;
This is a sacred spot.

"Yes, sir, but it would be pretty expensive."

"Yes, sir."

"What do you call it?"

"A wig, sir."

"Yes, of course."

"Well, those are the good fish we advertise. What are you kicking about?"—Chicago Tribune.

Percy and Harold

They Visited the County Fair But Didn't Enjoy It

The hoboes were sitting beneath a tree on the edge of a grove daintily eating their evening meal. On a stump between them was a can of coffee, from which they alternately drank, and close by was a bundle of cold-hearted sandwiches they had begged along the route.

"How extremely fortunate we were, Harold," remarked one of the tramps, picking up a piece of the dry bread and raking a roasted potato from the fire. "In securing the services of our French chef. Since he has had charge of our kitchen our table has been the envy of all our society friends, and I swear the Wally de Geezers said they never more thoroughly enjoyed a dinner than at our last week-end—"

"Well, I should just guess they did, Percy," was the flippant interjection of Harold, who was wading deep into the lacquet. "They must have thought it was politicians' day at the almshouse from the way they tanked up on the grub. I'll bet a hundred that Wally gained 15 pounds before he left the table, and as for Mrs. Wally—"

"Don't, Harold! Don't!" interposed Percy with a horrified expression. "You distress me dreadfully. You should be more guarded in your speech with reference to our guests. I will admit that both Wally and dear Mrs. De Geezer did eat very heartily, but I rather regarded it as a compliment to our incomparable Henri. Isn't this pomme de terre fullenne exquisite? It is positively the best I ever tasted, and as for these haricot verts—"

"Henri is all right," responded Harold, clawing another piece of bread from the bundle, "but I think the dod-blasted chump would smear more butter on these sandwiches. They are almost as bad as the sandwiches you get at the quick lunch foundries where they think that butter comes from the Klondike. Chuck us over that coffee can!"

"You are positively insufferable, Harold," protested Percy in a voice that was almost tearful. "How you would shame me by your vulgar remarks if we had heard you use the term coffee instead of demitasse! Good will be very well for the ordinary people, but you should consider your station in life and speak accordingly. I trust you will remember this in the future and also be more circumspect in your manner."

"No, thank you, dear boy," said Harold, arising and picking up his hat when he saw that Percy had devoured the last crust of bread and the last potato. "I don't care for it. In fact, I have been too well served. Since we have no engagement for tonight, I think I will smoke this cigar stump which my friend Algernon so kindly tossed from his automobile, and then retire."

As soon as it was dark the tramps started for an adjacent barn, but when they arrived at their destination *they found that the cautious own*ers had locked all the doors. Outside, however, was a large wagon, filled with loose straw, and into this they quickly crawled. Ten minutes later they were fast asleep.

On the following morning they were awakened by the sound of ragtime music and merry voices, and crawling out of the straw, were astonished to find themselves at a county fair. Percy glanced at Harold and Harold glanced at Percy, and then a rude farmer broke into their society.

"What in ther thunderation are you dod-blasted hoboes doin' in the straw?" demanded the farmer person. "Can't I bring a load o' beddin' ter ther fair for the race horses without cartin' around a lot of gosh-hanged tramps? I s'pose ye thought ye would hide in ther straw an' git in without payin', jest—"

"Pardon me, fellow," naughtily interjected Percy, "You are unnecessarily agitated. We had no intention of coming to the fair, nor do we now have any desire to remain and mingle with a people who have no place in our exclusive set. It is only by the accident of chance that we are here, and if my friend Harold will give me his arm we will retire at once. As for the term 'hoboes' that you applied to us, I will have you understand that—"

"Go wash your face!" brutally broke in the farmer. "Ye look a derned sight worse than a hog what has rooted all the way across a ten-acre lot. I guess I know what ye sneaked in here for, an' now that ye are here ye've got ter stay, be gosh! an' work yer out. Sam, take these two strangers in hand and make 'em clear out ther stables an' carry water for ther hosses all day. If they git gay, souse 'em with a garden hose."

The person addressed as Sam was only too willing to have additional help, and all day long the hoboes were compelled to clean out stables, carry water and rub down race horses. When evening drew apace they were liberated, and lost no time hiking for the nearest woods.

"O, Harold!" groaned Percy, in a heartbroken tone, "I think I shall die! I was never so disgraced in all my life! Just think of being compelled to clean stables like a lot of menials! What will the Wally de Geezers say when they hear of it?"

"That's all right, sweetheart," soothingly replied the sunny Harold. "We shall tell the Wall de Geezers that we had our racing stable at the county fair, and instead of acquiring habits doing lowly work they will pat us on the back for playing at a fad."

OBJECTS OF EDUCATION

SHOULD LOVE GOOD BOOKS.

Education Must Reach the Head, the Heart and the Hand, He Says.

The second of the series of parents' meetings in the borough schools was held in the Somerset building Friday. The attendance was large and the interest very manifest. Charles W. McCutchen gave an excellent address, setting forth some of the objects that should be sought in the education of children. He said in part:

"One of the least desirable things to seek for our children is wealth. It is far better for the boy to gain the discipline of striving for his own advancement than to have everything provided for him. If the oak were put into the green house where it would be constantly sheltered, it would not thrive; but place it out in the open, and every storm will cause it to plant its roots down deeper into the earth, and make its limbs stronger to resist the winter blasts.

"Of all vocations in life, that of the teacher is the most noble. The minister is a teacher. Christ was a teacher. Teach your children to love books. Let them be worn out with much reading. Give the children great thoughts for their constant companionship. Teach refinement in your home. It takes no more effort to say 'Thank you,' to your child for a favor than to say it to a king.

"Watch the atmosphere of your home. The janitor, on coming into the green house, looks immediately at the thermometer. If it does not show the proper temperature he starts at once for the furnaces or opens the windows. So children in the home thrive best in an aumosphere of love and affection. Parents can create such atmosphere, and should most carefully maintain it.

"Education should reach the head, the heart and the hand. Our homes would be more comfortable today if every girl were required to take a thorough course in domestic science, and our boys in manual training.

"Make a comrade of your boy. Spend much time with him in the spirit of companionship. Give the boy and girl a chance. Open all possible opportunities for them. If possible provide for the education of the children of the poor. Such investment will bring in great results in happiness and accomplishment."

SUGGESTS ETHICAL CODE FOR SCHOOL TEACHERS.

The teachers of the city and borough gathered at the Somerset school Thursday afternoon and listened to a lecture by O. I. Woodley, superintendent of Passaic schools, under the title "Professional Growth." He believed that the teachers should have a code of ethics, just as is found among physicians, as teaching was as much a profession as the practice of medicine.

The relations between the teachers and the superintendent should develope in courtesy, he said, and the teachers' attitude toward the pupils should be considerate. In speaking of the development of character, Mr. Woodley said that what would be considered ideal, in one locality, would not be in another. Defining character, he said that the best one is that which embodies the greatest number of ideals in the circumstances in which that one lives.

Mourning Costume.

Not necessarily must one leave fashion lines from a mourning dress. One of the most becoming dresses imaginable was a high-waisted one made entirely of black crepe over dull black silk. It was slightly en train and was worn with a long directoire coat of black broadcloth trimmed with crepe. The hat was a small style, the brim uplifted at the left side, with a graceful veil arrangement that decorated the hat from the front to the back and fell to the shoulders. The slashed hip seams of the coat were joined with dull cord trimming.

Would Please Br'er Mule.

"What's the matter with him, uncle?" asked the traveler.

"That so? Why don't you build a fire under him?"

"What?- A fire under dat mule! Lands, mister, if Ah built a fire under dat mule he'd stay here all day en wahm hisself."—Chicago News.

ENDS LIFE WITH BULLET

SLEEPING BABES IN ROOM.

Wife and Brother-in-Law Driven Out by Crazed Man, Summon Police, Who Arrive to Find Him Dead.

George Newmiller, a mechanic, living at 86 Summit avenue, fired a bullet into his own head Wednesday about 10:45 and died instantly. In the room with him at the time were his two babies, asleep in bed. His wife had just gone downstairs to call for help, for her husband had already threatened to kill himself and had the revolver in his hand at the time. His brother-in-law, Louis Casenove, who lives on the floor below, rushed upstairs and confronted Newmiller, who pointed the gun at him and shouted, "Get out of here and leave me alone." Casenove pleaded with him but seeing he was determined, withdrew. As he ran downstairs he heard the gun snap. It had missed fire. But he had hardly got out the door when the shot was fired which ended Newmiller's life. Casenove hurried to the borough police station. Chief George Weiss and Marshal John Reitman went immediately to the house, after notifying Dr. Pittis, who responded, arriving there shortly afterwards.

Death had been instantaneous however. The bullet from a rusty old .38 caliber revolver had entered the temple. The children were awake then and staring in amazement at their father's lifeless body laying where it fell. The mother was below in a hysterical condition unable to nerve herself to go upstairs.

Neither Mrs. Newmiller nor Mr. Casenove could offer any reason for the suicide other than he was melancholy. He was thirty-four years of age. For several days the man had seemed absent minded, and at times morose and dejected. He had been working for several weeks steadily, though prior to that he had been laid off much of the time. He had been employed intermittently at the Scott Press Works for several years. During the time he was not at work it was his custom to canvas from house to house selling small articles of merchandise or novelties.

About three years ago, a brother, William Newmiller, was killed in a railroad disaster near Kansas City, while traveling for the Scott Press company. The wreck was due to the washing away of the track during a flood in the Kaw river bottoms.

The penalty for non-compliance with the requirements of the ordinance is $5 and steps will be taken to impose it promptly upon failure to properly display the house number.

Fame.

It had been observed from the first that the musician evinced no warm interest in the objects of the town associated with the memory of the great dramatist.

"Shakspeare, eh, yes, Shayespeare," murmured the Italian, wearily. Whereupon one of the party volunteered a hint.

"You recollect, maestro, 'Amleto' and 'Romeo e Giulietta'?"

"Yes, yes, I understand," replied the musician. "Ze librettist'"—Harper's Weekly.

The Latest Veils.

A fad in Paris is to edge face veils on the bottom with a band of fur, and one can imagine what an attractive accessory this makes for a fur toque or hat. The finest makes are bordered in an inch-wide line of seal skin, ermine or sable, while the common kind, known by the aristocratic title of Alaska sable, is a favorite veil edging.

MISS ENGLISH HIS BRIDE

AT GRACE CHURCH HERE.

Miss Edith English, daughter of Mrs. George W. English, of East Seventh street, and Hugh Samuel Jarvis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jarvis, of New York, were married Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Grace church in the presence of a large and fashionable throng of guests from New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and this city. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of the church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by two matrons of honor, Mrs. H. Bertram Legg, of New York, and Mrs. Leo McCall, of Englewood, and Dorothy English, of Pittsburg, a cousin, as flower girl. The best man was Charles Goodman, of New York, and the ushers were George W. English, brother of the bride; Bertram Legg, Frank Berger and George Welsh, of New York; Harry L. McGee and Leslie Williams, of this city.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, trimmed with point applique and orange blossoms. She wore a veil and carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and orchids. The matrons of honor were gowned in American beauty satin, with hats of American beauty roses and they carried marabout muffs. The flower girl was gowned in white and she carried a white basket filled with American beauty roses.

The ushers led the way as the bridal party entered the church, followed by the matrons of honor, the flower girl and the bride, who was accompanied by her brother, Harry Crawford English, who gave her in marriage. At the chancel they met the groom and best man. William E. MacClymont presided at the organ and assisted by W. Paulding De Nike, 'cellist, rendered the wedding march from Lohengrin. After the ceremony and as the party left the edifice, the wedding march from Mendelssohn was rendered.

The church was elaborately decorated for the wedding. American beauty roses and palms being used exclusively about the chancel. A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's mother, where a large number of guests gathered to congratulate the bride and groom and to admire the handsome array of costly gifts. The home was also decorated with American beauty roses, the arrangement in the reception room and dining-room being particularly effective.

Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis will spend their honeymoon in Cuba as guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Vaughn, the latter being a sister of the groom. They will be away until the middle of February when they will return to Plainfield to reside. The groom formerly lived in New York, but recently came to this city. He is engaged in business in New York as a stock broker. The bride is a favorite here in the younger social set.

PETTY GRAFT CUT OUT BY THE SENATE

Petty graft in the shape of fountain pens and similar articles is to cease with the present session if the State Senate holds to the decision rendered in executive session Tuesday, to do away with such extravagances. The total expenditure in this line has usually amounted to somewhere in the neighborhood of $1,000.

There was such a flood of bills last night that there was not much business of that kind to be transacted yesterday. Only two bills were introduced in the Senate, one, an old-timer, by Senator Price, authorizing the State to loan money, not otherwise appropriated, to farmers; the other, by Senator Ackerman, an amendment to the mechanics' lien law, prohibiting the allegation of a promise to pay a debt as a bar to filing a mechanics' lien. John W. Bogert, of Bergen county, was confirmed as special judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals.

Employers' liability measures appeared to be the favorites this week. Public utilities may receive the same amount of attention when the members get together next Monday night. Senator Gebhardt has a bill modeled on the Hughes law, but more drastic in its provisions, which he introduced last year.

Sufficiently Married.

"You want to get damages, I suppose," said the lawyer to whom Mrs. Donovan's husband escorted her on the day after she and Mrs. Leahy had indulged in a little difference of opinion.

"Damages!" echied Mrs. Donovan, shirily. "Haven't I got damages enough already, man? What I'm after is ra satisfaction."—Youth's Companion.

MUST PROTECT CROSSING

VICTORY FOR PISCATAWAY.

Commissioner Sommer Decrees that Crossing is Dangerous— W. A. Coddington's Success.

Former Judge William Coddington won a big victory for the people of Piscataway township Wednesday when Frank H. Sommer, of the State Railroad Commission filed a decree ordering the Jersey Central and the Lehigh Valley to protect grade crossings at Cedar avenue, Lincoln, Middlesex county. Both roads had put up a stubborn fight before the commission, each being represented by two lawyers but the body decided that there was ample evidence to show that the crossing was a most dangerous one. As a result, the two roads must place gates at the crossing to be operated from a tower.

"Complaint having been made to the Board of Railroad Commissioners of New Jersey of the unprotected condition of Cedar avenue, in the village of Lincoln, Piscataway township, Middlesex county, at the point where said avenue is crossed at grade by the tracks of the Central Railroad Company and Lehigh Valley Railroad Company; and a hearing having been had on the said complaint, the complainants being represented therein by W. A. Coddington, and the said companies, by their respective counsel, and statements having been taken on behalf of the complainants and said companies, and the matter having been considered by the Board; the said Board finds that Cedar avenue at point complained of is crossed at grade by four tracks of the Central Railroad Company, two eastbound and two westbound, and two tracks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, one eastbound and one westbound; that in addition to the trains operated by said companies passing over said crossing at this point, trains of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad also pass over said crossing; that separating the tracks of the two companies is a space of forty-five feet up grade of the tracks of the Central Railroad Company, which tracks are three feet higher than those of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company; that the length of the crossing is about one hundred and eleven feet; that approaching the crossing from the west, obstructions prevent a view of the westbound track of the Central Railroad Company until a point is reached about thirty feet from the nearest rail; at this point westbound trains can be seen as they round a curve about one-eighth of a mile south of the crossing; and westbound trains of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company can be seen for some eight hundred feet. Approaching the crossing from the east there is a good view of the tracks of both companies; that about twenty people pass over this crossing on foot and about the same number of vehicles daily; that some two hundred trains pass over the crossing daily.

"The crossing is wholly unprotected.

"The Board concludes that the crossing is dangerous and should be protected, and "Recommends to the companies that they protect the said crossing by gates operated from a tower.

GOD.

What can we know about God? What does the Bible tells us about Him? We need a more satisfying than the revelation we have in nature, for while nature tells us of His greatness, it certainly does not speak of His loving interest in humanity. We do not hope to understand Him in the infinity of His being, but we may know Him as He is related to us, and only, in Scriptural revelation, do we find the perfectly satisfying truth that each soul is of great value in His sight. Let us study, then, the great thought of Scripture as to the character of God. The Bible opens with this declaration, "In the beginning God," We understand, then, that back of all the forces of nature is God. Professor Tyndall said, some thirty years ago, "in mater, is the promise and potency of all terrestrial life." He was then chairman of the British Association of Scientists. Mr. Tyndall had no need of the assumption of God as the creator of all things. In matter, he saw the explanation of the universe. Thirty years later, Professor Crook, top was chairman of the same association, said, "In life, I see the promise and potency of all forms of matter." He felt compelled to state that in the universe there was something more than the material things we see. He called it Life. Later, Lord Kelvin said it cannot be that "we live, and move, and have our being in dead matter, we are absolutely forced by science to believe in creative power." Then the first statement of the Bible is scientifically correct, "In the beginning God." What science calls the "First Great Cause" or the "Unknown Original," we call God. The universe is the result of His plan, though and His love. The mighty laws of nature are His laws.

The second thing we may know about God is that "In Him we live and move and have our being." Thomas Aquinas said, "Every creature is a note and the sound lasts only as long as God's finger presses the organ. Let the finger be moved and the harmony dies." The unlikeness to God compared to a wheel, "one wheel fitted into another wheel— a vast, complicated mechanism, never a lever getting out of place, never a wheel slipping a cog—and behind it all is God watching over the mechanism." In this great universe, "God never does, nor suffers to be done, aught but thou thyself wouldst do, if thou couldst see the end as well as He."

Scripture tells us that the God who has created and who sustains all things is very near to us. He enters into personal relations with men. That is the meaning of the word Jehovah. Jehovah is the personal God, and personality implies two things; one who knows himself as himself and one who consciously and intelligently directs his own actions. Back of your life, therefore, is the will and purpose of God. God is not a principle or a law. He is a person who has given us promises and a person to whom we can direct our prayers.

Scripture further tells us that this Jehovah is "Jehovah of Hosts," that He is Lord of all things. There is no other, He is not simply the Ruler of one people, He is the Ruler of the universe. He is the Lord of all the unseen intelligences above us. Therefore, the Psalmist says, "Whither shall I go free from Thy Presence? If I flee to the ends of the heaven, Thou art there, and there Thy hand leads me and Thy right hand holds me." Scientists tell us that the universe is a unit so far as they can know it. Likewise Scripture declares to us the same thought. It is, therefore, impossible for some other universe to come crashing in upon this, because another deity would make war upon Jehovah. Jehovah is Jehovah of Hosts.

What is the will of this universe then? If Jehovah is the Creator of it and sustains it; if there is but one universe and our God is its absolute Master, what is the character of the universe? Jesus Christ revealed its character. He directs his own message, infinite Being is our Father, the Father of all souls and of the individual soul. The essence of His nature is love, such a love as is revealed in Jesus Christ. We become lost in a wilderness when we endeavor to think of the infinite God, but He has veiled His infinity in Jesus Christ and in Him we see the very essence of the divine nature. The poet said "I am apt to think the man That could surround the sum of things, and sup The heart of God and secrets of His Empire. Would speak but love. With him the bright result Would change the hue of intermediate scales And make one thing of all theology."

We cannot know God in all the depths of His being. We do know the facts as they are revealed to us. God is the creator and sustainer of all things. He is the Personal God who promises His help to His people and who keeps His promises. He is the one God, and there is no other power equal to or greater than His, for He is Jehovah of Hosts, and in your life has been committed to His care, nothing can pluck you out of His hand. The essence of His nature is love, holy love, the love as it stands revealed in Jesus Christ, who loved us and gave Himself for us.

No, we cannot know the infinite depths of God, but such knowledge would only intensify what we already know. That God is the God who is round about you, then why should you be dismayed?

$2,000 FOR LINCOLN DAY CELEBRATION

The House at Trenton Friday passed the first bill to go through this session. The measure was drafted by Colonel James F. Connelly, Newark's city clerk, to permit first-class cities to appropriate $2,000 for celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of Lincoln's birth February 12. Second-class cities may appropriate $1,000 and all other municipalities are limited to not more than $500.

Colonel Connelly went to Trenton Monday as a representative of the city of Newark and of the Grand Army of the Republic. Newark desires to work with the war veterans in celebrating the centenary and to meet the expense. The city clerk is determined to secure the necessary legislative authority, and with this unusual perseverance and success has a bill introduced last night, put to final reading under suspended rules and recalled for amendment today, to be passed just before adjournment for the week. The bill will now go to the Senate. It will be in George Nor Fort's hands by next Tuesday. Assemblyman William P. Martin, of Essex, introduced the Connelly measure and handled the matter on the floor of the House.

Patriotic Instructor Uriah Scott, of the Department of New Jersey G. A. R., is chairman of a department committee to arrange for the celebration of the Lincoln centenary generally, and Colonel Connelly is a member of the committee. The bill passed yesterday is the first step in the plan to make the day memorable.

Miss May Alice Bird, daughter of Mrs. Rosanna Bird, and August Henry Windham, Jr., were married Wednesday night at the residence of the bride's aunt, Mr. Harvey Agar, on Summit avenue. Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, of Warren chapel performed the ceremony, using the Episcopal service. Miss Maude Bowman was maid of honor and Charles Windham, brother of the groom, was best man. Miss Madeline Walker, the bride's niece, was flower girl and the ushers were Elmer Walker and Charles Rumford.

The rooms had been prettily decorated for the event, with palms, fern, ivy and cut flowers, the large bay formed of evergreens and having a red centre, was arranged in one corner, and beneath it the couple stood. Mrs. Frank Pursell played both wedding marches and Miss Margaret Bird sang "Heart of My Heart."

The bride wore a gown of soft white silk and a veil caught up with lilies of the valley, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore a gown of yellow silk and carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums, while the little flower girl was dressed in pink silk. From a basket in the hand she strewed pink roses before the bride. Mrs. Bird, the bride's mother, wore a gown of gray crepe trimmed with gray chiffon and ineuder. Mrs. Agar was attired in pale blue silk.

Following the ceremony a reception and supper were held. Among the guests present were a number from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Hoboken and Summit. The presents bestowed upon the pair were numerous and beautiful. They consisted of furniture, china, cut glass and pictures. After a brief honeymoon spent in visiting among friends, Mr. and Mrs. Windham will reside in Brooklyn, the groom being employed there in the navy yard.

TRINITY'S 'DUTCH ARMS.'

Men's Association Organized at Reformed Church with Goodly Membership.

MOTTO, "THE OTHER FELLOW."

Under favorable auspices a meeting was held in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church Friday night for the purpose of forming a men's association. There were about sixty present and practically all were enrolled, which was encouraging to the pastor, Rev. John Y. Brock, and others who have been associated with him in the movement. The title will be "The Dutch Arms," and "The Other Fellow," was adopted as a motto.

Horace J. Martin, Sr., was chosen temporary chairman and after a few well chosen remarks regarding the object of the meeting, introduced Rev. Albertus Brock, pastor of the Clinton Avenue Reformed church, of Newark, brother of Trinity's pastor, who spoke on the subject, "How to Successfully Conduct a Men's Organization."

Congratulating the men on the large attendance, Mr. Brock said that that was a good sign to start off with and he felt sure the organization would be a strong adjunct to the church. He said that he did not know that he would be able to tell the men anything but what his hearers could relate to them, but as it was always a good rule to do what your younger brother wants you to do, he felt compelled to say something.

"There are two kinds of men's clubs," said Mr. Brock, "namely, one composed of the men of the church and the other for the men who do not belong to any church and who are just waiting for someone to invite them to attend the meetings. The great problem now is to reach the men who don't belong to any church.

"I had five years experience with a men's organization at Newburg, N. Y., and in all that time I never heard a man say that he was displeased with the organization. We would devote about ten minutes to devotional exercises, have a good and welfare period, with a simple entertainment. And right here I will say that you will probably find an abundance of talent in your church. Then you will find it easy to reach a man's heart through his stomach and light refreshments are always an attractive feature.

"One of the most helpful features of the organization," continued Mr. Brock, "is a sick committee, who will look after the sick members and render such assistance as possible. I would advise you to avoid striving to make money. Have reasonable dues, but do not have as one of the objects the purpose of revenue. The chief aim should be the making of men. Don't leave all the work for the minister and thereby make it a one-man organization. Have good officers and then let every member co-operate with them. It is often easier for a layman to get new members than it is for the pastor. I know that when I left Newburg sixty men joined my church either directly or indirectly through the men's association and in this way their families became identified with the church."

In connection with Mr. Brock's remarks, Rev. John Y. Brock said a few words and incidently presented a copy of the constitution of the "Dutch Arms" association which he had in his church at Asbury Park. This was adopted, with the understanding that it may be amended to suit local conditions. Many words of encouragement were made by others, including representatives of other men's associations in the city.

Officers for the coming year were chosen as follows:

President, F. S. Cutter; first vice-president, F. E. Smith; second vice-president, A. L. Force; secretary, Frank Storr; treasurer, William F. Oliver.

This completed the business of the evening and a social hour was enjoyed after which refreshments were served by the men. Much enthusiasm was shown at the outset and the new society promises to be one of the strongest among those in the city.

How to Find It Out.

"I can't guarantee it," replied the salesman, reassuringly, "but I'm sure they won't squeak."

"Well, I want to put 'em to the supreme test. Have you got a stairway handy?"

"Why, I hardly understand."

"Well, if they don't squeak when I try to creep noiselessly upstairs they never will."—Exchange.

WRITES SCHOOL PUPILS

THE NOBLEST TYPE OF MAN.

Exercises to Commemorate Centenary of Martyr-President on Thursday February 11.

State Superintendent of Schools C. J. Baxter has issued a letter to the pupil school pupils. The message will be read at the Lincoln centenary celebrations in the city and borough schools on Thursday, February 11. This is the letter:

"February 12, 1909.

"My Dear Boys and Girls:

"Abraham Lincoln was born in a log cabin in the wilds of Kentucky. His parents were among the poorest of the settlers of a sterile section of the State. Notwithstanding his humble birth all the school children and all the older people as well, from Maine to California and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, are today commemorating the one-hundredth anniversary of his birth, and all are inspired by the same pride, affection and patriotism.

"Why this grateful tribute of remembrance from eighty millions of his countrymen, and why is it his fame has become the common heritage of the world? Because of his broad sympathies, his unswerving integrity and his pure patriotism, and because "to him more than to any other man, the cause of the Union and liberty is indebted for his final success," because a sense of justice that is universal places the highest estimate upon the talent that is humblest in origin, and upon success that has been won in circumstances the most adverse.

"When I wrote to your superintendent a few weeks ago that I would send a letter to be read to you on the 12th day of February, I am sure he wondered what I would attempt to do with so large a subject within the limits of a letter. So much has been written and said about our first martyred President that I doubt my ability to tell you anything new, so will briefly call your attention to some of the traits which made him great and which I wish you to emulate.

"Abraham Lincoln, when a boy, was not handicapped by a kind of pride which stands today very much in the way of success of some American youth. He realized that two strong hands and an active brain had been given to him for a purpose, and he was not ashamed to engage in any form of useful employment. Hard work, early and late, was his childhood portion, and as he always performed his tasks cheerfully and well, it proved a good preparation for the arduous duties that awaited him in after years. When he was not needed at home, he was "hired out" to the neighbors. He thought that driving an ox team, digging ditches, chopping wood, splitting rails, steering a flat boat or any other "odd job" was good enough for him. The duty that lay nearest was the one that he always performed next. He had no desire to eat the bread of idleness, and refused to spend money that he had not earned. If said to be were true of all the youth of today. I have slight hopes of the future usefulness and success of the boys and girls who are afraid of soiling their hands and are rarely useful in the home.

"He was always obedient, not in a servile sense, but as a matter of personal duty. After his death by an assassin's bullet his stepmother said: 'Abe never gave me a cross word or look and never refused, in fact or in appearance, to do anything I asked of him. He was dutiful to me always.' Lincoln said of his stepmother: 'She was affectionate, good and kind above the average woman.' To his own mother, who died when he was but nine years of age, he paid the following tribute: 'To my mother I owe all I am, and that I have achieved. She was my inspiration.' True obedience is not abject compliance with the imperative 'shall' or 'must.' During the Civil War a friend of one of the soldiers, who was visiting him in camp, said: 'How can you so cheerfully obey your captain's stern command?' He replied: 'That is easy. I have sworn to obey.' A proper recognition of all forms of constituted authority is essential to our own well-being, to good citizenship and to the perpetuity of the home, the school and the State.

"Though there was nothing inspiring in Lincoln's early environment, and his time and energies were nearly exhausted by the daily toil required to earn a poor living, he never wavered in his purpose to gain an education. At night by the fire-light of the log cabin and during the moments that were needed for rest he persistently studied, and thus he laid the foundation of the illustrious career before him. He realized that personal effort is essential to self-development and that there is no excellence without great labor. No matter how good your school advantages may be, they will count for but little if you are averse to effort. The idle pupil, who either dodges or blunders through his recitations and thinks he is cheating his teacher, is simply swindling himself.

"He was so truthful and so trustworthy that the rough settlers gave him the very complimentary nickname of 'Honest Abe.' When he was clerking in a store a customer paid him a sixpence too much. He thought about it all the rest of the day, and at night, after he had closed the store, walked several miles to restore the bit of evidence of the dishonesty of Honest Abe.' When he was clerking in a store a customer paid him a sixpence too much. He thought about it all the rest of the day, and at night, after he had closed the store, walked several miles to restore the bit of evidence of the dishonesty of Honest Abe.' When he was clerking in a store

P. C. C. RAISES ITS DUES

THREE TRUSTEES ARE CHOSEN.

Contribution of $100 for Athletic Prizes—Again to Enlarge the Club House.

At the annual meeting of the Plainfield Country Club held at the Hartridge Clubhouse, Monday night, Leighton Calkins was unanimously re-elected president for the coming year, and the dues of members were increased according to the schedule recommended by the special committee of club members.

The new schedule raises the dues of active members from $25 to $30 and of non-resident members from $15 to $20; also, imposing a $10 initiation fee on non-resident members, who must reside at least ten miles from the clubhouse instead of five as heretofore, and providing for an initiation fee for active members after June 1, 1909, of $20 instead of $25. The dues for associates and junior associates are to remain as heretofore. This raise in dues will produce about $3,500 additional income, which is due to the growth of the club and the increasing demand for good service.

The meeting was attended by nearly one hundred active members. Following the reading of the minutes, President Calkins read a comprehensive and detailed report on the operations of the club for the past year. Joseph M. Shellabarger also presented the treasurer's report.

President Calkins then introduced the proposed amendments to increase the dues and said that the special committee which had recommended the increase had requested him to explain the situation to the members at large. He showed exactly how the income was spent and what was needed to operate the club and explained that the proposed increase would enable the club to operate according to the present demands for good service.

The vote in favor of the change was unanimous, the result was greeted with applause. The trustees elected were Joseph M. Shellabarger, S. D. Lounsbery and John P. Stevens, to serve three years. Frank D. Warren, E. A. Stevenson and W. L. Saunders were named as the nominating committee for 1909.

President Calkins announced that the trustees had adopted a new rule, by which the detail of all committee expenses would be reported yearly to the active members. These committee reports, together with the president's and treasurer's reports, have been prepared and will be sent to the members this week.

After the meeting President Calkins stated that a prominent member had just placed at his disposal $100, to be donated for athletic prizes next season. He regretted that he was not at liberty to disclose the name of the generous donor. He also announced that many members stood ready to advance money for an enlargement of the clubhouse and that the coming season promised to place Plainfield's club in the front rank in the Metropolitan district.

Lehigh Railroad Retrenches.

Owing to the slackness of business the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company temporarily will close the telegraph office at South Plainfield February 6. A telephone line between here and South Plainfield will be used while the telegraph office is closed. This move will save the company an expense of $60 a month, and the telegraph operators at the South Plainfield signal tower will have to handle all telegrams for this place. Last week the company closed offices at Bound Brook, South Somerville and Stanton, and retrenchment is going on in all departments, particularly the roadway department, where two men have been taken off each section.

The program of life motion pictures at Proctor's theatre tonight will be the "Lover's Telegraphic Code," Humanescope, a scream; "The Blood Stone," "Skillful Policemen," "Lonesome Junction," "Duty vs. Revenge," "Professor's Trip to the Country," "The Pardon," and "A Strong Gale." SPENCER ESTATE WILL BE SETTLED SOON

The final settlement of the Spencer estate which was to have been made in the Union county court, today, was postponed for one week at the request of counsel. The complainant in the matter is F. T. Spncer, a beneficiary and grandson of the late Mrs. Anna Louise Spencer, who resided here. She died in 1880, leaving a will. The daughter, Miss Anna Louise Spencer, being named as executrix. Two years later Miss Spencer filed an account of the estate, which amounts to about $12,000 personal and between $30,000 and $40,000 in real estate, all in this city.

Since that time there has been no accounting and Mr. Spencer now seeks to have one made. Sidney Eldridge is counsel for Mr. Spencer and V. W. Nash, Jr., represents the executrix, who is now about seventy years of age. The Spencers were well known in this city.

"MENDELSSOHN DAY" OBSERVED BY PUPILS

Exercises in observance of the centennial anniversary of the birth of Mendelssohn, the eminent German composer, were held at the Plainfield High School today, when Principal I. W. Travell spoke briefly upon the life and works of the musician, who was born in Hamburg, February 3, 1809.

"In order to keep in tune with the thought of the world today," said Principal Travell, "it is fitting that we should remember it is 'Mendelssohn Day,' for Mendelssohn is prominent among the group of great men who were born in the year 1809. The man was the son of well-to-do Hebrew parents, and accomplished much to win him a high place in the world of music during the thirty-eight years of his life.

"One of his most prominent biographers alludes to the great composer in these words: 'His made music the passion and business of his life. He pursued it with that splendid system and industry in nine cases out of ten having much to do with what the world thinks the irresistability of genius.'"

At the conclusion of Mr. Travell's remarks, the school sang "Thy Will Be Done," arranged to Mendelssohn's music, and his "Opus 14" was played on the tel-electric piano player.

Mrs. Mary E. Wood, wife of Silas P. Wood, died at 1:25 o'clock, this morning, at her home on Evergreen avenue. For thirty-three years she was an invalid and a great sufferer, yet she bore it all with patient Christian fortitude. Mr. Wood's sister, Mrs. Mary Wood died at her home at Roslyn, L. I., on Monday and he was called there yesterday. He had just reached the home, when a telegram arrived telling him of the information that his wife was dying. He arrived home at 8 o'clock last night, a few hours before his wife's death.

Mrs. Wood was a native of Hempstead, L. I., and was sixty-seven years of age. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Powell, and her grandfather was one of the early settlers of Hempstead and a pillow in the Methodist Episcopal church that place, of which Mrs. Wood was almost a life-long member. She is survived by a husband and two sons, H. P. Wood, of Cranford and George E. Wood, of Brooklyn, who constitute the insurance firm of Wood Brothers in New York. The Woods moved to this city from Cranford last September.

The funeral service will be held from the late home Friday night at 8:30 o'clock and the burial will be at Hempstead at the convenience of the family.

ROMANCE IN THE S. A.

Captain of Local Salvationists' Barracks Marries Wealthy Burlington Woman.

SHE HAD RENOUNCED SOCIETY.

Miss Marion Woolman, of Old Jersey Family, Fell in Love With Captain Samuel Hewitt.

Miss Marion Fergus Woolman, daughter and one of Burlington's oldest families, good-looking and wealthy in her own right, was married yesterday at Burlington to Captain Samuel Alexander Hewitt, who has charge of the local Salvation Army barracks.

Captain took charge of the local barracks but two weeks ago, succeeding the popular Captain Arthur Hopkins, who was promoted to the Boston headquarters of the order. With Hewitt came Capt. Annis Duerr as his assistant. Last week the officer in command here was granted a two weeks furlough and left on Monday morning. He told his friends that he was going to be married on Feb. 17 and asked them not to let the newspapers have his photograph.

Sedate, thoughtful and religious, she became interested in the Salvation Army five years ago. Her friends gasped when she first marched from the barracks with the corps and sang and prayed in a street corner meeting. They tried to dissuade her; smilingly but firmly she answered that she was determined to become a Army lassie and devote her life to teaching the irreligious and uplifting the disheartened.

"Hers is only a fad," said her kin to each other. "Marion will grow tired of it."

So far from becoming weary, her friendship gradually grew weaker with the young women who were her chums at Bryn Mawr and Vassar; she devoted herself almost entirely to the Army. Of course, she continued to live with her widowed mother, Mrs. Lydia Woolman, in the famous old Woolman house in Burlington, but she attended the Army's meetings daily, and almost every night prayed with the corps in the streets.

Her romance first illumined her devotion fifteen months ago. Then Capt. Hewitt was sent to Burlington from New York; a handsome, earnest man, eloquent, with a good voice, one of a poor but most respectable family of No. 2125 Amsterdam avenue. They fell in love; Mrs. Woolman sent her daughter away, hoping she would forget Capt. Hewitt. They corresponded, and a "friend," who, it is said, was moved by jealously, let it be known six months ago that Miss Woolman was engaged to marry the forceful Salvationist.

Mrs. Woolman made a final, vain appeal to Miss Marion. Then her mother became convinced of Miss Woolman's sincerity in salvation work and, with her sanction, the young woman entered the Army's training school in New York.

She returned only last week. It was not known until a few hours before the wedding that she was to marry Capt. Hewitt yesterday. The ceremony was performed at 6 p. m., at the home of the bride's mother. Officers of the Salvation Army in Burlington and in New York, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Hewitt, the bridegroom's parents, his sisters, Marguerite and Isabel, and a few representatives of some of Burlington's old families who are connected with the Woolmans were the only witnesses of the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. James F. Olmsted, rector of the fashionable St. Mary's Episcopal church, of which the bride was a member.

Mrs. Hewitt has announced her intention to devote her fortune to the Army's work in this city.

S. S. Class Meets.

The annual meeting and election of officers was held last night by class No. 24, of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school at the home of the teacher, Henry Seader, Manning avenue. These officers were elected: President, Mrs. William Trembath; vice-president, Mrs. Clarence Bye; secretary, Mrs. Gertrude Rose; treasurer, Miss Marcie Koller. Arrangements were made for the holding of an entertainment sometime in the near future.

ATTACKS DUNELLEN GIRL

FOLLOWED FROM THIS CITY.

Screams of Woman Witness Frighten Assailant, Who Flees in the Dark—Police Scour Vicinity for Him.

An assault by an unknown man upon Miss Rose Fedderman near her home in Dunellen last night has left her in a serious condition as a result of the nervous shock she suffered. The assailant, after grabbing her from behind, was frightened away by the screams of Mrs. J. C. Gardner, who witnessed the attack from a window of her home, one block south of the tracks on Washington avenue.

Miss Fedderman is employed as head saleswoman in the store of H. A. Bonn Company, of Front street, and lives on Washington avenue, Dunellen, and was on the way to her home about 10:30 o'clock and it is supposed the man followed her from the time she boarded the car. Presumably his motive was robbery, but he was put to flight before he could accomplish it.

Mrs. Gardner chanced to be looking out of an upstairs window and saw the girl approaching, with the man close behind. Observing that the young woman was hurrying as if frightened, Mrs. Gardner tried to open the window to reassure her, and it was just at that instant that the fellow threw his arms around her, bending her bodily backward. Mrs. Gardner's screams caused him to drop his victim and run.

Two railroad workmen rushed to the girl and assisted the girl to her feet. She was taken to her home a short distance away, in a fainting condition, and Dr. Platt was called and succeeded in reviving her, but she is still unable to leave her bed, her experience having left her in a weak condition, and is at times hysterical.

The man is described as being about medium height, wearing a light overcoat and black derby hat. Groups of men scoured the borough in every direction but were not successful in locating him. It was reported at noon today that a man answering the description was seen at Elizabethport just after a coal train had arrived from this direction, and an effort is being made to locate him.

FELL FROM SCAFFOLD; HIS SPINE BADLY HURT

Robert Yorke, of West Front street, while engaged in painting a house at Madison avenue and West Eighth street, yesterday afternoon, fell from a ladder and in his twenty-five foot descent struck a scaffold, which only tended to make his injuries more severe. He landed on his back and the jolt was such that he was unable to regain his feet without assistance.

Mr. Yorke was taken to his home where a physician was summoned. Owing to his condition it was impossible to make a thorough examination of him, but this morning it was learned that one of the small bones in the spinal column was farctured. While the injury is a severe one and Mr. Yorke will be detained at home for some time, the physician believes that he will fully recover from the injury.

Adjourned Until Monday.

House and Senate have gone home from Trenton until next Monday. Both legislative branches held two sittings each today and then adjourned for the week. There are now more than 200 bills before the lawmakers, and the flood of proposed statutes seem to grow stronger instead of weaker. The Senators are already considering adjournment for a short session is their aim and a date in March will be fixed if it is possible.

GOT $25 ON A $250 PIN

Colored Man Pawned Diamond Jewel and is Held in $500 Bail.

THORN CLAIMS "FOUND" IT.

But "Third Degree" Work Reveals That He Probably Stole It From L. E. Harris.

A rigid "third degree" sweating ordeal by Chief of Police Kiely was the means of breaking down an unusually smooth story of the alleged theft of a valuable diamond stickpin, taken from Lester B. Harris, of West Front street, last Thursday night, and as a result Burgess Thorn, colored, of this city, was held in $500 bail by City Judge Runyon today. The pin, which is valued at $250, was located yesterday afternoon in a Newark pawn-shop, and has been restored to its owner. Thorn pawned the jewel there last week, getting $25 on it.

Mr. Harris' story, brought the pin Thursday and wore it for the first at the banquet of the Fair Acres Riding and Driving Association, held at the Hotel Iroquois Thursday night. The stick-pin is horseshoe shaped, of heavy gold, and is set with fifteen diamonds. Thorn saw Mr. Harris purchase it, and he was at the hotel at night.

According to Mr. Harris' story, there was confusion as the banquet adjourned and he believes the pin was taken from him as he passed out to his carriage. He discovered the loss, he alleges, on the way home. Then it was found that the pin, which was fastened in Mr. Harris' neck-tie by a patent clasp, had been cut or broken off. Thorn left town the same night, it is said. When he came back he told several people about a diamond horse-shoe pin he had found after the banquet. Among others, Mr. Harris' coachman heard of the alleged find and the owner of the pin reported the matter to Chief Kiely. Thorn was arrested by Detective-Sergeant Flynn, and at police headquarters displayed a horse-shoe pin, about half the size of the missing one of imitation gold, and set with nine imitation diamonds. The catch of this pin was broken in exactly the same way as that of the valuable one.

"Third degree" work by the police head wormed a confession out of the colored man, but it was a smooth confession at that. The colored man said that he had found the pin, had told of his find, and being unable to locate the owner, had pawned it in Newark. He said the pawnbroker had given him $20 for the pin, but no part ticket.

Having learned the pawnbroker's name, the police held Thorn and yesterday afternoon Chief Kiely, accompanied by Mr. Harris, went to Newark, where, accompanied by Detective Flynn and two of the Newark police, he easily located the pin. The pawnbroker said he had given a ticket, and showed its duplicate. He had given $25 on the pin and he said that Thorn had bought a watch there, and the time-piece was found on Thorn when he was searched at the time of his arrest. He said he had won it in a crap game at Newark.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEEMEN HAVE RED HOT SESSION

The Piscataway Township Committeemen held a turbulent meeting last night at the Hotel Nelson, and almost ended in a fistic encounter between two members. The cause of the eruption was due to a petition submitted by residents of Rock avenue to have Edward Burke appointed as a peace officer.

There were strong remonstrances to such a course and some even went so far as to assert that if it were made for the applicant there would be no need for such an officer. The matter finally narrowed down to hot words between Burke and L. Kerwin, one of the leaders in the opposition, and violence was only averted by the intercession of cooler heads.

W. B. Hamilton was chairman of the meeting, which lasted until 1 o'clock this morning. The petition of fifty citizens for the macadamizing of Beachwood avenue was granted.

CITY BOARD OF HEALTH HOLDS MONTHLY SESSION

Reports showing the excellent sanitary condition of the city were presented at the February meeting of the Board of Health, yesterday afternoon. The number of communicable diseases reported during the past month was unusually low, divided as follows: Scarlet fever, 3; measles, 6; chickenpox, 3; tuberculosis, 4.

During the month samples of all the milk sold in Plainfield were obtained and analyzed, and found to be of very good quality; only two of the thirty contained over 50,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter. A thorough inspection and scoring of all dairies supplying milk in the city was begun. Fifteen dairies and four bottling places were visited and found to be in fair condition.

The bonds of Daniel W. Hibbitts and Nicholas Cody, plumbers, were presented, accepted and ordered filed. Complaint was made during the month in the city court against Eric Luthman for violation of the plumbing ordinances. These returns were made to the office during January: Marriages, 17; births, 31; still births, 0; deaths, 31. Fifty per cent. of the deaths were persons over forty years of age.

WARING PRESIDENT OF RIDING & DRIVING ASSN.

Officers were elected and reports for the past year comprised the chief business at the annual meeting of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Association, held at the Hartridge School auditorium last night. There was a large attendance of members and considerable enthusiasm shown in the affairs of the association. The dates for the annual horse show were not definitely determined upon, but they will probably be the second week in June.

The officers were elected as follows: President, O. T. Waring; vice president, Robert C. Fairbairn; treasurer, E. G. Hooley; secretary, L. G. Timpson. Within the next two weeks the officers will meet in New York and pick the various committees for the coming year.

Heretofore, it has been the custom to hold the show the first week in June and until a conference is held with the National Horse Show Association, the exact dates cannot be announced. The local association does not want to conflict with the other big shows and undoubtedly the Plainfield event will, as usual, follow the one held in Philadelphia. This makes it possible for the entries to come here from the Quaker City.

The forthcoming show will equal those of other years and if possible be even a greater success, for the last entries are assured for this year. The association is in the best of financial condition and the customary valuable prizes will be offered at this year's show.

Court Watchung Active.

Court Watchung, No. 3871, Independent Qredr of Foresters, held an interesting meeting last night. Three applications were acted upon favorably and the business session was followed by a social hour, during which a smoker was enjoyed and quoits were played. The court is planning to hold a series of euchre games during the winter. There was a large attendance of members at last night's meeting.

Cleveley's Restaurant Again.

DOCTORS TO "O. K." MILK

County Medical Society's Commission to Organize Here on Friday Night.

TO GUARANTEE MILK PURITY.

Inspector to be Appointed—Bottles to Be Labelled—May Mean Higher Prices.

As a result of the pure milk agitation by Dr. Henry L. Coit, of Newark, Union county physicians will hereafter have charge of the granting of an official seal of purity for milk, and Dr. W. H. Murray, of Watchung avenue, Dr. Arthus Stern, of Elizabeth, and Dr. Stephen Quinn, of Elizabeth, have been appointed as a milk comission by the Union County Medical Society. The appointments were made at the annual meeting of the society held in Elizabeth Thursday night.

The commission is to hold an organization meeting at the home of Dr. Ryan D. Hedges, president of the society, Friday night, at which time the respective terms of office will be decided upon. It is planned to have a three-year term for these commissioners, so arranged that one new member will be chosen each year. For this reason, the recently appointed first commission will decide Friday night which of its members shall have one, two and three year terms.

The work of the commission will in no way interfere with the surveillance of milk by boards of health of the various cities in the county. There are, however, certain dairies where the milk is marketed under the most sanitary conditions, and a higher price is charged for such milk, largely bottled for infants' use. Such milk represents the highest standard of milk purity. The commission will supervise the bottling of this milk and will appoint dairy inspectors and arrange for frequent bacteriological examination of samples. The office is unremunerative. Dairymen who wish an official recommendation of the commission must make application for the examinations and tests. At the meeting Friday, it is probable that a dairy inspector will be appointed, and a system for milk analysis decided upon.

The commissioners will also decide upon an official seal of purity, which will be used on each bottle sent out from the sanctioned dairies. This certified milk will be sold at a higher price per bottle, ranging from eighteen cents a quart. The official seal will be the guarantee from the medical men that the milk is secured and bottled under the sanitary conditions.

For some time, Dr. Coit has been active in maintaining the highest standard of milk purity at the Fairfield Dairy in Montclair, and the milk sent out from there brings eighteen cents a quart. There are about forty certified milk dairies in the United States today and a large proportion of these are in New Jersey. Dr. Coit has for several years past had charge of tests and examinations at various Essex county dairies, where milk sells at from ten to twelve cents a quart.

Paper on the Judsons.

More fascinating than fiction was the true story of the lives of Adoniram Judson and his first wife, Ann Hasseltine Judson as told yesterday afternoon in a paper presented by Mrs. Charles H. Smith at the meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held in the lecture room. The paper was preceded by a devotional service, led by Mrs. Daniel Douglass.

FOR THE TRADE SCHOOL

MAYOR EXTENDS A WELCOME.

L. B. Woolston Presides at Dinner at Saengerbund Hall—Evarts Tracy's Talk.

Following the business meeting yesterday afternoon of the seventh annual convention of the Master Builders' Association of New Jersey, held in the Knights of Columbus hall, the delegates met at 7 o'clock in Saengerbund hall and partook of the hospitality of the local members. After the dinner, served by Timbo, the convention was addressed by Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield; Andrew Dickinson, of Paterson, president of the association; Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Holy Cross church, of this borough, and Evarts Tracy, of this city. Councilman Lemuel B. Woolston, of Woolston & Buckle, acted as toastmaster.

Mayor Townsend, on being introduced, welcomed the delegates to North Plainfield. He expressed the hope that it would not be necessary when the convention meets here again to explain why they had their business meeting in one city and their banquet in another, that the two municipalities should then be all united as one big city.

Mr. Dickinson talked of the high standing of the builders' trade, speaking of the pride he felt in being a builder himself. He admitted however, that things were a little slow in his "God-forsaken city of Paterson." He said he felt like moving to Plainfield to get some of the good business which enable th Plainfield association to furnish such a sumptuous repast. "We could not afford it in Paterson," said he. In closing Mr. Dickinson voiced the sentiment of those present in a few words of hearty thanks to the local members for their generous hospitality.

The Rev. Warner's address concerned the need of the country and especially our State for more trade schools. He quoted instances and statistics to show how many boys between the ages of 14 and 17 drift out of school and come to nothing simply because they can get no practical education. He explained how hard it now is for a boy to get any general knowledge of a trade as an apprentice. "Germany's manufacturing supremacy," said Rev. Warner, "is due to a large number of trade schools which are found in every city. What we need today is industrial schools for the young. If this country is to maintain its commercial supremacy it must take up the question of the trade school."

Mr. Tracy spoke on concrete as a building material dwelling on its possibilities from an artistic point of view. He told of the way in which the forests are being used up and how concrete is coming in to save them and to take the place of wood as a building material. He spoke of the many ways in which it is being used, predicting that it would soon be the principal material for smaller buildings and dwellings. He showed how the concrete block manufacturers, with their forms for imitating stone, were the ones who were making concrete a synonym for cheapness in looks as well as price. "The possibilities of concrete as an artistic building material and a cheap one have not been dreamed of," said Mr. Tracy. He believes the proper way to use the blocks is with a plain front. Some very elaborate illustrations were passed around the room showing what an architect could do with the blocks in this form.

During the dinner, which was a fine one, some good songs were sung to the accompaniment of a guitar. Cigars were an item of the program. The delegates returned to their respective cities feeling well repaid for their trip to Plainfield.

JERSEY TUBE THROUGH TO CORTLANDT STREE

The last rock barrier from the east and west ends of one of the two tunnels, which will run from Cortlandt street, New York under the Hudson river to Jersey City, was blasted out at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The blast was witnessed by a distinguished company of officers of the company and engineers.

A general celebration followed with speech making, and a distribution of bonuses among the laborers.

The blast was under a point about 300 feet from the Cortlandt street ferry. It was fired from the New Jersey side, and shattered four feet of tap rock.

On the New York side were Walter G. Oakman, president of the Hudson Company; Charles M. Jacobs, chief engineer in charge of the work; his assistant, J. V. Davis; Colonel J. H. Wells, the architect of the Hudson terminal building; Charles J. Fisk, Wilbur C. Fisk, and Pliny Fisk, the bankers, and many prominent engineers as well as representatives of newspapers.

On the Jersey side, with the men who set off the blast, were engineers representing the Pennsylvania and Erie Railroads.

When the dull boom of the blast was heard on the New York side, and the rock wall from which the spectators were held back to a safe distance by a rope barrier, shivered and fell, there was a scramble to reach the hole. Mr. Jacobs was the first through.

BOTTLERS' ASSOCIATION DENOUNCED IN COURT

The Middlesex Bottlers' Association was denounced in open court at the Perth Amboy city hall, Tuesday night. It was charged that the association had used a search warrant and the attending criminal process to persuade a bottler who did not wish to do so, to become a member of the association. Several days ago a search warrant directed against "Tony" Rupino, of Port Reading, was issued, upon complaint of Jacob Rosenthal, agent of the bottlers. Tuesday night the hearing was to have been held, but Rosenthal appeared before Justice of the Peace H. E. Pickersgill and announced that Rupina had joined the association and the charge would be pressed against him.

The justices turned on Rosenthal and told him that an officer of the association had offered to settle the case with Rupini on a basis of fifty cents for every contraband bottle found in possession of the Port Reading man. The fine fixed by the law enacted at the behest of the bottlers of the State is $5 per bottle.

Rosenthal admitted that the charge was true, but pleaded that no violence was intended. The justice announced that hereafter no complaints against offending bottlers would be entertained. The association has been at war with the independents for two years and a large number have been fined.

NOTICE ONE-COLOR SCHEME IN EVENING DRESSES NOW.

The predominance of a one-color scheme is most noticeable this winter and there is a lively scamper for trimmings to match. In some cases there is failure in quest for such colors, in which case other colors must be used. While one color may be used, several materials of the same shade can be combined. For example, one dress of pink satin was trimmed with real pink corals of the same shade. It had a pink yoke and was worn with suede slippers. The sleeves were down up to half length with pink velvet cords, so this, you see, brought out many very good materials.

Apropos of the evening dress, the most noticeable feature is in miniature tight sleeves that covers only half the upper arm and fits very snug to the arm. Strange to say, the sleeve is very plain, but it had best be so, because the corsage is decollete.

On one evening dress of black satin was an apron effect of back pailleted net, with a gold edge. It was pointed at the front at the very edge of the dress, the bib formed the waist front and the sides, which, by the way, were pointed, for the apron was almost a diamond shape and held back with a loose black satin sash that tied low upon the dress. Of course, the back of the dress was very short-waisted.

MR. M'CLYMONT RESIGNS AS GRACE CHOIRMASTER

William E. MacClymont, who, for several years has been the organist and choirmaster at Grace church, has tendered his resignation to take effect May 1. His reason for taking this action are that his position with The Aeolian Company, of New York, requires so much of his time, that he has found it necessary to give up his work here. It is possible that he may not resume organ work again.

For many years Mr. MacClymont has been a prominent figure in local musical circles. His first position here as organist was at the Church of the Holy Cross. From there he went to the First Baptist church, where he remained for a long time and with much success. He then accepted the position as organist at the First Presbyterian church, afterward taking a similar position in New York, which he combined with other work of the same character in other places. He was then engaged as organist and choirmaster at Grace church, which position he has filled with eminent satisfaction.

In addition to his church work, Mr. MacClymont has also been successful in conducting oratorios, musicales and his latest effort here was a comic opera which he produced with great success at the New Plainfield theatre. His organ recitals at Grace church on Sunday afternoons have also attracted considerable attention and through his efforts a fine vested choir was organized. Who his successor will be is not known at present.

SPEAKERS FOR BOARD OF TRADE'S BANQUET

Calvin Tompkins, construction engineer of streets in New York and a man of fame in the building world, has consented to speak at the Board of Trade banquet to be held on Thursday, March 11.

District Court Judge William Newcorn is chairman of the general committee, and it is understood that Henry L. Hall, chairman of the speakers committee, induced Mr. Tompkins to come to Plainfield. A well known college president will be the chief orator at the celebration which will take place possibly at Truell Hall, the scene of last year's banquet. More than three hundred local professional and business men will attend the affair.

CENTRAL NO. 48 INSTALLS, WITH BANQUET AND SMOKER.

The newly elected officers of Central lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., were installed Thursday. Past Grand Master Workman Vincent W. Nash presided. The attendance was unusually large. Following the proceedings a banquet and smoker was held. Timbo served.

These officers were installed: Past Master workman, Henry B. Zimmerman; master workman, Andrew J. Stiglitz; foreman, Fred Bock; overseer, Lewis Alpaugh; recorder, Harvey R. Thorn; financier, William Newcorn; receiver, Charles H. Randolph; guide, Isaac E. Houston; inside watchman, Robert N. Ellis; outside watchman, Edward M. Mosher; trustees, Lorenzo J. Sykes; representatives to Grand Lodge, William Newcorn, Harvey R. Thorn; alternates, Theo. J. Mason, Walter Bradford.

Probably no Christian congregation in Union county, excepting probably that of St. Patrick's R. C., in Elizabeth, has today as fine an edifice as the renovated house of worship of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterians in this city. The extensive improvements costing many thousands of dollars are now complete and the interior of the structure as transformed presents a most beautiful ecclesiastical appearance. James E. Ware & Son, of New York, were the architects and the list of contractors have already been enumerated in this paper.

Among the important features of the changes to the interior of the church is the introduction of old English exposed trusses with their tracery, carrying the lines of the interior up to the roof bridge. These trusses are entirely of chestnut, showing a handsome grain and have been stained an antique walnut color. Under the ends of each truss are dignified Norman columns. The pulpit platform is raised to the height and beautifully treated in Old Norman architecture executed in Caen stone. On the back wall of the niche is a handsome lacquered gold plaque framed with a rich ecclesiastical painted border. Upon the plaque is stenciled in glass mosaic the symbols Alpha and Oemga, and a text from the New Testament.

Five new handsome Gothic pulpit stalls executed in black walnut fit the remainder of the niche directly under the plaque. The centre stall will be occupied by the minister of the church. The other four stalls will be occupied by the ministers of the Warren, Bethel and Hope chapels, and the missionary minister, Changteh, Hunan, China. Each stall bears a beautiful bronze inscription plate.

A complete new lighting scheme has been introduced, adding greatly to the beauty of the interior. From the ends of each truss hang cast bronze electroliers, made from original designs, and carrying out the combined Gothic and Romanesque intermingling of style. Around each fixture is placed eighteen amber and iridescent lights, producing a soft golden glow. The fixtures under the gallery and in the vestibules and staircases leading to the gallery are carried out in harmony with the large electroliers and the effect when illuminated is very churchly. All the side walls and gable ends of the church have been treated with glazed colors to represent old medieval stone work. All the electroliers, organ pipes and plaque in pulpit niche have been finished in dull antique gold. The new windows, throughout the entire interior, have been executed in simple amber glass, producing an effect of warm sunlight within, on the grayest of winter days.

The woodwork, throughout, has been kept in harmony with the present black walnut pews and gallery. The church floor has been covered complete with fine quality quartered oak. Down the aisles will be carried strips of handsome Wilton carpet of a soft olive green color and the gallery will be covered entirely with carpet to correspond. The pews have been re-cushioned, throughout, with fine hair cushions covered with a soft olive green Venetian plush. The effect of the color scheme is extremely quiet, but very rich and dignified; the aim being to produce quiet and restful effects.

Renovations have also been undertaken in the church vestibules, Sunday-school section, and other parts of the building, but the chief point of interest is, of course, the interior of the church proper.

The magnificent pipe organ, which has already been described in these columns, is the gift of Mrs. Elizabeth Hyde and is a memorial to her husband, the late Charles Hyde, one of Plainfield's most distinguished citizens. The instrument cost $25,000, and was constructed by the Skinner Company, of Boston, under the direction of Arthur Gibson, of New York.

PNEUMONIA FATAL TO MRS. MARY U. VOEHL

Mrs. Mary Voehl, wife of Henry A. Voehl, died Saturday morning at her home in Somerset street. She had been ill only two weeks with a cold, when pneumonia set in and resulted in her death.

Mrs. Voehl was in her forty-seventh year. She was born in this city and had lived here all her life. Before her marriage she was Miss Mary Uhrhahn. Her husband and seven children survive her. They are: Misses Emma, Elizabeth, Hattie, Marjorie and Mary Voehl, and Henry and Jacob Voehl, all of this city. She was a devoted member of St. Joseph's church.

P. S. C. AMICABLY SETTLES AN ACTION FOR $10,000.

Annie and Leslie Mathews, of this city, have settled their claim against the Public Service Corporation, for injuries received by Mrs. Mathews a year ago last October.

senger on a main line trolley car near Dunellen, she was thrown against an iron bar and received internal injuries.

Suit was brought against the company for $10,000, but for various reasons and the fact that the conductor of the car was out of the State, the trial was postponed from time to time. S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, represented the complainants and A. A. Clark the defendant company. Counsel has just agreed to a settlement. The terms have not been made public, but it is understood that a large sum was paid the plaintiff.

Notable Firearm Invention.

P. D. Ely, of this city, has invented a firearm which has attracted considerable attention. The object is to limit the vertical dispersion of rifle fire. The invention eliminates all shots badly aimed as to elevation, thereby preventing the present immense waste of ammunition in battle, with its consequent disastrous wear on the bore of the rifle; lessens the difficulties of ammunition supply; insures concentration of fire, renders night firing effective, and vastly improves the morale and efficiency of any army.

"The Wolf" Booked.

Games Tonight.

The Townsend Harris basketball team, greater New York interscholastic champions, '05-'07, will play the major Y. M. C. A. team here tonight. There will also be a game between the Crescent Avenue and Hope chapel Sunday-school teams. The games will be called at 8:15.

Paterson Athletes Coming.

An athletic meet will be held tonight at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium between the Paterson and local associations, beginning at 7 o'clock.

FREEHOLDERS CONSIDER ROAD BUILDING PLAN

Many new ideas in road building were brought out Friday at a meeting of the State Association of County Engineers in the Courthouse. Camden, Union County Engineer L. Bauer, and State Road Commissioner Robert A. Meeker, of this city, who were in attendance, have returned and the latter is prepared to report to Director King and the County Road Committee of the Board of Freeholders on several roads recently built in Camden, which were inspected by the engineers Thursday. It is probable that the director and the members of the committee, who are vastly interested in new methods of building roads will go to Camden to view these roads, with the intention of ascertaining whether the same system could be adopted in this county as an improvement on the present road system.

Union county, as well as all counties in the State, is looking for a kind of road that will withstand heavy automobile traffic, and in view of this the road committee makes a thorough investigation of every kind of road construction.

The roads inspected yesterday by the engineers are of such diverse construction from the usual type of county highway as to merit careful examination, and there is but little doubt that the Freeholder Committee will go to Camden for the purpose of looking at these roads.

One of the roads inspected yesterday is built of what is known as imperial pavement, the method of construction being as follows:

The road material, as found, be it sand, gravel, old macadam, clay or loam, is shaped into the proper cross section and then plowed up to a depth of eight inches. The pavement mixture, a patented preparation, is then applied to the surface from an ordinary sprinkling cart. The mass is then plowed up and harrowed, and this process is continued until three or four applications of the mixture have been made, and the whole mass thoroughly impregnated with the mixture. The road is then rolled with a tamping roller, which rolls, as it were, from the bottom up, and the surface is finished off with an ordinary steam roller. Great claims are made for this road, some of them being that it will not disintegrate with frost or heavy travel, will not become hard and brittle in the winter, nor soft in the summer, will knit together of itself, if opened for trenches, is dustless and very durable. This type of road has been tried in the West in several sections with great success.

In Camden and Gloucester counties there is a stretch of some two miles of this road laid, the cost having been only slightly more than macadam. The road has not been completed long enough as yet to form an accurate estimate of its value in this State. It is at present somewhat soft, but the company states that this is only a temporary trouble.

The other new form of road is what is called "Amelsite," named after its patentee, a Philadelphia man. This is a surfacing of about two inches thickness, of a patented preparation, of which has been first mixed with stone and which forms a coating over every stone, as applied. The coating is applied at the point of the company, and the treated stones are then taken to the ground and made into the road. The lower part of the road is made in the same manner as an ordinary macadam road. The treated stones are then placed on the surface and rolled into compactness with a steam roller.

This roadway makes a surface just as smooth as asphalt, and although hard is not slippery. The company claims that the roadway will never disintegrate from frost or travel, is without dust, and always forms a smooth, hard surface.

Kept Wedding Secret for Joke.

Mrs. Mary T. Du Baum, of No. 26 27th street, Bayonne, announced yesterday the marriage of her daughter, Miss Helen S. Tracy, formerly of Norwalk, Conn., to Charles Hanson, a former resident of Manhattan, on April 25, 1906, by the Rev. Francis B. Beyer, at St. Mark's chapel, New York. Mrs. Hanson said yesterday she had kept the wedding a secret as a joke on her friends.

Dinner and Tea a Success.

The dinner and tea served in Peterson's Casino on Berckman street, Wednesday afternoon and evening for the benefit of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, was a success socially and financially. The affair was held under the direction of Mrs. William Mayhew and Mrs. Alexander Hall, being assisted by other women of the church. They are thankful for the services rendered and the patronage accorded.

Yale Glee Club Coming.

Arrangements were completed today for the appearance of the Yale Glee and Musical Clubs at the Hartridge School auditorium on Friday night, February 22, at 8:30 o'clock. The club are said to be exceptionally good this year. The concert will be followed by the usual dance. Tickets can be had at Armstrong's pharmacy.

FAIR ACRES CLUB DINES

Wm. Hudson Acts as Toastmaster at Riding and Driving Club Banquet.

EXCELLENT REPAST SERVED.

Happy Speeches Are Made by Adam C. Blair, Charles Woolston, Thomas Brantingham and Others.

Good fellowship and a fine dinner were enjoyed at the annual gathering of the Fair Acres Driving and Riding Club at the Hotel Iroquois Thursday. During the evening there was an informal discussion of plans for the coming year whereby the membership of the association is to be increased. William Hudson was toastmaster for the evening and he called upon the several speakers, including Harry Evans, A. C. Blair, Nate Robbins, Lewis Bellis, Charles Woolston, Thomas Brantingham and several others.

The prospects for the year seem to be bright. The club has made an offer for the driving park which is to be sold under foreclosure proceedings, and the members believe that they will be able to get control of the grounds and track which will insure good racing every season. Representatives of the Westfield Driving and Riding Club were present and they felt sure that the coming season would be a success, especially as the racing will be divided between the two places and thus create a rivalry.

The excellent dinner was served by Timbo and was enjoyed by everyone. Among those present were the following.

WOODROW WILSON HAS MANY DATES TO SPEAK

President Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton University, has accepted only a few of numerous invitations to deliver addresses in public functions. On February 5 he will address the Williams College Alumni of New York in that city. The meeting will be in honor of President Garfield, the new executive of Williams, and a former Princeton faculty member. On February 12 Dr. Wilson will be the principal speaker at the Lincoln centenary celebration in Chicago. On February 13, he will address the Princeton Club of Chicago at their annual dinner, returning to Princeton the following day.

On February 19 he will deliver an address before the Presbyterian Union of Baltimore, Md. On February 26 he will address a meeting at the Academy of Music in Philadelphia in the interest of Drexmyer Institute. On March 9 Dr. Wilson will talk on "Civic Reform" before the Civic League of St. Louis, and on March 10 will attend the annual dinner of the Virginia Society of St. Louis in conjunction with the Princeton Club of that city. Dr. Wilson will visit Philadelphia again on March 12, speaking before the University Extension Society on the subject, "Academic Ideals and Public Service."

On March 17 he will address the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick in New York and the next day will speak at Temple Rodeph Sholom in New New York. On March 19 the Princeton Club of Philadelphia will hold their annual banquet, and Dr. Wilson will make an address.

FALL FROM SCAFFOLD KILLS WILLIAM LUTZ.

William H. Lutz, twenty-six years old, met death while at work on the construction of the new Presbyterian Silk Mill at Phillipsburg Wednesday evening. Lutz was one of a gang of carpenters and was standing on a small platform of the false work over the second story of the building. He made a misstep and fell to the floor below, a distance of thirty feet. The foreman and other carpenters in the gang saw Lutz make the misstep, which cost him his life, but were unable to catch him before he went through the timbers. When picked up he was still alive, but died before a physician could reach him.

Coroner Kenney was summoned, and after viewing the body and investigating the circumstances of the accident, issued a certificate of accidental death.

This is the third tragic death in the Lutz family within a short period. The father of the young man was killed while at work by a falling wall about two years ago, and his brother, Andrew Lutz, met death on the railroad at Freemansburg, Pa., a year ago. A wife and one little daughter survive the victim of the silk mill accident.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Every Christian's life should every day be a fresh, new song.—Rev. Dr. John H. Prugh, Reformed, Pittsburg.

The Life We Lead.

The thing that is most admired in a man is not his taste for dress nor his ability to make money, but the kind of life he leads.—Rev. W. W. Bustard, Baptist, Boston.

Man of God.

To be a man of God is to have a title of nobility worn by the prophets of old—the highest expression that a man is capable of becoming.—Rev. C. R. Hemphill, Presbyterian, Louisville.

Life's Final Results.

Many of the final results of your life and teaching will report themselves to you long years after you come before the judgment seat of God.—Rev. Dr. N. Dwight Hillis, Congregationalist, Brooklyn.

Mind and Religion.

The more highly developed the mental life is, the more correctly one thinks, the more complete and perfect his knowledge, other things being equal, the better will be his type of religion.—Rev. John W. Rowlett, Unitarian, Atlanta, Ga.

Heaven on Earth.

If there is anything that is heaven on earth it is for the provider of the family when there is real need of provision to come back with the day's wages or the day's provision for the loved ones.—Rev. Dr. Edward Young, Presbyterian, Brooklyn.

Consecrated Backbone.

Men must possess consecrated backbone in morals. Man is not expected to be a jellyfish morally, but an imperial, majestic vertebrate who stands up to give and receive blows in defense and in behalf of the God who gave him his soul and his lofty estate. —Rev. Dr. Charles Edward Locke, Methodist Episcopal, Los Angeles, Cal.

True Discipleship.

Immorality stands already and sufficiently condemned, but a shallow life must also be contemptible. It is for this that the church must stand in modern life if it would win not only those who are weak, but those who are morally strong. To sacrifice not only the evil, but also the good, this is true discipleship.—Rev. Clayton J. Potter, Congregationalist, Simsbury, Conn.

Growing Like God.

When one's heart throbs go out in kindliness, good will and sympathy and in all the gracious sentiments of brotherhood toward his fellows, then is he growing in likeness to his Father in heaven, and this conduces to the common happiness. Trusting others, they will trust us. Caring for others, they will care for us. Self sacrifice brings life's sweetest reward.—Rev. Junius B. Remensnyder, Lutheran, New York.

Disease Result of Thought.

There are a vast deal of suffering and disease in the world which are the product of men's thoughts. But if a disease is caused by the mind it is certainly reasonable to believe that it can be cured by the mind. To give the sufferer a new outlook upon life, to inspire courage and hope and faith, to renew the forces of the will, to turn away the mind from conditions which have caused nervous overthrow, will bring physical cure.—Rev. C. Waldo Cherry, Presbyterian, Troy, N. Y.

Manifestation of Deity in Nature.

The messages conveyed to us by nature do not need to be translated from the original Greek, and there is nowhere that we can learn a better idea of the majesty of God and his illimitable might. By limiting ourselves to the gospel alone we develop a Christianity that lacks strength and robustness. It is outside the Bible and in nature that we find what may be called the brute energy of God. The laws of nature are the forces by which God has crystallized his will. — Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, Presbyterian, New York.

Value of a Clean Heart.

The man who does not live on good terms with himself, whose mind is not clean within, has very little to hope for in the future, and very little of spiritual cleanness. This is the first thing that the perception of religion as an inner reality does for us. It guarantees our tranquility, our sereneness, our undisturbable calmness here and hereafter. It introduces us to our own selves and says to man, woman and child, "Here you will find God or nowhere." Make clean first the inside of the cup, and the outside shall become clean to you. Ethics, pure social life, must flow from the heart which is fed with divine love. —Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, Unitarian, Washington.

World's Greatest Treasure.

Man's life comes from within. It rises superior to circumstance and situation. It enables him to have happiness even in trial and sorrow. The martyr burning at the stake may be happy even amid suffering. Such strength is not obtained; it is attained —not an acquisition, but a growth. You can buy pleasure, but not happiness. The heart-rich know the secret of God-life's paradox. Peace within the soul and the abiding conviction that the kingdom of heaven is within you give the knowledge and possession of the world's greatest treasure. A man may possess the world and not be happy, but with the soul enriched with eternal things he will be satisfied. This is the secret of the happy life. Happiness is a byproduct of an unselfish life. It is a wayside flower growing along the path of duty. A purpose consecrated to lofty ideals makes worthy the efforts of every one who strives to improve his own character and to uplift mankind.—Rev. Dr. George H. Bickley, Methodist Episcopal, Philadelphia.

HOUSE PLANTS AND WHY THEY DO NOT LIVE.

In almost every house one may find plants growing in pots. In many cases it would be more correct to describe the plants as dying. The short life of the average indoor plant is not to be attributed to careless ness, but to a lack of knowledge on the part of those who tend them.

A plant, like every other living thing, needs food and this food is largely taken from the soil in which it lives, in the form of soluble salts. In Nature the salts are continually being replaced, but in the pot plant this is impossible.

What actually occurs is this: The plant for a time flourishes at the expense of the salts already in the soil, and then begins to show signs of failing. The usual course adopted under those circumstances is to shower the poor plant with water, and with more water, until it eventually dies a lingering death.

When the plant begins to droop it is probably in need of more food, and not of more water.

Clearly, then, attention must be paid not to the plant, but to the soil, and two courses are open to us. We may either repot the plant with fresh soil, or we may add to the surface of the original soil those salts which it has been lost.

Purchase from your chemist a small amount of potassium nitrate and of super-phosphate of lime. It is then only necessary to mix the two powders to obtain a rich and complete fertilizer which, if every few months is spread over the surface of the soil in a little pot in a thin layer, will ensure a rich soil and well fed plant.

The soil in a potted plant should always be kept fairly moist, but should never be very wet to the touch. More plants die of hunger than of thirst, but a still greater proportion are drowned.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW.

Oilcloth can be brightened quickly if after it is washed and dried it is rubbed over with a cloth dipped in skimmed milk.

Be careful in scouring faucets to keep the scouring material out of the inlet, as it is apt to wear on the screws.

If the temper of an iron is spoiled it will never retain the heat so well again. Never let irons stand on the range or get red hot.

A hard-wood floor can be kept free from scratches longer if the legs of chairs have a bit of felt pasted on the bottom. An old felt hat can be utilized.

Meat loaf of chopped veal or beef is made much more moist if three or four tablespoonfuls of cream are added at the last, just before baking.

Perfect cleanliness does much to prevent rats and mice from congregating. If food is not left around the room or closet the rodents rarely favor an occupied house.

An old but successful cure for rats is to rub the edges of their holes with lunar caustic. This must not be touched with the fingers, as it burns them badly.

THE THREE D'S AND THE SEWING CIRCLE.

A few young married women have formed a little sewing circle to meet at each other's houses during Lent. They will sew for the poor and at the close of the afternoon gather round the tea table.

There is but one restriction to these gatherings. The members have sternly forbidden the three D's, and conversation which touches on dress, domestics or disease is strictly tabooed.

To keep the matrons from straying back into familiar conversational paths a fine of ten cents for each offense is imposed upon every one who infringes the new moral code.

The proceeds of the fines are to be devoted to a charity yet to be voted upon. At the first meeting it looked as if they could endow a hospital bed, but at the next one fines had lessened marvelously, nor had the members turned a leaf into use.

To relieve the strain, part of the afternoon was devoted to reading some interesting topic of the day which was later discussed.

Similar vows against the three D's would be excellent Lenten discipline for many women, either in clubs or alone. To realize how large a part of daily conversation is occupied by these three topics one need only decide to cut them out.

TENNIS AND GOLF.

He learned of tennis terms a drove,
Knew what they meant by "forty-love."

But then a new election came,
And Mr. Taft got in the game.

And now to master he doth seek,

A struggle to keep down to date.

A LITTLE SERMON FOR THE BUSINESS GIRL.

Never become careless about your work, and think you are indispensable.

No one is indispensable, so you can't afford to do anything but your best.

No difference how small the undertaking, do it as well as you can.

Be cheerful over your work. If you have to earn your own living, you might just as well be happy as be grumpy over it.

Put your whole heart and soul into doing your work well, and treat all with whom you come in contact courteously.

Attend to business during business hours.

And be punctual.

"What has become of your secretary?" said one merchant to another.

"I had to get rid of her," was the reply.

"Get rid of her! You told me she was the cleverest secretary you had ever tried!"

"She was. But she was never punctual. In the morning when I was ready to dictate letters Miss Jones had either not arrived or was removing her hat or would rush in breathlessly, with her notebook forgotten and her pencils unsharpened.

"After luncheon it was the same thing, and her letters, perfect when finished, never were finished without my either having to wait late to sign them or hold them over until the next day.

"I stood it as long as I could, because she was thoroughly conscientious and dependable in other ways. But her want of respect for the clock ruined her for business.

"My present secretary hasn't half her brains, but she is punctual."

If you are unpunctual you are undependable; if you are undependable you are not wanted. Therefore don't get into the habit of being late —or if you have got into it, get out of it as soon as possible.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

THE ELDERLY PERSON AND THE FASHIONS OF LONG AGO.

Although no one is middle-aged in these days, there are inevitably a few genuine old ladies, and to them Fashion is exceedingly kind. First they have the dainty neck frills of tucked muslin or pleated net to wear inside the collar, which give such a youthful touch (it must have been a surprise to some of them who have always worn this particular finish to wake and find their "frillings" the mode of the moment!); then they have a wonderful choice of most becoming bonnets. Some of the prettiest are made entirely of black miroir velvet, well puckered and fastened down at intervals with dull silk or shiny jet buttons. I have seen these old ladies look bewitching in the "granny" motor bonnet, which may be worn with equal propriety by young and old. Taking things all round, this seems a most auspicious moment for those who have been hovering on the brink of threescore and ten to take the plunge and become old with a good grace. The "frillings" present an opportunity too good to be missed.—Philadelphia Record.

He Got None.

"What's a pun, father?"

"A pun, my son, is a play upon words. There are three kinds of puns; good ones, which you laugh at; indifferent ones, which you take no notice of, and bad ones, which make you throw something at the punster."

"Can't you make a pun, father?"

"Of course, my son! Now, you're thinking about your supper, aren't you?"

"Yes, father."

"Well, that's a supper-most in your mind at the present time. That, you see, is a pun on— Here, you young rascal, what did you throw that book at me for-"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

No Use For It.

Rather dubiously the village postmaster eyed the nondescript canine offered for sale as "a valuable watch dog."

THE FURNISHING OF OUR MODERN HOMES

Many pretty pieces of bric-a-brac are touring this globe under a new name, that of "patrimonial china, purtianical ladies, puritanical this and that. One of the latest little affairs imaginable is a jewel case that has all the appearance of an oval mirror on a silver standard. It is very plain, in fact a dull silver sub ject, save for the tarnished upside down, A-like keyhole is found. When the door is opened it discloses a little nest for small articles of jewelery. When I was told of this was a receptacle for jewelry I thought of a story about a visit to the moon, where the houses all have three doors: One to go in by, one to come out by, and one in the middle to keep locked to keep out the burglars." This is an article which could easily be carried off, but even a safe cracker would be surprised at the trick of the lock and which the ornamental part.

And have you seen the hand-loom rugs? They are of a pattern identical with the bright carpets that once adorned grandmother's parlor. Of course the texture is smoother and some of the colors have softened finish, but they are Colonial from corner to corner. And the colonial mirrors are shown in newer patterns. They are the big-massive affairs that so closely resemble the articles of olden times. The new house wives are eagerly searching for the latest puritanical pieces for their new homes. The modern three-corner cupboard with heavy glass doors is again in use and is found in real or imitation polished cherry.—Woman's National Daily.

FOR THE ONE WHO KNITS AND CROCHETS.

A useful little bag for the girl or woman who knits or crochets is one that holds the ball of yarn and prevents it from slipping from the lap.

The bag is made from a piece of gay ribbon or silk about eight inches long and fourteen or sixteen inches wide. Each end is turned over and gathered around a small brass ring an inch or so in diameter. Enough opening is left in the seam at one side to slip in a ball of yarn.

When the ball is in place the part of the seam is hooked over upon the other to keep the ball inside and the end of the yarn is taken up through the ring at the top.

These little bags may be made in any size to fit knitting balls of any dimensions. A smaller ring should be used for crocheting spools or balls of silk.

To Eradicate Moles.

Moles on the face are now being successfully treated by the use of sodium ethylate. The mole is painted with the sodium ethylate, a fine glass rod being used. When the mole has a varnished look the ethylate is gently rubbed with the glass rod to make it penetrate deeply. The mole turns nearly black, and a hard crust forms over it, which is nearly three weeks in becoming detached. When it comes off the mole is much lighter than before, and this treatment can be continued until the mark is scarcely noticeable.—Family Doctor.

Trouble for the New Tenant.

"What are you going to do with all those things?" was ask of our friend, who is buying a drum, a trumpet, a toy pistol, a xylophone, a pair of cymbals and various other noise-producers.

"Going to give them to the little son of the man who has the flat over ours."

"Gracious! You'll not get a wink of sleep."

"Yes, I will. We move out of our flat the day before Christmas."—Chicago Post.

Four a Cough.

A simple home-made cure for a bad cough or to relieve hoarseness is to be found by mixing ten drops of aromatic spirits of ammonia with a teaspoonful of glycerine. Stir the ammonia in with the end of a knitting needle so that it does not burn the throat.

If preferred, a bottle of this preparation may be mixed at once, using the same proportions. It should be kept tightly corked. This simple cure if taken in time will not only relieve but break up a threatened bad cold.

Can't Resist Him.

E'en though no glow of sun or star illumes your weary way,
Just make your peace with trouble and plod on from day to day.
Who knows? Tomorrow fortune may unbend and deign to smile—
She's bound to love a fellow who keeps hoping all the while!

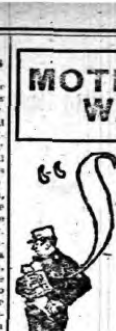
Constitutionalist ads pay.



"SOME are born victims, some achieve," Lucy hesitated.

"Some achieve victims and some have victims thrust upon them," finished Miss Haywood, promptly. "If you are going to paraphase, paraphase to the bitter end. But why this pessimistic outburst?"

"Oh, I have victims thrust upon me," said Lucy, laughing. "Of all the easy marks—to quote my brother Frank—my mother is the limit—still quoting my brother Frank. We never know what portion of our belongings have been handed out to some one who asked for them. Frank kept his closet locked until the day he was invited to spend the night at Glenwood and forgot to give the key to the porter when he sent for his clothes. Mother had always felt injured by the lockedcloset arrangement, but when she saw her face when Frank came home in a state of foaming wrath. She looked like the cat that ate the canary. He hasn't locked it since then, though he runs big risks.

"Last week when I came home I found mother in tears. She refused to explain for some time, I think she had made up her mind never to tell, but she craved sympathy. It seems that a young man in uniform—she dwelt upon the uniform as an extenuating circumstance—had come to the door with an express package from New York upon which there was a charge of $1.55. She said she told him she didn't know any one in New York and she thought it queer any one would send a person with a charge on it and she thought $1.55 too much and she had only $1.50 anyway. The messenger refused the reduced rates and was going away with the package when mother managed to scrape up four pennies, which he accepted.

"I can just imagine her look of pleased expectancy as she opened the package, and the awful realization when she saw the cake of soap and the lot of tissue paper she drew.

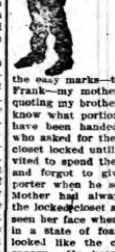
"Well, she pledged me to secrecy. She pretends not to mind Frank's teasing, but she does. A few evenings later Frank was looking over the paper and said, after making various exclamations all bearing on the incredible gullibility of women: 'Trot out your gold brick, mother. Any decoiver might buy it now and this fellow must have sold you one.'

"Poor innocent mother said with great dignity that it wasn't a gold brick, but a cake of soap, and that she knew she didn't know much, but she knew enough not to buy a gold brick and that no one would have been taken in by his uniform and that she always thought she could trust me to keep my word.

"Nothing that Frank or I could say would convince her that her confidence was not betrayed.

"One Saturday she was in a perfect fever, hunting for cents. She refused all offers of dimes and nickels with the mysterious remark that she did not want to give him so much. I naturally suggested that if he hadn't the change she might tell him to call again, but she paid no attention to me. I went out into the kitchen to see what manner of tradesman the man was. On the edge of a chair sat a brisk-looking old man twirling his hat very impatiently. After mother returned triumphantly with the penny she remembered to have seen in the bottom of a drawer and I had dug one out of little Jim's bank with the edge of a knife, he said: 'God bless you, but you've been a long time,' and departed.

"Frank came in then and she said apologetically that he was a poor old man to whom several women in the neighborhood paid a weekly tribute of two cents for his room rent. She said he must be a nice old man or he would ask for more than two cents. A stroke of logic made Frank speechless. Then when he burst into a laugh mother said that from the time he was a child he never had much sense—which was a very scathing remark for her.



Mother.

"But when the old man failed to appear for two of three weeks mother was so worried that Frank went and looked him up, which wasn't an easy task."

"Was he a millionaire or a miser?" asked Miss Haywood.

"Neither," said Lucy. "He was just a poor old man who was trying to keep from going to the poorhouse.

"Since that old man has been found worthy mother has a strong weapon of defense when we tell her she is easily imposed upon.

"After all, I'd rather have her as she is and run the risk of being robbed than have her any other way."

NERVES OF LEARNED PEOPLE.

May Be Calmed by Silence, Solitude and Sleep, Says One Writer.

In an article on "Nerves," published in Harper's Bazaar, the story is told of one of our noted scientists who went to Dresden to consult the famous specialist for broken-down nerves. On hearing his symptoms the great physician said, indifferently:

"Ach, so! It is probable that you have—as all the gelehrten (learned) have—neurasthenia naturally." The remedy suggested was "Play golf and go to Egypt. You can get Munich beer in Cairo, though it is disgustingly expensive there."

Silence, solitude and sleep are the foreign remedies suggested for jagged nerves. Slight daily doses of the three "S's," it is claimed, will prevent a nervous breakdown, and may be obtained by even the most busy people. But, of the three, the form of a "berthenia" is at once a warning and a consolation to the brain worker. To "drive the machine" with skill and care is the problem of the successful American.

The writer of this article urges that we ought to thank God that we live long to the most nervous, restless, all pervading race the world has seen since the days of Julius Caesar. It is our "nerves" that make us what we are.

Advice for Those Who May Lose Their Way in the Woods.

Let the man who is lost in the woods be very careful not to overexert himself. His chief danger is in panic and overexertion, said though he may be in a great hurry to find shelter, I must warn him to go slowly. Two miles an hour, on an average, through the snow in the woods, is all that a man in his condition will be able to stand without overfatigue and its attendant dangers, overheating and perspiration. By exercising caution, a man may live through a week of what he is undergoing. To make this brief, let us shall suppose that he regains the road by the afternoon of the first day. He doesn't yet know, of course, just where he is. He should examine the tracks of the person who last passed that way. In being afternoon, he must follow the direction taken by the last passing vehicle or team, as shelter will be nearest in that direction. Had it been morning he would have taken the opposite direction, as whoever made the tracks must have come from the place where he obtained shelter the previous night.—Outing Magazine.

And that is because, in spite of poets and other kickers, commerce has steadily come on.

DEEP SILK FRINGES ARE PRETTY AND BECOMING.

Exceedingly graceful and becoming is a dress which shows now very effectively deep silk fringes can be arranged on chic gowns both for day and evening wear. In the present instance a rich crepe de chine is the fabric chosen, bright and soft in texture as satin, and selected in a lovely shade of turquoise blue.

The graceful tunic, which represents quite le dernier cri, is cut in one with the lightly draped bodice, and is brought high on one side, where it forms a kind of square tablier, bordered with silk fringe in the same shade of blue.

The tunic draperies are then taken round to the back of the waist, whence they fall, in the form of long slash ends, bordered with fringe, and reaching to the hem of the skirt. The bodice is outlined with the same silk fringe, and is then in form of a berthe, and arranged in such a way that the strands of silk fall like epaulettes over either shoulder.

The front of the bodice is filled in with fine silver lace, sewn with tiny diamond trimmings, and bordered here and there with turquoise cabouchons, while the sleeves are made entirely of the same jeweled dentelle. Clusters of forget-me-nots are worn in the hair, showered with tiny diamond dewdrops.

With satin or crepe de chine, bordered with deep silk fringe, are being used just now, arranged in many different ways, to drape the closefitting satin frocks which are so generally worn for dinners and receptions this season. The skirts have many advantages, since, with a little skilful adjustment, they can be made to break most becomingly the somewhat severe lines of the Empire and Directoire gowns.

A USE FOR OLD PIECES OF LEATHER.

Do not throw away the old shoes, or the gauntlets of heavy riding gloves or other pieces of leather. They are excellent as an interlining for iron holders.

Do not make the holder too large, as it is clumsy to handle. Those which are oval in shape are preferable. Cut the covering and the interlining just the size of the holder. Bind the thicknesses on the machine, close to the edge of the material, then bind with a tape or piece of seam binding.

Another use for old leather is to make small mats, on which bottles from the milk cups may be set from the bathroom. This prevents the heat or liquid from staining the marble on a stationary washstand or woodwork. Such mats need not be covered, but can be either pinked neatly on the edge or can be bound with a slice of gay ribbon.

The tops of shoes if cut into squares and provided with a tape hanging close to the range are good substitutes for dish cloths when handling hot pots. Insist upon the cook's using these after lifting, and the kitchen linen will last twice as long.

HEMMING THE TABLE LINEN.

Every woman who has ever attempted to lay hems on napkins or tablecloths or to hem them after they are laid, knows the impossibility of doing them quickly or well if the stiffening is not first removed.

One way to get them in proper condition is to rub the linen between the fingers and thumbs along the entire length of the hem. This gets out the stiffness and prevents needles from breaking.

Another and better method is before laying hems particularly, is cut apart, wet it along the line of division and for about an inch on each side with a small toothbrush dipped in soapsuds. Not only will the thread draw with few, if any, breaks, but the hem can be laid with much greater ease.

Never attempt to cut linen by the eye. It takes little more time to draw a thread, and that is easily made up by the quickness and accuracy with which the hem is laid.

In hemming table linen, fold it over twice to the desired depth of hem, then turn back, crease and overcast neatly on the wrong side. This makes much neater effect than hemming in the usual way.

The Flat-Chested One.

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION

CITY APPROPRIATES $300.50.

Request Made That All Residences and Business Houses Be Decorated—General Observance.

In compliance with the suggestion of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, the Common Council at its regular meeting Monday night, appropriated $300 towards the expenses attendant upon the celebration of the citizens Lincoln centenary celebration on Friday, February 12. This action was taken by a resolution offered by Mr. Burton, who filed a certificate from the Secretary of State officially notifying the Council of its right to do so in accordance with an act of the Legislature adopted a few days ago. The resolution was adopted.

Following the appropriation of the money for the celebration, Clerk James T. MacMurray read the proclamation of Mayor Fisk pertaining to the observance of Lincoln's birthday. This is the proclamation:

"On the twelfth day of February next will occur the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln.

"By the law of our State his birthday has been made an annual legal holiday; but the coming anniversary of his birth demands more than the customary observance.

"Born in obscurity, when the place of his birth and early manhood, that is now a part of the great middle west, was on the frontier of the Republic, and reared amidst privations and hardships, with few, if any, of the advantages now obtainable by the youth of our day, he surmounted all difficulties and rose by sheer personal merit to the Presidency of the Republic and died a martyr's death when but fifty-six years of age.

"He stood for freedom and the equality of men. He exemplified the pure in personal, domestic and public life. He, as few others ever did, had the confidence of the people. He sprang from them, was of them, and they loved an honored him.

"His life and work are unique in American history. To recall his humble birth, his privations, sacrifices, virtues, utterances, principles, and public acts will encourage youth, strengthen the cause of truth and right in all men, and to elevate our standards of political honesty.

"Therefore, I, Charles J. Fisk, Mayor of the city of Plainfield, N. J., do hereby call upon all the residents of our city, to cause suitable exercises to be arranged for, and do further recommend that all places of business be closed and that all stores and residences be suitably decorated with our national colors."

Attention was called to the fact last night that former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, chairman of the citizens' committee on Lincoln celebration, had requested all of the members to attend the exercises to be held February 12, and as many as possible will be present.

NORWAY AND PROHIBITION.

There has been widely published throughout Norway the manifesto of an organization formed at Christiania by representatives from all parts of the country to combat the prohibition movement. It contains the signatures of 650 prominent men and women, seventy of them physicians. It invites every community to organize against the aggressive Prohibition party. Its program is to protect individual and commercial liberty, to oppose the misuse of intoxicating drinks, to erect asylums for drunkards, and to spread the knowledge of sound principles of living, of health and hygeiene.

The new organization will not be affiliated with any political party, but will prepare to fight the Prohibitionists at all local elections. Its motto is "Liberty and Civilization Against Prohibition and Corcelon." A large portion of the press hails it with enthusiasm as a practical instrument to free the country from prohibition.

A. B. Dunavan's Injury.

A. B. Dunavan, of East Second street, a driver for the Standard Oil Company at the local branch, has just experienced a narrow escape from a severe case of blood poisoning. Six weeks ago he cut his hand, but as the laceration healed quickly, he thought nothing of it. On Saturday blood poisoning developed and only through prompt medical aid was serious consequences prevented. The progress of the disease has been checked and no further trouble is anticipated.

AMUSEMENTS.

Blanche Ring, lately a star feature of Joe Weber's stock company, will return to vaudeville for the first time this season at the Colonial the forthcoming week, presenting some new songs, amongst them her famous "Yip-I-Ady." Miss Ring probably has to her credit more song successes than any other artist in her line. Besides her vivacious rendering of such "classics" as "Bedelia," "My Irish Molly-O," "Waltz Me Around Again Willie" and "In the Good Old Summer Time" which gave to them their tremendous vogue. Besides Miss Ring, Miss Annette Kellerman will continue to disport herself in the water tank, presenting her graceful diving feats as well as her attractive and skilful exhibition of "Diabolo." E. J. Connotlly and his company will present George Ade's one act comedy, "Marse Covington;" Willard Simms and his company will be seen in a farce entitled "Flander's Furnished Flat;" Julius Tannen, whose likeable and easy monologue is a favorite with audiences, will be on hand with some excellent new imitations and bright talk.

With all the wonderful weekday features the New York Hippodrome will have still more attractions when tomorrow night it will introduce in New York for the first time Lyman H. Howe's Lifeorama, presenting in great motion pictures the first views of the Italian earthquake. This will be the first spectacle of these pictures which Mr. Howe only secured after great energy and expense. The traveler has been all over the stricken country and his knowledge of the localities effected by the earthquake makes the selection of pictures the best and truest. In addition to this series other subjects of travel and historic interest will be shown. Mr. Howe, who is the best known of picture men, has met with remarkable success in the country. His arrangement with Messrs. Shubert & Anderson gives him his first opportunity to present his wonder pictures in New York. The Hippodrome's big week day show still continues to draw the largest audiences the big playhouse has ever known. The new circus is the most remarkable areic performance ever given in this country.

SHOWS JERSEY'S WORK IN THE WHITE PLAGUE.

Dr. Charles J. Hatfield, one of the greatest tuberculosis authorities in the United States, addressed a mass meeting at Trenton Thursday night, the theme being "Cases of Consumption—An Important Step in the Campaign of Prevention." Dr. Hatfield said in part:

In the State of New Jersey there were last year 3,500 deaths from consumption, and the city of Trenton had the highest death rate from the disease. If the ratio is in proportion to that of Philadelphia, there are as many deaths from consumption here as all other diseases put together.

Dr. Hatfield claimed that consumption is preventable disease and that from the preventatives already taken the deaths from consumption have decreased 40 per cent in the last 25 years. He advocated as preventative methods, first, the reporting of each case to the proper authorities; second, the disinfection of the house in which tuberculosis has existed; third tuberculosis dispensaries for those who are unable to pay for treatment; fourth, a nurse to visit patients at their homes; fifth, medical inspection of the schools, and sixth, sanitoria for curable cases and hospitals for advanced cases.

New Jersey has made a beginning. There is a State law which is not especially well enforced, requiring notification. There are State tuberculosis dispensaries, and an energetic campaign is being carried on by the State association.

Dr. Hatfield told of the importance of the care of advanced cases of the disease, and gave figures of the fighting of the disease in foreign countries and told of their hospitals. He advocated hospitals situated in or near cities on the plan of the Henry Phipps Institute, in Philadelphia, and urged strongly the carrying out of the movement in Trenton to set aside the Municipal Hospital for the care of tuberculosis. He spoke of the lack of funds, but urged a beginning to be made at once, to start with one room, if necessary, and for Trenton to show the rest of the State how the problem should be solved.

Garrison on Export Data.

With a view of increasing the export trade of New Jersey manufacturers, the bureau of statistics of labor and industries, of which Winton G. Garrison is chief, has undertaken the compilation of data relative to the conditions in foreign markets. The subject is one which is exhaustively dealt with in the consular reports published at Washington. The purpose of the bureau is to collate data of interest to the particular industries in this State.

Force & Co. Incorporated.

Articles of incorporation were filed at Elizabeth Saturday by A. E. Force & Co., of West Front street. The company will carry on a general merchandise and real estate business. The capital is $100,000, and the company will begin business with $50,000. The incorporators are Eugene S. Stull, of Wyncotte, Pa., Arthur E. Force and John J. Varley, of this city.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES AS PASTOR SEES THEM

By request of members of his congregation, Rev. A. E. Finn, at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday morning repeated one of his sermons, "The Signs of the Times." The great strides in recent years of foreign evangelization was given as a significant interpretation of the signs as an answer to the prayers of the forefathers. Only in late years had missionaries been admitted to heathen countries.

The foreign kingdoms were now wide open, and through the student volunteer movement, there were plenty of missionaries. The only thing lacking was the money with which to send them.

One of the greatest signs of the times was the church's return to reason. Conferences were no longer held to discuss articles and creeds. The meetings of today were given to the study of God's word. There was a coming back to the old book.

Lecturers on agnosticism and infidelity were seldom heard of, in fact the very words were becoming obsolete. The only obstacle to religion, therefore, was in the church itself, and that obstacle was declared to be neglect of duty.

There now were only three great religions, Dr. Finn said, Christianity, Mohammedanism and Buddhism. The latter was bending itself towards the cross, while Mohammedanism stands for war and polygamy. God's command to his followers to "go and teach all nations," was a commission from Heaven.

DEVIL'S PRICES HIGH; ACCEPTS ONLY SOULS

Ministers who drink wine, thus setting a harmful example before the young men, were denounced by Rev. Samuel G. Snowden, of Elizabeth, speaking at the Y. M. C. A. men's meeting Sunday. He promised to make his remarks in "plain English," and he did.

The devil was represented as an auctioneer, who would accept no bids that did not offer unconditionally the soul of the bidder. The devil would bestow great wealth but in exchange he must have the soul of the bidder. Money would not be enough. He would give high office and position, but must have for it the soul of man. Anything less would be too cheap.

The devil would dispose of a keg of fine old liquor, which was guaranteed to produce joy and happiness for a few hours. It also had the power of producing misery; its effects were wonderful. In exchange for this remarkable brass bound keg the devil would take the soul, nothing less. A bidder might offer up his happy home, his reputation or honor, but the devil would say those things were too cheap. He must have man's soul.

VACANCY DEADLOCK IN COMMON COUNCIL

After three ballots in secret session, Monday night, the city fathers could not agree on a successor to Robert E. Hall, who had tendered his resignation as a member from the Second ward. Frank L. Holt, of that ward, presented the name of Thomas M. Day, while Franklin L. Montgomery, also of the Second, nominated Wilbur M. Alling. In each case the vote stood five to five. It is understood that if the Second ward members can come to some agreement a special meeting of the body will be held this month to fill the vacancy; otherwise the election will not take place until the March meeting.

While the Common Council was holding its executive session, A. B. Davies, Edward E. Iremonger and Robert H. McCready, all of whom favored the selection of Sidney S. Schuyler, were invited to give their views, which they did. A petition signed by most of the "hill" residents in the Netherwood section, favored Mr. Schuyler, among the signers being William Palmer Smith, S. A. Cruikshank, Clifton Wharton, H. P. Talmadge and R. A. Letcher. R. Henry Denew had circulated petition for Mr. Day and among the signers was George P. Mellick.

PROPOSE LOCAL OPTION FOR SUNDAY OPENING

Assemblyman Keffer, of Atlantic City, introduced a bill in the House Monday, providing for open saloons on Sunday, if the people by a municipality decide. It provides that a special election may be held on the petition of 10 per cent of the legal voters of a municipality to decide whether the saloons may be open on Sunday. Governing councils may restrict the hours during which saloons shall be open, but under no circumstances shall they compel their closing between 12 and noon and 12 midnight on Sunday.

The House Judiciary Committee gave a hearing this afternoon on Mr. Hall's bill defining the liquor maximum tax law. Among those who spoke for the measure were Assemblyman Martin, James Nugent, city counsel of Newark; George L. Record, and Noah Guter, secretary of the Anti-Saloon League. The bill was opposed by Jackson Reynolds, for the Central Railroad, and Holt Apgar, of the Mercer County Tax Board.

Alexander no Candidate.

James H. Alexander, a former vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, who was president of Elizabeth's Board of Police Commissioners that was abolished by the Legislature some years ago, is favored by many persons there for president of the dual Board of Fire and Police Commissioners, if the bill now before the Legislature becomes a law.

Mr. Alexander, however, stated yesterday that under no circumstances would he consent to become a member of the commission. He said he had been drawn against his desire into the old commission, but while a member of it had tried to do his duty. Mr. Alexander was one of the most energetic men on the board, and used to personally patrol the streets at night to see if the police were doing their duty. He is still connected with the Standard Oil Company, but not in an official capacity, he having practically retired.

DR. ZELIE REJOICES OVER IMPROVEMENTS

The text for the sermon Sunday morning at the recently repainted Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was taken from the 28th chapter of II Chronicles. "So the services of the house of the Lord was set in order. And Hezekiah rejoiced and all the people, because of that which God had prepared for the people: for the thing was done suddenly."

Dr. Zelie compared the completed re-decoration of the Crescent Avenue church with Hezekiah's cleansing of the temple, dwelling on the suddenness of both. He said the sudden way in which God sends many of his richest blessings is in itself a blessing because of the unexpected quality which the resultant happiness contains. Dr. Zelie also remarked on the strange circumstances which permitted so expensive an undertaking to go through successfully in times of marked financial depression when the same scheme had been tried and failed completely a few years before in the season of th country's greatest prosperity.

INJURED IN AN EXPLOSION

LOCAL MAN BADLY BURNED.

Joseph M. Hawkins, of East Seventh street, an engraver by the American Bank Note Company, New York, is in a serious condition at his home suffering from severe burns about the face, head and arms, the result of an explosion at his place of business. He is engaged in what is known as the hardening room, where cyanide is used in the process of making plates, and while demonstrating some work to a solicitor last Thursday he caused an explosion of a small quantity of the poisonous drug. His face and arms received the full force of the combustion and as a result he lost his eyebrows, a portion of his hair and his arms were burned to the elbows. Fortunately, his eyesight was not injured.

Mr. Hawkins received temporary treatment in New York and was then brought to his home in this city, where he is now under the treatment of Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan. As the cyanide is deadly poison, his physician is now trying to counteract the effect of it. While his condition is serious, Dr. Buchanan believes that he will recover in a short time. The man who was with Mr. Hawkins at the time of the accident, had his overcoat ruined, the whole front being burned by the explosion.

Mr. Hawkins is well known here and is active in religious circles. At the Park Avenue Baptist church he holds several offices in the Sunday-school and is a member of a number of important committees. He has been employed by the American Bank Note Company in New York for many years, his sister, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, also holding a position of great responsibility with the same company.

GREATEST AMERICAN SUBJECT OF LECTURE

George N. Cross delivered the third and last of his series of lectures at the city hall school Saturday night. His subject was "Abraham Lincoln, the Great American," and was illustrated with some excellent pictures associated with the life of Lincoln.

The reminiscences by the lecturer were intensely interesting and as is usual with all stories that concern the martyred President, held the close attention of the audience. Considering that photography in those days had not reached an advanced stage, the pictures shown by Mr. Cross were of a high order. He related an instance of a photographer endeavoring to secure a picture of Lincoln during his famous Gettysburg speech. He was using the old fashioned wet plates and Lincoln had finished his speech and departed by the time the artist got his camera into action.

OPPOSES A DIVERSION OF THE SCHOOL MONEY

In a letter to the Trenton True American, Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of Plainfield's public schools, takes ground against the proposed scheme to divert public school money.

Dr. Maxson says:

"Every parent ought to fight the Governor's effort to divert the railroad tax money from the schools. The present proposition to take away $900,000 is but the entering wedge. It will result in taking away the rest as soon as it is thought public sentiment will permit it.

"As a result of the greater liberality in finances, New Jersey schools have made great advancement in the last few years. They now offer the best conditions of any State in the union. We are succeeding in the best teaching ability from every direction and our children are reaping the benefit.

"The proposed diversion of the tax money will inevitably result in checking this growth, and will entail material loss on the next generation. Every one who wants his child to have the best possible equipment for life, ought to resist strenuously the present effort to change the conditions which have so much improved the child's educational outlook."

Stryker Wins Shoot.

ILLUSTRATED MISSION ADDRESS ON AFRICA

The African missionary field was depicted in stereopticon pictures at the Congregational church Sunday. The service had been given over to the women of the church who provided this instructive form of entertainment.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich, the pastor, explained the views as they were thrown on the screen, and also related a number of interesting anecdotes concerning the life among the natives of Africa. The pictures related mainly to that portion of the dark continent where missionaries are being supported. The kraals of the black tribes, their crude huts and scanty costumes had changed but little since the time of David Livingston, the first of the African missionaries, and who died while in the service.

A view of the stump which marks the burial place of his heart, was shown, surrounded by a high picket fence. It had been the notion of the blacks among whom Livingston lived that as he had lived Africa so much, there his heart should remain, and accordingly it was removed from the body and buried with great ceremony.

The display of pictures demonstrated the great work that is being carried on there, supported by the churches and organized societies of this country. Offerings were made to add to this fund.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. FLETCHER

The funeral service of Mrs. Gilbert B. Fletcher was held from the late home on West Seventh street, Saturday afternoon. There was a large gathering of mourners, including relatives and many friends, who had known and admired Mrs. Fletcher for her excellent qualities. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, conducted the service, reading Scripture selections, offering prayer and making a few remarks. The service was a simple one throughout.

There was a large and beautiful display of floral tributes, one entire room being reserved for them. They came from Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., of which Mr. Fletcher is a member; from the former Whatsoever Circle, of King's Daughters of Trinity Reformed church, of which Mrs. Fletcher was a member; while there were a number of tributes from business associates of Mr. Fletcher in New York.

The remains were placed in the receiving vault at Hillside cemetery. The pall-bearers were Frank Fletcher, William Fletcher and Loren Fletcher, brothers of Gilbert B. Fletcher; Clarence Anderson, John G. MacLaughlin and Robert Giddes.

FIRE REVEALS WEDDING

LOSS IS PLACED AT $70,000.

A fire which totally destroyed the home of former Assemblyman Randolph Perkins, at Woodcliff Lake near Hackensack on Saturday, indirectly revealed the fact that Mr. Perkins has been secretly married for some time to his housekeeper's daughter, Mrs. Wallace, a widow. Mrs. Morris, the housekeeper, said that Mr. Perkins and his bride were spending their honeymoon at Atlantic City.

The housekeeper and servants, the only occupants of the house, barely escaped being hemmed in by the flames. As there is no fire department in the town many persons in the neighborhood tried to put out the blaze, among them being Huntsman T. Mason, who was the former leader of a religious band who called themselves the "Angel Dancers." The Perkins home was built by Walter Stanton, a former New York banker, at a cost of $70,000.

Mr. Perkins is a lawyer, with offices in Jersey City. In 1906 he was Republican leader of the New Jersey Assembly, and represented Union County. He lived for a time at Westfield.

The thirtieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. John Stevens, of Watchung avenue, was celebrated Monday by a party of more than one hundred of their friends surprising them at their home. The couple had spent a quiet, but happy day, and were taken entirely unawares by the company which broke suddenly in and took possession of the place.

Mr. Stevens was born at Waverly, Illinois, but has lived here the greater part of his life, and still is engaged in blacksmithing.

The surprise last night was planned by the members of Old Glory council, Daughters of Liberty, of which they are members. A number of beautiful gifts were received by the couple. Refreshments were served and dancing and other amusements helped to make the evening one of enjoyment.

Stryker, December 22 last. There are nine other indictments against the men. Trial on the other charges will be begun today. In his summing up prior to the jury's retirement, Prosecutor Crossley made allusions to Shevlin's wife and child who have been present each day of the trial, and the prisoner bowed his head and wept.

Rohrer's attitude was one of defiance until the verdict was announced, but since then he has been noticeably worried. The defense was advanced that while the two men had been criminals in the past, they had been living honest lives since they married. Both are non-residents of this State.

Mrs. Francis Hastings Flannery, of New York, sister of the groom, was also a member of the bridal party. She was gowned in pale pink messaline with lace and gold trimmings and fringe, empire style, and a wedding march was played by Miss Anna E. Nield, of Indian Orchard.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held, when Dr. and Mrs. Herring received the congratulations of the guests and refreshments were served. The bride was showered with a great array of beautiful and costly gifts from relatives and friends. Later in the afternoon the couple left for the south where they will remain for three weeks. Upon their return they will reside at the Waldorf on Crescent avenue. An elaborate reception will be given to them at the First Presbyterian church, under the auspices of the Pastor's Aid Society Thursday, February 25.

The bride was formerly a resident of this city and engaged as a teacher in the Franklin Public School. She is a member of the First Presbyterian church and has always been very active in the work there. Dr. Herring has been the pastor of the First Presbyterian church for a number of years, succeeding the Rev. K. P. Ketcham. He is a graduate of Columbia College, after which he took a post-graduate course at the New York University and Oxford.

AFTERNOON TEA AND ITS SERVING.

Afternoon tea is growing to be a fixture, and surely those who make a habit of serving it are the popular housekeepers.

The girl who wants to get a reputation for delicious tea-making should have on her tea table the various frills that are now served with the afternoon cup.

Cream in equal silver or cut-glass jugs is there for the grandfather, who has never lost his old-fashioned taste for creamed tea, and for granddaughter, who takes it to be English.

Lemon, the most generally used flavoring, should be cut in thin slices with the rind cut off and piled in over-lapping layers on a flat plate. Special dishes are now shown for lemon. They are flat plates of rock crystal, with a silver rim. They resemble the crystal butter dish, but are much smaller. A tiny silver pickle fork lies across the slices.

For the man who likes a few drops of rum in his tea, in addition to lemon, a fine quality of Cuban rum is kept in a liquor jug of glass or glass overlaid with silver.

A delicious addition to the tea made with lemon is a clove or two. This imparts an Oriental flavor that is most refreshing.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

THE LINCOLN STAMP BILL.

Senator Ackerman's bill, for such it may properly be called, seems to have commended itself to Congress as exactly the measure to be passed at this time, in honor of the Lincoln centennial. The bill has been favorably reported in the House of Representatives, and thus far seems to have aroused no opposition. No one can definitely predict its ultimate fate, but from present appearances it is destined to speedy enactment.

Should it become a law it will provide that a special issue of two cent stamps, shall be authorized, with the Lincoln head in the place of that of Washington. This is an innovation without precedent, for, up to the present time, th stamp which represents the unit of letter postage has borne only the head of Washington. The proposition, however, seems to meet with approval outside of Congress as well as within that body.

The New York Tribune, after crediting Senator Ackerman with activity and effective leadership in the commemorative movement, hopes the measure will succeed, because "Washington alone excepted, there is no face more familiar to Americans than that of Lincoln, but it will be well to have it, if possible, made still more familiar by giving it, in this way, the widest possible circulation."

Senator Ackerman may be congratulated upon his ability to introduce a bill in Congress without having a member of that body, and it will occur to some voters that it should be given greater facilities in this direction. It should be remembered, however, that Mr. Ackerman could have had the Republican nomination for Congress sixteen years ago, but declined it.—Newark News.

Credit is due Senator Ackerman of Union county, among others, for the active interest taken in the Lincoln stamp. It now appears that the Postmaster-General could not withstand the pressure which urged this little tribute to one of America's great men. Public opinion has won out. Possibly Senator Ackerman, who was certainly one of the first to become interested to carry out the plan and thus by his influence to develop it, is more widely deserving of thanks than most people think. His interest in this instance comes not only from the fact that he is a stamp collector, but also because of his sincere and deep appreciation of the life and character of Lincoln.—Elizabeth Journal.

SUICIDE IN ELIZABETH.

Charles H. Becker, of Elizabeth, was found unconscious in his room in that city Saturday afternoon by his wife, and it developed that he had taken carbolic acid and had cut an artery in his wrist. He was taken to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, where he died shortly after arriving. His family can not account for his act, as he had not appeared despondent, nor was there anything wrong with his affairs, as far as could be learned. He held a good position with the Singer Manufacturing Company at Elizabeth and was well liked. He was 45 years old and leaves a widow, two daughters and one son.

The Tell-Tale.

"I am too busy to listen," exclaimed the mother when her little girl went to her to tell her what a young sister did, "but you go to the dad and write down what Elizabeth has and I will punish her if she did anything wrong." You may be sure the little tattler soon grew tired of telling tales. Once she rebelled against writing the incident, but was compelled to go back into the room and write what she wanted to say. After a while it dawned upon her that she, too, was committing an offense in telling so much, and it was not long before the little girl was able to overcome the deplirable habit.—Margaret Humphreyville, in Woman's National Daily.

LICENSE PLAN TO HELP

MEANS $640,000 FOR STATE.

Proposed Raise of Fees Would Also Bring Much More Money to Municipalities.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, president of the State Excise Commission did not "bombard" Governor Fort with figures and recommendations to solve the State's financial troubles Wednesday. In fact the mayor did not even see the Governor but merely left some data with his son, Leslie Fort, who had presumed gave them out to the newspapers where they appear in a garbled form. That he has no recommendations, but that he merely wished to call attention to the excise commission's plan for gaining revenue for the State is the emphatic assertion made to a representative of The Daily Press this morning. The published figures credited to him he says are all wrong and put him in a ridiculous light.

"At present the excise revenue amounted to approximately $2,700,000," said Mr. Fisk today. "If the plan proposed by the excise commission were to be adopted this would amount to $6,400,000, an increase of $3,700,000. Now allowing that the saloons would be decreased one-third, it would still mean that the total receipts would be $4,200,000. Should twenty per cent of the amount be given the State, as Mr. Matthews would have it, it would mean that the State would get $840,000 from this source, and it would mean $1,500,000 more for the municipalities, an increase of $700,000.

"In Essex county," continued the mayor, "for 1908, the receipts were $695,576.81, and under the proposed plan of the commission they would amount to $1,676,250, a net gain of $980,673.19. Again, for Hudson, the receipts were $868,795.83, and under our plan they would approximate $2,127,000, an increase of $1,-258,204.17. In Union the receipts for 1908 was $125,520.00. The excise commission's plan would bring it up to $310,500, a gain of $184,-980.

"Now don't imagine that the proposed increased rates would be exorbitant. On the contrary we have a precedent in New York, as well as in Massachusetts and in Pennsylvania. But understand, I have not endorsed the Matthews plan and would not until I gave it thorough consideration."

MAGIE TO ADDRESS THE BAR ASSOCIATION

Former Chancellor William J. Magie will mark the fifty-third anniversary of his admission to the bar on February 9, and this fact will lend additional interest to the address which he is to deliver before the Union County Bar Association at its meeting in the courthouse in Elizabeth. The former Chancellor was due to speak at the meeting by President Connolly, of the association, and he was undecided as to whether he would be able to address the body on the date mentioned. When he recalled the fact that he will have been before the bar just three years more than half a century on February 9 he announced his determination to speak even at the cost of another engagement.

The meeting of the association will call for the regular business aside from Chancellor Magie's address, which is to be the feature of the session. In refering to the anniversary in conversation with a member of the association yesterday, the former Chancellor alluded to his early cases in Elizabeth shortly after he was admitted to the bar. He recalled many interesting incidents of his long and busy official career and stated that he could not more fittingly observe the anniversary than by addressing his colleagues of the bar association.

Monogram Hatpins.

The very latest hatpin is of gold, and, like the seal of a masculine watch fob, engraved with the monogram or crest of the owner. GOVERNOR CHAMPIONS THE BLANKET BALLOT

Governor Franklin Fort was a guest of honor Wednesday at the annual banquet of the board of trade of Jersey City. The Governor declared himself very emphatically on several propositions, and the diners frequently broke in upon his speech with applause.

He said in part:

"I want to see economy in every department of the State of New Jersey, without destroying the interests of the State. I want to see the good roads extended in every direction in the outlying country across Hudson. I want to see a primary system established in this State that will insure to every honest man the right to vote and an honest result at the primary.

"I want to see a blanket ballot in New Jersey, one ballot and one piece of paper so that every man will have the same piece of paper, and will vote for the same or other candidate as he chooses, taking the list and selecting his own party and marking every man.

"I want to see every useless commission in New Jersey abolished. I understand the difficulty has been to do these things. Here over this State is a State Board of Taxation, with four men in office with their arms behind them, standing against the Legislature with all the political pull and power that they have got to maintain that decrepit institution with the further expense annually.

"I want a fair and just public utilities bill in this State that the public corporations of the State shall be regulated uniformly and justly in dealing with the people of New Jersey. I want just as little legislation enacted as it is possible to have enacted to secure good results.

"I want every State institution in this State and every charity supported well, and above and beyond all I want a high moral tone in the State, in all the political standards of the State and that the one question in public office shall be 'Is it right?' not 'Is it good politics?'

"I care nothing for office and I desire none. If I had my own way this minute I would be sitting with this distinguished gentleman (waving his right hand at Supreme Court Justice Francis Swayze) is, sitting in courts.

"My ambition is to fill the office of Governor now that I have it, creditably and to hold the esteem and affections of my fellow citizens and whatever the consequences, I am willing to leave it with them."

DECISIONS OF INTEREST TO THE P.S.R. PATRONS

Two cases in which the enforcement of the terms of an ordinance to prevent persons from blocking the rear platforms of pay as you enter trolley cars were disposed of in the Second Precinct Police Court, Newark, Monday. In each instance the ordinance was upheld. More than usual interest was attached to the actions as both defendants employed counsel.

Alphonse Baglin, the principal in one case, on November 21 last, in*sisted on forcing his way to the plat*form of a crowded car at Orange and Sheffield streets. The bar which had been lowered at Broad street to denote "no more passengers" was raised at Sheffield street to permit two women to alight and Baglin got on the car. He was asked to wait for the next car but refused and as there was no room in the vehicle, he stood on the platform. As an ordinance of the Board of Works provides that a passageway be kept clear, the conductor refused to give the starting signal until Baglin got off. Baglin stood pat, however, and after a delay a trolley inspector caused Baglin's arrest. The defendant retained Joseph A. Beecher as counsel and Chauncey H. Beasley appeared for the Public Service Street Railway Company. Much testimony was taken and the decision given by Judge Hertz yesterday was that Baglin was guilty. He was fined $5.00.

The other case was that of a High School boy who refused to leave the platform of a pay as you enter car. He, too, retained counsel, but like Baglin was adjudged guilty and fined $5.00.

MEN'S DINNER IS UNIQUE BUT WITHOUT GRAFT

Seventh-Day Baptist Church Club Provides a Novel Entertainment.

ALL IN ORIENTAL GARB.

Menu Card Provokes Much Amusement—Program Source of Much Pleasure.

Under the auspices of the Men's Club of the Seventh-Day Baptist church a successful dinner and entertainment were given Wednesday, and the patronage was large. In many respects it was the most novel affair ever arranged by the men, it being a Chinese dinner in so far as they were all costumed in the garb of that country. The scheme was carried out in the decorations, numerous signs bearing Chinese inscriptions were placed about the parlors and Chinese lanterns also added to the picturesque effect.

Accompanying the menu card was a verse printed in Chinese through the courtesy of the Chinese Reform News, of New York, and interpreted it read as follows:

"All human history attests that happiness for man—the hungry sinner!
Since Eve ate apples, much depends on dinner."

The information also on the card provoked much amusement:

"Don't forget the waiter. Be liberal. He will have to turn over his tips to the cashier afterwards. If you get too much, or not enough, make complaint to F. J. Hubbard, the very full engineer of the supper. He has an M. D. as head waiter and an expert at filling and extracting as assistant chef."

The various courses included everything from oysters to pie, ice cream, cake and coffee, and the food was well prepared and served in good style.

As president of the club, William C. Hubbard was an imposing figure, attired in the purple costume of a Mandarin and he wore a real pig tail. He had general supervision of the affair. The general committee comprised Frank J. Hubbard, chef; Dr. O. B. Whitford, assistant; Dr Marcus L. Clawson, head waiter, wearing the blue costume of a Mandarin; N. West, John B. Cottrell and N. O. Moore. They all wore Chinese costumes, with the pig tail, the waiters being distinguished by the costume of white blouses, dark trousers and pig tails.

Theodore G. Davis, who was born in China and lived there for twenty years, was the artist, and he put the real Chinese expression on the face of each man. All the costumes were kindly loaned by Orson C. Green, of Alfred, N. Y., who will be remembered by the older residents as being a furniture dealer years ago.

As the patrons took their seats at the tables the waiters greeted them with "Haw la' ya," "How are you," and "Tsing Zoo," "Sit down." Among the decorations were Chinese flags belonging to Mr. and Mrs. George L. Babcock. They secured them in China.

Dr. H. M. Maxson and David E. Titsworth were in charge of the entertainment, which comprised tenor solos by E. D. Young, popular selections by the P. H. S.-quartet, and phonographic selections by D. E Titsworth. Miss Jessie Utter was the accompanist.

Between there was a sale of candy, Miss Isabelle Randolph and Miss Margaret Mortenson, two Chinese maidens, being in charge. Charles H. Dunham was the cashier.

MRS. GILBERT FLETCHER SUCCUMBS TO PNEUMONIA

The many friends of Mrs. Gilbert B. Fletcher were shocked to learn of her sudden death, which occurred at her residence, Hier death, which occurred at her residence, Hier death, which occurred at her residence, Thursday morning from pneumonia. She was taken ill about a week ago and the attack was severe from the first. Everything known to medical science was employed to stay the progress of the dread disease but the patient did not respond to treatment. Her death has caused deep sorrow in a large circle of acquaintances.

Mrs. Fletcher was formerly Miss Laura Emmons and was the daughter of Mrs. Louise and the late Peter Emmons, of Jackson avenue. She was a favorite with all who knew her and she was esteemed for her rare womanly qualities. She was a member of Trinity Reformed church and the Young Women's Mission Band of that church.

Besides a husband and mother, two brothers, Walter and William Emmons and one sister, Mrs. Arthur Embury Smith, she is survived by a young son. The funeral services were held from the late home, 946 West Seventh street, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

IT WILL COST COUNTY $290,000.

A Model in Modern Exterior Construction and Arrangement —New Proposed Armory.

Justice is soon to have a new home in Somerset county and plans are being made for a housewarming, which, it is hardly necessary to say, will be along dignified lines. The new temple of justice is situated in Somerville, the county seat, on the site of the old Court House. It is a white marble structure and the residents of the entire county, but especially those of Somerville, are intensely proud of it. Not only is its exterior imposing, but the interior, considering both its ornamental and practical features, is said to be such as to place the edifice in the first rank of public buildings.

Attention of the public in all parts of New Jersey and in other States has been attracted by the new Court House. Not only have many inquiries been made by letter, but several delegations from other counties and municipalities where it is proposed to erect public buildings have inspected Somerset's noble structure. The most recent visit of that kind was made by a committee from Bergen county that has been appointed to erect a new court house in Hackensack. It is small wonder that Somerville's citizens are proud, for, in addition to being a thing of use, greatly facilitate the transaction of the county's business, which for many years has been hampered by lack of room, it will be a pronounced ornament to the town.

There is another feature of the new court house, however, on which the residents, and more especially the authorities, of the county pride themselves. This is exemplified in the answer of Justice of the Peace Arthur P. Sutphen, clerk of the County Board of Freeholders, when he was asked what is the building cost. "It cost $290,000, without a dollar of graft." There is not the slightest reason to doubt that assertion. Mr. Sutphen, by the way, has been clerk of the Board of Freeholders since 1875, with the exception of the three years from 1881 to 1884.

Somerset is one of the oldest counties in the State. It was formed in 1688. The first court house was erected at Franklin Park in 1717. It was destroyed by fire, with all the records it contained, in 1724. The following year a new court house was erected at Millstone. That one was burned in October, 1779, as were many other public and pri*vate structures during the Revolu*tionary War. In 1783 a new building was erected in Somerville, where the stables of the Somerset Inn now stand.

The site of the present building, at the corner of East Main and Grove streets, was purchased by the county in 1799 and a brick court house was erected. That building was used for more than a century, until it was torn down to make room for the present structure. It had a frontage of sixty feet on East Main street and was forty-two feet deep. The building was inadequate to the needs of the county by 1840, when two small brick buildings, one on each side of the court house, for the use of the county clerk and county surrogate were built. These buildings are still standing, but will be removed when the county clerk and the surrogate have moved into their offices in the new court house.

Although Somerset is still what might be called a rural, or agricultural, county, the volume of public business has tremendously increased in the last twenty-five years. The building that had done service for 106 years had utterly outgrown its usefulness when in 1905 the Board of Freeholders appointed a special committee to erect a new court house and jail. A comprehensive scheme for the county buildings was decided upon, and the jail was erected first in the rear of the court house. It is a fine features of buildings of that kind, and will meet the requirements of the county for many years to come. The erection of the jail was completed in December, 1906.

Contracts for the new court house were awarded on May 12, 1907, and Frederick Sutphen was appointed July 1. The cornerstone was laid on November 8, 1907, with Masonic ceremonies. The exercises were held under the direction of Solomon's Lodge, No. 46, F. and A. M., of Somerville. Austin S. McGregor, grand master of the State, and other officers of the New Jersey Grand Lodge, officiated. The ceremonies were attended by all of the county and municipal authorities, visiting officials from other places, civic organizations and the public at large. *The building is now practically com*pleted, but the furnishings have yet to be installed. It is thought that the court house will be occupied about March 1. Dedication services will be held at that time. Although the details have not been arranged, they will be of a simple nature. The building will be formally turned over to the county authorities by the building committee, and it is probable that one of the clergymen of Somerville will read a prayer of dedication. The building will then be thrown open for inspection by the public.

The committee under the direction of which the court house was constructed is composed of Somerville's William J. Hagan, of Somerville, chairman; Thomas E. Gibson, of Princeton, and Richard W. Hoagland, of Frankford. Messrs. Logan and Hoagland are no longer members of the Board of Freeholders, but under the law they retain their membership in the court house committee until the structure has been completed. Plans for the court house were made by James Riely Gordon, of No. 402 Fifth avenue, New York.

The external treatment the building is conspicuous for the simplicity and dignity of its style of architecture, which is of the Italian classic type. Although massive the structure is graceful. It is built of white Alabama marble. A wide stairway, broken by a landing and with balustrades at each end, leads to the main entrance, opening on what is known as the judicial floor. There are porticos on the front and two sides, the great marble columns giving an appearance of both gracefulness and strength. The edifice is surmounted by an imposing dome, which also is supported by white pillars.

Entrance to the ground or executive floor is gained through marble storm vestibules on the front and both sides, from which may be reached the central corridor, which extends from the ground floor to the dome and is thirty-eight feet in diameter. The rotunda is surmounted by a stained glass skylight, which is also arranged to have an important part in the ventilation of the building. On this floor are located the County Clerk, Surrogate and Board of Freeholders, including committee rooms, private rooms, toilets, vaults, etc., in convenient proximity. The spacious record vault is arranged with ample windows and steel fire protection. Filing are the first in scribing and recording rooms, every part of which is thoroughly lighted.

The judicial floor is reached from the ground floor by two grand stairways of marble, while there is a private stairway for the judges. Encircling the rotunda on that floor is a marble colonnade, leading from which are the court room and the suites of offices of the County Prosecutor, the Sheriff, the Probation Officer, and an unassigned suite. Adjoining the court room are the grand jury room, with witness and other rooms adjoining, and suites for the County School Superintendent and the County Engineer, including a record vault, and an unassigned suite.

One of the most striking features of the building is the court room. Particular attention has been paid to its acoustics, lighting, ventilation and convenient arrangement, which in some respects is novel. Its central feature is a dome lighted by a large ventilating stained glass skylight. The interior decorations have not yet been applied, as it was considered advisable to have the walls and ceiling thoroughly dried. The galleries supplement the seating capacity of the room and at the same time enhance the artistic effect of the chamber.

A storage vault for old records, toilet and other rooms are in the basement, which has a high ceiling and is perfectly lighted.

All the furniture for the Court House has been made to order. The building will be finished and furnished in quartered oak. The hardware is of bronze, burnished in Roman gold. The seal of the county is engraved and set in the floor of each door knob. The building is heated by the plant in the county jail, which was designed for that purpose when it was installed in the latter structure.

Few public buildings have as fine a site as that of the Somerset County Court House. Somerville is a quaint old town, with quaint houses and fine well shaded streets. One of the prettiest sections is what is known as Court House square, extending on East Main and East Main street from North Bridge street to Grove street. The county owns that property with the exception of the property on the corner of East Main and North Bridge streets, which is held by the First Dutch Reformed church. The latter is one of the oldest churches in New Jersey, having been organized in 1699.

There is a fine gray stone church edifice fronting in East Main street, and on each side of it is a brick chapel. Pending the completion of the Court House the chapels are being used by the county. The space between the Court House and the church will be removed and it is not improbable that the other one will in the future be faced with gray stone, so that the three buildings on the square will be of fairly uniform appearance so far as color is concerned.

At East Main and Grove streets is an old frame building used as a store and residence. Part of the first floor is being temporarily used as the Sheriff's office. That building will be removed and part of the c orner cut away, forming a small plaza. On the corner will be erected a water fountain in memory of the late John H. Lord. The latter's sister, the late Alice Ford, provided in her will that $12,000 should be set aside for that purpose. Mr. Lord was president of the Second National Bank of Somerville and was a public spirited citizen. He died about nine years ago.

Another building to be erected in the vicinity of the Court House will add to the attractiveness of the neighborhood. It will be an armory for Company M, Second regiment, New Jersey National Guard. It is to cost $20,000. It will be located on the east side of Grove street, just a little below the Court House.—New York Herald.

Christian Optimism

A series of Sermons by

Rev. Dr. Chas. E. Herring.

PEACE.

Peace. That is what the world needs more than anything else. It would mean the end of war, but more than peace, for peace is but another word for harmony, adjustment. There is peace of body when there is perfect health. The body is then perfectly adapted to the physical laws that govern it. There is perfect peace of soul when a man believes that God is directing his life and that all things are working for his eternal good. The Lord promises to keep a man in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Him.

Do you stay your mind on God in the midst of all your troubles? Yes, you are in darkness, but perhaps that experience in the darkness is wonderfully enriching your life. It was so with the Psalmist. He said, "The I walk thro the valley of the deepest darkness, behold, Thou are with me." Note, he says the Lord conducts him not in the valley but thro it. He is a better man on the other side of the valley.

Peace does not depend on the absence of trouble but on the strength of the inner consciousness of God's presence. Peace finds its basis not in outward thing but within the soul. The peace of God will guard your heart, so that the depressing things of life cannot take away your joy. The Lord's peace is like a chronometer, which is perfectly poised amid all the reelings and tossings of the ship.

We learn more about peace as we turn to the New Testament and listen to the words of our Lord, "My peace I give unto you." Here we have a concrete example of peace in a human life. Think of it—my peace." Not the peace He had with the Father before He came into the world as a man, but perfect peace that was His with all the limitations of His humanity.

Read the story of that wonderful life. Behold its wonderful poise. The plaudits of the multitude as He rode into Jerusalem, on Palm Sunday, did not disturb His wonderful calmness. He was perfectly tranquil amid all the discords of the world. He was a man of sorrows, of a sorrow deeper than we can fathom—because of the world's sin, but with it there was perfect peace.

Think of the strange circumstances under which these words were spoken. He is going out to His crucifixion. The disciples are amazed at the calmness of His spirit in the midst of such trying circumstances, yet He says, "Let not your hearts be troubled, neither be afraid," words, "My peace I give unto you."

Paul, when he speaks, says so of that it passes all understanding. What did he mean? Simply that it surpasses all the plans and presumptions of men for peace. It is a peace above every human conception and device.

What is the condition on your part? Paul says first, be overanxious about nothing, pray about everything, then the peace shall be yours. Don't worry about anything. Pray about everything, and Christ's peace will fill your soul. Just think of it. You may have as good a thing as Christ had. It is doubtful if any man had a life so full of sorrow, yet he said, "My peace," and He said it while men were reviling Him. Look away from the surface of Christ's earthly life to the depths of His nature, and there is His perfect peace.

Get your Bible and read it for yourself in Philippians, the fourth chapter. You can worry about a lot of things, but don't worry about anything. Exercise all your wisdom and forethought but don't be overanxious. Then pray about everything in your life, and pray believingly. "Speak to Him for He hears."

And spirit with spirit will meet
Closer is He than breathing
And nearer than hands and feet.

And "It is true that the peace of God will be yours. Don't you want it?

A Humane Suggestion.

"Cigarette smoking kills germs," said the confident youth.

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne, "I don't approve of germs, but I think the S. P. C. A. ought to take notice of such a horrible death."—Washington Star.

His Loophole.

RELICS OF PATRON SECURED BY YALE

Two autographs of Elihu Yale, for whom Yale college was named two centuries ago, have just been received at the university at New Haven, and are the first to ever come into the possession of the college. The first is a signature of Elihu Yale cut from the consultation book of the council of Fort St. George for the year of 1691, at which time Governor Yale was president of the council. It was secured from the government archives through Dr. Edgar Thurston of the government museum at Madras.

The second is a complete letter in Yale's handwriting. As far as is known, it is the only one in America. It was at one time in the Greenough collection in Boston, and was exhibited at Yale at the time of the bicentennial. It has recently been presented to the university by Sherwin L. Whipple, '51, of Boston. It is as follows:

"London, the 7th September, 1714.

"Mr. Jones:—Since yours of ye 21st inst., with your bill for 50 pounds from Mr. Hughes, which is promised to be paid in Tyme. Mr. Stephens brought me your other letter of ye 29th, who discount about cozzen Moly Cole and finds he likes her well and finds she likes him too. I can't but approve the match and to encourage it, I have promised him fifty pounds more, that is 250 pounds and her 20 pounds to provide her and her mother necessaries provided things appear as he declares, which pray examine well, as both as to his reall and personal estate and circumstances, and if that all be truly worth, which when settled upon her and her children firmly you may draw bills upon me for it, which I shall pay at sight; when lett the marryage be made as decently private as you can, either in Wrexham or the place with Mr. Judge most conveniant, but of this I shall hear from you before it comes to that. I hear nothing of ye old woman paying ye money on bill. Tis well you have secured Llyniecoin rent. Pray get all you can from ye tenants who are very slow and forget not to send Mr. Hughes account which is all from.

"Your loving friend,

NEWARK'S EAGLES TO DEDICATE HOME

Newark Eagles will honor the memory of George Washington by dedicating their new home at 15 West Park street, Newark, on February 22, the natal day of the "father of his country," at which time Plainfield's aerie and others will be their guests. All arrangements have been completed for the ceremonies, which are expected to be the most imposing in the history of Eagledom in New Jersey. The Eagles will expend $10,000 in remodeling the lodgeroom alone, and new furniture will be installed throughout.

A majority of the New Jersey aeries heard from thus far have signified their intention of being accompanied by bands, so that the street parade in the afternoon is expected to be no ordinary affair. The aeries of the following places will be in line: Plainfield, Passaic, Phillipsburg, Jersey City, Paterson, Hoboken, Morristown, Dover, Montclair, Perth Amboy, Passaic, New York, Washington Heights of New York and New Haven, Conn.

Grand Worthy President Monahan, of Philadelphia, and all grand worthy officers, including Past Grand Worthy President Theodore A. Bell, the man who presided at the last convention which nominated William J. Bryan, and former Congressman Frank Hering, of South Bend, Ind., who was with Senator Kern, candidate for Vice-President, during his last visit to Newark, are expected to be present.

Arrangements are being completed for banquets at the Holland House and Koch's Hotel, at Newark. There will be stirring music and bands at the Eagles' home during the afternoon and evening of February 22, and the public will be welcomed. Lunch and refreshments will be served to all visitors.

Neurotic Jelly.

Little Wilbur was eating luncheon with his mother. Presently she noticed that he was eating his jelly with his spoon.

"Wilbur, dear," she said to him, "you must not eat your jelly with your spoon."

"I have to, mother," he replied. "No, dear, you don't have to. Put your jelly on your bread."

"I did put it on my bread, mother," said Wilbur, "but it wouldn't stay there; it's too nervous."—Exchange.

Careful.

"No," said the candid kleptomaniac; "when I'm arrested for pilfering I never give my real name. It would compromise too many people."

"Indeed; and what is your name?" inquired the magistrate.

GEN. CURTIS THE ORATOR

"The Hero of Fort Fisher" to Speak at Citizen's Lincoln Centenary Celebration.

PROGRAM IS NOW COMPLETE

Famous Soldier, Author, Statesman and Agriculturist Will Pay Tribute to Lincoln.

Major-General Newton Martin Curtis, of New York, "The Hero of Fort Fisher," will be the orator of the day at the citizens Lincoln centenary celebration to be held at the First Baptist church on Friday afternoon, February 12, at 3 o'clock. This announcement is made by Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, chairman of the speaker's committee, who also announces that former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, president of the New York Clearing House, will be the presiding officer.

The program is now about complete. Under the direction of Martin A. Korff, the Y. M. C. A. orchestra of twenty-five pieces, will play for a quarter of an hour and the overture will be a medley of National airs. Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert will sing "Lincoln." A trained chorus of fifty voices from the North Plainfield High School will recite the Gettysburg speech, and a large chorus of pupils from both public and private schools in both city and borough, being trained by Charles L. Lee, Mrs. Charles L. Lee, "My Captain," and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys are Marching." The prayers will be offered by a Catholic and a Protestant pastor, respectively. "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," will be sung by the audience. General Curtis' oration will be the feature of the celebration.

General Curtis has been engaged to make a number of other addresses on the observance of the Lincoln centenary, chief among which are those at Delmonico's by the New York Commandery, Military Order Loyal Legion, February 3, and by the Lincoln Fellowship Society on February 11; at Plymouth church, Brooklyn, on February 7, and at the Teachers' College, New York, on Friday morning, February 12. He is president of the Society of the Army of the Potomac and is one of the most prominent members of the New York Commandery of the Loyal Legion and was formerly commander of the Department of New York, G. A. R.

In addition to having been a collector of customs, General Curtis was a member of Congress for three terms. He is a life member and was formerly president of the New York Agricultural Society and is a life member of various stock breeding associations in America and England. At one time he was president of the New York Agricultural Experiment Station. Since 1898 he has been a member of the inspection general of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers. General Curtis enlisted in the Union army May 7, 1861, and was promoted, in turn, captain, lieutenant-colonel, colonel, brevet-general and for leading the assault on Fort Fisher, North Carolina, was promoted brigadier-general on the field. His promotion having been written on a sheet of foolscap by the Secretary of War, "for gallant services in the capture of Fort Fisher." He was promoted major-general by brevet for the same action and given a medal of honor for being "the first man to pass through the stockade; he personally led each assault on the traverses, and was four times wounded. After the surrender at Appamattox, Curtis was appointed chief of staff for the Department of Virginia and later commander of Southwestern Virginia, being mustered out January 15, 1866.

Before becoming a Congressman he had been a member of the New York Legislature. William and Mary College some years ago conferred on him the degree of doctor of laws. General Curtis is the author of a number of war books of marked literary execution, chief among them being his well-known volume entitled "From Bull Run to Chancellorsville."

Term Expires on March 4.

Charles H. F. Weigman, of West Front street, who is a member of Co. K, has planned not to re-enlist when his term of enlistment expires. This will be at 4 o'clock on the night of March 4, the day President-elect Taft is inaugurated. In case the company goes to Washington to attend the ceremonies, Mr. Weigman's time would be out while the company is at the Capitol City.

Real Cold.

An American and a Scotsman were discussing the cold experienced in winter in the north of Scotland.

"Why, it's nothing at all compared to the cold weather we have in the States," said the American. "I can recollect one winter when a sheep, jumping from a hillock into a field, became suddenly frozen on the way and stuck in the air like a mass of ice."

"But, man," exclaimed the Scotsman, "the law of gravity wouldn't allow that!"

"I know that," replied the tale pitcher, "But the law of gravity was frozen too!"—Tit-Bits.

FARBMAN FINED $200; WANT LICENSED REVOKED

Morris Farbman, the former proprietor of the Arlington Hotel, which was raided on November 21, last was fined $200 in the Somerset county court, Friday morning on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. The fine was imposed after the defendant's counsel, William G. DeMeza and A. A. Clark made earnest pleas for leniency. The penalty was generally considered a light one and caused some surprise among those in court.

Immediately after Judge Schenck imposed the fine, the mony was paid and the prisoner was released. There will be no appeal from the sentence, counsel having decided that because it would cost at least $250 to have the case printed, to say nothing of counsel fees.

Borough Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed then made application for a rule to show cause why Farbman's license should not be revoked, and upon the request of Mr. DeMeza the hearing on the application over until next Friday. Farbman is now residing in this city.

CONSUMPTION CAUSES 40 PER CENT. OF DEATHS

Dr. Norman H. Probasco, in an address to an audience of women Thursday in the Y. W. C. A. rooms, called attention to the fact that forty per cent of the deaths in this city last year were due to consumption His subject, "How to Prevent and Cure Tuberculosis," is one of vital importance and to which he is giving a great deal of attention.

Dr. Probasco's talk contained many valuable pointers on how to guard against the disease, the key note of which was sanitation and cleanliness. There were sixty-five women present.

After the lecture the girls of the two basketball teams, the "Reds" and the "Yellows," who had been on a training diet in preparation for the game last Monday night, broke training and indulged in a candy pull.

URGE THAT CENTRAL AVENUE BE WIDENED

Property-owners interested in the widening of Central avenue, beginning at West Front street, appeared before the Councilmanic street committee, Thursday, and urged the improvement. They also presented a strong petition signed by all the property-owners along that thoroughfare, with a few exceptions, requesting favorable action. Those who appeared before the committee were Charles P. Sebring, L. L. Manning, A. C. Wadley and Morris Abrams.

The widening of the avenue is especially urged because of the erection at present of a one-story building at Central avenue and West Front street, which is close to the sidewalk and rather detracts from the attractiveness of the corner. The propertyowners were assured that the matter would be given full consideration and a public hearing given.

The committee informally discussed general street improvement work, and formulated plans of work for the coming year. There was also consideration of the amount of money thought to be necessary for this year's street work.

MRS. EMMA K. CONOVER HAS BEEN LAID AT REST.

The funeral service of Mrs. Emma K. Conover, widow of the late George Conover, was held from the residence on Jackson avenue, at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon and was largely attended by relatives and friends. There were many beautiful floral tributes. The service was conducted by Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, of which Mrs. Conover was a communicant. "Abide With Me," and "Some Time We'll Understand," were sung by E. E. Runyon.

The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the bearers were Werner Philpott, Winfield Philpott, David Conover, B. R. Conover, George Philpott and Oscar Philpott, all cousins of Mrs. Conover.

Smith, of the firm of Smith, Wallace & Co., of Newark, grain merchants, has purchased the French mill property on Somerset street, and within a few days will make a lease with Percy Dayton, the present occupant for a term of years. Mr. Smith does not contemplate any changes. The mill property has been in the French family for over forty years.

MITCHELL CAR BEST IN ENDURANCE RUN

The 156-mile automobile endurance race from Hartford through Winsted to Pittsfield and Springfield, Mass., and return to Hartford on Wednesday was won by a Mitchell car, driven by B. F. Smith, after it had been in collision with a telephone pole early in the start at Avon, getting a badly bent steering knuckle and having its running board ripped off and fenders smashed. The course was principally over log roads and brakes were of little use. The Mitchel car was ten hours making the trip.

Two of five cars entered were disabled in accidents, and the other two entrants are on the homeward stretch from Pittsfield Thursday night. A test car, driven by John Coffey of Hartford, and running ahead of the Mitchell, skidded into a bridge between Sheffield and Great Barrington and became firmly wedged. No one was hurt, but the car and the bridge were badly damaged.

The referee's car, containing Philip E. Curtiss of Hartford, and a chauffeur, turned turtle north of Stockbridge. Both occupants were thrown out, but neither was hurt. The Maxwell No. 2, driven by Herbert S. King, broke a driving pin and was detached. No one was hurt. The Mitchell No. 2 took the wrong course after leaving Hartford and its whereabouts are unknown.

TO INCORPORATE THE NEWARK CONFERENCE

Former Judge William R. Codington, of the firm of Codington and Swackhamer, has prepared a certificate for the incorporation of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, and he has also prepared a bill which will be introduced in the Senate by Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, which will vest the title of all extinct M. E. church property in the Newark Conference. The incorporators are Bishop Neely and all the district superintendents.

This action is taken so that the conference may acquire all of the church property which for one reason or another has been abandoned for church purposes. The matter was discussed at the last session of the conference held in this city and it is hoped to have the details attended to so that a complete report may be presented at the forthcoming session to be held in Newark.

ASSIGNEE PAYS CLAIMS FOR BUILDING CONSTRUCTION.

Payments to creditors have just been made in the assigned estate of Lewis W. Seaman, Jr., of Brooklyn, one of the contractors engaged in the construction of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company's building, the failure having taken place before the structure was completed. The assigned estate was begun in the Court of Chancery and claims aggregating $13,000 were filed with the assignee, who made payments in the order of the priority in filing.

The local creditors were Boice, Runyon & Co., $2,100; Albert Rejotte, $1,800; Isaac S. Randolph, $619; and A. M. Griffin, $243. Other claims aggregating about $8,000 still remain unpaid. Reed & Coddington appeared for Boice, Runyon & Company; Codington & Swackhamer for Rajotte and Isaac M. Runyon for A. M. Griffin.

The Mean Man.

AGITATING PLAYGROUNDS

Charity Organization Association Addressed by Wm. J. Kiernan.

COMMISSION HERE PROBABLE.

William J. McKiernan, one of the commissioners of playgrounds in Newark, addressed a small company of members of the Charity Organization Association at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany on Crescent avenue, Thursday. His remarks were most interesting as he told what had been accomplished in establishing playgrounds in Newark and the management of the same.

All playgrounds in New Jersey are established under an act of the Legislature of 1907 and amended in 1908. This is an act to establish playgrounds in cities and it empowers the mayors of such cities to appoint a playground commission.

In October last the Charity Organization Society appointed Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany, Mrs. J. K. Myers and William S. Tyler a committee to consider the feasibility of establishing playgrounds in this city and the committee has been expecting to ask Mayor Charles J. Fisk to appoint such a commission. It has been suggested that the society ask the Board of Education to open the school grounds here after school hours on Saturday, but no definite decision has been reached in this particular.

Commissioner McKiernan gave those present at last night's meeting a full and clear idea of the playground question that will enable the committee to proceed along more intelligent lines in accomplishing the purpose desired in this city.

FIRST PRESBYTERIANS HOLD A SOCK SOCIAL

An old-fashioned or sock social held at the First Presbyterian church Thursday, under the auspices of the Pastor's Aid Society, proved to be one of the most successful affair held by this society in a long time. It was largely attended and everyone had a jolly good time. Those who planned the entertainment carried out the idea of introducing as many old-fashioned things as possible. These were found in the decorations, the old six young women, Miss Sue Farland, Miss Helen Farland, Miss Jessie Hill, Miss Helen Russell, Miss Hyatt and Miss Marion Englehart appeared wearing the wedding gowns of their grandmothers. They were all the object of much interest and their gowns were duly admired.

During the evening there were vocal solos and duets by Mrs. Charles Clark and Mrs. Freeman Shotwell; piano solos by Miss Helen George, Miss Lettie Remsen and Miss Beatrice Miner were the accompanists. Perhaps one of the most amusing features of the affair was a spelling bee. The sides were lead by Miss Addie Dietrich and Alvin E. Hoagland. The contest narrowed down to Mr. Hoagland and I. B. Hil and it was a long time before Mr. Hill finally "went out," he being impossible to "spell him down."

The "sock" feature was that each person attending was requested to contribute a sum of money equal to double the size of the sock or stocking worn by them. This netted about $100. During the social hour refreshments consisting of doughnuts, crullers, cookies and coffee were served. Mrs. Clarence B. Bond was chairman of the general committee and she was assisted by Mrs. W. W. Dunn, Mrs. George H. Wean, Mrs. A. D. Diman and Miss Wandell. Miss Beatrice Miner had charge of the music.

N. P. H. S. WINS GAME FROM P. H. S. FIVE.

The borough high school team again defeated its chief rival, the P. H. S., Friday afternoon. The Y. M. C. A. gym was packed with rooters from both schools who kept up a deafening noise, and never for an instant allowed interest in the game to lag, or the spirit of the players to subside.

Conroy played his usual remarkable game, of sensational shots and was well backed by the other members of his team, who have developed a machinery like action to their team work.

Snyder played a good game for the P. H. S. The final score was 26 to 17. Dr. Sheridan acted as referee; Collier, umpire; Parker, timer, and Bogardus, scorer.

Will Preach for Dr. Herring.

During the absence of Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring in Florida, for two days in February, his pulpit at the First Presbyterian church will be occupied as follows: February 7, Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson, New Brunswick; 14, Don O. Sheldon; 21, Rev. Dr. Stanley White or Rev. Arthur Brown, secretaries of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian church.

HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER.

A saucerful of quicklime placed in a damp cupboard will make it dry and sweet, instead of musty and fusty. Renew the lime occasionally, for it loses its power.

Discolored ivory knife handles should be cleaned with lemon juice and salt. Cut a lemon in half, dip it in salt, and with it rub the ivory. Wash off immediately with warm water, and wipe dry.

To keep mice away from pantries and cupboards, sprinkle cayenne pepper on the shelves. In boxes and wardrobes put lumps of camphor among the clothes, for mice dislike the smell of it. The camphor must be renewed every now and then, for it evaporates in a few days.

Wash brass ornaments with strong ammonia, using a brush dipped in ammonia for the fancy parts. Rinse in hot water, dry and polish while still hot with leather. The polishing is done best when the brass is cold, but less rapidly.

Dresses, carpets and rugs, and all sorts of woolen fabrics, may be cleaned with potato water without injury to their color. Put a pint of water in a thick and tater it grate two raw potatoes. Then strain this through a sieve, allowing the liquid to run into another bowl containing another pint of cold water. Let this settle, then pour off the clear part into a bottle for future use. Dip a sponge into the potato water, with it rub the soiled garment carefully, and then wash it with clear water.

JUDGE LYON LINCOLN DINNER SPEAKER HERE

Former Supreme Court Judge Abrain Lyon, of Perth Amboy, and Gen. Perry Bascom, of Bound Brook, will be the speakers at the Lincoln Birthday dinner to be given by the Monday Club of the First Presbyterian church, Friday night, February 12. Judge Lyon is said to be an exceptionally fine speaker. Mr. Bascom, well-known here, will speak on "Lincoln."

The committee in charge of the affair consists of Dr. N. W. Currie, Clifford A. Bralder, F. W. Dunning and F. T. Dickerson. Arrangements have also been made to present an appropriate musical program in connection with the affair.

ELIZABETH PASTOR IS BEREFT BY 'QUAKE

In a brief note to his friend, the Rev. Dr. William B. Hamilton, Presbyterian minister, of Elizabeth, the Rev. Enrico Arcello Canadeo has outlined the awful fate of his friend's relatives and neighbors in Montelone, his native city, and throughout Calabria and the devastated part of Sicily. This is the first message in any length that Elizabethan has sent. He left Elizabeth in November for his native land, intending on his return to take up ministerial work among the Italians to Elizabeth. He has a brother a student in the Bloomfield Theological Seminary. This is Mr. Canfano's letter:

"My Dear Brother—I hope to be in Elizabeth about the end of January or the beginning of February. Here we have an earthquake every day. I have lost some of my best friends and some of my relatives.

"Two hundred thousand people have been buried alive in their homes. It is something dreadful. In every home there is nothing but grief and tears. Remember my country in your prayers. My best regards to you and your people.

Miss Mary Sherman, who is in the devastated district, and whose home is in Ostroit, has not yet reached this country. Her friends in Elizabeth, the DeHart family, are expecting a visit from her on here arrival.

ELIZABETHAN HAS AN AIRSHIP MACHINE

Carl Semreau, of Elizabeth, has a German machine, who has been working for months on a "bird" machine, or airship, told a reporter that he expected to have it finished by spring, when he will give practical demonstrations in the vicinity of his residence in South Elizabeth. He now has the steering gear and has completed the wings. The tail has not yet been attached.

"I received a letter the other day from wealthy New Yorkers," said Semreau, "asking me if I wanted to sell the machine as it was. I told them that I didn't. I know it will make good, and I don't want to sell it until I can do so to advantage." So saying, he sprang into the seat of the machine to demonstrate just how the vehicle would work when in operation. He lives in a little framed two-story-covered cottage in the rear of his tiny workshop, and is seeking a partner who means business and is honest. He intimated that a little capital would not be amiss. He is confident that the machine is a winner and some day bring him fame and fortune.

"Some of those who come to look at the machine," he said, "think they know more about it than I do myself, but I watch them," and with these words he patted the machine as if it were animate. The result of his work of years of thought and labor. Formerly Semreau was employed as machinist at the Stephenson Car Works, but gave up his work there to devote all his time to his invention. His wife is the only other occupant of the cottage, and she feels as optimistic regarding her husband's machine as he does himself, and is a frequent visitor to the little workshop.

There is a great need for skilled men in the building industry it was declared and the training of youths in these schools offers the best solution of the problem. Considerable enthusiasm prevaded the meeting, which was declared to have been the most profitable yet held.

ASK LEGISLATORS TO OPPOSE FORT PLANS

The Plainfield Board of Education, at its meeting Monday, passed a resolution directing that the Senator and Assemblyman from this district be requested to use their influence against the passage of any bill to change the school tax. This action was taken in view of the efforts of Governor Fort to have the railroad appropriations diverted from school use to make up a deficiency in the State treasury.

The board also passed a resolution authorizing the expenditure of $10,- 000 for furnishing the school building at Darrow avenue and Essex street.

President Leander N. Lovell was authorized to sign a lease for a room in the McVey hotel building on West Front street, to be used as a class room. The lease is to expire July 1, 1910.

On October 5, 1908, the board had asked the Board of School Estimates for an appropriation of $55,000 for the erection of a school building on Dunellen avenue, which action had been taken in the matter until last night when the board passed a resolution rescinding that application and another resolution was passed asking for an appropriation of $60,000. Additional $5,000 was desired to provide against the possibility of running short of funds as it was feared the first amount would not be sufficient to build the structure and supply the extras which will be needed.

The report on the tax collector for January showed that $1,608.92 had been received during the month.

William F. Arnold, custodian of school moneys, reported a surplus of $117,233.29 in the treasury to the credit of the school fund.

NO BUYING WITHOUT BIDS

MAYOR FISK TALKS SHARPLY.

Methods Have Been Too Lax, Says City Executive, Who Puts His Foot Down.

The custom heretofore followed by the Common Council in expending large sums for supplies needed in the various city departments without advertising for bids, received a severe jolt at the February meeting of the city fathers Monday. Mr. Buxton, chairman of the finance committee, wished to secure an appropriation of $500 to employ an accountant to audit the city books, purchase 500 bags of oats and 2,000 feet of hose for the fire department without inviting bids for the same, but there was so much opposition that he was unable to get all of his resolutions through.

The objections to the plan arose when Mr. Buxton offered a resolution appropriating $500 to audit the city books. Mr. Mygatt took exception to the amount, explaining that a bid of $400 had been received and one firm of accountants had asked for a hearing before submitting a figure. Mr. Buxton stood alone in the fight, President Tolles and Charles C. Randolph both supporting Mr. Mygatt. Mr. Tolles said that his experience had been that when a certain amount was appropriated it was usually expended. Mr. Mygatt added that no action had been decided upon at the finance committee meeting and he urged that the matter be held up temporarily.

This did not please Mr. Buxton, who said that now is the time to appropriate the money and have the work done. Then Mr. Mygatt moved to amend Mr. Buxton's resolution by substituting $250 for $500. This nettled Mr. Buxton and he made a further amendment changing the amount from $250 to $25. This brought forth a comment from Charles C. Randolph, who said that nothing would be gained by such action and it was finally decided to refer the whole matter back to the committee.

This matter being disposed of, Mr. Buxton offered a resolution calling for the purchase of 500 bags of oats for the fire department at a price not exceeding the market price, which is about $1.45 per bag. There was strong objection to this because provision had not been made to advertise for bids. Mr. Mygatt and Mr. Taylor protested, while Mr. Buxton insisted that the department needed the oats at once.

Finally, Mr. Buxton withdrew his original resolution and offered another calling for the purchase of 100 bags of oats, at a price not to exceed $1.45 per bag, and it was adopted. This will give the department a supply until the next meeting, but bids will be invited for the re*maining lot of oats.*

There was more trouble when another resolution was offered by Mr. Buxton authorizing the fire and building committee to purchase 2,000 feet of standard 2½ inch hose in fifty foot lengths at a price not to exceed ninety cents per foot.

Again Mr. Mygatt, seconded by other members, insisted that bids be secured, but Mr. Buxton said that the committee had gone over the matter carefully, and he believed that the purchase should be authorized. Mr. Mygatt made a motion that bids be invited and Mr. Montgomery seconded the motion. This was adopted, but one to refer the matter back to the committee was passed and the committee will ask for bids.

After the lively discussion regarding these matters was concluded, Mayor Fisk was given the privilege of the floor, and he briefly stated his views. He said that during the past few years the city had been too lax in the purchase of supplies and in his opinion bids should be invited and methods required in the expenditure of large sums.

"Heretofore," said Mr. Fisk, "we have bought supplies offhand and I don't like to approve bills under such conditions. When we are going to spend $1,000 for hose or several hundred dollars for oats we should require bids and samples and know what we are getting. This should also be done in the purchase of fire apparatus. I want to know about these things before I approve the bills and the only way this is possible is in inviting bids and compelling that samples be furnished. As a favor to me I trust that in the future you will be more careful in this respect where large sums of money are involved."

In reply Mr. Buxton said that he wanted to take exception to the Mayor's words that the Council had been lax. He recalled an instance where a firm had relined 2,000 feet of hose that was found bad, free of expense; that the best hose possible for the least money had been purchased and the method had been satisfactory.

TO RENEW LICENSES ON TUESDAY, FEB. 23

Twelve applications, representing the present number of licensed places in the city, were presented to the Common Council at the February meeting Monday night. Although the names were not read nor the names of the signers, it was stated that they all conformed to the laws. The liquor dealers met with some difficulty in securing the required number of signers, and there were numerous instances where a consideration was given by the dealers for the signatures. There are applications where one dealer has signed for another. The applications, according to law, must be published at least four times days.

Those who applied last night were John Rafferty, D. Findlay, Jacob Blimm, Michael Watson, E. C. Westcott, Christopher Gloeckler, John Clark, saloons; Henry Windham, John Burns and Jerome Leary, hotels; Frank Linke and the Eastern Bottling Company, wholesale dealers.

All the applications were referred to the license committee, of which Duncan W. Taylor is chairman, and a meeting of the Common Council will be held on Tuesday night, February 23, to act on the same. In the meantime the committee will personally see that there are no irregularities in the applications.

COUNCILMEN ADMIRE WEBB AUTO FIRE CARS

In the presence of President R. J. Tolles of the Council, members of the fire committee, Fire Chief Doane and fire chiefs from neighboring towns, a highly satisfactory demonstration of the motor fire engine and automobile hose wagon was given Monday afternoon by members of the New York company, who have been in town for several days past. The apparatus proved itself powerful and efficient, both in covering the ground and throwing water.

Councilman Herbert Buxton, police chairman of the fire committee, C. C. Randolph and W. W. Wilson, members of the committee, went to local fire headquarters for the test early yesterday afternoon. They were met by A. C. Webb, president of the auto apparatus company, D. A. Woodhouse, general eastern agent, Chief Doane, Chief Howard Woolston, of the borough, and chiefs of the Westfield, Elizabeth and Bound Brook fire departments. With some members of the local department the party climbed aboard the two pieces of auto apparatus and made a tour of the West End to show the speed*ing power of the engines.* The motor engine, driven by Mr. Webb, was "let out" to a speed of fifty miles an hour in course of the trip.

The water throwing tests were held at the foot of Westervelt avenue. Here two streams were connected on 150 foot lines of hose. Water was thrown through 1⅛ and 1¼ inch nozzles, and the pressure was raised to 240 pounds to the square inch. Councilmen and fire officials were enthusiastic over the power and efficiency of the motor apparatus, and when the party returned again to fire headquarters, merits of the apparatus formed a lasting topic for discussion. The motor representatives drove the cars back to New York in the afternoon, and gave a demonstration of both pieces of apparatus before representatives of the New York fire department today.

"Automobile fire apparatus is certainly the coming equipment in first-class departments," said Chief Doane speaking about the test, "and even today there are some departments in the west where there isn't a horse in the house."

SACHAR & SACHAR WOULD PAY UP PERIODICALLY.

The committee appointed last week by the creditors of Sachar & Sachar, to investigate the financial condition of the firm after a bankruptcy petition had been filed, made its formal report today. The assets are found to be $14,065.70 and the liabilities slightly more than $15,-000. The firm has asked for an extension of time for its payments, agreeing to pay 25 per cent. in four payments, in June, September, December and March, 1910. It is probable that these conditions of pay*ment will be accepted by the credi*tors, but unless a unanimous agreement is reached, new terms will have to be made.

Three judgments were rendered in the District court last week to creditors of the firm. These totalled to $500. The effort will be made to have the partial payment petition effective in these cases, but if this cannot be done the firm will have to go into bankruptcy. The committee of investigation comprised H. E. Sherwood and E. H. Burley, the largest creditors, W. J. James, Jr., representing twenty-two creditors, William Newcorn, representing seven creditors, and Harry C. Runyon, representing seven creditors.

SPECIAL LINCOLN HOLIDAY.

Senate Also Passes Measure for National Memorial.

The United States Senate Monday afternoon passed the resolution offered by Senator Dick, of Ohio, setting apart February 12, 1909, as a special holiday to commemorate the centennial of the birth of Abraham Lincoln. The resolution was passed as a substitute for the Hodge resolution, and the matter now goes to conference.

The Dick resolution authorizes a permanent memorial to Lincoln, which may include a national high*way from Washington to Gettysburg,* Pa., to be known as the Lincoln Way.

As acting chairman of the fire and building committee, Mr. Buxton called the attention of the Common Council, Monday, to the fact that the new East End fire-house will be ready for occupancy within the next sixty days. In view of this he thought it time that consideration is given to the equipment of the house. At his suggestion Mayor Fisk and the entire Council will meet Thursday night to consider the question.

The Council has not yet decided whether it will be advisable to purchase apparatus to be drawn by horses or an automobile machine. Mr. Buxton spoke of the demonstrations given here of the Knox and Webb machines, both of which he said were reported to be all right and would meet local requirements. He said that while in Akron, Ohio, several months ago, he found the auto machines in successful operation, and he believed that they would do the work here satisfactorily.

Each Sunday the parson rode three miles to church. On this particular Sunday it was raining very hard. He rode the distance on horseback and, when he reached the church, was soaking wet.

Several of the good old sisters who were there placed a chair before the fire for him and hung his wet coat up to dry.

"I am so afraid that I won't be dry enough to preach," he said.

"Oh," said one of the sisters, "when you get into the pulpit and start preaching, you will be dry enough."—The January Circle Magazine.

The most vital article that "everybody's Magazine" has published since the "Frenzied Finance" days is "The Poison of the Street," by Frederick S. Dickson, in the February number. It strikes a blow, and a telling one, at margin gambling in Wall Street, and echoes the cry of the many who have "ruled their luck" and been lured on to destruction. The article is straight from the shoulder and authoritative. Charles Edwardius Sell has an article, "The Slum as a National Asset," contrasting the conditions of congested and modern tenement districts with the healthy and happy conditions prevailing in German cities, particularly Berlin.

Let it not be omitted in the enumeration of the elements of Lincoln's leadership that he did not disdain to learn from experience. In his first inaugural, while stating the policy of the administration with regard to the secession movement, the authority of the United States, he definitely announced that the course indicated would be followed "unless current events and experience" should show a modification or change to be proper," and that in every case and exigency his best discretion would be exercised "according to circumstances actually existing." Lincoln, like other great leaders and administrators, would rather be right than be consistent. His was a consistency of principle rather than program. His aim was definite and if he could not reach it by one path, he would push on by another.—From "Lincoln the Leader," in the February Century.

PLEA FOR PUBLIC SCALES.

Also Urge that All Vehicles Carry Lights at Night—Public Affairs to Act.

The Plainfield Protective Association was heard from at the February meeting of the Common Council, last Monday. H. C. White, its secretary, calling the attention of the city fathers to several matters, which in the opinion of the association should be looked into. One is the local trolley service. The association said that it understood that in consideration of the privilege of double tracking Watchung avenue and East Front street, the city was to have new trolley cars. This fact had evidently been forgotten by some.

Attention was also called to the dirty and unsanitary condition of the cars, about which many complaints had been received. The necessity of compelling all vehicles to carry lights at night was referred to, it being considered dangerous to allow them to go about without such a protection to pedestrians as well as motor cars which are compelled to carry lights.

Another matter referred to was that of a public scales, which the association said were to be located at the new police building. The present need of such a scales was cited. It was further stated that arrangements had been made with the Borough Council to secure a copy of the minutes of each meeting so as to keep in touch with what is being done, and a similar arrangement was suggested to the city.

The communication was turned over to Mr. Mygatt, and later he moved that with the exception of the suggestion regarding the minutes of each meeting, all the matters mentioned be referred to the public affairs committee. This was done. City Clerk MacMurray stated that he would be willing to comply with the request so far as furnishing a copy of the minutes of all meetings.

Over 400 plates were laid for the members who attended the twenty-second anniversary banquet of the Riverside Maennerchor at Riverside, last evening.

The twenty-fifth annual election of officers of the Lafayette Mutual Building and Loan Association of *Jersey City will be held at 295 Pa*cific avenue, in that place, tonight.

For Long Branch and Asbury Park, sta. its formal report today. The assets are found to be $14,065.70 and the liabilities slightly more than $15,-000. The firm has asked for an extension of time for its payments, agreeing to pay 25 per cent. in four payments, in June, September, December and March, 1910. It is probable that these conditions of pay*ment will be accepted by the credi*tors, but unless a unanimous agreement is reached, new terms will have to be made.

Three judgments were rendered in the District court last week to creditors of the firm. These totalled to $500. The effort will be made to have the partial payment petition effective in these cases, but if this cannot be done the firm will have to go into bankruptcy. The committee of investigation comprised H. E. Sherwood and E. H. Burley, the largest creditors, W. J. James, Jr., representing twenty-two creditors, William Newcorn, representing seven creditors, and Harry C. Runyon, representing seven creditors.

SPECIAL LINCOLN HOLIDAY.

Senate Also Passes Measure for National Memorial.

The United States Senate Monday afternoon passed the resolution offered by Senator Dick, of Ohio, setting apart February 12, 1909, as a special holiday to commemorate the centennial of the birth of Abraham Lincoln. The resolution was passed as a substitute for the Hodge resolution, and the matter now goes to conference.

The Dick resolution authorizes a permanent memorial to Lincoln, which may include a national high*way from Washington to Gettysburg,* Pa., to be known as the Lincoln Way.

As acting chairman of the fire and building committee, Mr. Buxton called the attention of the Common Council, Monday, to the fact that the new East End fire-house will be ready for occupancy within the next sixty days. In view of this he thought it time that consideration is given to the equipment of the house. At his suggestion Mayor Fisk and the entire Council will meet Thursday night to consider the question.

The Council has not yet decided whether it will be advisable to purchase apparatus to be drawn by horses or an automobile machine. Mr. Buxton spoke of the demonstrations given here of the Knox and Webb machines, both of which he said were reported to be all right and would meet local requirements. He said that while in Akron, Ohio, several months ago, he found the auto machines in successful operation, and he believed that they would do the work here satisfactorily.

The February number of Recreation, which contains many notable articles of interest to all outdoor enthusiasts, is now for sale by all newsdealers. One need not be a specialist in any branch of sports to enjoy and profit by the seasonable articles and stories in this issue, but February Recreation takes care of all classes of sportsmen. Every one of its many photographs is unusual, different, and all of them were made by people who have "been there."

The National Magazine, the sprightly Boston publication is attracting universal attention with a series of illustrated articles, "The Story of a Great Nation." Every department of the government at Washington is being described by the chiefs of the bureaus who are actually doing the work. Every member of the President's Cabinet will contribute to this series which prominent educators and public men all over the country are commending as the most conspicuous federal educational work ever accomplished.

Each Sunday the parson rode three miles to church. On this particular Sunday it was raining very hard. He rode the distance on horseback and, when he reached the church, was soaking wet.

Several of the good old sisters who were there placed a chair before the fire for him and hung his wet coat up to dry.

"I am so afraid that I won't be dry enough to preach," he said.

FRANK O. HERRING DEAD

AGED SIXTY THREE YEARS.

Formerly of Grace Church Vestry; Member of Trinity Commandery; Interment Here Friday.

Frank Otis Herring, aged sixty-three years, son of Silas C. Herring, a pioneer safe manufacturer, died yesterday at Saranac Lake, N. Y., where he had been living for the past two or three years for his health. He had been suffering with pulmonary trouble and was obliged to seek a higher altitude. Saranac Lake seemed to agree with him and he improved to such an extent that he decided to try living here again. The change was not beneficial and he was compelled to return to New York State.

Mr. Herring was for a great many years a prominent and active citizen, although he never held public office. He possessed much civic pride as was shown in the part he took as a member of the old Alert Hose Company. The membership was largely composed of the commuter element and they owned the much-prized silver hose carriage.

While in active business in New York, as a member of the Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Company, at 400 Broadway, he resided here. He was one of the leading factors in the safe trade. He had a host of friends both in this city and New York and he frequently entertained at his beautiful home on Park avenue.

Mr. Herring was prominent in Masonic circles and at one time was District Grand Deputy Master for the State of New Jersey. He was a member of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M.; Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., and Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T. For thirteen years he was treasurer of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation and took an active interest in promoting trade relations between the United States and South American countries. He is survived by a wife, who has been with him throughout his stay at Saranac.

During the early days when the Union County Country Club was a factor in Plainfield's social life, Mr. Herring was a leading member and established a great reputation as a bowler. He was also a communicant of Grace church, and at various times served with distinction as a member of the vestry. He was also active in all departments of church work in that parish.

Funeral services will be held at Saranac Lake and the interment will be in Hillside cemetery Friday afternoon on the arrival of the 2 o'clock express from Liberty street, New York

MEN'S BIBLE CLASS RE-ELECTS ITS OFFICERS

The Men's Bible class of the First Baptist church held its annual meeting last night, combining it with an entertainment and social. This class was organized October 13 last, with a membership of five, today there are thirty-eight on the roll and the class is still growing. H. W. Herman and B. J. Phelps are the teachers of the class and they have been successful.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, John G. MacLaughlin; vice-president, L. H. Matlack; treasurer, E. H. Hardingham; secretary, Fred K. Armstrong. The class meets in the main part of the church every Sunday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock.

After the business session, the men were entertained in a delightful manner by Walter David, humorous, who related some of his best stories, and selections by an orchestra. There was also an interesting address by James E. Church on the organization of adult Bible work. A social hour was then enjoyed and refreshments were served by wives of the members.

MRS. HALL PRESIDENT OF WOMEN'S EXCHANGE

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Women's Exchange was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. S. D. Lounsbury, of East Seventh street, when these officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Mrs. Henry Hall; vice-president, Miss Elizabeth R. Cock; treasurer, Mrs. Edgar S. Hyatt; recording secretary, Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. H. Greenleaf.

The reports of the treasurer and other officers showed that the past year had been the best in the history of the exchange, there were more consignments and more sales than in any previous year. This fact, however, is not intended to imply that the Exchange is not in need of more money. It receives fifteen per cent on the business and this just about meets the expenses.

Following the business session there was a social hour and refreshments were served. Mrs. H. V. Borden and Mrs. F. R. Lyon poured, assisted by other members of the exchange. It was decided at the meeting to lease the present quarters for the exchange for a term of three years, it being best suited to its needs.

Coal Stealer Fined.

Fortunato De Marco, an 18-year-old Italian who lives on Cottage place, was fined $5 at the session of city court today, when he was arraigned before Judge Hungerford on a charge of stealing coal from the railroad. The arrest was made by Special Officer Gaffney, who saw him board a slow moving freight at Washington street yesterday morning and hurl off chunks of soft coal. He then jumped off the train and had started to collect the coal when the officer nabbed him. Given a choice of $5 or 20 days, the young man paid the fine.

Struck by Mail Bag at Station.

While standing on the platform at the North avenue station this morning at about 8:30 o'clock, W. G. Tunison and A. E. Willard were struck by a heavy mail bag hurled off at the station from the mail car of an eastbound Philadelphia flyer. The two were engaged in conversation at the edge of the platform as the train came through. The bag struck them across the legs, nearly knocking them down. Although painfully bruised, they started for Elizabeth where they are serving on the petit jury.

Jr. C. E. S. Entertained.

Mrs. R. Y. Kinney, of Orchard Park, entertained the social committee of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity church yesterday afternoon. Refreshments were served at 5 o'clock.

E. E. PARVIN TELLS ABOUT "C.Q.D." MESSAGE

Emerson E. Parvin, of Watchung avenue, gave a most interesting talk at the Congregational church last night before the Men's Club of the church. Mr. Parvin, who is a particularly interesting speaker, is secretary of the International Mercantile Marine Company, owners of the White Star Line, American Line and other prominent steamship interests.

The steamer "Republic," recently wrecked off Nanacket Point, was owned by the company in which Mr. Parvin is interested, and his talk last night was illustrative of the value of wireless as shown by this accident, where hundreds were saved because aid was summoned by the famous "C. Q. D." wireless message. The speaker explained with perfect lucidity the method of sending and receiving wireless messages between ships at sea. He told how the water was the medium used for transportation of the message waves and explained the "ears" of the modern ocean liner—bell shaped contrivances for receiving messages. In connection with this is the delicate receiving apparatus which enables the news of the ships to pass.

Of especial interest was Mr. Parvin's allusion to the fortitude and bravery of Captain Sealby, captain of the ill-fated "Republic." The officer did everything to facilitate the safe transferring of the steamer's passengers to the boats and then answered the wireless signals of distress, and actually went down with the ship, being rescued from the water.

At the conclusion of the talk, a social hour was passed. The audience filled the seating capacity of the edifice, and many remained to meet the speakr. Refreshmnts were served by the officers of the club.

Mr. Parvin will address the March meeting of the Board of Trade.

MR. FISK ADDRESSES PERTH AMBOY MEN

Mayor Charles J. Fisk addressed the newly organized Board of Trade of Perth Amboy last night. He was late in arriving at the meeting owing to the fact that he had juust attended a meeting of the executive committee for the Plainfield Citizens' Lincoln Centenary Celebration. When he and Chief Kiely entered the hall, there was a loud applause for the pooh-bah of the State Excise Commission and "Little Father" of "The City Beautiful," who had just issued an edict against naughty shows in this staid old town.

The mayor gave Perth Amboy a rattling good talk and he was frequently interrupted by applause. He confined himself to the civic duties of the American citizen, dwelling on the good work that might be accomplished by such organization as a board of trade. He urged the Amboyites to get together and work for the advancement of their city. He also impressed upon the business men the importance of their lending a helping hand in the management of their municipal government.

MASTER SANDFORD ROOME CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY.

Sandford Roome, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Roome, of Sycamore avenue, had a birthday party Monday night in honor of the sixth anniversary of his birthday. There were twelve guests, little friends of Master Roome. A feature was a fish pond, Alexander Milne, catching the greatest number of fish. There was also a Punch and Judy show that amused the children.

The table in the dining room was attractively decorated with varied colored ribbons, miniature hatchets, valentines and candy. In the centre was a chicken with a brood of twelve little ones; also a large cake bearing six candles. The children had a fine time and Master Roome will have occasion to always remember the event.

Chicken Thieves Busy.

L. L. Croom, of 414 East Third street, reports that chicken thieves have been busy about his neighborhood. A valuable chicken of the "wine dot" breed, he says, was stolen Monday night. In describing the chicken, Mr. Croom says that "it was a large white rooster, with a rose comb, blunt tail, with only three long feathers." He would appreciate any information concerning the bird.

WORKING WITH MORMONS

Miss Isely, Teacher in Utah, Addresses Congregational Church Workers.

AT STATE CONVENTION HERE.

Miss Deas, Representing Cleveland, Ohio, Schools, Also Gives an Interesting Talk.

Miss M. Alice Isley, of Coleville, Utah, addressed the meeting yesterday afternoon, of the Women's Home Missionary Union of the Congregational churches of New Jersey, held at the Congregational church in this city, on the subject of "Christian Education in Utah." Miss Isley has been a teacher in the school of Utah for twelve years and is well qualified to speak on the Mormon situation. She explained interestingly the tenets of the church gospel as taught to the Mormons.

That Christian education is being advanced rapidly was the cheering message that she brought, great headway being made through the children, who are allowed to attend the Christian schools. The Mormons recognize the advantages of the splendid system of education in these schools, and the influence that the missionaries gain over the parents in this way is very marked.

But while the Christians are accomplishing much in this manner, Miss Isley declared that the Mormons are equally zealous, and their missionaries, which they send out to all parts of the world are daily making converts to that faith. These missionaries are all young men, who, in being called by the church, go out and work without any compensation whatever. They are not even given expense money, but make their way from place to place, preaching and teaching and setting an example of devotion and hard work for a cause that it would do well for the Christians to emulate. The speaker declared that if the Christians would be up and doing their on the Mormon faith would be more effective; that the battle needs to be fought with zeal. The large audience listened to Miss Isely with breathless attention.

Another interesting feature of the afternoon session was the address of Miss Helen Deas, secretary of the Schauffler School for Missionaries at Cleveland, Ohio. The local union is supporting a Bohemian girl at this school, and Miss Deas was able to give most encouraging report on the student's progress. The young woman has been four years in the school and in a short time will be ready to begin missionary work among the people of her nationality in this country. At the conclusion of the program of speeches, the delegates joined in singing "America."

The church was handsomely decorated for the occasion. American flags lined the walls on all sides and on the tables where luncheon was served were red carnations and miniature flags. Ninety-five delegates were present from various parts of the State and the meeting which began in the morning was one of the most successful ever held by the State organization. Mrs. Charles F. Chase, the president, presided. An account of the morning session was published in The Daily Press of yesterday.

Joseph Brady.

Joseph Brady, aged fifteen years, a nephew of Chief of Police O'Neil, of Westfield, died at Muhlenberg Hospital, last night, of spinal meningitis, with which he was attacked less than two weeks ago. Just what brought on the disease is not known. The attack was sudden and the boy's condition was critical from the first. The lad attended the public school at Westfield and was popular in a large circle of young friends.

Explains Compton Avenue Query.

Referring to the inquiry of "Resident" in The Daily Press of last night, in relation to the needed macadamizing of Compton avenue, a city official states that this work has not been ordered by the Common Council, but that, in accordance with the attitude of the Council this year, the work will undoubtedly be done at any time, if the property-owners will deposit their share of the estimated cost.

Fixing Tower Clock.

The Somerset School tower clock is being put into working order again. J. J. Harter, an expert from The Standard Electric Time Company, of Waterbury, Connecticut, is doing the work.

PROPERTY TO REVERT TO ORIGINAL GRANTORS

The recent destruction by fire of the old grist mill at South Plainfield has raised a fine legal point that may abolish the famous mill pond at that place and cause the property to revert to the grantors of the right. It is understood that according to the old deed which granted the land for mill pond purposes, it is stipulated that in case the mill should cease to be used for the purpose, torn down or removed, the pond rights are to be relinquished.

Another interesting phase of the situation is that the township has always maintained the mill dam at that place, and if the mill ceases to be and the pond is abandoned, that would release the committee from further responsibility. These questions came up at a meeting of the committee Monday night and it was the opinion that unless the mill is rebuilt and used for its original purpose all rights are forfeited.

If this be true it would result in the draining of the William Laing property, making it available for building sites. Such an action would seriously interfere with the business of the Middlesex Water Company as that corporation has its plant located near the pond and is depending on the springs supplying the pond for its water supply. Thus far there has been no move to rebuild the grist mill and for this reason the township committee took up the question for discussion. It will probably be referred to the courts for a decision.

ANNIVERSARY MEETING OF THE RESCUE MISSION

The third anniversary meting of the Plainfield Rescue Mission was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms last night, and was largely attended. J. B. Oakley, of the Elizabeth Rescue Mission, was in charge of the meeting. The annual report showed that there were 312 meetings held during the past year, ending February 9, and 11,920 have heard the gospel at these meetings. The superintendent, Mr. LeMatty, made 618 calls and there were thirteen conversions.

An interesting incident was related during the evening. A traveling man happened to be standing outside the mission one night recently, and heard Mrs. John Manley sing, "He Held Me Fast." It so impressed him that the next day he called on Mrs. Manley and told her that her solo of the night before was the means of his giving his heart to Christ.

Another encouraging feature was the reading of a letter received from Mrs. J. VanDuzen, of North Branch. She told of her interest in the work and how deeply impressed she was with the meetings while in Plainfield. She spoke of receiving religious literature which she said she would pass on where it would be good. She also asked for the prayers of the mission for herself and husband. The works of this mission has attracted considerable attention and Superintendent LeMaty has been ably supported. An added feature last night was vocal and instrumental music.

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Elinor G. Waring and J. Hartley Mellick was made at a birthday luncheon given for her today by Miss Waring's sister, Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson, at the latter's home on Hillside avenue. It was a brilliant affair, covers being laid for eleven. The color scheme was yellow.

Waring, of Park avenue, and during the past few years she has been prominent in the younger society of Plainfield, taking part in numerous functions. Mr. Mellick is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George P. BANK FOR THE BOROUGH

CAPITALISTS ARE INTERESTED.

New York, Brooklyn, Newark and Philadelphia Bankers Back of the Scheme—All Names Witheld.

Repented rumors of a bank to be established in North Plainfield have lead to a series of mis-statements about the institution, and inquiry of Former Mayor N. B. Smalley, leading local promoter of the borough bank, today resulted in the contradiction of much that has been printed. North Plainfield is to have a bank. Mr. Smalley says, but it is the only local name connected with it which has been made public. According to his statement, there are to be several prominent boroughites among the promoters, but their names are withheld at this time.

"When this bank is started," he said to a Daily Press reporter, "there will be some leading North Plainfielders among its promoters who will be as big men as any connected with the city banks. All the promoters will not be local men, either, for they will include well-known bankers from New York city, Newark and Philadelphia, as well as several prominent Brooklyn business men. There are to be eight out of town promoters in all, but I won't name them at this time.

"We aren't starting this bank in opposition to any Plainfield institution, and it won't hurt the business of the city banks. But there is room in North Plainfield for a bank—they've got a flourishing bank in Dunellen. The borough bank will be a good thing for North Plainfield business. Such an institution will obtain up the business conditions that now exist "over the brook." There is a tendency to belittle North Plainfield as a residential and business district and if the borough gets a bank, business will become firmer because the district will be independent.

"At this end of Somerset County *there is need of a banking institu*tion and it will get county support. The bank, you see, isn't an upstart to injure the city banks, and while it won't set the world afire, it will beat boroughites right and help borough financial conditions."

Frank Rowley, whose name has been published as one of the local promoters, flatly contradicted that he was connected with the new institution in any way.

The store at 33 Somerset street will the first home of the borough bank, but it is planned to erect a building to house it within a short time. The site of the new building has not yet been made public.

Water Main Lowered.

The Plainfield-Union Water Company, which supplies water for all of the towns in this section, through its superintendent, Thomas Doyle of Westfield, lowered a water main on Locust street, Roselle, to a depth of five feet without injuring the pipe or causing the water to be shut off. Mr. Dowd had a shut-off gate placed in the main in Roselle before he started to lower the pipe from the Roselle Park end, and had there been any trouble this gate would have closed the main, so that water could be pumped into the pipes from the Dunellen section and Roselle will be served with water and protected from fire.

Admires Burglar's Nerve.

"I don't care whether they catch him or not, for I sort of admire a man who has nerve enough to burglarize a house." This unusual statement was made by Mrs. Adolph Bluemer, of 231 Murray street, Elizabeth, whose home was robbed yesterday. Notwithstanding her views, the police are on the trail of the "nervy" burglar.

MRS. W. F. COCHRAN DEAD

Immensely Wealthy Mother of Mrs. Percy H. Stewart Succumbs to Indigestion.

SHE GAVE MUCH TO CHARITY.

Her Fortune Over Twenty Millions —She Had Many Friends in This City.

Mrs. Eva Smith Cochran, widow of William F. Cochran, mother of Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, of West Eighth street, and sister of the late Warren B. Smith, head of the carpet works at Yonkers, N. Y., died Wednesday at her home on E. Forty fifth street, New York, from acute indigestion, with which she was attacked on Sunday.

Mrs. Cochran was sixty-three years of age and since the death of her husband several years ago resided in New York. Her son, Alexander Smith Cochran, inherited about $36,000,000 under Warren B. Smith's will and became president of the Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Company at Yonkers, the largest concern of the kind in the world. Mrs. Cichran was the sister of the late Warren B. Smith. Mrs. Cochran gave liberally to church and general charities.

While Mrs. Cochran inherited only $100,000 under her brother's will she received $10,000,000 from her father, Alexander Smith, and a like amount from her husband. She had a summer home, Duncraggan, on the Hudson at Yonkers. Two years ago she gave Grace Chapel to St. John's Episcopal church at Yonkers and when dissensions arose in the congregation as the result of differences between the pastor of St. John's and his curate, who was rector of Grace Chapel, the congregation of the chapel tried hard to make it an independent church. Mrs. Cochran finally tired of the church war over the chapel and sold it to a Christian Science congregation.

SMILES AFTER HER LEG IS AMPUTATED

The accident which made necessary the operation happened in the kitchen at her home a month and a half ago. In walking across the floor hurriedly her foot turned sideways causing the sprain. Swelling set in and the doctors finally decided that the limb must come off to prevent blood poisoning.

Dr. Ellis Hedges performed the operation Thursday at Muhlenberg Hospital and it was declared to have been quite successful, leaving the patient in good condition. The child withstood the ordeal with remarkable fortitude and since recovering from the effects of the ther has been quite cheerful. She asked for her playmates and greeted all around her with smiles.

The little girl had been a pupil at the Bryant School and was bright and progressing rapidly in her studies. Her father is a barber.

The book, entitled "New Jersey to the Front," which his company proposes to issue about March 1, is to contain writeups of the various cities and towns of the State, including Plainfield. The representative informed the board that the proceeds from the advertising in the publication is to be applied to the general publicity fund, and will be used solely for the purpose of advertising New Jersey. FREEHOLDERS HEAR HOSPITAL REJECTS POOR

In a letter to the Union County Board of Freeholders Thursday afternoon Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, probation officer of Union county and a leading charity worker, complained that the Elizabeth General Hospital officials refused to admit charity patients unless assured that the expenses of their board and care would be looked after.

The other hospitals, she said, had their doors open for indigent patients. She insisted that charity patients should be admitted without question, as the city and county both make appropriations for the hospital.

The Freeholders have appropriated $8,000 to the General Hospital. After a discussion it was decided to investigate Mrs. Williamson's complaint, and a committee was appointed for that purpose.

Mr. Gavett retires from the presidency of the association after four years of splendid service. Mr. Kimball, who succeeds him, is superintendent of the sales department of the Borne-Scrymser Oil Company of New York. He has been a member of the board of directors of the association since 1905, serving as chairman of its finance committee for two years. One of the organizers of the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, he was also its first president.

Mr. Dayton, who succeeds George M. Rittenhouse as vice-president, was elected to the board in 1908 and has served as a member of the religious work committee of the association. He is president of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park avenue Baptist church.

PLAINFIELDERS HEARS THE LOTUS GLEE CLUB

The concert given at the Congregational church Thursday by the Lotus Glee Club, assisted by Mrs. Minnie Marshall-Smith, dramatic reciter, was one of the best of the season and attracted a capacity audience. The quartet and Mrs. Smith were at their best and they generously responded with an encore to everyone of the eleven selections on the program. The selections were all of the popular order and the audience was quick to appreciate them.

A feature of the program was "Up-to-Date Grand Opera," by George Ade and Frank J. Smith. The rendition of this by the quartet won hearty applause and convulsed the audience with laughter from beginning to end.

The work of Mrs. Smith was of the usual high character and her selections were given in a finished style, for which she has become famous in dramatics. The quartet is composed of Harvey Hindermyer, first tenor; G. Morgan Stricklett, second tenor; Charles L. Lewis, first bass; George H. Bemus, second bass. Frank J. INVITE WESTFIELD BOARD

The Newly Organized Town Boomers to Attend Board of Trade Banquet Here.

TO HEAR CALVIN TOMPKINS.

Distinguished New Yorker to Make Chief Speech at Dinner On March 11.

Although the speakers' committee merely reported progress when reports of the various committees working on the Board of Trade banquet were given at the meeting of the Board Thursday, it is known that Calvin Tompkins, president of the New Jersey Rivers and Harbors Congress, will be one of the two speakers at the dinner, which will be held at Tripoli Hall, Thursday night, March 11.

Mr. Tompkins, who is ranked as one of the representative men of New York, has not yet announced his subject on the occasion of the banquet, but his prominence in civic matters has led to the general belief that his remarks will be on some phase of city growth. Tompkins recently read a paper urging the improvements of roads, rivers, harbors and canals before the Good Roads Convention at Atlantic City, and is well-known for his work as president of the Reform Club, of New York. He was prominent among the New Yorkers who agitated municipal control of public utilities in New York several years ago. At that time he was chairman of the Franchise Committee of the Citizens' Union, of New York. During the two years that he served as president of the New York Municipal Art Society, he persistently urged the adoption of some comprehensive development plan for the metropolis and suburbs of New York. Mr. Tompkins is a director of the Newark plaster works, located at Newark and at Hillsborough, Canada. He is a personal friends of Henry L. Hall, chairman of the speakers' committee.

It was voted to extend an invitation to the recently organized Board of Trade of Westfield to attend the dinner.

CARE OF THE SILVERWARE.

Only a Little Trouble to Keep It in Perfect Condition.

Shining silver upon snowy linen is beautiful, but it takes trouble to keep it in good condition. The tarnishing of silver does not by any means indicate that it is of poor quality; on the contrary the finer the silver the more quickly it becomes discolored.

Silver kept in a room with open gas burners or coal stoves keeps its brilliancy for a short time only. Tarnishing can be prevented by having the pieces lacquered; but the lacquer, though serviceable for ornamental pieces and toilet articles, cannot be used on the table service. The lacquered ware can be kept in excellent condition simply by dusting it lightly and carefully and about once a month wiping it with a soft slightly dampened cloth. Never allow these pieces to become wet.

The silver that is used daily can be kept in excellent condition by washing it thoroughly in soft warm water and soap every day. All such silver should be washed well every second week. In doing this be careful not to put several pieces in the pan together, for this causes dents and scratches.

Hot water or water that has been boiled is the best to use. Make a heavy suds with a pure soap and add a few tablespoonfuls of ammonia. A soft sponge is most suitable for washing silver, and a fine brush may be employed on the chased pieces or around the handles.

After washing the silver well in the ammonia suds rinse in clear cold water and let it stand for a few minutes. If any polishing is necessary it can be done at this time. Common whiting, wet with alcohol and rubbed on with a soft flannel, makes an excellent polish. After polishing wash well again.

Finally dip all the pieces in a bath of boiling water and dry with a very soft cloth. This last dip in the clear boiling water does much to prevent further oxidation.

Cassa Roll (Original).

Cook corn and a half cupfuls of rice. Have a half gallon bucket greased inside; put part of the rice into the bucket, pasting it all around the side, leaving a hollow in the center. Fill this with chili made as follows: Put a tablespoonful of lard in pan; grind an onion size of onion put in grease and fry for a minute; add two cups ground beef; fry for ten minutes; then add water to keep covered. Cook for an hour. Season with a pinch of salt and two teaspoonfuls chili powder. Pour chili into rice and cover with remaining rice. Cover bucket and boil in a double boiler for one or two hours.

Watercress Jelly.

An odd flavoring for gelatine, from an American standpoint, is watercress. A German housekeeper declares it makes a delicious variety, much appreciated by her family.

The gelatine is made in the usual way and while still hot the juice of three or four large handfuls of fresh watercress is poured into it.

Pound the cress in a clean mortar, add half a glass of cold water and squeeze in a jelly bag or cheesecloth to extract all the juice.

If the plain taste of the cress is thought too insipid the juice of one lemon can be added.

Home-Made Cream Cheese.

Take two quarts of thickly clabbered milk and pour into it a quart of boiling water. Let it stand for ten minutes or longer, then put into a perfectly fresh cheesecloth bag and drain over night. The next morning rub this cheese to a smooth pulp and press through a rather coarse sieve. Salt to taste, add gradually a half teaspoonful of thick cream, pack into small jars or cups and keep in a very cool place for two weeks. At the end of that time scrape off the top and turn from the cups for use.

Turkish Delight.

Boil 2½ pounds loaf sugar with 1¾ pints of water. When it is clear add 65 drams of starch, dissolved in a little cold water. Stir until the sugar has become a thick paste; add 2½ drams of water and one cup of chopped almonds. Flavor with rose, lemon or any fruit extract. Pour into oiled pans one inch deep. When cold cut into squares and dip each into powdered sugar. They will keep some time in tin boxes. These are the sweetmeats that are imported at such high prices.

Four Good Things to Know.

When broiling steak, brush it over with butter and flour to keep the juice in. Add chopped sweet peppers to the soup and they will have a fine flavor delightful. Should soup be too salt, add a sliced raw potato and cook a few minutes longer. To cut a loaf of hot brown bread, take a piece of twine and place it round the loaf, cross the ends and pull; there will be a clean cut, without any crumbs.

A Gage Filling for Cake.

If you have wearied of the different fillings for your cup cake, instead of using custard jelly or chocolate try spreading the layers thickly with green gage jam. Cover the top with a thick boiled icing, or, if the cake is to be eaten the same day that it is baked the top can be covered with whipped cream beaten stiff.

Stewed Fruit Before Breakfast.

There are few better or more pleasant laxatives than to eat stewed figs apples or prunes a half hour before breakfast. It is important to take this fruit on first awakening in the morning, as twice the quantity at breakfast or later has little effect medicinally

CHARTER'S CELEBRATION

AN OLD FASHIONED PARADE.

Good Time Generally With Fire Works Thrown in—Board of Trade Committee Appointed.

Impetus for a big celebration of the fortieth anniversary of the granting of a city charter to Plainfield was given at the meeting of the Board of Trade Thursday, when it was decided to hold such a celebration and when a committee of ten was appointed by President H. W. Marshall. Plainfield has been a city since May, 1869, and Independence Day has been decided upon as the day for celebrating the anniversary.

The committee, as appointed by President Marshall, comprises Captain William C. Smith, E. M. Laing, Albert E. Force, B. Frank Coriell, J. Hervey Doane, John A. Gaffney, Walter Apgar, Lemuel B. Woolston, Warren Travell and T. R. VanZandt. These men will meet and elect their own chairman. A. E. Force, as president of the Local Speeders' Association, will bring the matter up at the next meeting of the association, and an auxiliary committee will be named from the business men.

Plans for the affair are as yet but embryonic. President Marshall of the matter before the Board of Trade, calling attention to the fact that the occasion merited celebration. He said that the city should profit by the experiments other cities had made in conducting celebrations, and cited the Old Home Week at Elizabeth, which was not considered a success, and various carnivals other cities had held as celebrations. He said that a celebration of the anniversary would best not be for more than a single day, and those present seemed of the same opinion.

Realizing that the Fourth of July is a day when most Plainfielders are at their homes, Mr. Marshall suggested this day for the celebration, and it was unanimously agreed to have "Charter Day" and Independence Day one and the same occasion this year. Suggestions for a program of the day's celebration led to remarks by E. M. Laing and L. B. Woolston. These men spoke of a local celebration about thirteen years ago, when a parade was a successful feature. Both had been members of the committee in charge of this affair, and the suggestion for a parade on "Charter Day" was enthusiastically received.

The parade will be made up of sections comprising the local military, firemen, police, Board of Trade members, merchants, lodgemen, church societies and school children, and it is expected that committees will be appointed from the various organizations to co-operate with the general parade committee. A fire*works celebration in the evening will* perhaps prove the major attraction of the day's celebration, and at this time there will be addresses by men prominent in the city today and its development during the past forty years.

DRESSING ALIKE.

There is an English fashion, long in vogue, of dressing two sisters alike who are near the same age. It is not necessary for them to be twins. This fashion has been taken up in America and is especially popular this winter.

In some families two girls have made their debut together instead of a year apart, and their entire outfit for the winter is the same.

Instead of looking old, it is quite pretty. It saves a good deal of trouble and in this year of quaint colorings it is a safeguard to have gowns off the same piece if they are to be worn at the same time. Not only have young women taken it up, but mothers are dressing alike girls of 15 years old. Everything is bought in pairs, from school frocks to party gowns.

If the fashion continues to grow in popularity as it has in one winter, it may become the established thing here, as it is abroad.

PLAINFIELD LAWYER REBUKED BY COURT

Judge E. S. Atwater in the Union county courts, Friday, administered a rebuke to Lawyer Robert Newton Crane, of this city, who appeared as counsel for Mrs. Mary Wyckoff, of Dunellen, indicted on *two charges of shoplifting. The wo*man when arraigned in the first instance entered a plea of not guilty and this morning through her counsel change it to one of guilty. The court imposed a fine of $50 for one charge and suspended sentence on the other.

Immediately after a plea of guilty was entered, Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., moved that sentence be pronounced. Lawyer Crane then made an earnest plea for leniency. He took occasion to criticize the court indirectly, citing cases where leniency had been shown before and as he considered that his client had already suffered enough already, he expressed the opinion that she was entitled to the same treatment.

Mr. Hetfield took exception to Mr. Crane's remarks, which he characterized as a criticism of the court's previous action, and this resulted in Judge Atwater sharply rebuking Mr. Crane and advising him to confine his remarks to the case in which he was particular interested. This is the second occasion that Mr. Crane has provoked admonition on the part of the court. The other instance was upon his first appearance in the county court, when the judge "called him" for impertinent remarks.

NEW MOTOR LAW FOR NEW JERSEY

Interest centres in the Colgate automobile measure, which amends the present *Frelinghuysen law by gross*cribing that all automobiles to travel in this State must have a plainly audible trumpet signal; must carry exhaust pipes directly parallel to the ground or turning slightly upward; the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles to receive all complaints for violation of the speed laws, the same to be in writing and verified; he must investigate them within five days from their receipt, and if in his judgment a case can be made out he can cause a warrant to be sworn out and placed in the hands of a police of the Peace for adjudication in the municipality where the alleged violation took place.

Non-residents of this State, when displaying their identification license numbers of other States, are to be allowed to tour in New Jersey for ten days without taking out a New Jersey license within one year, when they pay a fee of $2 to the State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

The measure forbids the use of a muffler cutoff in cities or towns or within 500 feet of any other vehicles. The speed limit in the open country is changed to thirty miles an hour and exempts drivers from regulations regarding maximum speed limit, unless the excessive speed shall be proved to have been continued for at least one mile. Complaint may be made and proved before the State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles upon conceiving that there be cause after investigation, and within thirty days shall cause the person to be apprehended in a summary manner before a Justice of the Peace or any committing Magistrate in the municipality where the violation occurred.

A companion bill to this, Colgate automobile regulator is a measure also introduced by him, compelling the placing of lights on all vehicles of any class using the highway from one hour before sundown to one hour after sunrise; the white light to show at least 250 feet. An penalty of $10 is provided for failure to comply.

ROAD COMMISSION "O. K'D" JEFFERSON AVE. SURVEY.

At the meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders, Thursday, the *approval of the survey of Jeffer*son avenue, this city, was received from the State road commission, with the understanding that the board would co-operate with the Department with a view to obtaining better material with which to improve that thoroughfare. The plan is to make it a State aid road.

The building and grounding committee was authorized to investigate the advisability of installing a dependent electric plant in the court house, to illuminate that building.

The Grand Jury commissioners with the freeholders asking that immediate action be taken to provide better ventilating facilities in the grand jury room. The present system was denounced strongly and it was urged that steps be taken at once to remedy the troubles.

May Save Evans' Sight.

Hoyt Evans, of the electric light department of the P. S. Co., whose right eye was badly burned by spattering solder while he was at work Thursday, is reported to be resting more comfortably today at the hospital. Dr. F. C. Ard, to whose office the young man was removed immediately after the accident, said today that it is possible that sight may be preserved.

BIG REALTY EXPERT DIES

AN INVALID FOR NINE MONTHS.

Was Only Thirty-six Years of Age —Had a Rapid Rise— Funeral on Saturday.

Following a lingering illness death came to William Stevens Slape at his home, 72 Westervelt avenue, at 8 Wednesday night. Mr. Slape has been an invalid since last May, when he was attacked with a hemorrhage, while at his lawyer's office. Medical attention was given him and he was removed to his home, where he has been confined since.

Although but thirty-six years of age, Mr. Slape was considered one of the best posted authorities in real estate valuations in the State. He had charge of the real estate business of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and on several occasions has been called upon to act as an appraiser by the courts. For the past two years he had been general appraiser of the company's real estate for New Jersey and New York State.

Mr. Slape was born at Dunellen in 1873 and was a graduate of Palmer's Commercial College, at Ossining, N. Y., where he lived for some years. He identified himself with the Mutual Life Insurance Company in 1892, being employed in the bond and mortgage department. His rise was rapid. Entering the real estate department, he soon became general appraiser for the company, and in 1898 was sent to Rochester to take care of the northern New York interests of the company, later taking entire charge of the company's real estate in New York and New Jersey. He also had charge of the company's real estate holdings in Brooklyn, where his management won him a high place in real estate circles.

In October, 1903, Mr. Slape married Miss Olive Newell, daughter of B. D. Newell, of East Front street, and for a short time afterward the couple made their home in Brooklyn. Mr. Slape's mother, Mrs. Ella T. Slape, of East Second street, survives him, living with a sister, Mrs. W. S. Bullock, and his brother, Clarence D. Slape. The other sister, Mrs. Harry W. Hull, lives in Newark.

LOYAL LEGION OBSERVES LINCOLN'S CENTENARY

The celebration of the centenary of Lincoln's Birthday was observed Wednesday by the quarterly meeting and banquet at Delmonico's, New York, in a noteworthy manner. Following the banquet the rest of the evening was devoted to speeches by General Horace Porter, Horace White, Charles A. Lead and General James Grant Wilson, all of whom had a personal acquaintance with Lincoln. The addresses in consequence were of special interest. Many personal incidents, some never related before, made the occasion of great importance. The eulogy of Lincoln by General Porter was perhaps, one of the greatest heard in recent times.

Handsome souvenir programs were distributed. These contained an original photograph of Lincoln, together with his Gettysburg address and the insignia of the Loyal Legion, embossed. More than five hundred members and friends attended, those from Plainfield being Major W. D. W. Miller, Rev. Dr. W. C. Hubbell, Captain Peck, Captain M. C. Dobbins, Dewitt C. Hubbell and Walter C. Dobbins.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT AT ATLANTIC CITY

May 20 and 21 have been decided upon as the dates and Atlantic City the place for the next annual encampment of the New Jersey G. A. R., by the Council of Administration of the State Department. Winfield Scott Post, of this city, will send a large delegation to the encampment.

The plan to have the State encampment held at Atlantic City on the dates decided upon was at first opposed by some of the members of the council who wanted the time changed to May 6 and 7. It was argued that weather conditions would be more favorable the latter part of May and better accommodations could be obtained.

Patriotic Instructor Uriah Deedy, of Newark, has reported that the movement to place Lincoln tablets in the various public schools thruout the state is meeting with great success. He is a member of the committee which has charge of the work and declared that he received more orders than the committee could fil.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 14, 1909.

Topic.—Life lessons from the book of Job.—Job. 1-6, 13-17. (Consecration meeting.)

The book of Job is undoubtedly a philosophical discussion of the problem of human suffering. Dealing with such a subject, one that touches the life of every human being, it has been great-ly read and has brought comfort and consolation to millions of those who suffer trial and affliction. To many this book seems to be a solution of the question discussed, and it is, but not in the way that many suppose. The keynote of the solution of the question can only be found in the words of Elihu, "who by searching can find out God;" in other words, it is inferred that no man by searching can find out God, the purpose of His providence, and therefore the practical conclusion is that in our sufferings we are really not to search for the reason of God's purposes, but to trust Him in spite of our inability to understand Him. Cowper beautifully puts it:

> Judge not the Lord by feeble sense,
> But trust Him for His grace;
> Behind a frowning Providence
> He hides a smiling face.

This is a great life lesson from the book of Job, which if well learned will save us many a pang and sorrow. "God's ways are not our ways," but they are all for our good, though we cannot see the good now. Instead of asking, "Why does God do this?" let us say, with the Master, "Nevertheless Thy will, not mine, be done," and complete submission to God's will bring peace and comfort of mind and soul.

The arrangement and development of the plan of this book are most admirable and increase interest in it. It is largely in the form of a dialogue, which is always interesting. It has been divided as to its contents as follows:

Introductory historical section, chapters 1, II.

Address of Elihu, chapters XXXII to XXXVII.

Discourse of Jehovah, chapters XXXVIII-XII.

Short speech of Job, XIII, 1-6.

Concluding historical section, XIII, 7-16.

The story as thus developed is a remarkable one and places the book of Job simply as literature among the greatest books ever written. Job is greatly afflicted of God. Three friends come to comfort him, but they are poor comforters. Instead of administering comfort they add to his sorrow by charging him with having sinned against God, else He would not have afflicted him. This was according to the old Jewish doctrine that God's displeasure was a sign of wrongdoing. But Job protested that he was righteous before God. The charges were general at first, then more specific and finally direct that he sinned in that he upheld his own righteousness and in so doing cleared God with injustice toward him. Then Elihu broke into the controversy and was indignant at Job "because he justified himself rather than God" and at the three friends because they could not answer Job. The Lord then spoke, and Job at last saw that he had made a mistake in so persistently upholding his own righteousness, which did injustice to God. He repented and humbled himself, crying out, "I abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes for." Then God's mercy was exercised; Job was forgiven and more restored to him than he had lost, and "after this lived Job a hundred and forty years and saw his sons and his sons' sons, even four generations. And so Job died, being old and full of days." And what a great lesson we have in this closing scene! Not through boasting or pride are God's blessing and mercy received, but through repentance and humility. "He that exalteth himself shall be abased, but he who so humbleth himself shall be exalted."

ABRAHAM LINCOLN BOOKS

The Public Library has a wonderfully large collection of books on Abraham Lincoln, which are being displayed until after February 12, on the table near the entrance to the reading room.

Here is the valuable and voluminous work of John G. Nicolay and John Hay with the supplementary two volumes of speeches, letters and State papers; the Recollections of President Lincoln and his Administration by L. E. Chittenden, the register of the Treasurer during Lincoln's administration, which, it is said, gives one of the fullest and most intimate accounts of the inner life of the President. St. Gauden's folio containing an attractive reproduction of his Statute of Lincoln and Carl Schurz's admirable essay, bound with which are Richard Watson Gilder's essay on the life-mask of Lincoln, and Edmund Clarence Stedman's poem on the hand of Lincoln, all of which are beautifully illustrated, are not the least attractive in the display, while the numerous illustrative magazine articles emphasizes special periods in the great President's life and administration.

The bulletin board, back of the table, is covered with illustrations telling by picture, the story of the life of the President, while in the centre is a framed copy of the famous Gettysburg address.

Over the bulletin board is an engraving of Lincoln, and at one side is a replica from the death mask which was presented to the library some years ago by H. P. Reynolds, of this city.

A New Satin.

Satin chamois is a new and exquisitely supple satin of all silk and novel weave and has a twill at the back that suggests surah, and is partially responsible for the easy clinging folds into which it falls. The lustre is soft, though brilliant, and is entirely without the hard, bright sheen that usually distinguishes other satins of a good weight, this being wonderfully pliable. The surface shows a very fine close texture. The thirty-six-inch width in which it comes is of unusual advantage.

For the Scrapbook.

Anyone who has used Chinese lanterns for decorations knows the danger of them burning when caught in a sudden gust of wind. This danger may be lessened, if not entirely averted, if the bottom of the lantern it filled with a cupful of sand placed around the socket that holds the candle. The weight keeps the lanterns from swaying and makes the fire less probable. If one does not wish to use sand the lantern can be steadied by fine wire fastened from the bottom of the lantern to a pillar or wall.

NEW JERSEY AUTO LAW TEST CASE UP

The test case commenced last summer by the touring bureau of The White Company to test the validity of the New Jersey automobile law, known as the Frelinghuysen automobile law, has now reached the Supreme Court of the State. Judge Reed of that court recently granted a writ of certiorari, thus permitting the case to be argued within the next few weeks. It is reasonable to expect that before the touring season opens an opinion will have been handed down on the various legal points raised by Xenophon P. Huddy and Peter Backes, counsel for The White Company.

The case has been through the police court and the Court of Common Pleas, but neither of these courts undertook to pass upon the constitutional questions involved, but simply ruled on the facts of the case and the wording of the statute.

The case originated with the arrest of R. H. Johnston, in the city of Trenton, because no New Jersey license number was displayed upon the machine. An attempt was made to bring the constitutional questions at once into the Federal Court, but that court sent the case back into the State courts for adjudication. Some of the points raised by the counsel for The White Company have never before been raised in an automobile case.

The principal contention of The White Company is that the State of New Jersey has no power to tax a non-resident citizen. Freedom of ingress and egress from the several States is guaranteed to the citizen of the United States, and has been sustained by many decisions of the United States Supreme Court.

It is further contended that the section in the Frelinghuysen law which provides that a non-resident automobilist cannot obtain the required automobile license without constituting the Secretary of State of New Jersey his attorney for the purpose of serving process alone vitiates the New Jersey statute.

It is not denied that the State may, in the exercise of its police powers, exact a reasonable license fee, to cover the expense of issuing a license and maintaining a department for that purpose, but it has been laid down by the highest court of New Jersey that, "wherever it is manifest that the amount of such tax imposed in the exercise of the police power is substantially in excess of the reasonable expense of issuing a license and of regulating the occupation to which it pertains, the act or ordinance imposing the tax is invalid." Inasmuch as the license fees collected in the State of New Jersey within the last year exceed more than $100,000, the amount necessary to maintain the department, it would seem that the Frelinghuysen law is invalid under the judicial ruling just quoted.

The White Company further contend that the New Jersey tax constitutes an unconstitutional tax on inter-State commerce in violation of the Federal Constitution, which places inter-State commerce within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States Government. In this connection it has been judicially held that commerce among the States includes "transportation and trade of persons and property."

Another contention is that the New Jersey license tax is unconstitutional because automobiles are taxed according to their horse power, and not according to their valde, which is the basis on which all taxes should be assessed.

A CURIOUS OLD NECKLACE.

The French government is in a distressing predicament. It confronts a problem less easy to solve than many diplomatics tangles.

When President Thiers died he willed to the nation the famous Mme. Thiers' pearl necklace, one of the choicest bits of jewelry in the world. It consists of 14a pearls, the three largest of which weigh thirty six, thirty-nine and fifty-one grains. The necklace is valued at $50,000.

Recently the directors of the National Museum, where it was placed, announced their wish to sell the necklace. Thereupon the descendants of President Thiers filed a strong protest, declaring that this the government could not do. Why they asked, should the government wish to sell the famous necklace? Then the truth was told. The marvelous gems had begun to lose their luster.

It is claimed by many that pearls, if not worn for a long time, will turn black. This is what is taking place with these marvelous gems.

The belief that pearls lose their luster if not worn is related to one of the world's oldest superstitions. Among the ancients various beliefs prevailed that certain gems possessed mystical properties, and that a gem worn by an individual for a long time assumed characteristics of the wearer, and could be used to influence others.—Phila. PUTTING UP CITRON

NEW METHOD THAT HAS MANY ADVANTAGES.

Time Saved and Fruit Turned Out in Better Condition—Directions for Making the Old-Fashioned Preserves.

The old-fashioned way of putting up citron was to boil it in weak alum water until tender and green, then in clear water to extract the taste of the alum, and lastly in cold water to crisp it before the preserving was begun. The up-to-date method does away with the preliminaries. Cut off the green peel from the citron and cut in slices about an inch thick. Remove the seeds, then slice in squares or any fancy shape desired. Allow to each pound of citron three-fourths of a pound of sugar, one lemon and a small strip of green ginger. Put the sugar in the preserving kettle with water to make a syrup, and when boiling add the citron, a chipped yellow peel of lemon, taking care not to get in a bit of the bitter white pith, then the lobes of lemon, cut in thin slices, and the ginger. Cook slowly for several hours, until tender, then add a sprinkling of raisins, cook until the raisins are puffed, then pour in sterilized cans and seal. A couple of fresh peach leaves added to the syrup while cooking give a fine green color to the preserves, but should be removed before putting in the jars.

Should you prefer the old-fashioned preserves, here are directions for their making: Peel and core the citron, cut into strips and cut the edges. Soak over night in strongly salted water. In the morning soak in clear cold water, changing until freshened. Parboil ten minutes in water with a teaspoonful of powdered alum. Drain and weigh. To every four pounds of fruit allow three pounds of sugar, a lemon, an ounce of preserved or candied ginger or an ounce of green ginger root boiled in a pint of water until its flavor has been extracted. In this case use the water in which the root was cooked as well as the ginger. To each pound allowing a pint of water to each pound of sugar. Boil and skim, then add the citron, cooking gently until clear and tender. Drain the fruit from the syrup and put on plates to harden.

In the meantime cut the lemon in thin slices and cook in water to cover until tender. Put the syrup on to boil, adding the lemon and water, if not bitter, the sliced ginger and the citron. Cook until thoroughly heated, and then can and seal. Raisins seeded and cooked in the syrup may be added if desired.

Apple Mince Meat.

At this season of the year when apples are plentiful and cheap I prepare them for mincemeat next winter. Pare, quarter, core and chop the apples by running through the food chopper. To six bowls of the chopped apple add one bowl of molasses, one small bowl of vinegar, three bowls of sugar, one tablespoon of cinnamon, one tablespoon of allspice, one-half tablespoon of cloves and one nutmeg. Cook until the apples look clear, then put in fruit jars and seal. Used for pie add the chopped meat, chopped suet, cider, etc., and you will find the making of mincemeat a pleasure instead of a task.

A Dainty Pudding.

On a day when fresh fruit is not easily obtained, the following pudding is a welcome dessert: To two well-beaten eggs, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of baking powder, a cupful of flour and one-half cupful of raisins chopped very fine. Steam this for three-quarters of an hour and serve it hot with a sauce made as follows: After thoroughly beating the whites of two eggs, cream a cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of butter; beat this in slowly and flavor with vanilla.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Barbecued Ham.

Cut rather thick slices of cold boiled ham and lay them in a frying pan. Cook on both sides until they begin to crisp at the edges and then put on a hot dish. Add to the fat in the pan four tablespoonfuls of vinegar, a saltspoonful of English mustard, a teaspoonful of white sugar and a few dashes of black pepper. Boil up once, pour over the ham, let it stand covered for a couple of minutes and send to the table. There is no more savory method of cooking ham than this, and it wins almost universal approbation. —Delineator.

When Boiling Puddings.

Place a small plate at the bottom of the sauce pan and when you put in the pudding to boil take care that it is on the plate. If the water should boil away no harm will be done. The pudding will turn out without sticking to the cloth.

Where to Keep Jellies.

All jellies should be kept where it is cool and dark. If you have no dry cellar or dark closet, cover the shelves of any cool closet with black cotton and hang a curtain of the same over the fruit.

Savory Rice.

A savory way of cooking rice is to boil half a pound of rice until tender, then add the pulp of two or three tomatoes, and a little butter. Stir well and grate a little cheese on the top, adding pepper and salt to taste.

WHEN PA GIVES INFORMATION.

Just the Chance for Display of His Sense of Humor.

"Pa, what is a hypochondriac?"

"A hypochondriac, Wilfred—"

But just a moment. "Pa" in this anecdote is not a good and kind father, yearning to impart useful information to his son, but one of those smart aswer-givers whose main object in life is to get into the back pages of the magazines. Such fathers look upon their little sons, groping for knowledge, as providers of openings for senseless domestic epigrams. Hence —but we'll go back.

"Pa" takes up his glasses and looks benignly at his son.

"What did you say, my boy?"

That gives "Pa" his chance.

"A hypochondriac, Wilfred"—names like Wilfred add humor to this sort of thing. John, for instance, would fall flat and James would be indefinitely worse; but to resume—"a hypochondriac, Wilfred, is a man who has such a dread of catching cold that, whenever he takes a bath, he stops up all the holes in the sponge for fear of draughts."

And Wilfred not quite seven years old! Isn't it a shame?

OBSERVANT PEOPLE ARE JAPS.

Trouble Is They Are Liable to Carry It to Extremes.

The Japanese are a most imitative and observant people and copy everything they see with minute fidelity. A Newport man recently engaged a Japanese valet, who was very attentive and satisfactory.

His duties rarely took him into the kitchen, but when he had a chance of watching the cook he did so with extraordinary interest.

The cook caught a severe chill and left the valet suddenly. The lady of the house was in despair, as she could not replace her.

At last the valet announced confidently that he thought he could cook a little and the mistress gladly agreed to give him a trial.

The first thing he started on was the potatoes. He took off his shoes and socks and put his feet in a bath of hot mustard and water.

The lady wanted to know what on earth he was doing. He replied that he saw the cook do that when she was peeling the potatoes, and nothing would persuade him that this was not a necessary part of the process.

The Thundering Legion.

In the year A. D. 174 a Roman legion, made up wholly or in part of Christians, fought under Marcus Aurelius against the Marcomanni. The Roman army was shut up in a defile and ready to perish with thirst, when a severe thunder storm, with heavy rain, relieved them of their distress, and at the same time so terrified their enemies that a great victory was gained. The Christians attributed their deliverance to the prayers they had just presented, and considered it miraculous, and the term "Thundering Legion" was applied to the soldiers.—New York American.

Moroccan Proverbs.

In an article on the people of Morocco a writer in Figaro says: "They have some queer adages and some that closely resemble ours. Take, they say: 'The camel cannot see its hump, but plainly sees one on its neighbor.' He who depends on his neighbor will go to bed hungry.' 'A wise enemy is better than a stupid friend;' 'Cross the rushing stream, but beware of the quiet, noiseless one;' 'In this world there are three things not to be trusted—luck, women and work.' Mounting a horse, hearing the hunting dogs and hearing gun rings rattle drives dull care away."

Love and the Law.

Now love makes the mind clean and clear, so that it stops liking unclean things like bad food and ugly squeezed bodies and cigars. And love makes the mind kindly, so that it does not yearn for more than its share of other people's money. So in the gaining or the maintaining of health, too, love is the fulfilling of the law.

And how about beauty? Why, beauty is merely health—plus love. Therefore, if you have love you have all things, for all things are ruled by law; love is the fulfilling of the law. —Nautilus.

Womanly Logic.

"Never," groaned the picture dealer, "never try to argue a woman into believing that she ought to pay a bill when she thinks otherwise. I sent it this morning—presented a bill for some stuff ordered two months ago. Here was the irrefutable logic:

"'I never ordered any pictures.'

"'If I did you never delivered them.'

"'If I did I never got them.'

"'If I did I paid for them.'

"'If I didn't, I must have had some good reason for it.'

"'And if I had, of course, I won't pay.'"—Wasp.

A Terrible Threat.

"You say your titled son-in-law holds threats over you?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox. "He has us where we can't give him any argument at all. Mother and the girls say we must yield for the sake of the family honor."

"Is there—er a skeleton in the closet?"

"Not at all. He simply announced that unless he has his own way he'll get naturalized and be a plain American citizen."

IN HER DEFENSE.

She's laced too tight?
Ah, say not so—
You speak not right—
You do not know.

She looks fit? Yes.
Indeed she do.
I will confess
That much is true.

Yet you are wrong
To say that she Goes in too strong
For corsetry.

The fact is this:
The damsel's so sweet,
So fraught with bliss
From head to feet,

That e'en her stays
Cannot stand pat,
And nobody says
A chance like that.

Were mine the cup,
They drain at will,
I'd hug her up
Much tighter still!

Horace Dodd Gastit, in Judge.

A Bright Boy.

"Say," queried the father, "can't you give my boy a position in your store?"

"I don't know," rejoined the grocer. "What can he do?"

"Well," replied the parent, "I don't suppose he could do much at first except buy and sell goods and manage your business for you, but later on when he gets a little experience and sense he might be able to sweep out, tie up packages and run errands."—Chicago Daily News.

This Happened Near Boston.

"It is time," said the speaker, "that we had a moral awakening in this town. Let us arise in our might. Let us gird up our loins. Let us take off our coats. Let us bare our arms. Let us—"

"Hold on now," screamed an angular lady, who was seated near the platform, "if this is to be a moral awakening don't you dare to propose to take off another thing."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Mean of Them.

Eva—She never had a beau in all her life.

Katherine—And yet she has the nerve to declare that her face is her fortune.

Eva—Gracious! It must be one of those "unclaimed fortunes" we hear so much about.—Chicago Daily News.

TIME TO INTERFERE.

Boy—Come quick! There's a man been fighting my father more'n half an hour.

Policeman—Why didn't you tell me before?

Boy—'Cause father was getting the best of it till a few minutes ago.—Ideas.

His Peculiarity.

Jailer—He's a queer case, that prisoner in cell 27. Nothing suits him but silk underwear.

Visitor—Well, that isn't a crime, is it?

Jailer—No; but when he got his last suit of it the store detective happened to see him sneak it under his coat.—Chicago Tribune.

No Excuses Needed.

"There's no excuse for anybody's having any kind of illness," said the resolute person.

"Perhaps not," answered the man who always tries to agree. "And a person who is really ill doesn't feel like being formal and begging somebody's pardon, anyhow."—Washington Star.

No Repose.

"You have so much money you need never work any more," said the old-time friend, curiously.

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox, "but every time I spend $100,000 or so, people stand round and criticise me. I've quit work, but I've begun to worry."—Washington Star.

Condiments.

"And the heathens cooked the missionary in his clothes?"

"They did."

"They were hungry, I suppose, and couldn't take time to undress him."

"No. I expect it was for the seasoning. You see, he had on a pepper-and-salt suit."

A Sure Sign.

"Pa, when does autumn leave off and winter begin?"

"Winter, my boy, is a season that never really begins in until the stoves in the street cars are lighted."—Detroit Free Press.

Husband—I dreamed I was trying to put on my clothes in the upper birth of a Pullman.—Life.

MANY BARGAINS AT EXPRESS CO.'S SALE

The United States Express Company conducted its annual bargain sale on Saturday at North and Park avenues,when 700 lots were disposed of at prices, ranging from twenty-five cents to $4.25. The store where the sale was held was thronged from 2 o'clock, when it began, until 12 o'clock midnight, when the last article was disposed of. As a general thing the bidding was lively. Some persons got bargains, while others were "stung," to use a slang phrase.

Four or five young men "chipped in" fifty cents to purchase a tempting looking box and after they had spent a half hour getting inside they found a half-filled can of condensed milk. Several tubs of butter were sold for one dollar, but the purchaser was not obliged to carry them home—the butter being one year old it was quite able to walk.

A number of castings of value to machinists sold for $1.05, while a large bundle of leather brought $9. One lot of books brought eighty-five cents, while a box of books was sold for $4.25. There was any quantity of shoes, mats of beds, while one fellow got a bargain in four new overcoats for $1, and several gas stoves sold for the same price. Everything was disposed of before Sunday morning and Auctioneer P. H. Latourette never worked harder in his life. He was equal to the occasion, however, as the sale netted about $300 for the company.

A New Vehicle.

"Is Mr. Bromley in?" asked the caller.

"He is not, sorr," Pat answered, politely. "Shure, he won't be in till 4 o'clock or mebbe after."

"Where's he gone?"

"He went to ride in his interim, sorr."

"His what?"

"His interim. 'Tis a tony name fer buggy, I'm thinking. Half an hour ago Misther Bromley says to me, 'Pat,' says he, 'hitch Misther Dobbs here some time this afternoon, but I guess he won't be after gittin' here yet awhile, so I'll go downtown in the interim.' An' with that he druv off in his buggy."—Lippincott's.

WAISTS AND TRIMMINGS.

A pretty arrangement made with fringe upon a bodice, is to detach the fringe heading and edge it with a satin appliqué. When draped, this effect is very dressy upon a one-piece frock. The velvet is splendid for use with ribbon fringe.

At Pistol Sight.

"Marry me," exclaimed the wretch pointing his revolver at the trembling maiden, "or s'death."

"Mercy," she faltered. "I will, I will."

"Ha," chuckled the villain, "love at first sight."—Harvard Lampoon.

Editors of magazines publishing novelties have long complained of the difficulty of securing satisfactory stories of this type, owing to the fact that most writers find it just as easy and more profitable to expand a plot suitable for novelettes, into a book, too long for magazine use. Be this as it may, Lippincott's seems to have solved the problem, for in it has appeared a long series of fine complete novels, and instead of falling off the quality seems to be steadily improving. The February issue contains a powerful tale of army life by General Charles King. It is entitled "Lanier of the Cavalry," and portrays army life with the same vigor and naturalness which characterized "The Colonel's Daughter," "Captain Blake," and other famous books by this author.

It is rarely that a serial starts with so many interesting and varied human characters as in "John Marvel, Assistant," by Thomas Nelson Page. In the February number of Scribner's Magazine the second instalment shows a complete change of scene to a typical city of the Middle West. The story is a thoroughly modern one, dealing with the people and the questions of the present day. From the diaries of Salmon P. Chase, Mr. Oberholtzer has unearthed a very full account of a conference in September, '63, at midnight between Lincoln, Chase, Seward, Stanton, and Halleck, to consider the serious situation of Rosecrans, who was hemmed in at Chattanooga. This conference has been called by military writers an epoch-making one, because at it was arranged the first long-distance transfer of an army by railroad.

It is well for everyone to realize the possibility of a combination which would threaten the stability of our business and home life. The Metropolitan Magazine is particularly fortunate in being able to give to its readers a timely article by Earl Mayo, which tells in a remarkably strong and fearless manner of "The Giant Trust of the Future." This is a most vital subject for every American citizen. The possible giant combination threatens us on every side. It would affect us and our children whatever our walk in life.

The February American Magazine contains the first instalment of a new serial by a new author, Ingraham Lovell. It is entitled "Margaret, Its Soul—the Recollections of a Man of Fifty." The story starts well, giving promise of being one of the great novels of the year. In connection with the publication of it the editor of the American Magazine has made an interesting statement of the inner workings of a great editorial office.

In an article entitled "A Substitute for Matrimony" in the February Woman's Home Companion, Anna Steese Richardson proves conclusively that the majority of business girls of today do not marry because the men they might marry do not earn as much money as they do. Mrs. Richardson speaks with authority—she has a greater experience than perhaps any other woman in America. She concludes her article thus: "The business woman of today is achieving financial success at the sacrifice of domestic content and maternal instinct. Is it worth while?"

The Popular Science Monthly for February contains the following articles: "The Coffee Exposition at Rio de Janeiro," by Professor Robert DeC. Ward; "A Biographical History of Botany at St. Louis, Missouri," by Dr. Perley Spaulding; "The Latest Calabrian Disaster," by Professor Wm. H. Hobbs; "Jefferson Davis' Camel Experiment," by Professor Walter L. Fleming; "Railroads and the Smoke Nuisance," by Clinton Rogers Woodruff; "Account of a Trip in Southernmost Japan, with Early Records of its Discovery," by Robert Van Vleck Anderson; "An American contribution to the History of the Physiology of Digestion," by Professor Lafayette B. Mendel; "The Instruments and Methods of Research," by Dr. L. A. Bauer; "The Scientific Meeting at, Baltimore;" "The Report of the Secretary of Agriculture;" "Scientific Items."

We must rediscover America in order to provide for our future millions. This is the keynote of Walter Wyeth's article, "New Food for New Millions," in the February number of "Success Magazine." In the same number, Charles Edward Russell, in the second article of his series, "The Break-up of the Parties," tells how the Democratic Party lost its grip; Glenmore Davis describes the building of a modern play, and Roland Phillips tells what modern surgery is doing in the way of transplantation of organs. Leroy Scott's immigration narrative is called "The Lit-tle Mother," and these is advice to operatic aspirants by Mme. Melba.

For general attractiveness and lively interest The Red Book Magazine is heartily commended. The leading article, "Old Souls in New Bodies," opens a series of startling analogies between the careers of certain great figures of antiquity and other great personages of our present day. Similar is the case of Caesar and Roosevelt. Moreover, every woman will be interested in Mabel Herbert Urner's article "Desirable Husbands," in which the statement is frankly made that deep in her heart every woman wishes Don Juan were her husband.

THE FLEET HOMEWARD BOUND.

The Prudential Insurance Company is issuing an artistically beautiful picture of the American battleship fleet steaming away from Gibraltar, homeward bound. The picture is in colors and gives a splendid idea of the beauty and power of the American warships. The scene presents the Connecticut, flying the flag of Rear Admiral C. S. Sperry, leading the first division of the fleet past the Rock of Gibraltar. It will inspire more than one landlubber who doesn't know a battleship from a marlinspike.

In a charming letter of travel, published a few months since, William Dean Howells, describing his feelings in approaching Gibraltar, writes:

"There is nothing strikes the traveler in his approach of the Rock of Gibraltar, so much as its resemblance to the trade-mark of The Prudential Insurance Company. This was my feeling when I first saw Gibraltar, four years ago, and it remains my feeling after having last seen it, four weeks ago. The eye seeks the bold, familiar legend, and one suffers a certain disappointment in its absence."

No one will be disappointed in this strong representation of "the bold, familiar legend" of The Prudential. As if carved in the face of the Rock, it looks down upon the passing fleet like a message of God-speed.

The Prudential has also published, for free circulation, a most interesting booklet containing separate pictures of each ship in the fleet, and giving tonnage, speed, armament, number of crew, etc. A copy of either this booklet or picture may be had for the asking. Write to The Prudential Insurance Company of America, Newark, N. J., stating which is preferred, or if both are desired, state so in your letter.

CARING FOR PLANTS IN THE WINTER TIME.

Many amateurs have queer ideas of the care of plants. For awhile they frantically water them every day, or oftener, and then calmly ignore the helpless victims for a week. And afterwards they complain that they do not "have any luck" with flowers.

A practical horticulturist who has had much experience in raising flowers in the house says that failure comes more often from overwatering than from any other cause.

A question that is asked almost daily is: "How often shall I water my plants?" The answer is not a simple one; it varies with the nature of the plant and the place in which it is kept.

In a warm, dry room plants need water daily; but where the temperature at night does not go below fifty at night more care must be exercised and the plants should only be watered when the soil gets hard and dry.

Tepid water should be used; if too hot or too cold the plant suffers. A healthy plant needs an abundance of water, but it must drain away quickly.

Three chief errors of the amateur gardener are all connected with watering. They give too much water, too little, or water freely when plants are sick. When you see your plants not growing freely you should diminish the quantity of water. The reverse treatment is usually given.

There are but few plants that will keep healthy with stagnant water at their roots. Therefore do not let the pot stand in a jardiniere or saucer half filled with water as is often done.

If the soil in a pot is loosened once a week less water will be needed. Plants with soft porous leaves need more water than those with foliage that is hard and leathery.

Hanging baskets which have large surfaces exposed to evaporation will not do well unless they are immersed in a bucket of water several times a week.

If the bathtub is used for the purpose of spraying or immersing flowers, a rubber sheet should be put in the bottom to catch soil that would otherwise go down the drain.

Ackerman Recovering.

Samuel Ackerman, a New Jersey Central Railroad engineer, is in Somerset Hospital, Somerville, recovering from bad cuts on his head. He was running an extra freight through Finderne, when he stuck his head from the cab window and was struck by the roof of a passing freight car. His home is in Mauch Chunk.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Circumstantial Evidence," the jury playlet by Harrison Armstrong, which has already been successfully received at the other Williams' houses, will have its Broadway premier at the Colonial this week. Fourteen players are required in the cast and the story is said to be an absorbing one with an agreeable female. Annette Kellerman begins her third and last week here in her delightful diving specialty with her expert exhibition of "diabolo" as a side line. Sam Chip and Mary Marble, well known as musical comedy stars, and until recently at the head of their own organization, will make their first vaudeville appearance in New York in a new skit which is billed as "a delft dialogue with ditties." Miss Stella Mayhew in her clever and lively specialty will be on hand with some new songs. The trio "Fogerty, the man from Dublin," will offer his bright and breezy Celtic monologue and La Petite Adelaide accompanied by her four dainty dancers, will be seen in an unique act. The twelve Kitamura Japs will present their picturesque and remarkable posing. Several minor acts will fill out the remainder of an excellent and diversified program. On Sunday the usual concerts will take place.

With all the wonderful week day features the New York Hippodrome will have still more attractions when on next Saturday night it will introduce in New York for the first time Lyman H. Howe's Lifeodrama presenting in great motion pictures the first views of Mr. Howe's Round the World trip. This will be the first spectacle of these pictures which Mr. Howe only *secured after great energy and ex*pense. The traveler has been all over the stricken country and his knowledge of the localities affected by the earthquakes in the selection of pictures the best and truest. In addition to this series other subjects of travel and historic interest will be shown. Mr. Howe, who is the best known of picture men, has met with remarkable success over the country. His arrangement with Messrs. Shubert and Anderson gives him his first opportunity to present his wonder pictures in New York. The Hippodrome's big week day show still continues to draw the largest audiences the big playhouse has ever seen. Lyman H. Howe is the most remarkable arenic performance ever given in this country.

That "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" is the only genuine all-season success of Broadway is proven nightly by the capacity audiences which have housed the Circle Theatre where this musicality is rapidly nearing the century mark. Never in the history of the local stage has New York seen a production which has been kept right up to the minute brilliancy that characterizes this sensationalism as is this the latest offering of Thomas W. Ryley. Almost weekly this leader of producing managers has something new with which he surprises the public and it is for this reason that the piece, now in its third month of its run at the Circle, has all New York still steadily flocking to that playhouse. "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" is undoubtedly the most faithful reproduction of the night life of Paris that has been placed upon the stage. Paris with its gay throngs of pleasure seekers. Paris, the scintillating, throbbing, pulsating Paris, with its life laughter and lights; its cabrets, its Folies Bergere, Maxim's and its world famed Moulin Rouge are all here, and "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" with the atmosphere of the lively Parisian atmosphere in the title does not belie its name. It is decidedly and deliciously Parisian throughout. Mr. Ryley has imported several of the faces familiar to the Boulevards for the piece and with the aid of a production that is superb in its scenic setting, costuming and coloring the story of a night round of the "Playground City of the World" is told most graphically.

"The New Lady Bantock," a play by Jerome K. Jerome, the English humorist and playwright, with Fanchon in the title role will be the next attraction at Wallack's Theatre, opening Feb. 8. Miss Ward has made a good impression in the part in London, Chicago and Boston. Mr. Jerome tells a very interesting story. Cicely Bantock, a music hall artist, marries a young English lord. He keeps his title a secret from his bride until they arrive at his ancestral hall. In turn a business manager had invented for her a family that would adorn the best of family trees. After the honeymoon Fanny finds that she has become not only a peeress, but that her twenty-three servants are all near relatives. Her uncle, the butler, bullies her until she revolts and discharges the lot. Lord Bantock is very upset about the deception until he learns that the rest of his family tree springs from a butcher shop and a very small one at that. The play ends by Fanny becoming the real head of Bantock Hall and her three and twenty servants. Chas. Cartwright is the part of the butler. John Dean is cast as Lord Bantock and Robert McWade appears as the business manager. The remainder of the cast has been as carefully selected. The play is staged with elaborate care. No less a personage than Elinor Glyn designed the gowns worn in the second act and the maker was Lucille of London, better known socially as the Countess of Warwick. It all happened so not because the dress agent planned the idea, but for the simple reason that the three women and Mr. Jerome are friends and were very much interested in the success of the play when it was put on at the Aldwych, London.

BOYS' MISSION BAND IS WELL ENTERTAINED

Under the auspices of the Boys' Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church, a successful and highly enjoyable entertainment was given in the lecture room of the church last Monday. There was a large attendance and the band will realize about $50, to be used in the cause of missions.

Before the program was presented, Harold Schenck, president of the band, made many address, thanking all for their presence and help in making the affair a success.

The program was given by Miss Roberts, dramatic reciter; Miss S. Etta Raybert, soprano soloist; E. D. Young, cornetist, and Ernest Stevens, pianist. Miss Robert was particularly good, as usual, and was obliged to respond to an encore after each number. Her selections were the latest.

Miss Raybert was at her best and her pleasing voice called forth an encore each time she sinigng. Added greatly to the enjoyment of the affair, while the cornet solos by E. D. Young were appreciated, as usual. The work of Ernest Stevens, pianist, gives evidence of his making a fine player and he was roundly applauded after each selection. Miss Lillian A. Force was the accompanist of the evening.

FOR KITCHEN SCRAPBOOK.

To make beeswax place comb in a coarse muslin bag and put a small stone to weight the contents; put in kettle, cover with water and boil. The wax comes to the top of the water and the sediment remains in the bottom of kettle. Remove wax when cold.

To remove grease spots from wallpaper sprinkle baking soda over blotting paper, place over the spot and press a moderately warm iron against it for a few minutes. The blotting paper will absorb the grease, and the paper on the wall be free from spots.

Holes in plaster walls may be stopped with a mixture of sand and plaster of paris mixed into a paste with water. When dry cover with a piece of paper to match the walls.

Carpets should be beaten on the wrong side first and then, more gently, on the right. Never put a carpet down on a damp floor, for this often results in the carpet becoming mildewed.

A square of house flannel of the stoutest and coarsest description made into a bag and put over the *broom is the best means of sweep*ing hearth or linoleum. When slightly dampened it takes up instead of scattering the dust.

NEW JERSEY LICENSE LAW.

Bill Provides That Woman Must Register in County Where She Lives.

John B. Woolston, County Clerk of Essex County, N. J., has had introduced into the Legislature of that State a bill providing that no marriage can be performed in New Jersey unless a license has been obtained from the Clerk of the county in which the woman who is to be married resides. The bill will be reached for action in a short time.

It provides for the payment of a fee of $2 for the license, and permits non-residents to obtain a license by application to the Clerk of the county where the ceremony is to be performed by payment of a similar fee. In the case of non-residents, the bill does away with the "five days' notice" clause.

The object of the bill is to obtain proper registration of marriages, as the law making it compulsory to record marriages with the proper authorities is so little observed that it is practically a dead letter.

HIS MUSIC WAS RENDERED.

Compositions Produced at First Baptist Church Rendered by the Choir Yesterday.

The musical part of the services at the First Baptist church Sunday was commemorative of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Felix Mendelssohn. The choir sang selections from his works at both the morning and evening services, including solo numbers by Miss Luella C. Harris, soprano; Miss Gertrude Hinz, contralto; William Holmes, bass, and George Smith, tenor, while the organ numbers were written by the composer.

In the evening other selections from Mendelssohn were sung, including trio from "Elijah," Miss Harris, Mrs. Glidden and Miss Hinz, "Lift Thine Eyes." The organ selections by Howard Case were "Andante," from a string symphony, and postlude, "March," from "Athalie."

At this service Rev. Dr. A. J. Chambliss paid a fine tribute to Mendelssohn. He said that the composer was revered because of the good he did, in that he gave to the more joyous one and he declared his works among the best treasures we have. He said that Mendelssohn belonged to that class comprising the best we have in music. Continuing, Dr. Chambliss said: "He was born February 3, 1809, in Hamburgh, Germany, his father being a banker and his mother a woman of culture and refinement. At the age of three years he displayed musical ability and at the age of seven he was considered a musical prodigy. Five years later he became acquainted with Goethe and the latter left an impression on the musical genius that proved of great help to him.

"Mendelssohn had a rare memory and was a true genius. He made no enemies, and numerous and lasting friends. He conducted the great musical festivals in England and at that time he had no living rival. At the age of thirteen years he began to write some of his greatest compositions, including "Midsummer Night's Dream," which was soon fol*lowed by the oratorio of "St. Paul."* Among his last works was the oratorio of "Elijah," considered one of his best. He was a man of beautiful and irreproachable character, pure conscience, gracious manner and as a son, brother, husband and father he fulfilled every obligation.

"Mendelssohn married at the age of twenty-eight years. He was a man of joyous temperament, athletic for a light weight, and he was admired everywhere. He was a Jew by inheritance, yet never left always working hard. His musical works comprise in all about 150, all recognized for their real merit. He possessed a perfectly balanced nature and had a brilliant mind. By public profession he was a Christian. Although born of Jewish parents, he lived and died a member of the Lutheran church. The sudden passing away of his sister was a death blow to him and he died November 4, 1847, at the age of thirty-nine years."

TREMBLINGS IN JERSEY.

Felt in Certain Suburbs of Trenton. But Not Elswhere.

No satisfactory explanation has been received of the cause of the earth trembling felt in Morrisville, Broad Street Park and White Horse, three suburbs running around the southern and eastern line of Trenton. Nothing of the sort was felt in Trenton except by Mrs. John Kelly at 11 Saturday night. Mrs. Kelly lives at 617 Chambers street, Trenton, and her house rests upon a ledge of rock extending down South Jersey. She has felt shocks, she says, when powder mills have blown up.

Justice of the Peace Coombe, Frank C. Wright, and William Graham, all reputable citizens of Broad street Park, felt the shocks, as did their neighbors, last evening. They started about 7:15 o'clock, say these authorities, and continued with infrequent intervals, until long past 11 o'clock. They also heard noises. No damage was done.

Andrew Gropp, proprietor of the White Horse Hotel, and William Gropp, proprietor of the Morrisville Hotel, both felt the shocks. Mrs. Emmons of the Yardville Electric Light Company telephoned from her office that the lower house had been rocking for some time.

Residents of these suburbs were much disturbed. No shocks have been felt today and diligent search has not revealed the cause of those Saturday evening.

Paid for Speed.

Andrew Hart, a laborer, was thirty-two was fined $2 by Recorder Dolliver this morning for being drunk in the borough. He was arrested last night by Marshal Keller and gave his place of residence as New York.

LAUD ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Local Evangelical Pastors Pay Tributes to Martyr-President.

HE HAD MANY VIRTUES.

Gentle and Kind and Probably the Greatest of All Americans They Say.

Services in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of Lin*coln's Birthday were held at Hope* chapel, Sunday, morning and night. In the morning the pastor, Rev. L. R. Howard, spoke on the topic of "Gentleness," relating numerous incidents to show the gentleness of Lincoln's nature which seemed to make him all the stronger.

In the evening Pastor Howard's theme was "Equality," and again he referred to the Martyred-Pres*ident. He spoke of equality as in*corporated in the Declaration of Independence, that all men are equal before God and the law. This is also the Christian's belief that all men are equal before God. The music on the organ and by the choir at both services were from Mendelssohn, the one hundredth anniversary of his birthday also being observed.

Services in honor of Lincoln were also held at the Congregational church, last night, when the pastor, Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, gave a delightful talk on the Martyred-President. His theme was "Lincoln Contrasts," and in the course of his remarks he contrasted Lincoln with Washington, Darwin, Edward Everett and other men of note and letters.

In referring to the personal life and character of Lincoln, Mr. Goodrich paid a fine tribute to the great man. He found much in his life to commend to all as exemplary, and *he did not forget to mention Lin*coln's deep religious convictions, which seem to actuate him in the conduct of his high office. The large audience that head Mr. Goodrich was greatly interested in his discourse on Lincoln and went away with a greater opinion of the man, whose birthday will soon be celebrated throughout this country.

The Lincoln centennial was commemorated Sunday by services in several of the Evangelical churches in Elizabeth. At the First Presbyterian there was an elaborate program and the edifice was decorated with flags. Patriotic societies were in attendance. The G. A. R. men, who had not been invited up to a few days ago, were later extended a welcome. Among the organizations represented were: Camp Sewell, Spanish-American War Veterans; Women's Relief Corps, G. A. R.; Women's Auxiliary and, Sons of Veterans. At the First Methodist Protestant church there were also patriotic services. Elizabeth will observe the centennial Friday with elaborate exercises.

FIRE SWEPS SALOON, NEARLY ENDS FAMILY.

Martin Elnilorus, an Elizabethport saloon keeper, and his family nearly lost their lives in a fire that badly gutted the saloon at Third street and Clark place, Elizabeth, Saturday.

The fire was discovered by Policeman Daniel Bedill, who asked Dr. Thomas Hamilton to use his way home from a sick call, to send in an alarm from box 128. Bedill ran to the house and smashed in the front door.

He found the saloon-keeper lying unconscious on the floor of the hallway. He was quickly dragged out, and soon revived. Meanwhile, Bedill pluckily fought his way through the smoke, and, with the aid of Dr. *Burnett, got the other inmates safe*ly out of the house in their night garments.

The saloon keeper said he was awakened by the smell of smoke and came downstairs to find out what was the trouble. He was overcome by the fumes. It took the firemen an hour to subdue the flames. The loss is more than one thousand dollars.

Two valuable watch dogs kept in the saloon were suffocated. The origin of the fire is thought to be from an overheated stove in the kitchen, which is in the rear of the saloon.

Look Out for Your Cream.

E. G. Hulling, proprietor of The Wetumpka Inn, on East Seventh street, calls attention to a small but annoying circumstance that took place at the Inn Sunday afternoon, when he was notified by neighbors over the telephone that some boys were stealing ice cream from the rear porch. He hastened to the scene of action just in time to see the boys going over a back fence. The bold young robbers unpacked the cream and were about take the last bit when they were frightened away. Housekeepers are warned to be on the lookout for repetitions of the offense.

Will Talk to Men.

Den O. Shelton, president of the National Bible Institute, and editor of "The Bible Today," who is to speak at the First Presbyterian church next Sunday, will also address the Men's meeting at Y. M. C. A. hall in the afternoon.

TRUANCY DAY IN COURT

Miss Ball Has Many Who "Play Hookey" Before City Judge Runyon.

TEN OFFENDERS ARRAIGNED.

Fines Are Levied but Sentence is Suspended After Cases Are Heard in the Local Court.

Monday was "Truancy Day" at the city court, and Judge Runyon presented at a series of cases where small boys and girls were called to account for irregular attendance at the local schools. Miss Adelaide Ball corralled the alleged offenders and brought principals and teachers of the various schools to read attendance reports in each case. The mass of figures in most cases showed that the boys and girls had given practically no attention to their education for several consecutive months. Ten cases were brought up and a fine, imposed but suspended by the court, was in each case the means taken for bringing about more regular attendance.

"Truancy Day" is likewise "Parents' Day" at the court, for fathers and mothers are called upon to enable the judge to determine just where the blame for non-attendance lies. All sorts of reasons were given, some general, but several so detailed as to give the impression that they had been written out and memorized before the trip was made to court. The usual "sick," "no shoes," "had to take care of the baby" and kindred excuses were passed up, given in almost unvarying language. There would have been more of it, too, but two parents, Mrs. Carrie Brown and Mrs. Addie Richardson, did not put in an appearance. Mrs. Brown is said to be sick, but the police will send an officer for Mrs. Richardson if necessary. Both cases were postponed until next Monday morning.

John Falconiero, who works on the railroad, was really quite puzzled about what to do with his daughter, Annie, who ought to be in a regular path at St. Mary's school. The Judge told him the law of the case, but John declared that he left home at 6 o'clock each day and could not say at that time whether the girl was going to school or not. The question of corporal punishment came in the parent's mind about the time that the Judge suspended a five dollar fine over the man in case of an unexplained absence. "I donno was do," burst out the parent. "What I gonna do now? Kill 'em?" The Judge suggested that perhaps this might not be a necessary measure to adopt with Annie, hinting that it might delay her education even more than staying at home.

Quite antithetical was the stand taken by Mrs. Alexander McPherson, colored, summoned to court to explain the truancy of her children Mary and Frank and her boarder, Gertie Arens. The woman declared that all were sickly, and told Judge Runyon that she wouldn't send them to school and kill them. This show of parental affection was discounted because of the optional character of the alleged sickness. The boy, it was stated, only coughs afternoons. Mrs. McPherson had a well-colored narration, which ought to have been presented in serial form. Further absences will cost her $10 apiece.

Nick Grassino was there, with his son Sylvie, the eldest of three in the family, and an unusually bright little fellow of eleven years of age. It was explained that his mother was sickly and that the boy had to stay home to care for the other two children. When Judge Runyon told Sylvie that his father would have to pay $5 for his next unexplained absence from school, the boy repeated the notice to his father in Dorado dialect and Nick seemed to think that household duties might be shifted for the sake of his son's education. Joseph Genard had a similar fine imposed should his daughter Mary not show up more regularly at school, and as Joseph is out of work, Mary will probably be in her place at the Lincoln school regularly hereafter.

The Indian fighting squad whose western trip was postponed several weeks ago at the request of the police, appeared to make their report upon conditions in the West End. Marie Todd, one of the quartet, had slipped his collar of good behavior at school and was urged to improve his deportment. He will report to Judge Runyon after the next misdemeanor. Bert Vall was also urged to re-join the fold of the well-behaved. After the quartet left the court-room, Walter Foster was informed about some points of discipline which he has been violating in his school life and promised to cause no more trouble, because of his desire to keep out of police court.

Huntington, of the New Jersey Central, who has been confined to his home in Elizabeth with a serious affection of the eye for nearly three weeks, has gone to Florida, accompanied by his wife and son. He is now convalescing and hopes to return to his office in the near future.

JAMES GRAY NARROWLY ESCAPES AWFUL DEATH

Stumbling over one of the trusses of the Watchung avenue railroad bridge as he attempted to swing on the 1:45 train to New York Sunday afternoon, James Gray, of Watchung avenue, had a miraculous escape from death by being ground beneath the wheels of the moving train. He fell parallel to the train, lying safe between the moving train and the bridge truss. In falling, he struck and fractured his left shoulder, sustaining painful bruises about the body.

Bystanders at the station gasped with horror when the man was seen to fall, and as the train pulled out rushed to the spot, expecting to find his mangled body. The ambulance was summoned and Gray was taken to the hospital, where his injuries were treated. He is reported as resting comfortably today.

Gray, who lives at 224 Watchung avenue, got to the station just as his train was pulling out. He attempted to board the next to the last car and in running along beside the train tripped over the bridge truss and was thrown.

BOROUGHITES AT BROOKLYN LOSE GAME TO ADELPHI

The N. P. H. S. basketball team lost to the Adelphi college five at Brooklyn Saturday morning. In the first half the borough boys made it exceedingly interesting for the larger and more experienced college players, keeping the score down for that period to 18-11.

In the second half the change placed them at an inferior basket, with no wall behind it and this, in addition to the large farmlike room in which the game was played, was bewildering to the high school players. The final score was 48 to 14. Conroy and Stine were the only Overton two and Stine one. Conroy also made two foul goals. The N. P. H. S. lineup: Stine, McClintock and Conroy, forwards; A. Overton, center; Steiner and Dunning, guards.

Won't Bar Church Sale.

DR. JOHN T. FRITTS DEAD

Well Know Physician Passed Away Monday After Long Illness.

AGED SIXTY-THREE YEARS.

Long Physician for Jersey Central and for P. S. C.—Leaves Two Daughters and Son.

Dr. John T. Fritts, one of the best known physicians in New Jersey, died at his home on Park avenue at 2 Sunday morning from edema of the lungs following a slight cold of twelve hours duration. He had been in poor health for several years and this together with an accident he had while riding on the Erie railroad compelled him to give up practice. Although always interested in city affairs, he never took a prominent part and never held a city office.

Dr. Fritts was born near Washington, Warren county, May 4, 1845 and was educated at Pennsylvania College, at Gettysburg, and was graduated from Bellevue Medical College, New York. He had practiced medicine in Plainfield for over thirty years and during that time was employed by the New Jersey Central as a surgeon. He was also surgeon for the Public Service Corporation of Jersey. He was a member of several different medical societies.

Dr. Fritts was a member of Jerusalem lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., and of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T. He was one of a few that were instrumental in bringing the trolley to this city and for years was a stockholder in the local company.

Mrs. Fritts died January 11, 1898. There are surviving two daughters, Miss Lillian E. Fritts and Miss Mary M. Fritts and one son, Dr. Andrew S. Fritts, of Binghamton, N. Y.

Before a large and appreciative audience, Prof. William C. Jason, president of the Dover State College for Colored Youth, gave a recital of Paul Laurence Dunbar's poems at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, Monday night. The poems written by the late colored poet were a revelation to all present and Prof. Jason was repeatedly encored. The most popular poems were "Ho! Lucy Backslid," and "The Party," both of which convulsed the audience with laughter.

In additional to the recital, the audience was favored with several selections sung by C. Martin. This was a feature and Mr. Martin was also obliged to respond to encores. Last Sunday night, Prof. Jason preached at the Monroe Avenue church, delivering a masterly discourse.

ENDEAVORERS' DAY AT TRINITY CHURCH

Sunday being Christian Endeavor day it was the occasion for a special sermon at Trinity church by the pastor, Rev. John Y. Brock, who chose for his theme, "The Growing Endeavorer." The members of the society were present in large numbers and helped to swell the congregation, which is regularly large at this church.

In opening his sermon, Rev. Brock congratulated the Christian Endeavor Society on the splendid results of its work in the past, and declared it to be a inspiration to see so many of its workers before him. His text was from Matt. 6: 27, "Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?" All young people want to grow up, the pastor said, but they can't hurry the growth by trying, or by wishing, or by crying about it. The question had but one answer; they must meet the conditions of life. A dead tree was mentioned as an example of the result of not conforming to these conditions. The tree should absorb the moisture from the ground and take nourishment therefrom in order to live.

"The spiritual conditions of life must be met by becoming a christian, for as man without Christ is dead," declared the minister. Continuing, he said:

"The soul, like the tree, must have spiritual food to live. This spiritual food is God's word. And it is not sufficient that the young christian possess a Bible; he must be possessed by the Bible. It has been said of Lincoln that at one time in his career his library consisted of but two books, a Bible and a copy of 'Pilgrim's Progress,' and it was only recently that President Roosevelt, in an address, pleaded that the Bible be kept in the home.

"The second essential in development is spiritual exercise. Make every act of your life conform to the true christian spirit. The third essential is companionship with God. Pray often and reverently. The fourth thing necessary to promote growth is recreation. Spiritual recreation is church attendance. Going to church is a form of christian spiritual exercise. Some say it is better to pray in the home than in God's house, and God likes to hear them there, but above all, He delights to commune in His own sanctuary.

"God sometimes sends trouble to us, but he does it to discipline us. The christian, like a plant, needs a breath of air to make it grow, and the breath it must have it by holy spirit. The christian needs to seek living contact with Jesus. He must have the spirit of Christianism and of faultfinding. When once the young person finds Christ and walks with Him in the joy of life, he will go with Him morning, noon and night. Therefore, the ideal for the Christian Endeavorer is Christ Jesus, and we see that the christian needs all of these things so that he can grow to the fullness of His stature."

The music by the quartette choir was selected from the works of Felix Mendelssohn, whose centenary is being celebrated. Mrs. Winifred Carroll sang a contralto solo, "O, Rest in the Lord," and E. D. Young, a tenor solo, "If, With All Your Hearts." Comprising the choir were Arthur L. Tilsworth, conductor and organist; Miss Etta Rayberg, *soprano; Miss Winifred Carroll, con*tralto; E. D. Young, tenor; Fred Cutter, bass.

PATROLMAN VANDERWEG SAVED DEPARTMENT STORE.

*A bit of glowing gas mantle drop*ped from a gas burner in Tepper's store Sunday night and ignited heap of waste goods on table beneath. Patrolman Vanderweg noticed smoke in the store and reported it at fire headquarters. Assistant Chief Andrew Jennings telephoned Mr. Tepper and sent the firemen to the store. An alarm was sounded from box 12 at 7:58, and it was necessary to use a chemical stream and some extinguishers to kill the flames, which were discovered in the nick of time.

The loss was trifling, and was confined to the table and its contents.

BURGLARS BUSY AT CRANFORD.

Burglars visited two residences in the fashionable section known as Elizabeth Manor, Cranford, Friday night and secured plunder in both dwellings. At the home of Henry Hahn, 605 Linden place, a lock of a rear door was picked and the thieves carried off many personal effects and $1,500 worth of jewelry. Entrance was effected after midnight, as the servant did not retire until that time.

An unlocked window in the home of Thomas Stevens, 405 Union avenue, afforded easy entrance to burglars. Clothing valued at $250 was carried away. The police have no clue.

Object to Caricatures.

The Mercer County Board of the *Ancient Order of Hibernians has ap*pointed a committee to protest against the practise of merchants who place Irish caricatures in their show windows previous to St. Patrick's Day. The committee will also appeal to the theatres to stop unfavorable impersonations of the race on the stage.

CONFERENCE DRAWS NEAR

TO BE NO CHANGES HERE.

Bishop Neely to be Presiding Officer—William Jennings Bryan to Make Address.

As the annual session of the New ark Conference is drawing near it is evinced by the number of Methodist Episcopal churches hereabouts that at the present time are taking action on the pastoral relations for the ensuing year. The district superintendents, too, are busy preparing their annual reports and receiving requests embodying recommendations for presentation to the presiding bishop regarding this or that clergyman in the making of the assignments.

Centenary church, Newark, will this year be the scene of the conference's deliberations, which will begin late next month, and arrangements for the gathering are already well advanced. It will be the first time the sessions have been held in Newark in four years.

So far as Plainfield is concerned there will be no changes in the Methodist pulpits. Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, of the First M. E. church; Rev. Charles S. Kemble, of the Montrose Avenue church, and Rev. Ora J. Shoop, all being invited to remain another year.

Aside from the discussion as to probable changes in the pastorates, there are a number of other matters to come before the conference that are interesting to members. Probably that receiving the most attention is the situation created by the action of the members of the Bernardsville church who are insisting on having Rev. John W. Morgan, a Congregationalist, named as their regular pastor. Mr. Morgan has been occupying the pulpit since shortly after the former pastor, Rev. Robert W. Elliott, resigned, last fall, to enter the Protestant Episcopal church, although Rev. Dr. Charles F. Sitterly, of New Theological Seminary, is officially the stated supply.

Added importance will attach to the organization of the conference this year, because of the election of a new bishop to succeed the late Rev. Dr. John F. Dodd, of Newark, who died at Phillipsburg, last Tuesday. Dr. Dodd had officiated as secretary since 1881, and was the third secretary the conference has had. During the session clergymen—Rev. Thomas E. Gordon and Rev. Joshua Mead—who will have rounded out fifty years in the ministry, will deliver historical addresses.

Although not officially a part of the conference program, but related to it, a lecture by William Jennings Bryan will be given in the Centenary church on "The Prince of Peace" Saturday evening, March 6. The proceeds will go toward defraying the conference expenses of the local church. It had been planned to have Mr. Bryan deliver his lecture during conference week, but a convenient date for his appearance could not be arranged.

Conference itself will be formally opened by Bishop Neely, the presiding officer. Wednesday morning, March 31, and the election of a secretary will be the first matter of business disposed of. The evening will be devoted to the superannuated clergymen and the anniversary exercises of the church board of education. Rev. Dr. Thomas Nicholson, of New York, secretary of the board, will speak. Thursday evening the Sunday-school board will have its anniversary exercises and Rev. Dr. G. Bowman, of Chicago, will be the speaker. The board of freedman's aid will conduct exercises Tuesday night. The speaker on this occasion will be Rev. Dr. P. J. Maneety, one of the board's secretaries. Simultaneously the Epworth League will hold its anniversary exercises in the Halsey Street church in that city. Saturday evening the board of conference claimants will be in charge and an address delivered by Rev. Dr. J. B. Hingeley, secretary to the board.

Bishop Neely will preach the conference sermon Sunday morning. Preceding this service, however, a love feast will be held. This will be conducted by Rev. Joshua Mead, of Newark, who with Rev. Thomas E. Gordon, of New Providence, will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their admission to the Newark conference. Sunday evening the board of home missions and church extension will be in charge of the exercises in Centenary church, while at Central Methodist church the anniversary of the Men's Brotherhood will be observed. At the former place Rev. Dr. D. M. Bowell, of Philadelphia, will be the speaker and at the Central church the principal address will be delivered by James Brooks, dean of Syracuse University Law School.

Monday night, at Centenary church will be devoted to the Total Abstinence and Prohibition Society of the Newark Conference. The speaker for this occasion has not as yet been announced. On the same night the board of foreign missions will conduct exercises in St. Luke's Methodist church, where Rev. Dr. J. C. Floyd, of Chicago, one of the field agents, will speak. Tuesday, April 6, it is expected the conference will finally adjourn, with the assignment of pastors for the coming year.

ILLUSTRATED HIS TALK ON THE LIFE OF CHRIST

A stereopticon picture made Sunday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. Green's meeting, silently unfolded the story of Christ's life, and thus preached what, possibly, was as eloquent and impressive a sermon as could be delivered from a platform in choice phraseology. Charles W. Kemble, of Trenton, conducted the novel service, during which there was not a sound to interrupt the buzzing of the moving picture contrivance, except an occasional song, and no words were spoken to direct the current of thought or to interpret the views on the screen.

The history of Christ is so well known that scenes in which he figured needed no explanation. There was a larger attendance than usual at the meeting and the congregation joined in singing hymns, the words and music to which were flashed on the screen. Mrs. John Manley sang gospel solos.

DECLINED BY DR. M'CREA

SAYS HE WILL REMAIN HERE.

Clergyman for Second Time Says He Cannot Heed Summons of the New York State Flock.

he is so interested in his work here that he could not accept their tempting offer. His answer is final.

A committee appointed by the Albany church spent several days here last November and after attending the services at the first M. E. church and hearing Dr. McCrea preach asked the popular pastor to accept a call. It is said that the offer made was a most tempting one, but the clergyman declined to consider it. A few days ago the committee again waited on him and today he wrote a final declination.

Rev. Dr. McCrea was transferred by the bishop of the Newark Conference from Ridgewood to the First M. E. church five years ago and shortly after his coming here, began to make his impression. He is one of the most popular men in the city and is just as influential in the conference. At the last conference, held in this city, he was honored by being elected a delegate to the General Conference of the M. E. church held at Baltimore. Last June, Dickinson College, his alma mater, conferred on him the degree of doctor of divinity.

The First M. E. church last week unanimously requested Dr. McCrea to return for a sixth year, an unusual honor in Methodism.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS MEETING AT SUMMIT

The first of the series of conferences, under the auspices of the Union County Christian Endeavor extension committee, was held in the Central Presbyterian church, Summit, Friday, and was largely attended. Wallace C. Kendall, of Elizabeth, president of the Union County Union, presided. Charles F. Windham, of this city, opened the exercises with a ten-minute inspiration address.

The first on Christian Endeavor principles was conducted by President Kendall, the object being to ascertain who could nasswer the greatest number of questions. In addition the program as announced in The Daily Press on Thursday, was followed, the subjects being discussed including the Sunday-school missions, etc. The chief object of these conferences is to increase interest in the Christian Endeavor movement and organize new societies.

BLAMES HIS SISTER IN HIS DIVORCE SUIT

Brother testified against sister when Vice-Chancellor Stevens heard evidence in Chancery Chambers at Newark Wednesday in a suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Mary Ritcher against Gustavus Richter, a meat dealer. Fyederick Litterer, the brother of Mrs. Richter, denied that Richter was in the habit of getting drunk and of beating his wife. These are charges made in the petition. Litterer said he would "stand up" for his brother-in-law because Richter had not been treated well by Mrs. Richter. Litterer resides at 121 Barclay street, Newark.

"I have known Richter for fourteen years," Litterer testified, "and during that time I never saw him drunk or strike his wife. Richter was a good provider and a hard-working man. My sist r never treated him right. Once he got a broken leg and I went to the house and wanted him taken to the hospital. My sister made a row about it. It was a shame. The man was sick in a cold room. Yes, sir, I will stand up for my brother-in-law because he is a fine man, and she (pointing to his sister) can't deny it."

Continuing his statement on the stand, Litterer said:

"She treated me bad for being good."

"What's that?" put in Richard Boardman, of Jersey City, counsel for Mrs. Richter.

"My sister did," asserted Litterer. She treated me rotten."

"Your brother-in-law was a butcher and gave away meat to his friends?" inquired Mr. Boardman.

"What's that got to do with this divorce business?" retorted Litterer. "He always paid for the meat he gave away."

Mrs. Mary Martin, a witness for Mrs. Richter, was put on the stand to contradict some of Litterer's testimony. She lives at 23 Holland street now, but did live at 462 Fifteenth avenue, next to the Richter home at 460 Fifteenth avenue.

"You heard some disturbances in the Richter home, didn't you?" queried Mr. Boardman.

"Oh, yes," answered the witness. "I was out in my yard one time and heard a loud noise and said to myself, 'Here's where I will have to go in and see what's doing.'"

Mrs. Martin then declared that Richter was assaulting his wife.

"Did you hear use vile language?' asked counsel.

"The most vilest language," came back the answer.

Mrs. Anna M. Edwards, who said she lived near the Richters, told of seeing Mrs. Richter intoxicated on several occasions, and said she was in the habit of disturbing the peace of the neighborhood.

FOR THE SCHOOLGIRL

Don't giggle. A merry heart may be a good medicine, but the chronic giggler is like unto the patent hosiery drums. She should be legislated against.

Don't be noisy. It is not the bass horn or resounding drum that leads the band, but the silent baton.

Don't be a "smarty." Real wit is to "smarten" as a five-pound box of marrons to an "all-day sucker."

Don't be a tell-tale. The girl who "peaches" on her mates is like unto that foolish one who seated herself between two stools. Friends will hate her and teachers detest her.

Don't be a sneak. The bellowing bull is not half so fearsome a foe as the silent snake which glides on you unawares; the one you run away from; the other you bide your time and kill.

A DELICIOUS SWEETMEAT MADE IN SANTO DOMINGO.

Consul Ralph J. Totton, of Puerto Plata, sends the following description of a delicious sweetmeat prepared in Santo Domingo by both natives and foreigners:

It is made from large, thoroughly ripe bananas. The skins are removed and the fruit cut into thin slices about a quarter of an inch in thickness. These pieces are sprinkled with fine or powdered sugar and are placed in the sun, laid out on boards or shallow trays. As the fruit dries out it is turned over several times and each time is dusted with the sugar. In a few days it becomes sufficiently dry and the result is a crystalized conserve most delightful to the taste. Those who have eaten this sweetmeat are uniformly pleased with the delicate flavor, holding it superior to any of the costly crystalized fruits.

The Bushy Fur Hat.

Each week the turban grows in favor.

It is made of any kind of fur, is something of a shapeless mass, and rests well down on the head. It comes as low as $3 and as high as $40. Its only trimming is a knot of satin, of gold or silver ribbon, or a bunch of flowers.

One can don the latter and adjust them to the turban at home, and the total cost is slight. This headgear is worn with a fishnet veil caught on with an ornamental bar pin.

Uplift their tone,
And go like gentlemen to war
For points alone?

WHAT BABY WANTED.

"It isn't a bit of use," cried the young man, distractedly, as he paced the room with the crying infant in his arms; "there is something alarming the matter with him, or he wouldn't cry like this."

"Oh, whatever shall we do?" said the young wife, as she took her offspring and tried to soothe him; "whatever shall we do?"

They were very young, and it was their first baby, and really, if things had gone on for another hour as they had during the last, it is an open question which would have gone into convulsions first—father, mother, or baby.

"I'll fetch mother," cried the young fellow at last; "She'll know what to do." Presently he returned, dragging the good old mother with him, almost breathless with haste and overcome with apprehension. Putting on her spectacles, she regarded the infant critically for a moment, and then said: "He wants feeding!"

"There!" cried the young father, excitedly, "we both knew the little beggar wanted something, but neither of us could tell what it was."

"OLD NASSAU" BANQUET

DR. BUCHANAN TOASTMASTER.

Professor McClenahan, Attorney-General Prentice and Others to Respond to Toasts.

Sons of "Old Nassau" will gather 'round the banquet board at Truell Hall Thursday evening, February 18, when a gathering of Princeton alumni of Plainfield and vicinity will make merry and discuss college days over three-dollar-a-plate "grub" and good tobacco. Notices of the banquet were sent out today by Owen H. Fleming, secretary of the club, and the committee in charge is hard at work preparing for a "bang-up good time."

Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, who left Nassau's halls with a sheepskin in the year 1893, will be toast-master at the feast, and the speakers include Hon. Mahlon H. Pitney, '79, Chancellor of the State of New Jersey, Professor Howard McClenahan, '94, of the Princeton faculty; Ezra P. Prentice, '98, deputy attorney-general of the State of New York, and Royal S. Goldsbury, '91. The last speaker is known to local Princeton men as "The Human Piano Bone," and will spill the humor of the evening. Music will be furnished by a quartet from the University glee club, and all the banqueters will join in the "music," and the jollification will be universal.

But there will be some business along with the pleasure. Before the dinner a special business meeting will be held for the purpose of acting on a proposal to amend the club constitution so as to provide that the annual meeting of the club shall be held upon the third Thursday of February. Heretofore the annual meeting has been held in May. The amendment provides that this annual meeting shall be held the third Thursday in February, or upon any other date that may be decided upon by the executive committee. If the amendment is adopted by the club at the banquet, a special meeting will be held this month, instead of May, and officers will be elected at this time for the coming year.

WALTER SCOTT BADGER, ILL FOR TEN YEARS, DEAD

Walter Scott Badger, aged sixty-three years, died Thursday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Arthur L. Otterson, of Evergreen avenue. He had been an invalid ten years. He became a resident of this city about two months ago, moving here from Brooklyn. Mr. Badger was born in Boston, Mass., where he lived for a number of years. Later he engaged in the dry goods business in New York and for a long time was prominent in the trade. He retired from business ten years ago.

Mr. Badger was a member of the New England Society, Crescent Athletic Club, Brooklyn Club, Atlantic Yacht Club, the Riding and Driving Club, of New York, and the Germania Club. He is survived by a mother, Mrs. James M. Badger, who is eighty-six years of age; a wife, and two children, Mrs. A. L. Otterson and Walter Scott Badger, Jr. The funeral service was private and the burial was at Hillside cemetery.

HERVEY DOANE HUNTING THE WOLVES IN KANSAS.

A letter from Hervey K. Doane to his mother, Mrs. T. O. Doane, gives an interesting account of a week's hunting trip in Kansas. The most exciting feature of the hunt was a wolf chase, in which the residents of the neighboring ranches joined. Two wolves were rounded up. They both got away but that did not lessen the enjoyment of the sport.

During the week on the ranch Mr. Doane bagged a great many jackrabbits and prairie chickens. The vacation was taken on the completion of his work at Cotton Woods Falls, Kansas, where he erected a power house, tower and water tank. He has now gone to Augusta, Kansas, where he has a contract to erect a similar plant.

In Honor of Her Niece.

Miss Ruth Constance Saunders, of Brookline, Mass., is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. James E. Martine, of Kensington avenue, and Friday the latter gave a charming tea in honor of Miss Saunders, inviting a few Plainfield friends to meet her. The rooms were tastily decorated for the occasion.

Not Her Affair, But—

The grocer's boy was lumbering up the kitchen stairway with his arms full of packages.

"Boy," said the mistress of the house, somewhat sharply, "are your feet clean?"

"Yes'm," he answered, still climbing the stairs. "It's only me shoes that's dirty."—Chicago Tribune.

HINDU PROVERBS.

Father Tignous, a missionary from India who is trying to recover his health in France, has sent the translation of several Hindu proverbs which will be found interesting. He has prepared these for the Field Afar:

The plant that could not be bent to the grave.

The plant that could not be bent when it was a twig will not bend when it is a branch.

A stone will wear away by the continual creeping of ants over it.

To acquire science in later years is like dyeing a dirty cloth.

THE TEN MISTAKES OF LIFE.

There are certainly more than ten mistakes which erring mortals make; but the following are sufficiently important to merit thoughtful consideration:

To refuse to yield in immaterial matters.

To endeavor to mold all dispositions alike.

To look for perfection in our own actions.

To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.

To measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

To look for judgment and experience in youth.

To worry ourselves and others with what cannot be remedied.

To set up our own standard of right and wrong, and judge people accordingly.

To refuse to alleviate, so far as lies in our power, all that which needs alleviation.

To refuse to make allowance for the infirmities of others.—N. Y. Weekly.

DYSPEPTIC PHILOSOPHY.

Even the bigamist may discover that a wife in the hand is worth two in the divorce court.

A man used to be satisfied to paddle his own canoe, but now nothing less than an ocean-going yacht satisfies him.

TELLS MISSION WORKERS OF "MOUNTAIN WHITES"

The election of officers, interesting addresses, together with a social hour, combined to make the annual meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church Friday afternoon, a delightful occasion. The members of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the church were invited and a large number were present to enjoy the program. Miss Mabel Wilson, the retiring president, was in the chair.

The first part of the meeting was devoted to business, when the officers were chosen for the year:

President, Mrs. Emma Smith; vice-president, Miss Edna Dilts; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Frank Woodruff; recording secretary, Miss Gertrude Schlefi; treasurer, Mrs. Lorenzo Towsley.

The reports for the year showed total receipts of about $77, all of which is contributed to home and foreign missions. This amount will undoubtedly be increased before the end of the fiscal year. The band numbers about forty members and is one of the active organizations of the church.

A feature of the meeting that was greatly enjoyed was an address by Rev. John VanZanten, a student in the Theological Seminary, New Brunswick. He spoke on the "Mountain Whites," which gave a better idea of the need of the work in the mountain regions of Kentucky and adjoining States. Mr. VanZanten was one of the students who spent last summer in mission work in Kentucky and gained a knowledge of conditions there which he presented in a most vivid and realistic manner.

The speaker pointed out the great needs in this work, explaining the low educational, moral and social condition of the mountaineers. His remarks proved most encouraging to the young women. At the close of his address, Rev. John Y. Brosh, pastor, made a few remarks of his encouraging nature. During the afternoon, Miss St. Elta Mayhew sang a pleasing soprano solo. After the meeting there was a social hour in the social committee, of which Mrs. George Mantz is the chairman, served refreshments. During this period all had an opportunity to meet Mr. VanZanten.

THE VEIL ALSO BECOMES SOILED.

Do you, madame, realize that when you have worn a veil in the dusty streets for a week that that veil is soiled?

No veil should be worn more than three times without it being dipped into alcohol for a cleansing. The same alcohol may be used several times. The process takes literally no more than three minutes. To wash the veil the liquid is poured into a basin and the veil dipped up and down, not squeezed or wrung. The superfluous alcohol drips out in an instant, the veil is then hung out flat to dry and the moisture evaporates almost before you can turn away from the covering. Such a veil is not only clean in the common sense, but has been rendered more or less antiseptic, decreasing the possibility of hurting the complexion.

As blackheads are merely an eruption in which a speck of dust has found lodgment and readily can be seen how easily veils close against the face may cause them. It would be well, when there is the slightest trouble with the complexion, to give up veils entirely, keeping the hair in place by invisible nets, and thus preventing any surface irritation to the cheeks.

When a girl is so unfortunate as to have defective circulation that shows itself by blood gathering in an ugly red about the mouth or nose she should never wear a veil. The tight mesh, combined with cold weather, aggravates the condition, though she may not be conscious of it at the time.

The not uncommon habit of one girl lending a veil to another should never be indulged in, for the mesh comes too close to the nostrils and mouth for it to be worn by another person.—Washington Star.

TWO MORE ARE HELD-UP

ALL SOUTH PLAINFIELD ASTIR.

Four Robberies in a Week Cause the Villagers Alarm— Constables Are at Work.

Two more highway robberies are today added to the list of hold-ups which have recently baffled the South Plainfield constables, and in each case the victims were relieved of their money and are unable to give any description of their assailants. The village is now thoroughly aroused over the attacks, for there have been four successful hold-ups this week, and in each case there is no clue to the identity of the highwaymen.

Last Friday's victims were John Arrowsmith and Elias Bailey. Arrowsmith was on his way from this city to his home and was stopped by the highwaymen on Park avenue, just across the county line. He was walking along a dark stretch of the road by the pond which marks the Middlesex county boundary, when a man suddenly sprung from the woods at the side of the road and ordered him to throw up his hands. Seeing that the stranger was armed, Arrowsmith was forced to obey. The man searched him deliberately, securing $18 in bills and some change. Arrowsmith then was told to go. Bailey was similarly "relieved" of about $6 last night at the Lehigh Valley coaling station. He was on his way home from the village and was attacked by an unknown man as he was crossing the tracks. He, too, was unable to overtake the man.

Bailey was similarly "relieved" of about $6 last night at the Lehigh Valley coaling station. He was on his way home from the village and was attacked by an unknown man as he was crossing the tracks. He, too, was unable to overtake the man.

Detective Gaberius and in company with Special Officer William Hogan pursued the man. The highwayman had a big lead and easily got away. Bailey can give no description of him.

Earlier in the week, Chris Bowers, a village resident, was attacked by a highwayman. He put up a fight, but was struck on the head with a blackjack or club and knocked insensible. He is still confined to his home. On Monday night, a Polak was attacked and robbed of his watch on Plainfield avenue, in the village.

WHEELER EXPLAINS THE "BIG BROTHER" MOVEMENT.

In connection with the monthly meeting of the Men's Association of Warren chapel Friday, the members and their friends listened to an address of unusual interest by William Wheeler, secretary of the "Big Brother Movement" in New York. During the course of his remarks he told of the various experiences encountered in the work, which is doing much good in the uplifting of the boys who come before the juvenile court in New York on charges of stealing and other minor offenses.

The movement has many influential men at its head and as carried on the "Big Brothers" go to the court and promise the judge to see that the lad gets a position, if old enough; if not, sends him to school and also finds out where he spends his evenings and in what kind of company. The "Big Brother" reports to the judge how his charge is getting along and in this way he is made a man. Mr. Wheeler said that about ninety-seven per cent of the youngsters become interested in the workers and make good citizens.

After the address, there was a social hour and refreshments were served by the social committee of which Alfred Everitt is the chairman. This association is becoming one of the most active in the chapel and several entertainments have been planned for the winter.

Borough Girl Successful.

Miss Edna Doughty, of the North Plainfield High school, now at the Trenton State Normal School, has the distinction of ranking next to highest in her class as a result of the mid-year examinations. She secured an "E" (excellent) in every subject except drawing, in which her mark was "F" (fair). The pupil who stood highest in the class had the same marks except in drawing, in which she secured "G" (good).

Woods, pastor of the First Baptist church.

AFTER TAX DELINQUENTS

North Plainfield Authorities to Enforce the Law Against the Dilatory Ones.

ASSESSOR COOLEY HAS PLAN.

At Least $17,000 in Unpaid Assessments, While Municipal Expenses Are Met With Borrowed Money.

Dr. Justus H. Cooley, borough tax assessor, appeared at the meeting of the North Plainfield Council Friday night in response to a request for his presence. A like notice had been given Collector George F. Brown, but he was too ill to be present. Mayor Townsend had desired to question the two tax officials in regard to numerous delinquents.

Dr. Cooley said he did not know why the taxes had not been paid, unless it was because the people concerned had not been compelled to pay up. The mayor wanted a suggestion from him as to a mode of compulsion. The assessor stated that the law provides a prison sentence for failure to pay pole tax, and that in some places, notably Bound Brook, the law had been enforced against a number of delinquents with the result of frightening many of the others into paying up.

Dr. Cooley said that a large number of the delinquencies on his books were for dog taxes, and that the authorities had the privilege of killing the dogs. There were also a great many pole and personal taxes on this list. He declared that one trouble with tax collectors in general is that they perform their duties like they were receivers instead of collectors, sitting in the office and not going out and trying to get the money. Mr. Brown, however, was not to be considered in that class.

Councilman Nichols arose and asked what chance there might be as to Mr. Brown being able to resume the duties of his office in the near future. His question brought out the information that the sick man was improving rapidly.

Borough Clerk Fred A. Martin stated that he had been authorized to reappoint the tax collector at the meeting and was prepared to answer questions for him. He said that the delinquent tax list had been turned over to a deputy with instructions to make every effort to collect them. Councilman Nichols declared that he was in favor of enforcing the law to the letter. "Seventeen thousand dollars are yet due on last year's taxes," he said, "and we are borrowing money on account of it."

The opinion of Corporation Counsel Charles E. Reed was sought as to whether suit could be brought against a delinquent who had moved into another county, an incident in particular being one in which Mayor Townsend, personally, knew of a tax payer who had sold his property in the borough and moved just across the brook into the city, where he built a fine house. Mr. Reed replied that the assessment was equivalent to a judgment and therefore it would do no good to sue as a second judgment would be of no additional value. But if the man should be found in the borough he could be arrested.

The discussion was brought to a close on the suggestion of Mayor Townsend that an adjourned meeting be held on the night of February 19, for the purpose of hearing a report from the deputy collector, Frank Neal, and that he be summoned to appear before the Council with a statement of just what he has collected and what has been done by him.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF WM. STEVENS SLAPE

The funeral of William Stevens Slape was held at 72 Westervelt avenue Saturday afternoon at 2:30. The Rev. John W. Brock, of Trinity Reformed church, conducted the services, and spoke of Mr. Slape's long service with the Mutual Life, his many friendships, and his sterling qualities as a man. Mr. Brock spoke most feelingly of the long illness of the deceased and of the constant and tender solicitude of those who watched over him. During the service Mrs. Ferdinand Ward sang Mr. Slape's favorite hymns.

A large delegation was present from the Mutual Life, headed by Henry S. Brown, chief of the department with which the deceased was so long connected. The floral tokens were many and beautiful, being massed in banks above and around the casket. Interment was at Hillside. The bearers were Judge William A. Coddington, John McLoughlin and George White, of Plainfield, I. L. Carbouell, James R. Waterhouse and William Titterton, of New York.

The Sleeves.

Though long sleeves are regarded as a very smart choice for the full-dress evening toilette, there is a charming plan noticeable in some of the new models. It consists in baring the arm from the shoulder to the elbow at the back and in front, though there is a connecting link of

BOROUGH SALOONS CLOSE AT MIDNIGHT

The midnight closing ordinance was passed Saturday by the North Plainfield Council. This measure when introduced at the January meeting specified 11 o'clock as the hour for the saloons to close, and so passed on first and second readings, but, as told in this paper some time ago, a compromise was effected with the dealers wherein the latter agreed not to oppose its enforcement through the courts if they were given one hour longer in which to do business.

In accordance with that understanding an amendment, introduced by Councilman Smalley, providing for the change, was adopted and the ordinance as amended, passed on final reading. It provides that no liquor shall be sold between 12 o'clock midnight and 6 o'clock in the morning.

While the ordinance does not go into effect until March 1, the saloon men are already obeying its provisions, in fact have been doing so since January 11, an earlier hour but took it upon themselves to do so. There is no reason why they and the authorities cannot work together and be on friendly terms."

COURT DECIDES AUTO IS MRS. R. M. REMSEN'S

An action in replevin between George F. Bolen, Jr., administrator of George F. Bolen, dead, and Henry VanderVeer was tried Friday in the Somerset county court before Judge Schenck without a jury. The bone of contention was an automobile claimed by Mrs. R. M. Remsen, of Bound Brook, and put in VanderVeer's garage for repairs last August, where it was seized by the sheriff under a writ of replevin as belonging to the estate of George F. Bolen, dead. Mrs. Remsen was forced to defend the action with VanderVeer as the nominal defendant, and several witnesses were produced by her to show that the Mr. Bolen had made her a present of the automobile and had acknowledged the fact to two or three witnesses.

S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, representing Mrs. Remsen, produced a certificate from the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles J. B. R. Smith in Trenton, showing that the automobile had been registered as the property of Mrs. Remsen on the records. The court decided that the automobile was the property of Mrs. Remsen and accordingly rendered judgment in favor of the defendant. William F. Vosseller, of Somerville, was counsel for the administrator.

A similar suit is now pending in the same court to test the ownership of a horse and surrey, which is claimed both by the administrator and Mrs. Mrs. Remsen. Mrs. Remsen has also lodged with the administrator a claim for several thousand dollars for services rendered to the deceased in his lifetime and for other sums which she claims are due her from the estate concerning properties in New York city.

FOR THE MOTHER OF THE FIRST BABY.

The baby who keeps the home in a turmoil may often be changed to a veritable sunbeam by attending to his diet.

Investigation will prove that constipation is the cause of peevishness and irrefulness in nine cases out of ten.

Many serious diseases have their rise in constipation, therefore any tendency in this direction should be quickly checked.

Injections and suppositories may have to be used, but they should be the last resort, after diet has failed.

A constipated child should not have scalded milk, tea, coffee, cocoa made with milk, white flour bread or crackers.

Uncalcined milk may be used, whole wheat bread, "Johnny cake" and cereals are wholesome and palatable.

When these are not effectual, try brown bread, rye pudding with cream, molasses and syrup and stewed prunes.

A good home-made brown bread to cure constipation is made of one-third each of granulated cornmeal, graham and white flour.

The Producer.

"Does your husband play poker?"

"I don't know," answered young Mrs. Torkins. "From what I hear he simply sits up to the table and enjoys seeing other people contend for what he puts up."—Washington Star.

ARE MOTHERS TO BLAME FOR "FRESH" CHILDREN?

The clever modern mother has come to take anything but a boastful view of the precocious infant. Despite newspaper jokes she has learned the truth of that old saw, "Forced fruits fall in flavor."

The place of children is the nursery, not the limelight; little ones who are allowed to emerge early from their seclusion are robbed of their rightful heritage of childish joys.

The child who is brought up in the city must of necessity see life at an early age. Its daily walk on the streets cannot but be an eye opener to an observant youngster, while the more formal pleasures of dancing classes and matinee forestall grown-up joys in a way that is not always beneficial. Therefore, there is a growing belief in the country as the place to raise children.

There is a fresh age to be lived through, trying as it is, when boys and girls get "smarty." Mothers often have themselves to blame that the dreaded freshness becomes constitutional rather than sporadic. The forced witty child becomes the born of later years who thinks he was born to be a humorist.

In training and forcing, it is well not to err on the side of ultra-exclusiveness. There is a mother of a charming debutante who cannot understand why her daughter is not in close touch with the rest of the girls or her age. It is because the girl was brought up without young companions, was taught to dance by private tutors and was not permitted to have girl chums.

It is a temptation to mothers to yield to persuasion of the over-grown, clever daughter to go with girls older than herself. The mature girl of 14 sees no reason why she should not go to the dances of girls 16 and 17, and often the mother easily yields.

Leaving the health side out of the question, the social expediency is doubtful. The "sweet-sixteener" is an old story when other girls of her age are ready to come out. At 26 she is recokoned among the "has-beens." She cannot carry a certificate of birth on her ball gowns, and men judge only by the years she has "been around."

It is a sad thing not to have been a real girl or boy. Too many children nowadays are miniature men and women from the cradle. Never have they known the behind "button-boxes," yelled through "prisoner's base," or jumped from the highest rafter in the haymow is to have lost the choicest memories of childhood. Grown-up joys have all the better flavor when they are tasted too soon.

Forced mental fruits are even more apt to fail in flavor than the social hot-bed plant. The building genius rarely bursts into bloom and the best fruits of scholarship are often on the so-called stunted growths. Educators understand that each year a child is being held back before 7 means that much more progress later.

While keeping a girl in ignorance of life is to be deplored, forced mental growths are even less desirable. For this reason parents should know the books their children read and the plays they attend. A course of the modern problem novel and play may do worse than affect the flavor of a girl's life. It may taint it at the heart.

Young people can even be forced physically. The body can be built up injudiciously. Girls especially have been sufferers for life because parents have not understood that gymnastics and physical culture sould be guided and guarded.—Newark Star.

ARTIST'S CHALK FOR CLEANING HATS.

One girl whose income is so small that her friends wonder how she can afford to wear the light-colored hats that are so becoming to her, keeps them clean with artist's chalk.

She lays in a supply of this chalk, which can be bought for a few cents, and in different colors. Should a spot appear in a pink hat, for instance, it is immediately covered with pink chalk and laid in a dark place for several hours, or, better yet, over night. When the chalk was brushed off the spot usually comes along.

A milliner is responsible for a somewhat heroic treatment of light felt hats. She says that when they become dirty she always rubs the surface with the finest sand paper that can be found. Strange to say, this does not roughen the felt and does remove the dirt.

Baking Cakes.

To bake cake nicely the heat should be uniform throughout the whole time of baking, else a soggy streak will be found in the cake. For light, thin cake a quick oven is required, and for dark cakes, with fruit, a slow oven with even heat. Avoid as much as possible the jarring of cake after it begins to rise, the motion may cause the escape of gas, leaving the cake heavy. Pans should always be well greased with good sweet lard, except for thick or loaf cake, which requires a buttered piece of white paper for the sides and bottom of the baking pan. To know when the cake is done pierce with a clean broom splint. If it comes out free the mixture is done.

Announcement of this fact was made Thursday by the National Horse Show Association of America, through Charles W. Smith, assistant secretary of the association, who is also assistant secretary of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club. Heretofore the local show has been held during the first week in June, but in order to have it follow the one in Philadelphia, it was found necessary this year to fix the dates a week later.

Durland's Riding Academy, April 14, 15 and 16; Riding and Driving Club, Brooklyn, April 27, 28, 29 and 30; Long Branch, July 27, 28, 29, 30 and 31; Islip, L. I., Long Island, September 23, 24 and 25.

Plans are now being considered by the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club to make the forthcoming show the best in its history. All of the prominent exhibitors of other years, including Judge W. A. Moore, Reginald Vanderbilt, Otto Kahn, Paul Sorg, Miss Mabel B. Hooley, W. J. Buttfield, C. W. McCutchen, C. W. Watson and others will return this year. There are several challenge trophies which must be competed for this year to comply with the rules under which they were offered and this is sure to arouse great interest. It is also understood that several new and valuable prizes will be offered for competition this year.

MRS. T. W. BAKEWELL CHARMINGLY ENTERTAINS

A charming tea and reception was given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. Thomas W. Bakewell, of West Eighth street, the affair being attended by about 150 friends from the city and borough. Mr. and Mrs. Bakewell recently took possession of the Tracy property, which has been completely remodelled, and the reception afforded an opportunity for Mrs. Bakewell to greet her friends in her handsome new home.

Mrs. Bakewell was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Louis K. Hyde, Mrs. Francis DeLacy Hyde, Mrs. John B. Timmons, Mrs. Frederick H. Andrews, Mrs. John F. Harman, Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., and Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman. Assisting in the dining room were Miss Euphemia Bakewell, Miss Helen Harman and Miss Louise Andrews.

The social features of the reception was a feature and those calling during the hours from 4 to 6, were delightfully entertained by the hostess and her assistants. Refreshments were served by a New York caterer.

A HOME-MADE MUSIC CABINET.

To keep music so that it can be easily found and is free from dust is no easy task without a cabinet that is well supplied with shelves and a door.

One impecunious young music student has solved the problem rather happily.

She found in her cellar a box a yard high, fourteen inches wide and ten inches deep, or just an inch or so wider and deeper than the average sheet of music.

The box was scrubbed inside and out and a number of shelves were made from thin pieces of white wood that rested on small screws stuck in the inside of the box at irregular intervals.

When the cabinet was finished it was given three coats of white paint and a fourth of white enamel. In the centre of the door an inexpensive copy of the "Child Handel," Margaret Dicksee's well-known painting, was used as a panel. It was held in place by a narrow framing of white silk souache fastened with large brass-headed tacks.

Inside, on the front of each shelf, was lettered the kind of music to be kept upon it.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A Schemer.

"So you are encouraging your wife to become a suffragette?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton.

"But I thought you disapproved of the movement!"

"Well, it occurred to me that if anything could discourage suffragettes in general it would be Henrietta turned loose, giving them a piece of her mind."—Washington Star.

WESTFIELD GETS POINT ON BOARD OF TRADE

President William E. Tuttle, of the Westfield Board of Trade, was present at the meeting of the local Board of Trade on Thursday and in response to an invitation from President H. W. Marshall, made a brief address. He expressed pleasure in meeting the members of this, the neighboring organization, and said that he desired to obtain some ideas on its work. His own board, he said, was not yet fully organized.

Continuing, Mr. Tuttle said: "The principal object of our organization is to develope our town. It is our aim to take the lead in progressive movements and to cope with the ever changing conditions. These rapid changes that are taking place are due to the remarkable growth of the suburban towns, brought about by the rapid transit and tunnels. We desire your co-operation, believing that a united effort of the boards will be made in the vicinity will be to the betterment of conditions in county and State."

MAYOR TO LAUD LINCOLN ALTHOUGH CITY REFUSES.

Highly indignant because the Board of Aldermen at Perth Amboy refused to appropriate money, or take other steps to properly observe Lincoln's birth on February 12, Mayor Albert Bollschweiler has undertaken individually to provide a part for Perth Amboy in the general celebration. He will hold a Lincoln banquet at the Parker House on the night of the holiday. He has named a committee to assist him in arranging for the affair.

Those who will serve are Joseph E. Stricker, Dr. William E. Rassay, William H. Pfeiffer and Harry Conard. Speakers will be secured and the banquet will be open to the public.

Himself of German birth, Mayor Bollschweiler yesterday made a letter of protest to Alderman-at-Large William D. Voorhees, a native of Monmouth county. Mr. Voorhees is held responsible for the refusal of the aldermen to appropriate money for a Lincoln celebration upon the plea of economy. The alderman-at-large said that he would much rather see the money, if there were any to spend, go to the poor of the city. Mayor Bollschweiler retorted by citing the fact that when he attempted several weeks ago to secure an appropriation from the city treasury for the relief of the suffering poor in this city he was met by a refusal.

In an interview Mayor Bollschweiler said: "I am so disgusted that I am at a loss as to how to express myself and I feel that Perth Amboy as a city is very unpatriotic. There could at least have been money enough appropriated to decorate the city hall."

MILK COMMISSION READY

TO ISSUE OFFICIAL SEALS.

Union County Medical Society to Certify to Purity of the Lacteal Fluid Sold to Consumers.

Dr. William L. Murray, of Watchung avenue, was chosen chairman of the recently formed Union County Milk Commission at the organization meeting Friday night at the office of Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, president of the Union County Medical Society, and it was decided that within a month or six weeks the commission would be ready to officially certify to the purity of milk and sanitation of such producing dairies in the county as may apply for such official certification.

Dr. Arthur Stern, of Elizabeth, was chosen secretary of the commission, which will have its headquarters at his office, 224 East Jersey street, Elizabeth. The other member of the commission, which was appointed by Dr. Edward Campbell, at the annual meeting of the Union County Medical Society, is Dr. Stephen T. Quinn, of Elizabeth. Dr. Murray was for nine years a member of the State Board of Health.

Nothing was done at last night's meeting toward reaching a decision as to the length of the term of office of the members of this first commission. It is planned to have the term three years, and the means that one of the members of the new commission will serve for three years, the second two, and the third one. The question as to who shall be the short term men will be decided at a meeting of the commission in the near future.

During the next few weeks, the members of the commission will familiarize themselves with the methods of the Essex County Milk Commission, and will be ready for the certification applications of the various local milk dealers in about a month. It will be necessary, however, there are few if any producers, while in this county there are many dairies. This will mean that the scope of the Union county commission's work will be broader.

No officers or boards or examinations will be regularly appointed by the commission to be regularly maintained by it, but a bacteriologist, veterinary and visiting inspector will be decided upon and it will be the duty of these men to examine the premises of those owners make application for a purity certificate, and study the conditions, making the necessary tests. The expenses of the necessary examinations will in each case be borne by the dairyman making the application. There will be no charge for the official seal of quality.

HE WANTED A DRINK SO HE FOLLOWED COP

Otto Rochelle, who came from Branchville and reached this city late Friday afternoon, was corralled by Officer McCarthy early last night on Watchung avenue, when it was found that he was carrying with him an assortment of watch chains, which the latter looked valuable. "Suspicious character" was the charge against him on the police blotter.

McCarthy told Judge Runyon in police court Saturday that Otto was lounging around Watchung avenue and Front street at about 7 o'clock last night, and followed him into an office near there where the policeman habitually leaves the lunch-box containing his midnight snack. Asked why he kept his eye so carefully on the officer, Otto showed himself unused to Plainfield by this statement:

"I wanted a drink, Judge, and when I saw the officer go into that place, I thought it was a saloon, so I followed him."

MISS HATTIE M. WILSON BRIDE OF "TUNE" HEWITT.

Miss Hattie May Wilson, of Keyport, and Tunis Hewitt, of South Second street, were quietly married Wednesday night, at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church parsonage, by the pastor, Rev. Charles A. Kemble. Only a few relatives and immediate friends were present. The couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Gideon Hewitt, of this city. They will reside in Plainfield.

The groom is well-known here as a baseball pitcher, having been a member of the Hope Y. M. A. and Scotch Plains as well as other local teams. Both he and his wife have a large circle of friends and acquaintances here.

MAYOR AS POLICE CHIEF

Charter Gives Mr. Fisk the Right to Appoint His Supervisors of Showa.

HENRY L. HALL AS CHAIRMAN.

Censors to Be Made Special Cops —Have the Right to Revoke Play House Licenses.

None of the many unusual innovations that Mayor Fisk has made since he came into office three years ago has caused anything like the stir that his creation of the office of public censor for theatres and moving picture shows has. Many warmly defend the mayor, holding that it is high time that something was done to call a halt on the alleged indecent and demoralizing plays and moving pictures, while others declared that he has exceeded his authority.

The mayor disputes the claim made by lawyers that he has exceeded his authority and that the jurisdiction is with the police and city judge. Under the charter, the mayor, he says, is the chief of police and he has all the rights and duties of the head of that department vested in himself. At the next meeting of the Common Council, the mayor will appoint his censors special policemen and will ask the city fathers for prompt confirmation.

Henry L. Hall will be chosen chairman of the censor board at a meeting to be held next Monday night.

The five vigilant censors were counselled to run the gauntlet when they entered the "club car" for New York this morning. They got in a corner all by themselves, it is reported, and read Browning's poems aloud, according to "The Cynic," who telephoned the news. The report that James E. Martine will serve as secretary to the supervisors of public morals is apparently unfounded. Mr. Martine says that he has run out of his supply of red ink and blue air oratory.

The mayor has the right to revoke licenses for local playhouses the same as the has the right to grant them, and he has instructed his appointees to inform him of any violations and on their recommendation will recall the franchises forthwith.

MISSIONARY MEETING OF CONGREGATIONALISTS

The monthly "neighborhood meeting" of the Women's Home Missionary Union of the Congregational churches of New Jersey, was held at the Congregational church here Tuesday. There were ninety-five delegates in attendance. The meeting was opened with a hymn, followed by the reading of scriptures by Mrs. Charles E. Cashe, the president, and prayer by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich.

Mrs. Charles L. Goodrich addressed the assembled delegates in a speech of welcome. An interesting paper was read by Mrs. A. M. Marsh of Montclair, on the subject, "Tithing Money." Another paper was read by Mrs. Douglas of Upper Montclair, entitled, "Tithing of Time and Talent." Following the reading of these papers there was an open discussion on the subject.

Miss Emerson read a paper on "Missionary Literature." Letters were read from the missionary at Colville, Utah, who is being supported by the members of this organization. Miss Minerva bore an encouraging report of the work being accomplished in that district. A letter was read from J. F. Blackburn, secretary of the Educational Society committee, who has charge of the work in Georgia and Florida.

The last hour of the morning session was devoted to a "quiet hour," conducted by Mrs. A. H. Mosher, of Westfield. At one o'clock a recess was called and lunch was served in the chapel room.

In the afternoon Miss Helen Deas, representative of the Schauffler Missionary Training School of Cleveland, Ohio, addressed the gathering, explaining the system of the school. Miss Alice Isley also spoke on "Christian Education."

There were on display during the meeting a number of old Crusader coins, of about the year 1612. These coins had been sent by the school at Intaub, Turkey, and their history is unique. While excavating for a building in that country, the workmen stumbled on a large pot filled with the coins. Why they had been so buried is not known. The motto inscribed upon them, on being translated, reads: "He that trusts in God shall never go astray." The coins are being sold by the members of the society at from fifty cents to one dollar and a half each.

LETTER CARRIER'S RIG WRECKED IN COLLISION

A collision between a light mail collector's wagon, driven by Letter-carrier Charles Glaentzer, and a run-about owned and driven by Clarence Law, of Westfield, wrecked the mail man's rig on East Fifth street Monday, and damaged the tempers of both parties to such an extent that they were actively preparing to decide the blame by a fistic encounter when Chief Kiely happened along and took both to police headquarters.

The accident happened at about 6:30 o'clock, when the two rigs tried to pass on East Fifth street, at Franklin place. The street is being repaired at this point, and is torn up so that only one side is open for traffic. The impetus was powerful. The question of blame immediately occupied the vocabularies of both parties to the fullest extent. It is stated, Chief Kiely thought it best to continue the argument at police court, but when the two drivers got there, they were in amicable mood and the matter was "settled out of court."

EDWARD POTTS WILLIAMS DIES AT LOS ANGELES

Edward Potts Williams, of West Seventh street, died Sunday at Los Angeles, Cal., where he had been for several weeks past for his health. A telegram announcing his death, was received by his son, R. D. Williams, of Darrow avenue, Monday.

Mr. Williams, who was 64 years of age, was a retired iron manufacturer. He was a member of the Ely & Williams Company, of New York, and has been ailing for two or three years past. He went to Los Angeles, where he was with a personal friend, J. M. Parcell, of Long Beach. The western trip was supposed to have been beneficial, so the news of his death came as a sudden shock to his son in this city.

A member of the local religious society of Friends, Mr. Williams' life was a quiet one among a large circle of local friends. Illness had kept him from active business for several years past. Born in Philadelphia, Mr. Williams has been a resident of this city for about thirty years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Howell Williams, two daughters, and R. D. Williams, his son. The daughters are Mrs. G. H. O'Donnell, of New York city, and Mrs. W. S. Loizeaux, of New York city.

WHITE WAY FOR ELIZABETH.

First Street Merchants Follow Example of Newarkers.

Under most encouraging circumstances the First Street Association was organized at Elizabeth Monday afternoon and officers elected. After a temporary organization the following were chosen as permanent officers: President, James Laurie; vice-president, Walter McManus; second vice-president, John P. Weber; secretary, B. F. Davis; treasurer, Charles D. Doctor; committee to draft bylaws, John P. Weber, Edward Heish, Charles D. Doctor.

A committee of three was appointed for each block on First street from Elizabeth avenue to Broadway, a distance of more than a quarter of a mile, to secure new members. Practically every man on the main business thoroughfare downtown is connected with the association. Its object is similar to that of the South Broad street organization in Newark, to boom First street as a business centre. It is planned to make the association "white way" by stringing on each block eight or ten electric lights.

ODD ITEMS.

There are five capital offenses under British law—murder, high treason, piracy, arson in the port of London and attempts to destroy public arsenals.

The most mixed population in the world is probably that of British Guiana. There is admixture of French, Dutch, Spanish, coolie and Indian blood.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital at its monthly meeting Monday considered the question of holding a kirmess or similar entertainment to raise funds toward the maintenance of the hospital. HE RECOMMENDS DECREE FOR ALBERT KURZHALS

Charles A. Reed, of the firm of Reed & Coddington, who has been taking testimony in the divorce proceedings of Albert Kurzhals against his wife, Katherine Kurzhals, has recommended to the chancellor that an absolute divorce be granted. The petitioner is represented by William G. DeMeza.

Mr. and Mrs. Kurzhals were married several years ago in this city, the latter being Miss Katherine Adams. Her home was in Canada, but for a long time she was employed as a waitress at the Hotel Kensington, when J. A. Staats was the proprietor. The couple lived happily together for awhile, but later, it is said, the course of true love did not run smooth.

Mr. Kurzhals started a suit for an absolute divorce on the grounds of desertion. It is understood that Mrs. Kurzhals is now living in Canada. Mr. Kurzhals is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Kurzhals, of West Sixth street. He is a painter by trade.

MISS ARNOLD WEDS AT ST. MARY'S RECTORY

Miss Magdalena Arnold, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Arnold, of Liberty street, and James Lindsay, of Newark, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lindsay, of Mountain avenue, the borough, were married at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon at the rectory of St. Mary's church, Rev. M. Mc. Bogan, the pastor, officiating, in the presence of about fifty relatives and friends.

The bride was gowned in white satin, ornamented with embroidered lace and she wore a satin hat, trimmed with plumes and lace and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies-of-the-valley. She was attended by Miss Christine Schweirs, a cousin, of Williamsbridge, N. Y., who wore a gown of blue satin, trimmed with old lace and a white hat trimmed with plumes. The best man was Walter Arnold, a brother of the bride.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, there being guests present from Scranton, Pa.; Williamsbridge, N. Y.; New York city, Somerville and Plainfield. The bride and groom received many congratulations and then supper was served. Mrs. Lindsay was the recipient of a large number of gifts from relatives and friends. The couple cleverly escaped the guests in darkness in a honeymoon by taking a trolley car to Westfield and there boarding a train on the New Jersey Central, while the company was at the North Avenue Station waiting to give them a good send-off.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay will reside in Newark upon their return from the trip, the groom being employed there in a wholesale grocery house.

J. HOWARD LEGGETT HAS PASSED AWAY

J. Howard Leggett for many years engaged in the drug business in this city, died at his home on Western avenue, Morristown, Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. He had been ill for several years and was a great sufferer, yet he bore it all with a fortitude that was remarkable. Throughout his long illness his wife and son Raymond were his constant and faithful companions, administering to every need and doing all in their power to make him comfortable.

Mr. Leggett was a native of Princeton, where he spent the early years of his life. He first entered the employ of Marsh & Gardner, druggists of that place, and later took a course in the New York College of Pharmacy. Afterward he returned to Princeton for a time and then became clerk in H. J. Reynold's drug store at Park and North avenues. This was in 1890. He remained there for about two years when he took charge of the Central Pharmacy at Park avenue and Front street, which he purchased from Randolph Stelle by Mr. Reynolds. Just prior to that Alexander Mallinson was associated with Mr. Stelle in the business. Later Mr. Leggett bought the business and continued it for sometime.

When the City Loan & Trust Bank acquired the whole property on that corner, Mr. Leggett was obliged to move and he opened a drug store in the Y. M. C. A. building, remaining there for more than a year. He was succeeded by the present proprietor, Peter B. Hodge. Throughout his residence in Plainfield Mr. Leggett made many friends and during his long and painful illness he had their full sympathy. Mr. Leggett was a member of the First M. E. church and Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum. A wife and one son, Raymond, survive him.

Regent W. T. Carr, of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, has appointed D. W. Littell, A. L. Force and E. VanWinkle a committee to attend the funeral service of Brother Leggett at his late home, 250 Western avenue, Morristown, on Thursday afternoon, at 3 o'clock. The interment will be at that place Friday morning and will be private.

EDUCATOR ON LINCOLN

ANALYZES HIS CHARACTER.

The First Baptist Church Men's Club Hears an Instructive Lecture Last Night.

Superintendent H. C. Krebs entertained the Men's Club of the First Baptist church Monday in a masterly address on the life of Lincoln. Mr. Krebs is always interesting on any subject, and on this, a popular one, he was especially so. To add to the enjoyment of the evening, a quartet composed of young men of the high school sang a number of patriotic songs.

In analyzing Lincoln's character, Mr. Krebs declared that he was a many sided man, as was evidenced by the way he had overcome the opposition in his own cabinet; men like Seward and Stanton, who were antagonistic to his policies. The boyhood of the great man was described; how he had been left motherless at the age of nine, and afterwards was reared by a stepmother. Lincoln has said in later years that he owed everything to his mother, and it was believed generally that he refereed to this stepmother. She was a far different kind of woman from his own mother, being of strong character and strict in her discipline of him, while the former had been delicate and mild in her treatment.

His manner of acquiring an education is well known. Handicapped by poverty he had never-the less managed to acquire a knowledge of books. He found a copy of Blackstone's commentary in a rubbish heap and that was how he came to study law. A judge happened along one day and found him seated on a log studying the book, and gave him a place in his office. The manner of his coming into fame is interesting. Having a natural fondness for debate, he gained a local reputation, and when he got into politics his reputation began to spread. His debates with Douglas carried his name outside his own State, and he was invited to speak at Cooper Union in New York, where his speech made a profound impression. It was two and one half hours long but his audience gave him the closest attention to the end.

At the national convention in Chicago soon afterwards, Seward would surely have been nominated had it not been for a peculiar incident. Seward's followers from his native State, New York, were accompanied by a band and large delegation of marchers. While they were out in the street making a great display, the friends of Lincoln completely filled the auditorium and when the easterner's supporters appeared, there was no room for them. Thus the convention was stampeded for Lincoln, aided by the Pennsylvania and Indiana delegations throwing their support to him on finding that their local candidates had no show.

When Lincoln was elected to the Presidency, he placed his political opponents in the Cabinet. The speaker described the wonderful ability of the man in coping with the problems of his day. He believed that Lincoln could not have withstood the cares of office had he not relieved his mind at times by indulging in humorous stories, allowing his brain to relax. He did not take a vacation during his term of office, but remained continually at his post. Charles Lincoln died his worst enemies admitted that he had been the greatest man the nation had ever known.

Emil Hofmann Coming.

Of Emil Hofmann, who will appear in a song recital at the Hartridge School auditorium on Thursday next, Feb. 18, under the direction of J. Edmund Skiff, the New York Herald says: "His voice is a baritone of beautiful quality and he uses it delightfully. In several of his songs he reached a high degree of dramatic interpretation, notably so in Schubert's "Doppelgaenger," where the elements of awe and terror which the composer put into the music were well expressed and to those who understood the German words this song was very thrilling."

Anniversary Committe to Meet.

The committee appointed by H. W. Marshall to plan for the fortieth anniversary of the city charter on July 4, will meet in the office of A. S. Herr in the Woodhull & Martin building, Thursday night. Captain William S. Smith, chairman of the committee, issued the call for the meeting and urges a full attendance as considerable business will be considered.

"The Lesson of 1907."

Congressman Charles Newell Fowler will address the Dutch Arms Club of Trinity Reformed church on Friday night, February 26, his subject being "The Lesson of 1907." Mr. Fowler is thoroughly acquainted with every detail of the financial question, having been chairman of the banking and currency committee in the House of Representatives, and his address cannot possibly fail to interest everyone who attends.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. O. B. LEONARD

A large number of relatives and friends attended the funeral services of Mrs. Oliver B. Leonard held from the late home of Mercer avenue, yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chamblin, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which Mrs. Leonard was a member for more than forty years, officiated. He read appropriate Scripture selections and offered prayer.

Mrs. Leonard was the eldest daughter of the late Elston Marsh, for many years a leading citizen. She was a descendant on her mother's side of Huguenot ancestry through Poncet Stelle, a religious exile from France. On her father's side the family was of a line of the New England Puritan. She was educated at the Troy Female Academy and was graduated from that institution in 1857.

During the service, a quartet from the First Baptist church, comprising Miss Luella C. Harris, soprano; Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto; William Holmes, bass, and George Smith, tenor, sang "Abide With Me," and "Lead Kindly Light." There were a great many beautiful floral tributes from relatives, friends and neighbors. The interment was in Hillside cemetery at the convenience of the family.

MACHINISTS FEAST A JOLLY GOOD FELLOW

In honor of James Penny, who was a member for fourteen years and who recently resigned because of a change in occupation, the Plainfield Lodge, International Association of Machinists, gave a banquet and smoker in Eagles' Hall, Monday night. During the evening the president, Louis Fulton, on behalf of the members, presented Mr. Penny with a valuable diamond stick pin. He took occasion to refer to his long and faithful membership and his efforts in advancing the principles of the order.

In response Mr. Penny thanked one and all for the handsome gift and said that while he would not continue to be a member of the lodge, he would always have the best interests of the organization at heart and would be ready at all times to render assistance.

A feature of the evening was an address by Jacob Keppler, of Chicago, vice-president of the International Association of Machinists. After paying a compliment to Mr. Penny, Mr. Keppler recited briefly the progress being made by the association throughout the country and he spoke in an optimistic vein of business conditions. There were about 150 persons present. The banquet was an excellent one and enjoyed by all.

Mr. Penny resigned his membership in the lodge January 1 to take a position as sexton of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Before that he followed his trade as one of machinists, being employed in local shops.

LIKE CHICAGO'S FIRE, A COW WAS RESPONSIBLE

The destruction of a barn by fire at Dunellen Monday was due to a cow putting its foot on a box of matches, and she paid for the act with her life. The matches burst into flame, igniting the straw which littered the floor and then the entire structure, the property of Henry C. Vogel, was consumed.

The fire was discovered in time for a horse, which occupied a stall near the door, to be led to safety, and some chickens in the basement were saved, but the cow, in complete emulation of the Mrs. O'Leary beast, lost its life.

The arrival of the Dunellen volunteer fire department, prevented the spread of the flames to other buildings in the vicinity, though it was a difficult task in the face of a high wind. Only the chemicals could be used, the building being outside of the fire zone and not within reach of the water mains. The rigging of the fire bell on the high tower aroused the whole town and a large crowd rushed to the place, which is a mile east of the depot. The driver of a brewery wagon from Plainfield hooked his team to the hose cart and warned the five dollar standing fee for such service.

The explanation for the presence of the matches in the building, that one room had been used as a laundry room and the box was dropped by some one passing through.

Westfield Club to Incorporate.

The Westfield Driving and Riding Club has decided to incorporate and the action will be taken at once. The organization will also make application for membership in the National Trotting Association. A committee comprising Harry Evans, J. S. Irving, C. M. F. Egel, C. B. Smith and J. G. TenEyck has been appointed to arrange a racing schedule which will include meets with the Fair Acres Driving and Riding Club, of this city.

MEN TO COOK DINNER

Holy Cross Members Will Prepare and Serve a Meal on February 23.

GEORGE O. STEVENS CHEF.

Committees to Take Charge of the Affair Named at Monday's Parish House Smoker.

Gathering at an informal smoker in the parish house of Holy Cross church Monday night the men of the church made arrangements for a supper to be given at the church Tuesday night, February 23. The affair will be a "Men's Supper" and the viands will be secured, cooked and served entirely by the men of the parish. A similar supper proved a great success last year, when more than $100 was netted for the church work. The proceeds this year will be applied to the organ fund.

About forty of the leading men of the parish were on hand last night to fuse matters and discuss the suggestion for a men's supper was greeted with enthusiasm. The unanimous opinion of the gathering was that George O. Stevens, who ably prepared the dinner last year, should act as chef, and Mr. Stevens, thus nominated, gracefully accepted the white cap and ladle of power. After that committees were made up rapidly. Augustus Van Deventer, Charles A. Reed and Frederick Harrington were named as a committee in charge of the commissary supplies and the menu; Frederick Pressey, Frederick Bate and Hiram Woodruff will be the committee on kitchen supervision, and the "head waiters" will be C. S. Powell, F. O. Ball, Alson Abbott and C. E. Ketcham. It was clearly stipulated by the members of this committee that their duties consisted solely in "standing around, looking imposing, and collecting the tips." When announcement was made that all tips were to be added to the proceeds, the committee decided to have one less duty. Assisting this committee by appointment are a number of waiters and the arrangement of the tables are to be C. L. Nichols, John Brower and W. H. Morrison.

The reception committee, who declare they have something on the head waiters when it comes to being "bum guns," is headed by Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield, and includes E. A. Overton and the rector of the church, Rev. George A. Warner. Advertising and printing will be in charge of a committee composed of D. J. Randall, E. S. Hooley and Oliver Voorhees. A. E. Force was named to head the cloakroom committee, which will include Edward Mosher and Duncan Patterson. Dr. Francis E. DuBois and Prosper Wandesforde compose the committee on ticket distribution.

After the committees had been named, the cigar boxes were sent around again, and when everybody had "lighted up" there was a general discussion of plans for the supper. Each of the committees, realizing the shortness of time, got to work on the spot, and there was a discussion of the menu. Bewildering in the extreme were the viands suggested, but Chef Stevens refused to quail at anything. His stereotyped, "You bring around the stuff, and I'll cook it," was never retracted, even when a "possum dinner was suggested.

Tables will be set in the parish house, where it is possible to accommodate about 150 diners at a time. The various committees will meet with their respective chairmen at an early date and tickets will probably be out in about a week.

FORM GAME PRESERVE TO PROPOGATE AND HUNT.

At a meeting Monday of a number of local sportsmen, there was organized a club which has for its chief purpose the protecting and propogating of game. It is to be known as the Hollywood Game Protection and Propogating Association. A half dozen farmers in the territory south of South Plainfield have entered into an agreement with the association whereby their farms, covering in all about seven hundred acres, will be given to the propogating of grouse, quail, rabbit and other varieties of game. No one but members of the club and the farmers themselves will be permitted to hunt on the preserve, and even they will have to abide by certain rules, and the amount of game they can shoot will be limited.

Fred Endress was made president of the association, C. W. Krausse, vice-president; Dr. B. F. Leonard, secretary; Charles Gloeker, treasurer. On the committee for providing the game to be propogated are Henry Haurand and Dr. Leonard.

Floyd Cooper, of Westfield, charged with manslaughter for having caused the death of Jonathan Randolph, of this city, while out on an automobile ride one dark night in November, escapes with a fine of $1,000.

Cooper appeared before Judge E. S. Atwater a Elizabeth, this afternoon, and changed his plea from not guilty to non vult. Prosecutor Swift moved that sentence be imposed. Craig A. Marsh addressed the court most eloquently in Cooper's behalf. He said that the defendant had agreed to pay his victim's family $5,000 and that he had assigned a $5,000 life insurance policy to secure the payment and had given the administrator's lawyer, Isaac P. Runyon, an order on his employers in New York for future earnings. The agreement is that the employers shall pay the administrator's lawyer $50 a month out of Cooper's salary for one hundred months.

A petition from the Grand Jury asking for leniency was presented to the court. Isaac P. Runyon, as counsel for the administrator, Isaac Randolph, said that the family was satisfied that no criminal intent was shown and begged for leniency; adding that a satisfactory compensation had been made. Similar pleas of leniency were made in letters written to the court by Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Mayor Samuel Townsend, former Mayor N. B. Smalley and S. P. Dickinson, all of Plainfield, and from a large number of Westfielders.

Prosecutor Swift agreed that a sentence less than imprisonment be imposed and the court then summoned the defendant to the bar. Judge Atwater said that he was convinced that no criminal intent had been shown and he was much impressed by the petition from the Grand Jury.

Judge Atwater imposed a sentence of $1,000 fine on the prisoner and ordered him committed until it was paid. There was no suspended sentence. Friends of Cooper paid the fine this afternoon.

The accident which resulted in the death of Jonathan Randolph occurred late on Saturday night in November, while Floyd Cooper, accompanied by Mrs. Sarah Robinson, her daughter, Miss Nettie Robinson, and Miss Matilda Schenck were out for a "joy ride" in Mr. Cooper's automobile. It was at West Front street and Jefferson avenue that the machine struck Mr. Randolph just as he alighted from a trolley car.

His body was horribly mangled and he was left lying in the road, while the party in the auto sped on. The crew on the trolley car picked the dying man up and placed him on the sidewalk and then hastened for a physician. He was then removed to the hospital, where he died a few hours later. Cooper was arrested at his home about 9 o'clock Sunday morning, when he admitted having been in Plainfield and the circumstances following.

"A Willard Memorial" will be held by the W. C. T. U. at the rooms on Madison avenue, at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Every member is requested to be present at this meeting in loving memory of the peerless leader, Frances E. Willard.

WATER PROBLEM CONFAB

President Bergen and Other Officials of Local Concern to Meet with City Fathers.

Frank Bergen and other officials of the Plainfield-Union Water Company, will meet with the Councilmanic public affairs committee, tonight, the purpose being to discuss questions relative to the making of a new contract with the city or making such changes as might be considered fair and reasonable to both the city and the water company.

Following the presentation of the report by the Bi-municipal Water Commission to the Common Council, in which a great many new facts were brought to light, it was thought wise to hold a conference with the concern's officials and learn their attitude relative to making changes in the contract with the city.

At this conference the report of the water commission will be discussed at length with a view to arriving at an amicable agreement regarding Plainfield's water supply for the present as well as the future, having the aim of the city officials to secure the best terms possible. Every phase of the questions will be considered so that there will be no chance for misunderstanding in the future.

It is understood that owing to the great expense nothing further will be done in the matter of establishing a municipal water plant here. But the city is anxious to make the best terms possible with the Plainfield-Union Water Company and it is the chief aim to preserve the local water supply in every way possible so that in future years the city will not be confronted with a difficult proposition through a lack of water.

NEVER A WORD OF THIS— CENSORS ARE TO MEET

The five public censors will hold a solemn conclave tomorrow night at "the bungalow" for the purpose of shaping their plans to preserve the innocence and purity of their fellow citizens. Contrary to report no essays on the drama or recitations on the moving picture shows will be included in the program, which will largely be devoted to heart-to-heart talks with the managers of the local amusement houses.

It is reported that the merchants will be asked to see that their show windows are always kept dressed and that the butchers will be asked to substitute the word "limb" for "leg" when referring to mutton and lamb. The tree commission may, moreover, be requested to provide some means of preventing the populace looking at trees when they are bare, and that the newspapers will be ordered to make no mention of bridge whist parties where prizes are offered.

AN INTERESTING PAPER ON CHINESE IN AMERICA

A paper on "Chinese in America," prepared by Mrs. James Macnab and read by Mrs. F. T. Ostrom, was listened to with much interest by the members of the Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church at their meeting yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. The influx of this eastern people into California at the time its gold fields were attracting fortune-hunters from many climes was touched upon, the injustice done them by the exclusion laws of the country was referred to and the efforts to christianize them were characterized as the most effectual way to Americanize them.

The work of the Home Missionary Society started in 1875 at San Francisco and extended since into all the large cities of the country was described by Mrs. Macnab, who told also of the horrors of the slave traffic in China-town and the strenuous efforts made to improve the condition of this oriental people.

The generosity of the Chinese converts and their desire to benefit their own country were very gratifying characteristics of the Chinese, according to Mrs. Macnab. She closed with the statement that the present awakening of China and the large number of Chinese students in our schools and colleges afforded an opportunity for their christianization and the christianization of their whole country.

The paper was preceded by devotional services led by Mrs. W. C. Wainwright. Resolutions were adopted appreciative of the late Mrs. Oliver B. Leonard.

It has been decided that owing to the great expense no New Jersey troops will be sent to the inauguration ceremonies at Washington.

FIFTY YEARS MARRIED

Reception Marks Golden Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Dobbins' Wedding.

Celebrating the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. M. Clark Dobbins, 6? Elmwood place, which event occurred yesterday, a reception was given to them last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Dobbins on West End avenue. There were about fifty guests, comprising those who have been warm friends of the couple during their long residence in this city. The entire evening was given up to sociability and congratulations, the bride and groom being showered with the best wishes of all for continued health and happiness.

The home was decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns, azaleas, smilax and cut flowers throughout the hall, parlor and dining room.

Mr. and Mrs. Dobbins were assisted in receiving their friends by members of the family and the absence of all formality made the occasion one of much pleasure. The couple was generously remembered with gifts appropriate to the celebration, including gold, cut-glass, chinaware and cut-flowers.

The couple have been residents of this city, with the exception of two or three brief intervals, since 1874. Mrs. Dobbins was born in Newark, seventy-four years ago and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Storms of that place. Mr. Dobbins is a native of Caldwell, Essex county. They were married at the latter place February 16, 1859, by Rev. Isaac M. Sprague, pastor of the Caldwell Presbyterian church, and they lived there for several years.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, Mr. Dobbins enlisted and he organized Co. D, 26th N. J. Vols., of which he was made captain. He served the best part of a year and was forced to resign his command because of illness. Upon his return he was made provost marshal, which position he held until the close of the war. For four years he held a responsible position in the internal revenue department, with headquarters at Newark, under the late Geo. Halsey.

Afterward Mr. and Mrs. Dobbins moved to this city, where they have practically lived ever since and where Mr. Dobbins has been engaged in business. During their forty years residence here the couple have been active members of the First Baptist church and Sunday-school, and Mr. Dobbins is one of the deacons there. He is also a member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., and Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., of this city; also of the New York Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

By the union six children were born to the couple, there being one son living, and one granddaughter.

WELCOME NEWLY WEDS

Captain and Mrs. Hewitt Given Reception at Salvation Army Barracks.

The home-coming of Captain Samuel, A. Hewitt, of the Salvation Army, with his wealthy bride was the occasion for the assemblying at the barracks last night of several hundred of the members to honor the newly-married couple and welcome them to their new home.

Captain Hewitt succeeded Captain Hopkins at this post several weeks ago. On February 2, he left on a furlough for Burlington, where he was married to Miss Marion Fergus Woolman, the daughter of a wealthy Burlington family. The family is prominent in society there.

Adjutant Charles Stravell led the meeting last night which preceded the reception. As the couple entered the door the audience rose and sang "Welcome, Welcome Home." The chiefs of the various departments of the local Army made brief speeches of greeting. Song after song was sung as only the Salvationists can sing them, and each number is a live, spirited meeting. One of the best features of the program was a duet by two little girls, Sadie and Mattie Banker.

Captain F. Duerr, who has been holding the fort during Captain Hewitt's absence, responded to a request for a speech. He leaves today for Morristown to take charge of the barracks there.

The addresses of Captain and Mrs. Hewitt were the last on the list and as each in turn arose to speak was given an ovation. The captain announced that they would make this city their home until orders were received to move on. He said that although he had been glad to get away from Plainfield a couple of weeks ago, he was equally as glad to be back, "for," said he, "as the old saying goes, 'A man's heart is where his treasure is.' I now have my treasure with me and so am perfectly contented."

The bride's welcome from the Army as she began her talk, was hearty and prolonged. She expressed great pleasure at the prospects before her, when she could work with her husband among the people of this city. "I am happier than I can say," the bride continued, "because the Salvation Army has always appealed to me, with its earnestness and sincere Christian faith. I believe it offers a chance for doing good that no other organization can give. I was raised in a Christian family but only came to know the Salvation Army, never realized the true spirit, in its strictest sense, for in the Army there is such a deep religious feeling, combined with energy and ceaseless effort in behalf of the unfortunate."

At the conclusion of the formalities, the congregation formed in line and shook hands with the couple as they passed where they stood. An envelope which the chairman said contained a nest egg, was placed in the bride's hand. This contained the proceeds from the sale of the tickets for the event. Two hundred and thirty of the tickets had been sold at ten cents each. They were inexpensive, having been printed by himself, the chairman said, with a rubber pouch, and therefore the sale was clear profit.

Refreshments were served and the festivities closed with a social hour.

Mrs. Hewitt speaks French fluently and reads Greek and Latin. She attended the school at St. Mary's Hall, Burlington, and finished her education at the private boarding school at Morristown. She has been a member of the Salvation Army five years, in her home town. Entering the New York Training Home last fall, she graduated on January 21 last, with the rank of captain.

Captain Hewitt has been a member of the Army for nearly fourteen years, and an officer for two years. Before taking up this work he was a salesman in the retail department of John Wanamaker & Co., New York. He was stationed at the Seventh Corps headquarters in Brooklyn before coming to this city. Previous to that, for a few months, he was at Paterson. It was while located at Burlington that he met and won the estimable young woman who is now his wife.

After the wedding they left for their honeymoon trip, going first to Cleveland, where an uncle of the groom is pastor of the Calvary Baptist church.

New life has already been infused into the Salvation Army ranks here by the new leaders. A series of meetings is to be held, beginning tonight and continuing nightly, except Monday, for two weeks at least.

Co. K's Annual Fair.

The members of Co. K are rapidly completing the details for the sixth annual fair to be held in the armory on West Front street, beginning February 20. There will be many attractions, as usual, and dancing will be a feature each night.

GUILTY OF CONSPIRACY

The conspiracy case of Ralph Maronne ended at Elizabeth, yesterday, on the seventeenth day of the trial with a verdict of guilty. It is regarded as another brilliant success for Craig A. Marsh, the leading counsel for the State, although he says that his associates, Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and Henry B. Johnson, Esq., of New York, who aided the prosecution, contributed equally with himself in gaining the cause.

The charge was one of conspiracy to cheat and defraud the Barrett Manufacturing Company, a West Virginia corporation, called by the defendant's lawyers "the rag trust." Its business is to convert rags and paper stock into roofing felt, and one of its factories is at Elizabethport.

The indictment charged Maronne, who is a packer and shipper of rags in bales, with having corruptly conspired with William H. Kitchell to fabricate false shipping orders and bills of lading, and enclose in the Barrett Company's rag book, the latter to be made by Kitchell, who was the company's weighing master, so as to palm off a car-load of 9250 pounds as one of 25500 pounds, and to represent it to contain 36 bales instead of the true number, viz., 12 bales, there being three other similar charges in the indictment, the money fraudulently to be obtained in this way to be shared between Maronne and Kitchell.

To prove the alleged conspiracy, trunks full of books and documents were daily brought to the court house. Over a hundred exhibits were produced in evidence, and about forty witnesses were examined. No important evidence was received, without a hard fight between the lawyers of whom four, headed by Alan Strong and former-Governor Voorhees, represented the defendant.

Kitchell turned State's evidence, but Maronne denied everything and said that Kitchell was a low order of grafter who came to him under the assumed name of Spencer to borrow money and betray his employer's interests. Maronne called as witnesses his brother and many of his drivers and other employes, all of whom denied that there were any short shipments, either as to the number of bales or weights. The State produced ten or more Central Railroad men to corroborate its other witnesses.

All day Monday was consumed by the summing up of counsel, former Governor Voorhees and Mr. Strong making the argument for the defense, and Mr. Marsh making the argument for the State. Yesterday Judge Atwater delivered a charge which took up half a day, and the jury retired about 12:30 and in an hour's time rendered a verdict in favor of the State, finding defendant guilty on every count. As the penalty is severe, no doubt the case will be taken on appeal to the highest court in the State.

GILBERT TOASTMASTER FOR TRADE BOARD DINNER

The Board of Trade banquet committee held an important meeting at the office of Secretary A. S. Herr, last night. Judge William Newcorn, chairman, presided and a number of details were decided upon. It was announced that in addition to the three speakers already secured, John A. Wier, Calvin Tompkins and Job Hedges, all of New York, State Senator Joseph Frelinghuysen will also respond to a toast.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, president of the New York Clearing House, and Plainfield's leading citizen, was unanimously chosen as toastmaster for the banquet. Charles Suhr's Imperial Orchestra has been engaged to provide music during the evening.

Tickets for the affair are now ready and can be obtained from the following: Morris C. Van Arsdale, A. E. Force, Eugene M. Laing, J. Fred MacDonald, J. V. E. Vanderhoef, Theodore J. Shirley, E. F. Feickert, Henry L. Hall, Herbert E. Parker, Frederick Shoffer, A. S. Herr and other members of the Board of Trade. After discussing some minor details the committee adjourned to meet Monday night at the same place.

Will Tell of Mothers' Congress.

The Plainfield Mothers' Association will hold a meeting at the Plainfield High School, Friday afternoon, February 19, at 3 o'clock, when Mrs Robert Hoe Budd, president of the Women's Club of Upper Montclair, will speak on the subject: "Work of the National Congress of Mothers." Each member is requested to bring a cup and saucer.

REV. EDWARD LOVE DEAD

Well-Known Citizen Succumbed to Heart Disease Shortly Before Noon.

Rev. Edward Love, of East Ninth street, a well -known resident here for a great many years, died suddenly at 11:45 o'clock this morning of heart trouble. He had been in his usual good health and his death was a great shock.

When Mr. Love first came to Plainfield he was engaged in the manufacture of wall paper, his place of business being located for a number of years at North and Watchung avenues, which building he owned and later sold to John Rose, after he retired from business. Mr. Love was a native of England and aside from business greatly interested in religious work, being frequently called upon to preach in the local churches.

A few years ago he organized a mission at Garwood under the direction of the Presbyterian church and up to the time of his death was in charge there. The mission has been a great success and now has a large membership. Mr. Love devoted his time exclusively to this work. He was a member of the Plainfield Ministers' Association and active in its affairs. He is survived by a wife, a daughter and one son, Dr. A. Wendover Love, the latter of Providence, R. I., where he practices medicine. He also leaves a brother who is a curate in the church of England.

Mr. Love was a member of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, and this afternoon Regent W. T. Carr appointed the following as a committee to attend the service: S. C. Baker and E. T. Van Winkle.

FOSBRE RUNS BIG RISK IF HE EVER DRINKS AGAIN

Harry Fosbre, sixty seven years of age, of West Sixth street, was found helplessly drunk by Officer McGinley under the Madison avenue railroad bridge yesterday. Mrs. Fosbre was in court today with a story of his bad record at home because of his liking for booze, and when Harry was led to the bar, she told the Judge that something must be done. Harry, of course, promised to "swear off" if he were let go, and when Judge Runyon asked him if he could, said that he had once been for three years without a drink. His wife said that this was thirty years ago. The prisoner was confident that he could equal that record again, and as he is the wage earner of a large family, he was given a chance.

Drink shows its effects upon the man, and Judge Runyon told him that if he was arrested again for drinking before February 17, 1912, he would be committed to Morris Plains for life.

ARMY OFFICERS INSPECT CO. K. AT THE ARMORY

The annual Government and State inspection of Co. K was held at the local armory, last night, and the result was the best in the history of the organization. The company had one hundred per cent. attendance and the inspecting officers highly complimented the officers and men on their fine showing.

Commenting on the personnel, the inspecting officers said that the company exceeded the average organization in the National Guard and that the officers were better acquainted with the details of the general orders than the average. Captain Jordan, of the 12th Infantry, U. S. A., conducted the inspection for the Government, and Col. Boltwood and Col. Robert Patterson, assistant inspector-generals, together with Regimental Adjutant John Rogers and Major W. B. Martin were also present, and they complimented the company.

Celebration Lands Him in Cell.

Returning to town after an eight months absence, Clifford Calekuff, of Park avenue, celebrated his homecoming by many, many drinks. After a generous absorption of liquor, which showed quick results, Clifford visited a North avenue business place where he made himself very objectionable. Roundsman Kelley arrested him on complaint of the proprietor, and at his hearing before City Judge Runyon today, he was given his choice of $2 or ten days. He paid the fine.

PILING UP CITY DEBT ENDANGERS OUR CREDIT

Excessive Bond Issue May Threaten Plainfield's Financial Position Says Authority who Reviews Situation.

(By John B. Dumont.)

The city treasurer's annual report for 1908 gives the bonded debt outstanding at the end of the year as $511,500

Issued during the year 1908:

School bonds, 4½ per cent.	$95,000
Sewer bonds, 4½ per cent.	68,000
Poll or statute bonds, 4½ per cent.	25,500
Fire House bonds, 4½ per cent. ..	15,000
Brick Pavement bonds, 4½ per cent. ..	21,000
Street Macadamizing bonds, 5 per cent.	14,000
	$248,500
Less bonds redeemed ..	9,000
Net increase (equal to 87 per cent.)	239,500

For which bonds (less assessments) will be issued to the extent of $40,000 to $50,000, making the increase of debt for account of year 1908 over 100 per cent.

The city bonds outstanding issued for school buildings, etc., are:

High school 4 per cent., issued 1904 and 1905 .. $135,000

or 45 per cent. of the entire bonded debt.

In addition the Board of Education has outstanding in bonds and mortgages, with interest, from 4 per cent. to 5 per cent., about $34,000. How the school board is asking for $50,000 to build another school building in the West End of the city. This will make three school buildings west of Plainfield avenue for about one-fourth of the population against three school locations for three-fourths of the population (the old church building corner Madison avenue and Fourth street being practically an annex to the school buildings one block away). The High School is not included as it is for the entire city.

The school tax, state, county and city, that is borne by taxpayers with the exception of last year, been more than one-third of the entire tax and has exceeded the tax levy for maintaining the city government, including the fire department. Few, if any, other localities in the State have a heavier school tax than Plainfield and why it is so has yet to be explained.

Last year a tax on railroad property was applied to schools and this reduced the city school tax from 3.5 in 1907 to 1.5 1-3 mills in 1908. Whether this reduction continues this year is not known, but whether it does or not there is no probability that the cost of maintaining the schools will be reduced but must be increased as new buildings are completed and maintained.

Heretofore the bonds issued by the Board of Education have been redeemed, principal and interest, out of monies they received from taxation in the National Guard and that the officers were better acquainted with the details of the general orders than the average. Captain Jordan, of the 12th Infantry, U. S. A., conducted the inspection for the Government, and Col. Boltwood and Col. Robert Patterson, assistant inspector-generals, together with Regimental Adjutant John Rogers and Major W. B. Martin were also present, and they complimented the company.

School bond interest	$7,557.50
School bond redeemed ...	1,000.00
School bond sinking fund.	950.00

This item, if added to city school tax, would have increased same from 1.5 1-2 to 1.9 2-3. In 1909, interest on school bonds will be $2,600 more.

The amount of interest payments last year on bonds and floating debt was about $19,500; this year will be about $25,000. Bond redemption and sinking fund requirements this year will be about $11,000, and will increase each year to about $17,000 in 1912 and remain near that amount for many years, if no additional bonds are issued.

A new feature has been introduced in connection with the issue of Grove avenue school bonds, which by careful examination, does not seem to warrant repetition in future bond issues.

Instead of redeeming each year

P.P.A. SUPPORTS MAYOR

THE MINISTERS ARE ACTIVE.

Heartily co-operating with Mayor Charles J. Fisk in his campaign against plays and moving pictures which may have a bad influence upon the city's morals, R. Henry Depew, as president of the Plainfield Protective Association today endorsed the Mayor's action in appointing a censor committee. "We believe that your censor committee will be of great benefit in preventing exhibitions which may have a bad influence," he writes, "and we will be glad to co-operate whenever our assistance may be of value." In the course of his letter, President Depew states that the association has been making an investigation of the pictures shown in local moving picture houses and writes that while many of the pictures were harmless and amusing, certain of them were such as would exert a bad influence, particularly on young people." The investigation, he states, was brought about because of numerous complaints received by the association.

Local ministers as a body strongly endorse the censorship act of the banker-mayor. It is probable that the Plainfield Ministers' Association will frame an official resolution endorsing the censor committee at its next regular meeting. Speaking of the necessity for the commission, a local clergyman said: "The tendency of the drama today seems to be to show the unpleasant realism of everyday life. The things that we try to forget are now vividly depicted on stage, and dramatists claim it is natural trend in an era of dramatic realism. In "musical comedy" a still greater extreme is reached. I understand, and things have come to such a pass today that a man has to see a play first before he is sure that there is nothing about it which will be offensive to others he may take."

Manager Burnham is stirring things up in New York these days in an effort to raise the dramatic standard of purity. He has branded five shows as "bad." Included in the list is Strauss "Salome" as interpreted at the Metropolitan by Miss Mary Garden.

In this city, as in New York, clergymen are preparing to take up the fight for dramatic purity in their pulpits. The first gun of the crusade was fired by Rev. George A. Warner, who some weeks ago preached a powerful sermon about the standard of dramatic purity shown at some of the local playhouses.

SERVING COFFEE AT AFTERNOON AFFAIRS.

Are we becoming addicted to the coffee habit as well as tea?

The number of alluring coffee sets given as Christmas presents point to the fact that this drink is becoming more fashionable than tea for the afternoon.

This is a German and a Dutch fashion and a palatable one. Americans are coffee drinkers and are quite willing to add another cup to their usual supply. Just how healthful it is is left for the doctors to say.

Certainly afternoon tea is as indigestible a thing as most people can drink. It takes the appetite for dinner and creates as much nervousness as coffee.

The afternoon tea habit, however, has never gotten a strong hold upon any large class of people. Whether the afternoon coffee habit will must be left to the future.

To all men, and to the majority of women, it is a far more palatable and stimulating drink than 5 o'clock tea.

At any rate, girls are serving it in fashionable parlors, people at the restaurants are drinking it, and all sorts of ware is being made up into afternoon coffee sets.

The person who knows good coffee knows too much to make or serve it in anything except earthen or china ware. The metal coffee pot is injurious to the taste, and should be avoided.

N. P. H. S. JUNIORS DANCE COTILLION WITH SENIORS.

A reception was given by the juniors of the North Plainfield High School to the members of the senior class, at Debele Hall, Friday. Stanley Karner and sister, Miss Clara Karner, of Brooklyn, led a cotilion, in which about twenty couples participated. The evening was one of much enjoyment, the amusements varying from games to dancing. Of the school faculty there were present Principal Benjamin K. Phelps and Miss H. T. Stahlberger.

The members of the various committees were: Miss Hendrickson, refreshments; Miss Marjorie Cooley, favors; Allan Overton, decorations; Miss Nettie Steiner, music; on the entertainment committe were Misses Helen George, Nettie Steiner, Marjorie Hart, Marjorie Acker, and Ruth Weinberger, Russell Conroy and Harry Smith.

Duties of Public School Children's Parents

By MISS NOEL BULLOCK, Principal of Public School.

"Perhaps our greatest troubles might be summed up under the following heads: 1st, Lack of Punctuality; 2d, Irregular Attendance; 3d, Continual Leaving of Rooms; 4th, Irregular Eating and Sleeping; 5th, Indifferent Preparation of Home Work; 6th, Too Little Attention Given to Monthly Reports When Sent Home; 7th, Criticism of the Teacher Before Your Children.

"At seems to me, that one of the first principles the school should teach is punctuality in all things. In this strenuous American life of ours, the person who is always a little behind hand will take second place, particularly is this true of the boy. Is not prompt obedience the very keynote in this arch?

"Parents have sometimes said to me, 'My child always minds at home.' I well remember one mother replying, 'I have trained him, and my little small boy who had been giving much trouble by taking his own time, in this particular, why, yes, he minds before I get through with him.' Parents, is not this the trouble? We are trying to do our work with forty other children looking on, until a pupil makes up his mind to do as he is bidden.

"One child lagging behind, when an order is given, takes the time of the whole class, thereby not only injuring himself, by his dilatory habits, but his mates, as well.

"Tardiness, one of the worst forms of this order, does seem avoidable, in most cases, if the proper care is taken at home.

"In the month of January there were 228 cases of tardiness, more than a school, no larger than ours, should have in a whole year, one child being responsible for nine of these, a child, too, from one of our best homes. To me, it is appalling. This would seem like very lax school discipline, but we, as teachers, have done everything in our power in the matter. Can you censure us, for looking to the home for a solution of this difficulty?

"As to irregular attendance, a child even in our baby class cannot be absent a single day, without serious loss.

"The reason why is building the foundation wall of a house, and hurriedly engaging the bricks for work accepted, should be leave out a stone here and there, but this is just what some of our children are doing, in the foundation wall of their educations, by their continual absence, and this is due to many cases, for what seems to us, as teachers, a very trivial excuse.

One great cause of absence is the serious colds taken by children who go frequently come to school without rubbers. It seems to me the mother would save herself much trouble and anxiety, if she would see that her child wears his rubbers in damp weather. This is, by no means, confined to the poorer children.

I remember, in the early days of my teaching, to have received a most impudent note from a mother, telling me she sent her boy to school for me to 'learn him' and it was none of my business what he wore, this, because I had as politely as possible suggested something regarding the health of the little fellow. Is it the teacher's business to look after the child's body, as well as the mind? If in this spirit that I mention rubbers.

"The mother of a little girl said to me recently, 'She is such a little thing, I didn't think she would lose much if she didn't come to school that day.' If you should read the daily program of the teacher of that same 'little thing,' and know that it took at least an hour, every evening, to prepare, you would know that she, at least, missed the 'little thing' would lose much.

"The time of simply hearing recitations by the teacher is passed. Now the faithful teacher has her work for the day, on the board before school time, her program most carefully arranged, that not a moment may be lost. Not only does the child lose the lesson of the day, but his interest in his work wanes; he has lost the connecting link.

"Nor, is the child and the school the only sufferer. For every day a child is absent, the city loses its pro rata from the State funds, as the amount is based on school attendance. Multiply this by 20 or 30, as is the case sometimes Friday afternoons, school time, and for no unknown reason, seems of no account, and the loss is considerable. But this is only one of our schools; multiply this by five, and we have quite a sum of money, too much, surely, to lose for any other cause than absolute necessity.

"Continual leaving of the room. Perhaps nothing interrupts our work more than almost anything else. Allow me to cite one instance, which was forced upon me, a week or two months ago, in the case of a grammar classes. Nothing an unusual disturbance in the halls, I sent to one room and requested the pupils who had left the room in the two hours and three quarters, only, to report at the office. Seventeen answered my summons. In one or two cases this had been necessary, no doubt, but what of the rest? I looked from one child to another and said, 'If you were at a party and ice cream and cake were about to be served, you would all have found it necessary to leave the room, I suppose.' The look on these faces told me plainly enough that it was avoidable in most cases. What would any of you have done, had you been the teacher? How many times is the teacher criticised, and this in the case of the children, because the report comes home, 'The teacher would not let me go out.' Some mothers see to it that the child attends to his physical needs the last thing before going to school, is this not a good way to help the teacher? I took occasion to ask the medical inspector of our school about this matter, and he said any child who could not remain in school three hours needed medical attention. If this is so, what ground should the wise teacher take—what is she warranted in doing, to prevent this loss of time?

"Irregular eating and sleeping. As I speak of irregular eating and sleeping, I hear some of you saying, What business is that of the teacher?

"I grant you, it seems to belong entirely to the province of the home, but when the child in the middle of the morning begins to droop, or complains of headache, and, upon questioning, you find he came to school without any breakfast, or that he had some coffee and bread, if any, the intelligent teacher knows to what to attribute the headache, and this is a very common occurrence.

Again, some children are constantly eating candy, or something that retards digestion, and so affects their ability to apply themselves to their work.

"Now, for the sleeping. As far as my observation goes, it is the exception, rather than the rule, that children sleep enough. The good old rule of going to bed at 8 o'clock under which I was brought up, seems to be today entirely out of fashion.

"Shortly after the Christmas vacation, one teacher after another came to me, saying, 'Miss Bullock, what shall I do, the children are so sleepy and unresponsive, and are utterly inattentive, seeming to have left their brains in their work.' As I had noticed the same trouble in every phase of school activity, I came to the conclusion that there had been much overeating—too many sweets, etc., and far from the usual amount of sleep. I began to make inquiries as to the time of going to bed. In one class, I found five children whose time for retiring, the night before, ranged from 10:30 to a quarter past twelve o'clock. In every case the children above mentioned stood at the foot of the class, it, their school work, and was at any wonder?

"I found one little girl was in the habit of sitting up until 10:30, and I judge going out frequently with her parents to balls, which good, well-meaning parents.

"I am very confident that this lack of proper sleep is one of the most frequent causes of their poor work. Many of our children go, night after night, to the theatre, or to some entertainment, thereby wasting valuable hours which should be spent in sleep.

"Home work is necessary for children when they reach the fourth year—they will have some home work—the preparation of the spelling lesson, which should not only be learned but carefully written, every day.

"On entering the fifth grade, the child should prepare the spelling and geography lessons at home, spending fifteen minutes on the former, and forty-five minutes on the latter subject. Very frequently, children come to school without any preparation of lessons, often without other excuse than 'I went away,' or 'I had company,' or sometimes, 'I don't know.' Now, if the mother would see to it that John, or Mary, had a definite time for this work, and insisted that nothing interfered with this work at this time, what an improvement there would be in our school work.

"At the end of every month a report is sent home as to the standing of each child in our three upper grades. This is to tell you, as parents, whether John is behaving as he should, or is keeping up with his grade. If he has a P on his card, the matter demands your earnest attention. Nor is P in any way satisfactory. In making this estimate, the recitations are not taken into consideration the child's effort, as well as his accomplishment, for what would be good for one child would not be even fair for another child, when the teacher has made little effort. Remember, we must take into consideration every pupils, and not the one. Classes vary much in their ability, the work must be arranged to suit the class in question, consequently our marking must be largely comparisons, one child with another. As these reports come to you, other. As these reports come to you, mation.

"Concerning the last subject of my list, I admit to a certain delicacy of feeling, but so much hard resultant from the practice, I must speak. Parents, do not criticise your child's teacher before him No matter what you may think of her, if you wish your child to be influenced by her, for good, or may say, if you do not wish the year a lost one for your child, do not prejudice him against her by disparaging remarks, for of course, he will think just as father or mother does, regarding her. Teachers are human, like the rest of the world, and are liable to make mistakes. Her work is nerve racking, and nerve wearing, and she is not always at her best, a fact that she deplores quite as much as you can, so forgive her and do not make her work harder, by your criticism of her to your child.

"In closing, may I ask you, in case of misunderstanding, to come and see us, and let us know you and your wishes. Come and see us, if you have no grievance. We will always make you welcome.

"I trust in nothing I have said I have seemed to read you parents a lecture, so to speak. This is, by no means, the spirit in which is has been done, for, right here, let me express to you our keen appreciation of your kindness to, and sympathy with, us and our work, for certainly, our relation as parents and teachers is most enviable.

"In all that I have said, I have simply spoken out of the fulness of my heart, desiring only the best good for the children, which I dearly love, and to which I have given the best years of my mature womanhood."

WANTED TO 'REVENGE MANY, MANY BEATINGS

This is a story of re-revenge, the narration of a united effort on the part of half a dozen local colored men to protect themselves against the marauding expeditions of a burly Irishman, said to be George Allen, the bathplayers, who has been making homes to and from Scotch Plains according to report, and "beats up" a representative or two of the local colored gentry,—just to keep in training trim.

Champion of the avengers was Eugene Britton, who has been making strenuous efforts to follow the straight and narrow way for some time. He yielded his good behavior laurels, which he has worn steadily since he was freed from the Rahway reformatory last July, Friday night, when roused by the stories of oppression, he hired a revolver and set out to wipe the "Plains scrapper from the squared circle once and for all. He secured the revolver from a man named Davis, who is employed by the P. R. C. and paid $1.75 for the use of the gun. He had fortified himself against attack and loss of nerve by a complete lining of booze, and he mistook Arthur Chandler, a Fanwood colored man whom he met on Front stret, for the scrapper from the Plains. Forde got the jump into the muzzle of the revolver, Chandler howled for mercy, and when Britton recognized him, the weapon was lowered. But Chandler thought that the combination of Gene, the gun and the liquor might mean trouble, so the tipped off Roundsman Nolan about his narrow escape.

Officers Higgins and Vandrewg were put on the case and located Britton in a Watchung avenue poolroom. There him at the time was Chandler, and two other colored men, named Fields and McNeil. The revolver was nowhere to be seen. The four were arrested and later the gun was turned over to the police by the proprietor of the place.

At the hearing the facts which afterwards developed, were cleverly distorted by one of the quartet, called "Happy," and it remained for Britton himself to tell the straight story of the affair at the hearing before Judge Runyon. He explained that his net lives in fear of the big Irishman from the 'Plains, who is said to "too handy with his fists." Britton told the court that he hired the revolver because he was going to a ball in Jersey City. But when he found that this was looked upon with suspicion by Judge Runyon, he came out with the facts. He had passed it to a friend to hide in the poolroom. Britton, whose aunt was in court for the hearing, told the judge that he wanted another chance to make good, and promised to keep clear of booze, saloons and fasks. His earnestness in the matter could not be doubted, and as has made a hard struggle to be good, the judge freed him unpunished, along with the others.

FOWLER PLANS FOR A TARIFF COMMISSION

Representative Fowler, of this district, has reintroduced at Washington his bill providing for the appointment of a tariff commission, which he first introduced on December 9, 1908. The modified bill as now introduced, makes these changes from the first bill:

The membership of the commission is increased from seven, as in the original bill, to fifteen.

The term of the commissioners is lengthened from fourteen years to fifteen years.

The salary of the commissioners is increased from $7,500 to $10,000 per year.

The salaries of the secretaries provided for the several commissioners are increased from $1,200 to $1,800 a year.

A few other minor changes are made.

The Senate has passed House bills to increase to $24 per month each the pensions of John Fothergill, of Perth Amboy, and J. M. Wood, of Spring Lake, and for an original pension of $12 to Lydia A. Hankins, of New Egypt.

Representative Powell has been notified of the allowance of pensions at the rate of $15 a month each to James Miller, of Keyport, and John Cards, of New Brunswick; at $12 to Mrs. Elizabeth Wylie, of Woodbridge, and at $10 to William Jackson, of Long Branch.

Senator Kean has filed a petition of the Reformed church of Ridgewood, in favor of the passage of the temperance bills now pending in the Senate and House of Representatives. He has also filed a protest from Dilston Lodge, No. 107, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Jersey City, against a permanent tariff commission.

M'INTYRE SOLOISTS CHARMED BIG AUDIENCE

The last of the series of the McIntyre Chamber Music Concerts, completing the fourth season, attracted a capacity audience to the Hartridge Auditorium, Thursday night. Like the previous concerts it was a distinct triumph for Mr. McIntyre and fully sustained the envious reputation of the famous trio, which includes Vladimir Dubinsky, violinist, and Hans Letz, violinist. Owing to the sudden illness of Miss Josephine Swickard, the assisting artist, Hans Letz, substituted, rendering a charming violin selection.

Nothing but genuine praise was heard of the choice program and the work of the trio. A noteworthy feature was the fact that Mr. McIntyre appeared as the soloist and the audience thoroughly appreciated this. His rendition of "Die Lorelei," by Liszt, and Chopin's "Polonaise," were executed in a brilliant manner that aroused the audience to the greatest enthusiasm.

Other features of the program were the 'cello solos by Vladimir Dubinsky and violin solo by Mr. Letz. They are both favorites here and their work at this concert were superb and true to every line. Mr. Dubinsky graciously responded to an encore after two numbers, his selection being a gem. This was the first opportunity to hear Mr. Letz in solo work and there was nothing to be desired in his work. Despite continued applause he could not be persuaded to give an encore.

Of the numbers he cannot be given of the work of trio. The first number was "Trio in F major, op. 18," by Saint-Saens, and the four movements gave ample opportunity to display the rare musical ability of the artists. The entire program was concluded with another selection, "Serenade," by the same composer. Neither one of these numbers have been heard recently and the delightful harmony appealed strongly to the audience to the program.

"Trio in F major, op. 18," allegro vivace, andante, scherzo, allegro, Saint-Saens; piano, violin and 'cello; piano solo, "Die Lorelei," Liszt, Mr. McIntyre; 'cello solos, "Andante," Golterman; "L'Arlequin," Popper, Mr. Dubinsky; violin solo, "Ballade ey Polonaise," Vieuxtemps, Mr. Letz; "Serenade," Saint-Saens, piano, violin and 'cello.

RECTOR WARNER TALKS ON ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Under the auspices of the Men's Club of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, an interesting social meeting was held at the parish house, Friday night, the feature of which was an address by Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross on "Lincoln." He alluded for about twenty minutes relating several anecdotes concerning Lincoln which revealed the true greatness of the man.

Following the address, H. W. Rankin, of this city, gave a clever sleight-of-hand performance lasting about an hour. He introduced a number of new tricks which completely mystified the audience. This concluded the entertainment and then a social hour was enjoyed, during which cigars, pipes and tobacco were passed and refreshments were served.

There were fifty-five members present at the meeting and four new ones were elected, making the total membership 71. The affair was in charge of the house and entertainment committees. A new committee to be known as the board of governors was appointed as follows: Rev. Charles Townsend, rector, W. W. Moore, E. E. Brown, J. M. Hall, George T. Caskey, T. Henry Moore, H. W. Leek, Juan A. Babcock, W. J. Ochiltree, J. S. Forster, Charles C. Graves.

PRESBYTERIAN MEN DINE

S. W. DUNNING TOASTMASTER.

Sixty Members of First Presbyterian Church Hear Some Instructive and Inspiring Speakers.

One of the most successful Lincoln's birthday celebrations held was the banquet given by the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church, Friday. More than sixty men gathered to enjoy a fine course dinner which was served by the women of the church. After the repast, two excellent speeches were heard, one by Rev. Perry Bascom, pastor of the M. E. church Bound Brook, and the other by former Judge Adrain Lyon, of Perth Amboy. S. W. Dunning, as president of the club, was the toastmaster.

In speaking of Lincoln, Mr. Bascom said that he was the greatest American of them all and he then read a beautiful poem written by Eliza Cook dedicated to Washington, but he substituted the name of Lincoln, which was most fitting. Mr. Bascom said that when he was asked to speak at the banquet he began to wonder why he should speak on Lincoln, the reasons he mentioned were that he was born of Puritan stock, of the tribe of Illinois, an American of the Americans, born of old line Whig, baptized a "Black Republican" and is an ardent admirer of Lincoln.

The speaker said that he was born on the spot where Lincoln drove a yoke of oxen. He recalled the campaign of 1860 and the famous barbecue which was held near his home, when Lincoln was the central figure. Mr. Bascom then referred to some of the characteristics of Lincoln. He said that he earned his first dollar at the age of nineteen years and when he died was reputed to be worth $20,000. He went to school only one year in his life, but was considered one of the best educated men of the nineteenth century. He said that Lincoln was not spoiled in the making. Among some of the books that he read constantly were the Bible, Shakespeare, Burns, Pilgrim's Progress," and was a student of Henry Clay. He possessed wonderful will power and it had been said that during the twenty years he practised law in Illinois he had more than one hundred cases in the Supreme Court. He characterized Lincoln as a genuine thinker and he believed that if he had lived another decade would have been leading the temperance movement for the abolition of the rum traffic.

Mr. Bascom concluded his remarks by saying that Lincoln was honest because it was right and not because it was the best policy and that it is the little things in life that show which way the wind blows.

Former Judge Adrain Lyon, of Perth Amboy, was then introduced, and his address was chiefly confined to relating noteworthy incidents in the life of Lincoln. He said that he would not speak of his personal experience, because he was too young, neither would he relate any new stories, because he was too old and he would not deliver any spread eagle oration. He dwelt briefly concerning the way Lincoln had handled and solved the negro question, of his great sorrow and the fact that he possessed great common sense. He said that Lincoln's angularity and singularity have been characterized as two of his most peculiar traits. Judge Lyon was a finished speaker and his remarks were listened to with great interest. Both speakers were heartily applauded.

MOUNTING PHOTOGRAPHS.

It is quite the fashion to lightly touch the corners of a good photograph with thin mucilage and attach it to a wide sheet of brown pasteboard. Often the edges of the latter have a selvedge painted in black. Egyptian red, cobalt blue or peacock green. This gives effect and character to the background, and is often far more artistic than a frame.

There are also seals now used to attach the photograph to its wide background, but these I does not know of this method, and it should be passed on, as it is exceedingly pretty.

Any of the well-colored sealing-wax sticks are used. If there is a painted border around the edge of the board, heat the wax and melt it. The work is done in the ordinary way, just as one seals a letter; a generous proportion of the wax is used in the corner. The seal is the head of Herman, a double circle, a crest, sometimes a flag, says the Philadelphia Ledger.

If one hasn't any of these seals, and doesn't want to buy one, it is really quite as pretty to use the sealing-wax unadorned.

OVATION BY THE NEGROES.

Plainfielder Was One of Lincoln's Escort When He Visited Army of the James.

J. W. Coddington, of Watchung avenue, who was a member of the First New York Mounted Rifles during the Civil War, remembers Abraham Lincoln personally on the occasion of the President's visit to the army of the James during the winter of 1864, when he was a courier at the headquarters of General Butler. To him the celebration of the Lincoln centenary at the First Baptist church last Friday was of especial interest, for his meeting with President Lincoln is an incident of his career as a soldier that he always looks back upon with pleasure.

The President was accompanied by his cabinet officers on the occasion of his visit to the Army of the James. The party started from Washington, going down the Potomac and up the James by steamer to Aken's Landing. In the party with Lincoln were Secretaries Seward and Stanton, Assistant Secretary Fred Seward "Bull Run" Russell, the Englishman.

"I'll never forget how he looked that day at the landing," said Mr. Coddington to a Daily Press reporter. "He was tall and awkward in that party of officers, and he wore that "Lincoln stovepipe hat," which we see in so many pictures of him.

"I was with a party of cavalrymen who were to act as his escort along the lines. There were about a dozen of us, and we each had a "dead horse," so that the President's party could mount at the landing. I remember Mr. Lincoln walked around among the horses and finally picked out the shortest horse in the lot. Why, the horse was just a little bit of an animal. Somebody in the party asked him about his selection. "I want to ride this one,' he said, 'because if -I get dumped, I won't have so far to fall.' He wasn't much of a horseman, you know.

"Well, the party of us started out for the army's lines, and Mr. Lincoln's selection of that little horse made him look all the more awkward. Why, his feet almost touched the ground, and that stove pipe hat looked about twice as tall.

"Somehow or other, word got to the colored regiments of the army that the President was coming along the line, and they were all ready for him when he rode by. They gave him a great big reception of cheering; lots of them fell down on their knees and all waved their arms and shouted 'Dar come de Liberator!' and 'God bress de Liberator!' They gave Lincoln a most uproarious welcome and acted like the craziest lot of darkies I've ever seen.

"We rode with the President and his party all along the line of the Army of the James—clear to Petersburg. Then we came back and left him at the landing at City Point, where the boat had come down to meet the party."

FUNERAL SERVICES OF JOHN HOWARD LEGGETT

The funeral service of John Howard Leggett was held from the late home, 250 Western avenue, Morristown, Thursday afternoon. There was a large display of floral tributes from friends and relatives. Rev. R. B. Urmy, pastor of the M. E. church at Morristown, of which Mr. Leggett was a member, spoke words of comfort from God's word and offered a fervent prayer. His remarks were eulogistic of Mr. Leggett and his long patient suffering.

During the service, Dr. R. V. D. Totten, of Morristown, tenderly sang "Nearer My God to Thee," and "Abide with Me." The interment was in Evergreen Cemetery, Morristown, yesterday morning and Rev. Mr. Tyler, pastor of the Church of Our Redeemer, Episcopal, assisted Rev. Mr. Urmy with the service at the grave. The pall-bearers, selected by Mr. Leggett before his death, were G. R. N. Crater, Dr. R. V. D. Totten, V. P. J. Christofferson and Edgar Couenhoven.

"Little Farm That Raised a Man"

Memorial Museum Marks the Kentucky Birthplace of the Martyr President—The Old Log Cabin Restored of

By James A. Edgerton

Copyright, 1909, by the American Press Association

THE little rocky farm that Thomas Lincoln was too poor to pay for has now become the property of the lovers of his son. When the new arrival reached the Lincoln cabin on Feb. 12, 1809, the last dream that could have entered the mind of the father was one comprehending the glory that had thus come to these barren acres. What shall the new born when the Master moves it, or what can it know of the result of the move? Most parents think their sons may become president, except those whose sons actually do become president. They are frequently so poor they think the wind is just as well that we cannot. When we plant an acorn we know an oak will grow, and when we sow corn or wheat we can foretell what the crop will be. But when a man-child enters the world we know naught as to the harvest, whether it is to be of shame or of glory. There are no signs to tell of the coming of genius. The deity that presides at the birth of great souls may miss all the homes of wealth and culture to light at a stable or a cabin in the wilderness. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and none can tell where the spirit will carry the germs of God's purposes.

Lincoln was born on the very outer rim of civilization, yet the spot is now near the center of population of the United States. That shows how far each century goes ahead to pitch its tents; 1809 stopped with Kentucky, and 1909 has moved on to Manila; 2009 may go around the world and come back to Kentucky again. Who knows?

There is little to that Kentucky farm except the fact that Lincoln was born there. It is not much for crops or scenery. There is a rock spring on it and a creek. The muse of history has very little eye either for fertile soil or landscape effects. Battles are usually fought among most unlivating surroundings, and the immortals are liable to be born almost anywhere except where we would expect them to be born. If we were choosing a spot for one of the great ones to come into the world we would seek all the modern conveniences and a combination of seashore and mountain to furnish inspiration. That merely proves that we know how to raise crops and blooded stock, but we do not know how to raise great men. This is a branch of gardening that God does not leave to ianglers. Hothouse methods may be all right for forcing plants, but they are a failure for forcing genius.

The preservation of this shrine to the memory of Lincoln was made possible by the generosity of Robert J. Collier of Collier's Weekly. There were several enterprising gentlemen who desired possession of the farm for advertising purposes, and had it not been for Mr. Collier one of them probably would have succeeded in his shameless design. Among the bidders was a liquor firm that had already prepared posters announcing "Lincoln Birthplace Whisky." The agents of this firm imbibed too freely of their own wares, which permitted Mr. Collier's representative to steal a march on them and bid in the place before they arrived on the scene, for it is a sad and humiliating fact that the farm on which our greatest president was born was allowed to be sold for taxes. This, coupled with the further reflection that but for the interest and patriotism shown by one man this priceless shrine would have been used for selfish and base purposes, should make the American people feel quite proud. When it was too late there would doubtless have been raised a great cry of indignation which would have increased in pitch as the centenary of Mr. Lincoln's birth approached. We are saved from this humiliation by the thoughtfulness of one man—rather of two, for Rev. Joakin Lloyd Jones has advocated buying the shrine before Mr. Collier took the matter up. Two men out of over 80,000,000! It is so God finds his agents, even though men are blind.

The birthplace farm is not the only Lincoln shrine saved from a degrading use. There is the cabin in New Salem in which Lincoln lived and had his store, together with the ground on which the historic village stood, was purchased by Mr. William Randolph Hearst and made a present to the Old Salem Chautauqua, the second largest Chautauqua in America, the whisky firm was also bidding for this to advertise some of its wares. It would seem that the whisky men appreciate the great liberator, whatever may be said for the rest of us.

It is a romantic fact that the only building left of the New Salem in which Mr. Lincoln spent his young manhood is that which he himself occupied. All the rest of the town has disappeared like a dream village, as though with his departure it had performed its function and gone back to the elements, leaving only his cabin as a memento.

At the time Mr. Collier bought "the little farm that raised a man" the historic rock spring from which it took its name had degenerated into a hog wallow, while the cabin in which Lincoln was born had been taken north for show purposes and was housed in a Long Island basement. This was rescued from the blight of commercialism, like the farm, and sent back from its wanderings to rest in honor in its own place. The journey to Kentucky was one of triumph. The little one room log cabin was escorted to its destination in greater state than most kings and conquerors. The railroads carried it free; the Wanamaker store in New York decorated the car; the governor of Kentucky detailed an officer and four militiamen to escort the old logs through with safety; Mayor Weaver of *Philadelphia received it with hon-*ors; Baltimore, through which Lincoln had to pass in secret to keep from being assassinated, greeted the cabin that gave him birth with speeches of welcome; at Altoona the school children decked *the car with flowers; a*t Pittsburg the Grand Army took it in charge; at Columbus the mayor and superintendent of schools made stirring addresses; at Indianapolis appropriate exercises were held, and at Louisville former Vice President Stevenson spoke for the state of Illinois and Henry Watterson for the state of Kentucky. One of the striking utterances of Colonel Watterson, who was introduced as "the greatest living student of the life of Lincoln," is worthy of reproduction. Of Lincoln the orator said:

He was inspired of God, for nowhere else could he have acquired that wisdom and virtue. Where did Shakespeare get his genius, Mozart his music? Who wrote the lyric of the Scotch peasant? As God raised up and inspired them, so did he Lincoln. When a thousand years hence, the truth of history shall have left no room to doubt, no drama will be followed with deeper feeling than that which tells the story of his life and death. God laid his hands upon these rough hewn logs and they brought forth a nation's hero.

Thus the plain Kentucky cabin, the humblest birthplace of a great soul since the manger of Nazareth, returned to its home to grace the centennial of that advent which had come to earth through its door. Both the farm and the house were turned over by Mr. Collier to an association headed by Joseph W. Folk of Missouri and having on its board of trustees such representative men and women as Henry Watterson, Cardinal Gibbons, William H. Taft, Ida M. Tarbell, Jenkin Lloyd Jones, Charles A. Towne, Mark Twain and Albert Shaw. The fund for the work was made a common people's offering, and tens of thousands of school children members and gave each his mite to honor the man who in his origin, words and constant attitude had so signally honored them.

On the farm the little cabin has been placed at the exact spot where it before stood and has been surrounded by a strong and simple edifice, in which it forms the sole exhibit. This building, with its Greek columns, stands upon a hill and is approached by a broad sweep of steps leading from a grove, from which also descends the path to the old spring. The remainder of the farm has been left as before, even to a gnarled apple tree said to be the last of Tom Lincoln's orchard.

How fortunate it would be if with this revival of interest in the spot that gave Abraham Lincoln birth we could have a like revival of interest in his spirit, his ideals and his aims! He was not alone a man for one crisis, but for all. His fidelity to the basic good, his refusal to permit private considerations to stand in the way of duty and principle, his tender solicitude for the poor and humble and his placing of man above wealth, of humanity above things and of equality and rights above institutions, his faith in the masses, his devotion to the doctrine of equality and of the rule of the majority—all of these things are needed now and ever in the republic. What a splendid opportunity this centenary presents to study Lincoln's spirit, the finer most of the man that gives him his hold on the people of his age and all ages!

While associations are making beautiful memorials of the material spots that knew him and are arranging programs to act as the machinery of praise, the form and shell that carry the substance and life, why should not the millions of men and women who love Lincoln devote their leisure to a study of his life and utterances and an attempt to define the genius that animated them? Then why not crown all by a resolve to give to the affairs of the nation the same unselfish devotion, the same high regard for truth, for some love of the rights of man, the same spirit of righteousness, the same hatred of tyranny, fraud and sham and the same faith in God and the common people that he gave in such full measure, even to the sacri*fice of life itself?*

If this centenary, this dedication of the birthplace farm, this worldwide ceremony in his praise, could beget a spirit like that it would be of untold benefit to the nation and to the race. Could this people once truly comprehend Lincoln and follow the lines he marked out, they would make of this such a republic as has never been known in the ages of time. We have never had a democracy as yet. *We have never learned in a gov-*ernment the principles of the Golden Rule and the sermon on the mount.

The Lincoln Centenary

The Nation's Tribute to "a Great White Soul," a "Humanized Interpretation of the Golden Rule"

By James A. Edgerton

THE hour when a great white soul comes to earth should be held in perpetual memory. The soil his foot first presses is hallowed ground. Time and place are never so sacred as when they mark the advent of those sent of God to help men. They form the links that bind heaven and earth. They lend an added luster to every time and every place. Just as one who wears the human form worthily confers nobility on all of the sons of men.

Abraham Lincoln made every one in human guise more precious. He reminds us of our better selves. He was a symbol of the homeliest and commonest, yet of the highest and rarest human things. We cannot think of him without becoming more loving, more charitable and more true. There is not an element in him that does not make one better to contemplate. The pure in heart can read all of his life without a blush, and the gentlest and most timid can view his every deed without a shudder. Lincoln had goodness without self righteousness, spirituality without cant, intellectuality without dogmatism and power without tyranny. He had most of the talents with none of their abuses. There are many great men we can admire and respect, but Lincoln we can love.

He was born a hundred years ago this year. It is fitting, therefore, that the land for which he lived and died should honor the event as it has honored but one other of its sons. We have not enough of the supreme souls that we can spare the example of one. It is not for their sake that we canonize them, but for the sake of all the rest. They do not need our praise, but we need their stimulus. By uplifting them we uplift ourselves. They act as spiritual magnets to draw us to their height. By contemplating them we unconsciously grow like them. No one can measure the moral force of one Lincoln centenary.

All men are in substantial agreement as to their verdict concerning him. The only difference is in the degree of their praise. There is no sectionalism in his appreciation. The south could not spare his gentle memory more than the north. Never was a victor less like a conqueror. It is as impossible to feel resentment toward him as toward a dead father.

We grow like what we love. It is this fact which lends such a beautiful significance to the universal regard for Lincoln, that makes so inspiring *the widespread celebration of the cen-*tenary of his birth. A nation which builds itself around such an ideal will not only have a "new birth of freedom," but will have a new birth of peace, of manhood and of nobility that will place it in the forefront of the nations of all time.

It will be an inspiring spectacle when at the sunrise on Feb. 12 assemblies in all parts of the nation turn their faces toward the tomb at Springfield. It may well be that this ceremony will become worldwide and that Americans in all parts of the earth will join the celebrators at Springfield in repeating certain of Mr. Lincoln's utterances with their faces toward his place of rest. Among the eminent Illinoisans who form the local committee of the Lincoln centennial association are such distinguished men as former Vice President Adlai E. Stevenson, Chief Justice Fuller of the United States supreme court, Senators Cullom and Hopkins, Speaker Cannon, Governor Deneen, General Manager Melville E. Stone of the Associated Press and other citizens who knew just where Lincoln was born. Thus the thing could be demonstrated beyond cavil, nailed down and established for the ages. This saves posterity a lot of unnecessary speculation, investigation and trouble. Suppose these stories had been sprung after everybody that knew Lincoln was dead. All this inaccuracy might have trickled its way down through the centuries. A very large portion of ancient history belongs in the fiction department of our libraries.

We are fortunate in another respect. Many of those who have written lives of Mr. Lincoln associated with him daily. He was great enough to seem great to his secretaries and partners. He towered head and shoulders in the war department, the attendants about the White House, the common soldiers who saw their commander in chief, all had some sort of inner prompting that this was not just an ordinary president but one of the rare sort of man that would interest the twenty-second century. So they made mental notes and printed them. The world has grown in 2,000 years so that now a prophet has honor in his own country and among those of his own household. They may not see all of his greatness, but if they even measure some angles of it these furnish a basis for future computations.

If Lincoln had lived back in the days of Pericles or Augustus I have often imagined that he would be a myth. His farm would have made of him. At a little earlier period, back in that enchanting but uncertain dawn of history before the shadows had quite lifted, men would have created of him another one of those delightful old pagan demigods that strangled dragons with their naked hands. But we have not so much to crow over, for they almost did that with Washington in our own day.

Let us beware of putting Lincoln on a pedestal. It is the sweet and everyday humanity of the man that is his chief charm. It is easy to marvel at a higher order of beings, but hard to love them. Lincoln is close enough to us to love, and we must keep him so. *There are enough little tin de-*ities, but we need this man for our common humanity. He is too big, too warm and too precious to set him out of reach. They have robbed us of most of our heroes by making them unhuman and impossible, but they shall not do it with Lincoln. He belongs to our man and woman world, and we are going to keep him for our own. The far shining greatness of his soul makes his gnarled hands and wrinkled face all the more precious to us. Let us have all the centenaries of him that the passage of the years will permit, let us have libraries full of books about him, but never let him be removed from the plain people that he loved and that loved him. Almost anybody can be an aristocrat, but it takes one of God's own great, tender men to be a perfect democrat. It is this quality that makes Lincoln so alive in the hearts of the millions, and the man that rules him off even a part of it will in that far do him to death. Make the birthplace farm as splendid a park as you like, but keep the little old one room cabin on it as a reminder. Retain enough of the hardships to show what he overcame. We who have to carve our way in the world, who have to cling to principles and choose right from wrong, who have to pass by temptation and who have to keep our hearts sweet through trials need all that the example of Lincoln can help us on. The man who robs us of even the humblest part of that inspiring story is a fiend neither to Lincoln nor to us. We want to feel that he was such a man as we are, or at least that we are such men as he was. He was our big brother, and we see the way he did things and then know better how we may do them. He was great not because remote, but because so close. He was so common he became the most uncommon man in his time. He was so human he grew almost divine. He was so meek he seems a king of men. He was so poor he has all the riches of our love.

It is not strange that whose centenary we celebrate. There is scarcely one in all the broad land who will not participate in word or deed or thought. There are no classes in the appreciation of Lincoln. Labor loves him because he was a friend of labor and himself toiled with his hands. The black man loves him for freedom. The north loves him as a leader, the south as a native son and a true friend. Culture appreciates him for his great intellect, his literary quality and his high ideal. The common people cherish him as their own child. The nation reverences him as its preserver. The whole race of man prizes him for his large heart and his loving kindness. He was a humanized interpretation of the Golden Rule, an incarnation of the sermon on the mount.

of misinformation we are in concerning Washington, in whose case we have to depend on the Sparkses and Weemses for some historical fairy tales.

Lincoln has not entirely escaped from these romancers even as it is, but they started their fiction factories so soon that it has been possible to overtake and brand most of the output. For example, there were a lot of the oldest inhabitants in several southern states who knew all of their sounden duty to reflect on his paternity. All of these stories have been traced to their origin, proved to be erroneous and branded. Then somebody came to the surface who said he had heard somebody else say that he heard somebody else say that Mr. Lincoln was not born on the birthplace farm, but in an entirely different part of Kentucky. He made some sort of affidavit on the ground of this hearsay testimony. Now, it is fortunate that this happened while there were reliable, truth loving people on earth who knew just where Lincoln was born. Thus the thing could be demonstrated beyond cavil, nailed down and established for the ages. This saves posterity a lot of unnecessary speculation, investigation and trouble. Suppose these stories had been sprung after everybody that knew Lincoln was dead. All this inaccuracy might have trickled its way down through the centuries. BUY PROPERTY TO PROTECT INTERESTS

The sale of the property of the late Dr. J. B. Probasco on East Front street, adjoining that of the Y. M. C. A., as well as that of the Woodbull & Martin building, is one of importance to the business interests of the city, particularly that in the immediate vicinity. The new owners of the property are Messrs. Woodhull and Martin. This frontage of about 85 feet is the last of unimproved property on that side of Front street between Grove street and Watchung avenue.

Numerous real estate owners and brokers have had this property under consideration, but it remained for the former dry goods merchants to obtain this valuable piece of property. It has exceptional depth and the dwelling-house thereon while old-fashioned, is in an excellent state of preservation.

When interviewed by a reporter for The Daily Press, Mr. Woodhull declined to say what the plans of the firm are, but he said that it was thought best to secure the property as a protection to one of the main business thoroughfares of the city as well as their own property from any more one-story skyscrapers.

WORST OF ALL SINS, NEGLECT OF RELIGION

Don O. Shelton, in his sermon at the First Presbyterian church Sunday declared that the worst sin possible to commit is neglect of religion. His address to men at the Y. M. C. A., in the afternoon was equally as inspiring. He said in part:

"The scripture texts are like bugle calls summoning christians to duty. The command is not to be content with attending meetings in churches; the men on street corners are to be reached. Disciples were not told to build synagogues to tell all who might come there to hear, but to go out and preach to the multitudes.

"Wages of sin is death. If we believe it make it known by action as well as by words. Sin is the voluntary breaking of God's laws, and the one killing sin is neglect of or rejection of Jesus Christ. It is the worst sin possible to commit, and makes possible all the long catalogue of sins.

"The wages of sin is death to conscience. When conscience begins to decay the character and reputation deteriorate and when reputation goes things are dark. Sin is also death to property. The sinner eventually suffers in outward circumstances of life. Then again, sin is death to happiness. When all the other forces of sin are at work in him it isn't long until his happiness goes, and leads ultimately to the death of the soul.

"The main thing is to get the spirit of God in the heart so the spirit can work on the soul." The speaker made an earnest plea for more Bible reading at the homes, with family prayers.

The public censors appointed by Mayor Fisk to prevent the production of immoral theatrical productions and moving picture shows held a meeting at police headquarters on Saturday night and effected an organization. William C. Kinney was chosen president and Frederick W. Butler secretary. The other members of the commission are Henry L. Hall, Lewis G. Timpson and Howard W. Beebe.

On Saturday night, Mayor Fisk in company with Detective Sergeant John Flynn made the rounds of the amusement houses. Afterwards the Mayor said that he was much pleased with the way the show houses were conducted.

REV. DR. JOHN D. HALL TO ADDRESS MEN'S CLUB.

Rev. Dr. John D. Hall, known to fame as "the human auctioneer" and to Brooklyn as the pastor of the Parkside Church, in that borough, will shortly make his appearance here. Under the auspices of the Men's Club of the Church of the Heavenly Rest the clergyman will make an address at the Evona edifice on Thursday night, February 25. His subject will be "The Economic Gospel of Jesus."

At Dr. Hall's church on Sunday, there was an auction of men who were willing to work for anyone who would give them board, shelter and clothing as compensation for their hire.

ULTIMATUM OF REGULARS

WARD NAME ITS CANDIDATE.

"Hands Off" Say Representative Republicans of the Other Three Wards at Conference.

The Republican organization leaders have placed themselves on record as strongly opposed to the attempt to dictate to the Second ward a choice of candidates for the Councilmanic vacancy in that bailiwick. The deadlock in the Common Council has been attributed by some to the alleged machinations of the "regulars" and to formally repudiate any hand in the affair they gathered together in secret and solemn conclave. Time and place unimportant, but be it said that they told Councilman Francis L. Montgomery, on of their number, who represents the Second ward, that "it was clearly *up to him and his colleagues, Coun*cilman Frank Holt, a New-Idea man, to agree upon a successor to Robert E. Hall, who has resigned.

Several of the city fathers took part in the pow-wow. Among them were City Attorney Glen Tobey, Buxton and Montgomery. Factory Inspector Andrew McCardell was the most outspoken in his views. "I believe in home rule," said he, "and I know I wouldn't like it if any man or bunch of men came into our ward and told the people who they should have for their councilman. And I don't see what right anyone has to dictate to the people in the Second ward. Former Mayor James Buckle echoed these sentiments as did those "too numerous to mention."

Those participating in the caucus were mostly from the First and Fourth wards, strong organization bailiwicks.

SWEETHEARTS CANDY BUT PLEASED GIRLS

Half a hundred girls paid homage to St. Valentine at the Y. W. C. A., Saturday night, and, though no men were present, every young woman became sweet as candy. The simple little candy hearts were chased to their hiding places and brought forth to be gobbled up.

Matching broken hearts was a favorite pastime with a segregated group of blue-eyed maidens and brown eyes were in another room following the threads of a cobweb down their mysterious lengths, to be rewarded at the end by a beautiful valentine.

The party was given by the membership committee and was one of the most enjoyable ever held in the big association building on Front street. Those in charge of the arrangements were Misses Ethel Prior, Mabel Grant and Marion Brown.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS.

At the Academy of Music, Fourteenth street and Irving place, New York, on March 1, David Belasco will present his new star, David Warfield, in his notable success of last season, "A Grand Army Man." This is the strong American drama which David Belasco selected for Mr. Warfield when he opened his new Stuyvesant theatre, New York, and there is was the reigning success of the entire New York season. The new drama is the joint work of David Belasco, Pauline Phelps and Marion Short, and depicts the rustic's world in a small town in Indiana in the early 60's. The time is quite as tender as that of "The Music Master," in which Mr. Warfield is now having a remarkably successful engagement at the Academy. In "A Grand Army Man" the eminent actor's role differs widely from any other he has ever played, and in it, the critics agree that he has reached the greatest artistic heights of his very artistic career.

Old Manuscript at Rutgers.

A very old and valuable manuscript has been received at the Rutgers College library. It is the copy of the address delivered at the commencement of Queens College, now Rutgers, by Rev. Dr. H. H. Livingston, then president of the college, September 25, 1810. It was presented by George Zabriskie, of New York. Dr. Livingston gave the manuscript to Mr. Zabriskie's grandfather, Cornelius Scott Blauvelt. He was a member of the class of 1810. This was Dr. Livingston's inaugural address, and the presentation of this manuscript copy falls on the centennial year of the building of Queens, and lacks but one year of being the centennial of the address itself.

WIFE WON'T LET MARSH GO HOME TO MOTHER

William Marsh, beefy, deliberating and hen-pecked, he says, and his wife, the head of the house, practical and much maligned—he says, aired family troubles at great length before Judge Runyon at the session in court Monday. William had taken "one whiskey" before coming to court, and could pass out but a feeble defense to his wife's charges of habitual drunkenness and brutality.

Seven years have passed since the colored couple wed, and although Mrs. Marsh addressed her betterhalf as "Dearie" and told the judge she loved him. She says his behavior is "unbearable." William, whining and slow, urged the Judge to let him go home to his mother, declaring that his wife makes it too hot for him. Mrs. Marsh was out for money, declaring that her husband, who runs a boot-black stands, drinks up his income. She urged Judge Runyon to demand from William the payment of $6 a week for her support, for seven years. Visibly effected, the husband could only drawl out: "Oh, Heavens!" and Judge Runyon hastened to assure the woman that such a ruling would beyond his jurisdiction.

The main cause of the couple's appearance at police court was the meeting of the two in their home on Plainfield avenue on the night of Lincoln's Birthday, when William is alleged to have come home drunk. On this occasion, he demanded chopped beef, for which he confesses an especial craving. Information that there was none, given by his spouse, made him profane and abusive, according to her story, but he said that when he sought to crave his gastric gnawings by frying some potatoes, she struck him with a fist, and passed out a few epithets her self.

William told the Judge that his neighbors all pity him, and affirms that there is no woman who can "tear more clothes off a feller" than his wife, rehearsing an incident to sustain this statement. His voice choked as he urged the Judge to let him go home to the house and get his clothes that he might go home to his aged mother and live in peace. His wife refuses to give him up. She declares that she loves him still and can be happy with him if he will give up drink. "One" is whisky, which William confessed to queered his allegations with the court, but as Judge Runyon is desirous of bringing about a reconciliation if possible, he adjourned the case for a week, to give the man chance to dry out. By the way, William swore off drinking forever

Active, vigorous, hale and hearty is the good fortune of James Jacques, of Stirling, better known as "Grandpa Jacques," who Saturday celebrated his eighty-second birthday at his home. Despite his advanced years Mr. Jacques is a daily commuter to New York.

Mrs. Jacques, who is also well advanced in years, made all the preparations for the celebration, at which the aged couples' three daughters, Mrs. William Pennimer, of Stirling; Mrs. Alonzo Vail, of Rochester, and Mrs. Walter Blagbro, of Orange, gathered.

Mr. Jacques, who was born in England, is the oldest charter member of Clinton Lodge, F. and A. M., of Brooklyn. He served two years in the Crimean War and also in the Indian mutiny, and though he was in many engagements, never received a wound.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacques, who have made their home in Stirling for the past thirty-five years, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary four years ago.

Women to Discuss Charity.

All sorts of penal and charitable subjects will be discussed. A tuberculosis exhibition will be one of the features of the conference, which will be held in the State House.

Will Secure Horse Ambulance.

Encouraging reports are being received in the Plainfield Branch of the S. P. C. A. regarding the subscriptions for the horse ambulance which the society hopes to have in the near future. Special Agent Mrs. Van Hoosen, of Fanwood, is doing excellent work in that place and vicinity in looking after horses and other animals.

Poisoned by Raw Oysters.

Miss Elizabeth Van Sant, John Ungrady and Frederick Iseaman, all of South Trenton, have just recovered from serious ptomaine poisoning as the result of eating raw oysters. It is believed that all would *have died but for the timely re*sponse of physicians.

Stokes Eulogizes Lincoln.

Former Governor of New Jersey Edward C. Stokes was the orator at the Founders' Day exercises of Temple University, Philadelphia, and delivered an eloquent eulogy on Abraham Lincoln. He was introduced as the "little Napoleon of New Jersey."

LINCOLN THEIR SUBJECT

HE WAS A GODLY MAN.

Rev. A. E. Flint, Rev. Dr. Chambliss and Rev. Dr. McCrea Dwell on His Life.

In several local pulpits Sunday the pastors paid a tribute to Abraham Lincoln and Rev. Drs. Chambliss and McCrea and Rev. Mr. Flint took him as their subject.

The Park Avenue Baptist pastor said in part:

"The words found in Micah 6:8 sum up the character of Abraham Lincoln. *He was a soldier of con*science under orders of the great Commander-in-Chief of the universe and receiving directions from him endeavored to carry them out in a manner to bring honor to his commander. Will you note with me this morning some things that bear on the religious side of Lincoln's life?

"I—The pronouncement of Lincoln's belief in the deity of Christ. When Mr. Lincoln was very much agitated over the opposition received from twenty ministers in the city of Springfield he said to his friend, Mr. Bateman, 'I know that there is a God and that he hates injustice and slavery. I see the storm coming and I know that his hand is in it. If He has a place and work for me—and I think He has—I believe I am ready. I am nothing but truth is everything. I know that I am right because I know that liberty is right, for Christ teaches it and Christ is God.' The statement 'and Christ is God' is what we want to emphasize here for it is Lincoln's declaration of the Deity of Jesus Christ.

"II—Lincoln's attitude toward temperance. In 1861 we sent our soldiers into the southland to teach the people 'that we are all brothers.' In 1909 the south is sending its eloquent speakers into the north to remind us that 'We are our brother's keeper.' In 1861 we sent our soldiers into the southland to teach them that slavery could be abolished by legislation. In 1909 the south is sending its orators into the north to inform us that the liquor traffic which enslaves men must be, and has been abolished by legislation.

"But what was Lincoln's attitude *toward this question that is agitat*ing us so much today, John G. Nicolay, his private secretary, says: "During all the five years of my service as his private secretary I never saw him take a glass of whiskey and I never heard or knew of his taking one." Leonard Swett tells us that Lincoln told him not more than a year before he was elected President that he had never tasted liquor in his life. When the notification committee was about to go to Springfield to notify him of his nomination some prominent citizens offered to supply the liquor to entertain the committee.

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Lincoln, 'I thank you for your kind attention, but must respectfully decline your offer. I have no liquors in my house, and have never been in the habit of entertaining my friends in that way. I cannot permit my friends to do for me what I will not myself do. I shall provide cold water—nothing else." In a letter to George Pickett when he was a student at West Point, Lincoln says, "The victory will be more complete will be that one which proclaims that there is not one slave or one drunkard on the face of God's green earth.' I submit to you this question this morning. Is there any doubt what Mr. Lincoln's attitude would be toward the whole excise question as it presents itself to us today? Think of it, there are 7,000 saloons today in the State of New Jersey, more saloons in our own little State than in all the South, Oklahoma, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina and Tennessee have totally abolished the saloons by legislation and the rum soaked State of Kentucky which has 119 counties has voted the saloon out of 107 counties. The men of the North learned a lesson from the men of the South. Assume the attitude of Lincoln toward this question in your own private lives and it will be easy for you to do right because it is right irrespective of what may be the result.

"III—Lincoln as a man of prayer.

There are three notable events in the life of Lincoln that mark him as a man of prayer. The first was during the year 1862, when the hopes of the North were at their lowest ebb. The second battle of Bull Run had been fought and lost. It was a dark period that Mr. Lincoln traveled all the way from Washington to Brooklyn to spend the night in prayer with Henry Ward Beecher. For hours these two men wrestled together with God until they received the help which He had promised and received from His aid. The second event was during the Battle of Gettysburg. Lincoln in conversation about this battle said, 'While the two armies were converging I went into my room and prayed as I never prayed before. I told God that if we were to win the battle He must do it, for I had done all that I could. I went from my room with a great load lifted from my shoulders, and from that moment I never had a doubt as to the results.' The third event was in connection with the issuing of the emancipation proclamation. Governor Andrew, of Massachusetts, sent a messenger to Washington to tell Lincoln that he would never end the war until he freed the slaves. While this messenger was on his way to Washington he received the same message from every other men, one was in Springfield and the other in New York. When the messenger arrived at Washington and told Lincoln his remarkable story Lincoln stepped to his desk and took out a paper. It was the proclamation of emancipation to the slaves and he said, 'I have been praying and praying that God would send me a message telling me that this should be given to the people. Now the slaves shall be free,' and shortly afterwards the proclamation was given to the people.

"IV—Lincoln's confession of Christ. His confession is noteworthy. He said, 'When I was first inaugurated I did not love my Saviour, but when God took my son I was greatly impressed; but still I did not love Him; but when I stood on the battlefield of Gettysburg I gave my heart to Christ, and I can now say I do love the Saviour.'

"Truly Lincoln has handed down to us the richest legacy which man can leave to man—the memory of a good name and the example of a great and noble character."

Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, pastor of the First M. E. church, delivered a fine discourse Sunday night on "Lincoln," taking occasion to refer more especially to some of the characteristics of the great man which have not been touched upon during the past week in the several sermons in public. He also spoke of the religious side of Lincoln, telling of his devotion and love for the Bible and also his interest in the progress of religion. In the morning Dr. McCrea also preached a strong discourse on the subject of "Patience," pointing especially to Christ as the one great example.

"Self-Mastory-Lincoln a Shining Example" was the theme of a masterly discourse by Rev. Dr. A. A. Chambliss at the Second Baptist church last night. The sermon will be published in The Daily Press tomorrow.

PROTESTING AGAINST SUNDAY AMUSEMENTS

At the request of the superintendent of the Christian Citizenship and Sabbath Observance department of the State Christian Endeavor Union, the executive committee of the local union met at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday night to consider several matters of importance. A resolution was adopted authorizing the secretary to write the Senators and Assemblymen of Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties, urging them to work and vote against a bill to have introduced permitting amusements and sports on Sunday.

It was stated that this bill will probably be introduced into the Legislature within two weeks and every effort will be made to defeat it. Over one thousand letters, cards and postal cards have been sent to the churches in the State requesting that they go on record as opposed to the measure. The churches of Atlantic City have entered a strong protest against it, as well as churches from other parts of the State.

Another resolution adopted Saturday night urged the members of the Legislature to support the local option bill which will come up in that body this winter.

ESCAPED PRISONER IS AGAIN CAPTURED

Theodore Riley, a prisoner in charge of Sheriff Calhoun Orr, escaped at the Lackawanna Railroad station at Morristown Saturday while being taken to Trenton. He slipped out of his handcuffs while the sheriff was purchasing tickets. Running up Elm street and across back lots to Pine street, in that city, he was last seen making for the tall timber on the Whippany road.

Sheriff Orr and Constable Henry Newkirk, who has but one arm, had started for Trenton with four prisoners handcuffed, two and two together. At the railroad station the quartet was left in charge of Newkirk, while the sheriff went to the ticket office. It was then that Riley escaped. He is rather small and readily slipped out of the bracelet. He was sentenced to State prison for a year on a charge of assaulting a negro. He has also served in the Rahway Reformatory, from which he escaped at one time. This is the first batch of prisoners Sheriff Orr has attempted to take to Trenton, although he took many of them down there while keeper of the county jail.

An instrumental and vocal entertainment is to be given on the night of Washington's birthday, February 22, by the Y. M. C. A. Junior Orchestra and Glee Club. It will be held in the association auditorium and no admission will be charged.

MRS. FORCE HONORED BY THE THIMBLE CLUB

One of the most pleasing social events of the day was a "valentine party" given by the Thimble Club Monday at the home of members, Mrs. A. L. Force, of East street. The affair was planned by Floyd T. Woodhull and about fifteen women were present. They all wore white gowns, with red sashes and white slippers, presenting an attractive picture.

Mrs. Force was previously invited to take lunch with Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., at her home on Jackson avenue at 12 o'clock. After the members of the club gathered at Mrs. Force's home, a telephone message informed her that she had company, and home she went, arriving at once. Excusing herself and expressing regrets to Mrs. Clark that she could not stay longer, she hastened home, taking Mrs. Clark with her, where she was greatly surprised to fine "a jolly gathering of jolly people."

After cordial greetings all were invited to the dining room, where a delightful and appetizing lunch was prepared by Miss Lillian A. Ford. The table was handsomely decorated with pretty china, cut-glass and candelabra, while the valentine idea was also carried out in the general decorative scheme. Following the fine lunch, the afternoon was spent in a social manner which all enjoyed to the fullest extent.

PARENTS OF TRUANTS ARE HALED TO COURT

Mrs. Addie Richardson and Mrs. Carrie Brown, colored, who did not appear at city court "Truancy Day" last week to explain why their daughters were so irregular in their school attendance, were given a hearing before Judge Runyon at court Monday. Miss Adelaide Ball, the local truancy officer, read the attendance record of the two girls, showing violation of the truancy law. In both cases the children had been supplied with shoes and Mrs. Richardson had agreed to work out their cost by doing sewing. She is a sick woman and after hearing the case, Judge Runyon suggested leniency, telling the truant officer that the woman seemed physically incapable rather than lazy. She has a sick baby, which she declares, demands almost constant attention.

Mrs. Brown, violating tradition by looking the gift horse in the mouth, had some remarks to offer about the shoes of the dimes supplied her daughter, declaring that they were big enough for a grown woman. The Judge told her that her daughter must obey the law and left the matter in her hands as mother, putting her on probation.

ATTENDANT ASSAULTS A VENERABLE CITIZEN

Accused of roughly handling and assaulting ninety-one year old W. J. Smalley, Sr., John Cary, colored, who has been his attendant for some time, was sentenced to serve a three months' term in the county jail by City Judge Runyon at the session of court Monday. The man is alleged to have come to the Smalley home on East Front street, Friday night, in an intoxicated condition, and stormed around demanding pay, roughly handling the old man, who, badly frightened, sought to escape by going downstairs. After Cary got his money and left the house, Mr. Smalley was found to have received a severe cut on the back of his left hand. The physician who was summoned testified that the wound was an open cut, nearly two inches long. Mr. Smalley was not able to appear in court, but in his testimony taken by City Judge Runyon at his home yesterday afternoon, he said that his hand had been torn by the door latch, as he was shoved back into the room when he sought to get away from Cary.

The attendant, who has a good record, told a smooth story of the whole affair. He laid all the blame on Mr. Smalley, stating that he was unduly excited. He said that restraint was necessary in the case of the old gentleman as possible. Asked about the smell of liquor about him, he said that he had been treating an inebriated tooth with applications of denatured alcohol. Mr. Smalley is still suffering from a nervous attack brought on by his treatment by Cary. The wound in his hand is not serious.

Lovers of Music.

No real lovers of music should miss the Hofmann song recital at the Hartridge auditorium Thursday evening. While Mr. Hofmann is but little known in Plainfield, he nevertheless *enjoys an enviable reputa*tion as a ballad and lieder singer throughout the United States as well as his native land. His voice, his personal magnetism and his thorough knowledge of his art rank him among the finest baritones in the country. That his singing will appeal to all listeners Mr. Skilton has insisted that a portion of the program shall be sung in English.

SPEAKERS FOR BANQUET

AT BOARD OF TRADE DINNER.

Three Capital After-Dinner Talkers for the Annual Event—Banquet Committee Meeting.

John S. Wise, Calvin Tompkins and in all probability Job E. Hedges, three distinguished New Yorkers, will be the speakers at the annual banquet of the Board of Trade on Thursday night, March 11. So reports the speakers' committee, of which Henry L. Hall is chairman, to Judge William Newcorn, chairman of the general committee. The toastmaster has not been chosen but it is reported that either former Mayor William L. Saunders will be asked to serve in that capacity.

John Sergeant Wise is a "F. F. V.," which as interpreted means the proud distinction of being of one of the first families of Virginia. To a certain extent he shines by a reflected light for the fame of his late father and his brother long ago brought him into great prominence. His father, Henry A. Wise, was a Governor of Virginia just before the war and during that strife he shed his last drop of blood for the Confederate cause, being a brigadier-general in the Rebel army. Mr. Wise, himself, was in the Confederate army but because of his youth did not figure so conspicuously. He was an attache to General Robert E. Lee's staff and bore many important war messages. When the war was over he came North and became a Republican. He is known as a brilliant lawyer and a first-class after-dinner speaker. Mr. Wise is the author of "The End of an Era," which is really a version of the Civil War as he saw it, and other volumes.

Job E. Hedges is a famous alumnus of Old Nassau and is a Gotham lawyer of great ability. His fame as an after-dinner speaker is far-reaching for he is the soul of wit. He was secretary to Mayor Strong and is now chairman of New York's Water Commission. As Franklin P. Adams would say: "He's the real goods in Gothamburg."

A sketch of Calvin Tompkins has already been given in these columns.

BELATED ANNOUNCEMENT OF WEDDING CEREMONY

Some surprise was occasioned Monday over the announcement of the marriage of Miss Lilyan Emily Vreeland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Craig, of Elizabeth, and George Vreeland VanAlstyne, eldest son of Louis Irving VanAlstyne and the late Mary Burton Vreeland, of West Front street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Henry R. Rose, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, Newark, on May 30, 1908. The couple went to the home of the pastor and were quietly wedded.

Just why the marriage was kept a secret so long is unknown. The groom is about twenty years old, and the bride is about the same age. He is in the commission merchant business in his father's firm, VanAlstyne & Co., 2 Stone street, New York. The bride has many friends here where she has visited many times. The couple will reside in this city.

MRS. SARAH M'CUNE HAS PASSED AWAY

Mrs. Sarah B. McCune, wife of William G. McCune, died at her home on Martine avenue, Sunday, from a severe attack of grip after a two weeks' duration and other complications with which she had been afflicted for several years. During the illness with grip the malady affected the ear, causing a loss of hearing. Friday night an operation was performed in the hope of affording relief, but without avail.

Mrs. McCune was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Rowe, of Auburn, Maine, and she was born at that place. After her marriage to Mr. McCune she lived in Springfield, Mass., Boston and in New York for two years. The family moved to this city last September, intending to reside here permanently. Surviving besides a husband, is one son, William Rowe McCune, a sister, Mrs. John G. Faxton and a brother, who is eighty years of age, all of this city.

Society Masquerade Party.

Mrs. C. E. Fincke, of 1122 South avenue, has issued invitations to a masquerade party to be given at her home Saturday night. It will be a society affair and the costumes will be elaborate, as will also the decorations. There will be several novel features.

PLAINFIELD'S TRIBUTE TO GREATEST AMERICAN

Citizens' Celebration of 100th Anniversary of Lincoln's Birth Attended by 2,000.

MAJ.-GENERAL CURTIS ORATOR.

Big Demonstration of City and Borough a Huge Success—

Colors Presented to the Veterans.

Marking the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln as the largest general demonstration ever held in this city, the exercises in commemoration of the deeds of the martyred President, attended by more than 1,200 people, proved the crowning feature of the local celebration Friday. The affair was held at the First Baptist church in the afternoon, and old and young, veteran soldiers and school children, gathered by a common impulse to pay tribute to the nation's leader during the stormy period of the Civil War.

The program was arranged with a view to making the exercises of such a nature that all could take part, and the speakers, the school children who sang and recited, and the fact that those who attended took part in the singing of the national anthems, made the exercises of a united character, in which all present had a personal part.

As early as 2 o'clock, people began to gather at the church, and when the doors were opened about half an hour later, the crowd outside numbered nearly three hundred. The church filled rapidly, many standing in the rear and in the galleries, while others failed to gain admission. The platform had been enlarged to accommodate a delegation of 120 boys and girls, pupils of the city and borough high schools, and the entire Y. M. C. A. orchestra of thirty pieces. The local G. A. R. men turned out in force, and more than a hundred Civil War "comrades," under the command of Captain W. C. Smith, of the local Post, occupied seats in the front of the church.

Seated at the front of the platform were Mayor Charles J. Fisk, chairman of the general committee; former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, chairman of the committee of arrangements and presiding officer; Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield, and Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the church. After the rendition of the overture, "Triumphant America," by the orchestra, led by Martin A. Korff, Rev. Dr. Chambliss delivered the impressive invocation. This was followed by the song "Lincoln," by a chorus of sixty girls from the Plainfield High School. Pupils from city and borough schools, seated on the platform, as well as the entire audience, joined in singing "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," the solo parts of which were taken by William H. Holmes. J. Edmund Skiff was at the organ, and a cornet obligato was furnished by Whitney Frazee.

Led by County Supervisor of Schools Henry C. Krebs, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address was next recited by sixty pupils of the North Plainfield High School. Following this came the introductory remarks by former Mayor Gilbert, the presiding officer. In the course of his address, Mr. Gilbert took occasion to trace the career of "The Rail-Splitter" from his early boyhood. "Lincoln has always been a mystery," he said "and the mystery has never been solved. It is hard for us to understand how it was possible for such a man, born in obscurity, without social position, and with but meagre education, to have so used the powerful influence of his own character to climb the dizzy ladder to fame so steadily and so successfully. There can be but one explanation: he possessed that divine gift which let him move to his goal, and after he had attained it, he universally benefited mankind."

Stand of Colors for G. A. R.

At the conclusion of his remarks, Mr. Gilbert presented the local Grand Army Post with a handsome stand of silk colors in behalf of the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield. "With these colors," he said, "as a reminder that you too have a place in our thoughts today, as we meet here to honor your great commander." In accepting the flag for the local Post, Captain W. C. Smith said: "In behalf of my comrades here, who for four long years fought under this commander and this flag, I promise you we will stand by it while one still survives." A Chautauqua salute was given for the veterans. Walt Whitman's "O Captain, My Captain," was then sung by the Plainfield High School, and after that came an orchestral selection of Southern melodies, concluding with "Dixie," played in honor of Rev. Dr. Chambliss, who was army chaplain under General Robert E. Lee.

The speaker of the day, Major-General Newton M. Curtis, of New York, was then introduced by Mr. Gilbert. Mr. Curtis, known to history as "the hero of Fort Fisher," had made the principal address at Lincoln exercises held at the Horace Mann School yesterday morning, and was the guest of Rev. Dr. Abel C. McCrea, his personal friend, during his stay in this city. His remarks comprised the narration of a series of incidents he had had to do with the President, and he told of Lincoln as he saw him and knew him.

Speaker Taller Than Lincoln.

Major-General Curtis first met Abraham Lincoln on a station platform in Illinois. "The Rail Splitter" was seated on a box, telling stories to a group of men as he approached. Seeing Mr. Curtis, "Abe" left his box and strode over to him. "Young man," he said, you are very tall. Will you measure with me?" The two stood back to back, bareheaded, and one of the group, called upon by Mrs. Lincoln to judge, said: "Abe that young man is nearly three inches taller than you." "Just how tall are you?" asked Lincoln of Curtis, and on being told that he stood six feet six inches, remarked: "That is just ten feet less than a rod." Before the two parted they had struck up an acquaintance which brought them closer together as the years went by. The speaker went on to tell of the admirable qualities of Lincoln and the course of his rise. He said Lincoln was a big, clean-limbed athlete, the son of pioneer settlers, who went from New England to Monmouth county, New Jersey, and thence to Virginia and Kentucky. He emphasized his qualities of gentleness and kindness, but said he was a master of sarcasm, when it was necessary to employ it. He told of his life-long hatred of slavery, and repeated anecdotes of the feeling among his friends when Lincoln was nominated President.

In some detail, Major-General Curtis outlined a strong similarity between Abraham Lincoln and Thomas Jefferson, showing how each had the same attributes of character, although exemplified in different circumstances. Lincoln's soldiers, he said, realized that they had a commander with a heart as well as a head.

Speaking of the feeling of disruption of the Union felt during Johnson's days of reconstruction, Major General Curtis said: "The Southern belief in State's rights never entirely disappeared until the United States went to the aid of oppressed Cuba. This response to the country's first war of philanthropy brought about the firm welding of the North and the South, and we are now all marching one way, toward national peace."

"Dixie" as a National Anthem.

Major-General Curtis believes that "Dixie" should be ranked as a National anthem. "It was an old Southern melody," he said, "but was written by an Ohioan in 1850. It was a negro walk-around," but its merit does not lie in the words, but in the music. I believe it should be sung right after "The Star Spangled Banner." Lincoln welcomed it as a national song, and asked the people of the United States to preserve it as such. It is a song of the Union, a National song, made so by Abraham Lincoln." In concluding his remarks, the speaker paid a glowing tribute to the martyred President. "It is the great moral qualities," he said, "that we remember Lincoln for, and we may well draw from his life inspiration and devotion to our nation and our flag. Abraham Lincoln stands before the world today as the first of Americans, the greatest of names, the best of men."

At the conclusion of Major General Curtis' speech, he was presented with a handsome bouquet of flowers by Miss May T. Smith, past president of the local Women's Relief Corps. The presentation was in behalf of the women's organization. The program concluded with the singing of "America" by the entire audience, led by the school children.

Past Commander H. Craig said today: "I may say that the Grand Army is delighted with the splendid services and the observance of the centenary celebration of our great commonder-in-chief, Abraham Lincoln. Theal Winfield Scott Post, No. 76, Department of New Jersey, G. A. R., owes Mayor Fisk our everlasting gratitude for his noble and patriotic interest in so successfully carrying out the wishes of the Grand Army of the Republic, and has for forty years endeavored to impress upon the rising generations and to his excellent selection of a citizens' committee, to the able executive board and our most honored and able fellow-citizen, chairman of the executive board, Alexander Gilbert."

Joy Ride In Dunellen.

Dunellen residents witnessed a real joy ride Saturday night, with a well known woman citizen as the principal. Having acquired a feeling of reckless abandon, probably induced by something sold for that purpose, she climbed into a delivery wagon of John P. Fenner, the hardware dealer, which happened to be standing in Prospect avenue with the driver temporarily absent, and whipping her horse dashed down to North avenue, where she attempted a short turn and was thrown from the rig. The woman was picked up uninjured but sobered and badly frightened, while bystanders stopped the horse without any serious damage to the outfit.

ANNUAL REPORT OF WOMEN'S EXCHANGE

The annual report of the Plainfield Exchange for Women's Work, submitted by Mrs. Bertha Potts Greenleaf, corresponding secretary, shows a satisfactory financial condition. There has passed through the hands of the management in all $7,314.52 and that amount $6,516.52 has been paid to consignors. There was on hand in the treasury at the beginning of the year $5.15 and the receipts for 1908-1909 amounted to $3,443.33. This includes the fifteen per cent. from all sales and subscriptions and donations for the year.

The expenses for carrying on this work for the year amount to $3,508.97. This includes gas, rent, telephone and salaries. Glancing at these figures, it is seen that the fifteen per cent. consignors pay into The Exchange does not meet the running expenses. It is for this reason that it is necessary to ask for aid from time to time.

The work for the consignors is not only a money-making, but educational one as well, as an effort is made to give management to advise and interest in many cases in regard to consignors' work, so as to increase its remarkable value. The number of consignors is now 123. The majority live in Plainfield and its vicinity, but the list does extend from Vermont to Mexico and from Ohio to Massachusetts. The management feel confident of success if the people of Plainfield will continue to give the Exchange their hearty support.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. GEO. W. VAN NEST

The funeral services of Mrs. George W. Van Nest were held from the late home at Greenbrook, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends and there were many floral tributes. Rev John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Mrs. Van Nest was a member and faithful attendant for years, conducted the services.

Mr. Brock in addition to offering prayer and reading the Scriptures, spoke of the exemplary Christian life of Mrs. Van Nest, of her long suffering and patience through it all with an incurable disease. During the services, Dr. Frank E. Woodruff sang two selections. The burial was in the family plot at Bount Brook, and the pall-bearers were Samuel, John and William Kriney, brothers of Mrs. Van Nest; William Van Nest, Derward Silvius and Charles Christianson.

Enjoyable Birthday Party.

In honor of his fifth birthday anniversary, George Groendyke, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Groendyke, of West Seventh street, was given a party on Saturday afternoon by his mother. There were about fifteen children present of the age of Georgie, and all had a fine time. There was a punch and judy show, and in addition the children enjoyed playing the donkey game and fishing for prizes in the pond. The home was attractively decorated with red hearts. After the games the guests adjourned to the dining-room where refreshments were served. The table was decorated appropriately in the centre of which was a birthday cake with five lighted candles.

Surprised Miss Van Winkle.

A surprise party was tendered to Miss Lillian Van Winkle at the home of Mrs. John Cratsley on Elmwood place, Saturday night. The evening was spent playing games and vocal and instrumental solo added to the enjoyment of all. Those present included the Misses Miriam Emery, Josephine Snyder, Hazel Godown, Pearl Drew, Ethel Vail, Anna Vail, Emma Van Alstyne, Uradiline Pennington, Minnie Mutt, Clara Weber, and Guy Snyder, Joseph Pennington, Richard Scott, Russel Cratchley, Percy Emery, Clifford Cole, Martin Hansen, Walter Wilber and Luke Harding.

Morrow—Taylor.

Cards have been sent out by Thomas Howe Taylor announcing the marriage of his daughter, Bessie, to William Carr Morrow on Monday, Feb. 1, at Tacoma, Washington. Mr. Taylor and his daughter are well known in this city, where they have many friends, their home being near Washington Rock for many years. Mr. and Mrs. Morrow will be at home after March 1, at Tacoma, Washington.

Hoyt Evans Improving.

Hoyt Evans, an employe of the Public Service Corporation, in the electrical department, who suffered a severe injury recently by getting molten lead in his eye, is improving slowly at the hospital. The physician in charge now believes that he will be able to save the best portion of the sight and that with the aid of strong glasses he will be able to use the eye.

Charles Meyer, of Scotch Plains, exhibited his prize pigeons at the Orange Poultry Show and received two firsts, one second, one third and one fourth prizes for homers.

GUARDSMEN TO BE PAID

Fifty Cents for Each Member Attending Co. K. Drill if Bill is Passed.

WILL SWELL THE REGIMENT.

Measure Introduced by Assemblyman Moore Will Be Considered This Week.

National Guardsmen are interested in the bill of Assemblyman Moore, of Passaic, which was favorably reported last week and is to come up in the House at Trenton for final passage this week. It provides that each enlisted man in the National Guard shall be entitled to receive from the State 50 cents for attendance at each drill or inspection that he attends at battalion or regimental armories or rendezvous or for target practice.

The payments are to be made at the end of each drill season by the paymaster of the regiment. Fines imposed on enlisted men shall be deducted from the payments due. The Moore bill provides that before any militiamen is entitled to these fees he must do 80 per cent. duty.

The members of the Second regiment, of which Co. K, of this city, is a part, are very much interested in the new bill. It is recognized that if the bill is passed it will be a big aid to the National Guard in recruiting and securing proper drill duty. The remuneration, while comparatively slight one, is expected to attract many recruits to the militia and will secure a better attendance at the drills. The guard is in need of recruits and the bill is calculated to bring a big increase in membership. As in every National Guard organization it is said, the attendance at drills could be much improved and the compensation it is believed would do much to accomplish that end. It would be a big aid, it is not doubted, to the company officers.

It is considered quite probable that the National Guard association, composed of officers of the New Jersey militia, will indorse the bill and endeavor to secure its passage into law.

ONE POINT VICTORY FOR Y. M. C. A. TEAM.

The local Y. M. C. A. team won its game with Elizabeth Saturday night in the association gym by a single point. Ending with a score of 30 to 29, the contest was one of the hardest fought that the fans have witnessed here this season. Neither side was able to gain much of a lead in points at any time. The scrimmage furnished plenty of excitement for the gallery, and the fact that it was to be the last game between these two teams in the State championship series, was an incentive to the players to put forth their best efforts.

At the start the locals demonstrated greater defensive ability but as the struggle continued the visitors renewed their energy and the two teams seemed more evenly balanced.

The line-up:

Plainfield.	Elizabeth.
Denton	Phillips
Gilmore	Seller
forwards.
Cahoon	Kemealy
centre.
Miner	R. Lozier
Hoagland	C. E. Lozier, Manvel

Field goals: Denton, 4; Gilmore, 5; Miner, 2; Hoagland, 2 Phillips, 4; Seller, 1; Kemealy, 3; R. Lozier, 1; E. Lozier, 3; Manvel, 1. Foul goals: Gilmore, 3; Phillips, 2; Kemealy, 1. Referee, George C. M. Smith; umpire, W. E. Cann; timer and scorer, F. O. Dunning.

MRS. FRAZIER TELLS OF WORK AMONG FREEDMEN.

Mrs. J. A. Frazier, of Elizabeth, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Freedmen's work, spoke at Hope chapel Sunday afternoon upon the progress of the work in the South. She referred especially to the work at Harbison College, North Carolina. An appeal for financial support of the work will give the parishioners a chance to make contributions next Sunday, for contribution envelopes were distributed at yesterday's service.

"Testing Our Christianity" was the subject of Rev. L. R. Howard's sermon in the evening. It was one of the series of talks taken from St. Paul's life. The speaker defined the test of true Christianity as the realization of the Christ life of Christ, and stated that it could only be attained through the influence of Christ's personality during His life here on earth.

Charges Flag Desecration.

A case of flag desecration was reported to the borough authorities this morning. Mrs. E. J. Olssen, of Grove street, told of having returned home on the night of Lincoln's anniversary to find a large flag, which had adorned the house, piled in a heap, torn and muddy, evidently having been pulled forcibly from its position. The police promised to investigate the matter.

BRYAN IS SATISFIED. NOT TO RUN AGAIN

"I have not seen any account of the way Bryan takes his defeat, his present position, his views of the election and the ideas he and his friends have of his future," said a personal friend of William J. Bryan in New York yesterday, one who took a very active part in last year's Democratic national campaign. "So here is the situation on all these matters. It is the result of careful inquiry, correspondence, travel, personal meetings, and as near as possible represents the most accurate views of himself and his near friends at the present time.

"Mr. Bryan," said his friend, "will not be a candidate for the Presidential nomination again, but he is determined that the Democratic nominee in 1912 shall be a man who was loyal to him last November and who is known to hold what Mr. Bryan calls 'advanced and progressive Democratic views.'

"During the next four years new men and issues are expected to make their appearance and an entirely new political alignment may be expected within the Democratic party. At present Mr. Bryan does not look with favor on the Presidential aspirations of Governor John A. Johnson, of Minnesota, or Governor Harmon, of Ohio, although, reduced to a choice of the two, Governor Johnson prefers the Ohio executive. Bryan regards Senator-elect Shively, of Indiana, as a progressive Democrat; also Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon; Governor John Burke and Representative Champ Clarke, of Missouri, who will be Democratic leader of the House of Representatives at Washington after March 4.

"The friends of Bryan do not yet regard Governor Shallenberger, of Nebraska, or Governor Marshall, of Indiana, as 'progressive,' although there is hope that their work will receive the approval of Bryan and that their names may be added to his favored class. Bryan will continue to write for his newspaper and lecture constantly for four years. The demand for him as a speaker is widespread, and he is now able to command more than a fraction of the great number of invitations he receives. About one-half of his meetings are given free of charge, and he makes it a rule to make no charge for his appearance at any dinner or banquet of Democrats.

"His income ranges from $60,000 to $80,000 a year. He was badly broken up and bitterly disappointed over his defeat, for which result he was unprepared. And he has taken the third defeat much harder than any previous reverse in politics. To friends he has revealed his belief that the chief cause of the heavy vote for Taft in large cities was the defection of Catholic voters. And his friends among that persuasion are trying to argue him out of the notion that bluntly telling him that the real cause was 'lack of confidence in Bryan and his political theories.'

"Mr. Bryan," said his friend in conclusion, "does not attach much hope at present to the movement to make him United States Senator from Nebraska two years hence. A Democratic Legislature in Nebraska rarely succeeds itself and divisions are already cropping out in the present Legislature. Many friends of Mr. Bryan feel that his place is not in the Senate."

Vainly Seeks Missing Girls.

George Shelp, of Hawley, Pa., was in Branchville Friday trying to find some trace of his adopted daughter, Phebe Crawn, aged 15, and her foster sister, Dora Crawn, aged thirteen and sixteen, respectively, inmates of his home, who disappeared from his home in Pennsylvania early Tuesday morning. The girls were traced to the House, a Pennsylvania township, where two young girls answering to the description of the runaways were seen in company with two men. From there all clues were lost. Mr. Shelp asked the authorities to aid in the search and after leaving a description of the girls returned to his home. Mr. Shelp said that he knew of no male acquaintances which the girls had formed who would entice them away from home. His wife as fraitic over her missing foster child, and the authorities of other towns have been notified to keep a lookout for the girls and are instructed to hold them until Shelp can be communicated with.

Court Plainfield Busy.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, at its regular meeting Saturday Night, received one application for membership, accepted five candidates and initiated three. Past High Chief Ranger Lewis T. Titsworth performed the initiatory work, after which he gave the newly-made members a talk on the aims and objects of the order, which was well received by them as well as that large number of members present. Short addresses were made pertinent to the Court's welfare and a social hour enjoyed.

ILLUSTRATES TALK ON INDIA'S CONDITION

The social and religious conditions of India, together with an account of the missionary work being done there, were the chief features of an interesting illustrated lecture given at the First Baptist church, Sunday night, by Rev. J. H. Heinrich. He was a missionary in that country for nineteen years and is unusually informed on his subject. About forty fine views were displayed, showing points of the greatest interest in India, and during the evening views appropriate to Lincoln's birthday were shown.

Mr. Heinrich spoke more especially of the four great castes, with the numerous sub-divisions to be found in India and how hard it is for the missionaries to overcome their principles. His address first considered the social and then the religious conditions, followed by an account of the missionary work. He displayed a picture of Yerkes' chapel, which is three miles from Ramapatam on the military road. This chapel and Bombay, which the speaker said, was considered the finest in the world. The United States, he said, might be ahead of India in many things, but in railroad facilities that country could not be distanced. Last night's meeting was in charge of F. S. Thompson and G. H. Batchelor, who conducted the opening exercises.

ULRICH SPEAKER AT THE ASYLUM MEETING

Shut off from many of the interests and activities of everyday life, the inmates of the State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains joined Saturday in New Jersey's tribute to the memory of Abraham Lincoln. They took their part with a full-hearted patriotism that, under the circumstances, had in it a touch of pathos. And to the invited guests it was almost weird to listen to the splendid phrasing and effective delivery of the address of John Ulrich. Two decades ago Mr. Ulrich was one of the best known men in New Jersey. As lawyer in active practice and from 1888 to 1890 served as a member of the Assembly from Union county. He was a capable party organizer, a member of the Republican executive committee and editor of a periodical devoted to the interests of a fraternal organization. In 1894 he suffered a nervous breakdown and since then has been at the institution at Morris Plains. To those who knew him before he was withdrawn from participation in the activities of the world, Colonel almost as though a resurrection had been accomplished.

At the close of Mr. Ulrich's address, Drs. Evans and Mallon gave the first to walk across the stage and publicly congratulate him. Then followed singing of "America" by the choir and entire audience. After the rendition of "The Star-Spangled Banner" the patients assembled in the main assembly room, where they danced from 8:30 until 11 p. m.

HE KNEW LINCOLN WELL

Colonel John Deitrich Tells of His Personal Relations With the Liberator.

HIS FRIEND FOR 22 YEARS.

A Guest of Honor at His Inauguration, the Philadelphian was with Him on Several Memorable Occasions.

To have known Abraham Lincoln as a personal friend for more than twenty-five years, to have been intimately associated with the Emancipator in both his home life and in the case of the nation's chief executive, is the distinction held by Colonel John Deitrich of Arlington avenue for thirty years a resident of this city. The remembrances of his pleasant relations with the martyred president grow dearer to the Colonel as the years go by, and his personal impressions of the man who freed the slaves and held the nation together through the Civil War are of far greater interest as narrated by the Plainfielder than if read in any biography. Colonel Deitrich is the possessor of the engraving given as a souvenir today, which was a personal gift from Mr. Lincoln, and is signed with his own hand. The picture was presented to the Colonel at the close of the war, and is inestimably valued by him as the gift of his friend, the President.

Colonel Deitrich was born in Belvidere, Warren county, in 1821, but when still a young man, went to Bloomington, Illinois. It was in a room at the Pike House, in that city, that he first met Lincoln.

"My first impression of the man," said the Colonel in speaking to a Daily Press reporter about the beginning of the friendship of which he today justly feels so proud, "was hardly a favorable one. When I felt the pressure of that great big hand of his, I realized the man. You could feel his love in that handgrasp."

Lincoln was at that time living in Springfield, about sixty miles southwest of Bloomington. Although not more than thirty-three years of age, he had already gained a wide reputation as a lawyer in Illinois, and his practise took him over a large part of the State. Many of these journeys were made on horseback, and the Colonel told how he has seen him in the saddle many a time—riding along, deeply engrossed in a book, (his saddlebags always contained several), and he states that it is his opinion that Lincoln mastered Latin solely by such reading. The two men became fast friends, and the Colonel spoke of the many pleasant hours they passed together in the sitting room at Lincoln's Springfield home. Their intimate relation can be realized by the Colonel's statement that he always addressed the President's wife by her Christian name, Mary.

Colonel Deitrich was with Lincoln at the time he had that well-known argument with Ward Lamon and Judge Davis about the "high hat." Judge Davis insisted that the dignity of the office of President of the United States and the formalities of the inaugural ceremonies, which the men were on their way to attend, demanded that Lincoln should wear a "stove-pipe" hat. Lincoln contended that he could not appear before the people of the nation in any better clothes than those he wore when with his friends. The Plainfielder had a seat of honor at the inauguration.

Speaking of Lincoln as President and of his acts in his official capacity Colonel Deitrich told of his remembrance of an incident shortly after Lieutenant-General Grant was put in charge of the Union forces. This was toward the close of the war, and the consultation at which it was decided was held at the White House in the presence of the Colonel, who was calling on the President at the time.

Secretary of War Stanton and Grant had a difference of opinion about a plan of the general's to end the war, and took the matter to the President. Grant wanted to withdraw the army of 35,000 men from Washington for an aggressive move, and Stanton, with many others, feared that if this were done, the city would be at the mercy of an attack by General Lee's army. When the Secretary and Grant entered the room where Lincoln and Colonel Deitrich were sitting, the Colonel rose to leave, reading in the men's faces that their visit was of no ordinary importance. Lincoln insisted that he remain.

"No, Colonel," he said, "don't go. If I mistake not, I know what this is all about, and you may as well hear it as I."

Stanton spoke first. "Now Grant," he said, "make your statement." "I have no statement to make," replied Grant, "you do the talking." The Secretary of War then explained the disagreement and asked the President to decide which of the two was the higher in rank.

Lincoln listened with his elbow on his knee and his head in his hand, and remained silent for a full minute after Stanton had finished speaking. Then he straightened up. "Stanton," he said, "you agreed with me that Grant was the man to put in charge of the campaign, and now I propose to let him do as he thinks best." He then strode across the room to where Grant was standing, and placing a hand on his shoulder said: "But, Grant, I will hold you personally responsible for the safety of Washington." Grant carried out his plan with great success, proving how well-placed was Lincoln's great confidence in him.

Colonel Deitrich will be a guest of honor at the Lincoln Centennial exercises to be held tomorrow at the First Baptist church. His opinion of his friend, the martyred President, and his love and respect for the man is shown by a statement he made while arrangements were being completed for the celebration. "I will do anything," he said, "that will aid in honoring him."

BIBLE CLASS HOLDS ITS ANNUAL DINNER

The first anniversary of the organization of the Young Men's Bible class of Trinity Reformed church was observed by a dinner by the class in the Sunday-school room of the church Friday night. Nearly the entire membership enjoyed a very appetizing menu, after which addresses of congratulation and encouragement were made by the pastor, Rev. John Y. Brook, Superintendent F. E. Smith and Assistant Superintendent Horace J. Martin. The secretary, Russel E. Doeringer, presented his annual report, which showed an encouraging condition. The class was organized on February 11, 1908, with a membership of eight. During the year this number has increased to twenty-one and the class has been obliged to seek larger quarters. His report also showed that seven members have united with the church during that time.

The following officers were elected: President, Russel C. Doeringer; first vice-president, Chester L. Harriman; secretary, Elmer E. Gayle; treasurer, Harry Van Zandt. The dinner was arranged for by a committee of which Charles Doeringer was chairman, ably assisted by Mrs. H. W. Van Arsdale, and the Misses Grace Debele, Ida Van Arsdale, Gertrude Schlief and Edna M. Cole acted as waitresses. The young men have organized a baseball team for the coming season, and also anticipate participating in the athletic contests of the Plainfield Sunday School Athletic Association.

YALE CLUB HOLDS CONCERT AND DANCE

Before an audience of Yale alumni, and the wives and supporters of wearers of the blue, the university musical clubs rendered a highly successful concert at the Hartridge school auditorium, Friday night, in connection with an informal dance given under the auspices of the local Yale Club. The combined glee, banjo and mandolin clubs, the latter making their entry to men, presented a typical college glee club program of thirteen numbers, and received enthusiastic applause, while the dance which followed was the leading social event of the holidays.

Yale songs predominated on the program, and from the stirring "Mother of Men, Old Yale!" with which the program opened, to "Bright College Years," which concluded the evening's music and for which the audience arose and stood in their places, the music reflected college life in a way that won the hearty applause of the Yale audience. Breaking into the college glee style with the "Solomon Levi" and "Spanish Cavalier" duet chorus which came as an encore to the Yale "Comrade Song," the clubs presented a clever medley of popular music and later another medley of college music, which showed them at their best. The quartet number in the second part developed some excellent singing, and the whistling number by T. Hewes showed him a whistler of notable ability, and he was recalled for an encore. The banjo club was at its best in the closing medley, "Cotton," and C. A. Lohrman's rendition of "Fuzzy Wuzzy" won merited applause.

The program follows: "Mother of Men," glee club; "Pro Yalensis," banjo club; "Comrade Song," glee and banjo club; "Tutti Frutti," glee and banjo clubs; "Absent," and "Laughing Song," glee club; Whistle, "Joility," Mr. Hewes and glee club; "La Boheme," mandolin club; quartet, Messrs. Munsick, Munsick, Howard and Pomeroy, Howard and Lohmann; "Simple Aveu," mandolin club; glee club medley; "Cotton," banjo club; "Fuzzy Wuzzy," Mr. Lohmann and glee club; "Bright College Years," glee club.

The auditorium was tastefully decorated with Yale colors and strings of small signal flags, and signal flags from the streamers "Asbury Park" and "Monmouth" were also used. Over the platform hung a big Yale flag, flanked by the National colors. The committee in charge of the affair comprised the officers and executive committee of the local club, as follows: E. A. Stevenson, president; C. W. McGee, vice-president; C. K. Williams, secretary- treasurer; and H. B. Lovell, R. S. Howland and H. L. De Forest, of the executive committee. There were sixteen dances on the card. Music was by Austen, of Brooklyn, and the supper was by Mrs. Henry L. Johnson.

ARTHUR CONANT MARRIED

Son of Alonzo G. Conant Wedded at Rutland, Vt., February 8.

HIS BRIDE WAS A WAITRESS.

College Romance Which Began in Boston Restaurant Culminates in Miss Morris' Marriage.

Falling in love with Miss Agnes Rosalie Morris, a pretty waitress who worked in a restaurant on Clarendon street, Boston, where he used to take his meals during his college course at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Arthur Franklin Conant, son of Alonzo G. Conant, of Watchung avenue, has made her his wife, and the couple are now in New York city for their honeymoon trip. They will live at Portland, Maine, where Mr. Conant is engaged in engineering work.

This culmination to a college romance comes as a surprise to Mr. Conant's friends in this city, where the young man received his early education in the public schools. The ceremony was performed Feb. 6, in Rutland, Vermont, at the home of Miss Morris' parents. The young woman was head waitress at the Clarendon street restaurant, but left there some time ago to prepare to enter a hospital near Boston as nurse. She is a graduate of the Vermont State Normal School.

Mr. Conant's studies and work have kept him absent from this city most of the time since his graduation from the Plainfield High School in the class of 1902. After leaving the local school, he entered Harvard University, and upon receiving his degree he entered the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and secured his degree of civil engineer. Since graduation he has been employed at Portland, Maine.

The news of the courtship and wedding comes as a big surprise to the young man's college friends at Harvard and "Tech," for the young Plainfielder devoted most of his time to studies, and was not considered a "lady's man." Mr. Conant was the first editor-in-chief of the Plainfield High School Monthly and was captain of one of the companies in the school battalion.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF A BELOVED PHYSICIAN

The funeral service of Dr. John T. Fritts were held Thursday afternoon from the late home on Park avenue, and was largely attended by friends, neighbors and members of the medical profession. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of which Dr. Fritts was a member, officiated. There were many beautiful floral tributes from friends; also a wreath from the Plainfield Medical Association, a smilax wreath from Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., and Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T.

During the service, City Judge William N. Runyon sang Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar." The interment was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were all physicians, as follows: Drs. T. H. Tomlinson, Edward Rushmore, J. Hervey Buchanan, W. H. Anthony, G. W. Endicott and Zeglio, of this city; Dr. Heath, of Somerville, and Dr. Hyde, of Bound Brook, who were associates with Dr. Fritts as surgeons for the New Jersey Central.

Children's Wear.

The high-waisted, one-piece frocks are here for children. They look quite quaint and charming in them. It is an especially pretty style for wear at their evening parties, made of messaline, soft cashmere, China silk or silk muslin. The skirt has the same lines used on grown-ups. It runs to the bust, and is almost straight over the waist. It is fastened down the back under a box plait, and the top part is made from good lace, fine embroidery and sometimes lace, fine embroidery and sometimes a little gold and silver thread. Young girls wear this kind of a gown in rose pink, old blue, Nile green and faint lavender.

Surprised Arthur Briggs.

A birthday surprise party was tendered to Arthur Briggs at his home on Albert street, Friday night. The affair was planned by Stella Force and Helen Abel. Games and music were enjoyed after which refreshments were served. Those present were Mary Flynn, Vera Flynn, Vivian Dunn, Della Forest, Helen Abel, Esther Folwell, Lillian Fountain, Herbert Hillman, Arthur Force, William Briggs, Edna Mosher and Arthur Briggs.

Sir Purden Clarke, to Speak.

Sir Purdon Clarke, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, will address the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Tuesday night, February 23.

Common Council to Take Action —Some Committees Have Already Been Named.

The committee from the Board of Trade having in charge the plans for the citizens' celebration of the granting of the city charter, which is planned for July 4, met Thursday night in the office of A. S. Herr at the Plainfield Business College. William C. Smith, the temporary chairman, was made a permanent officer and A. S. Herr was made secretary. Eugene M. Laing was chosen chairman of the finance committee and treasurer, with power to select his own assistants.

A communication was received from the Building Trades Council in which that body offered its assistance in making the celebration a success. It was suggested by H. W. Marshall that all contributions be published in local papers, but no action was taken. Warren B. Travell was named as a committee of one to interest the various organizations and societies of the city in the celebration, and the following men were elected to present the proposition to the organizations named:

William C. Smith, Old Fellows; A. S. Herr, Plainfield Business College; Frank Covell, Triple Corsanders, No. 17, K. T.; Hugh P. Sweeney, Jr., O. U. A. M.; Eugene J. Laing, Exempt Firemen; A. O. U. W., and Heptasophs; H. W. Marshall, Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M.; L. B. Woolston, Judge of Elks; Warren B. Travell, Royal Arcanum.

It was decided to present the matter to all the fraternal, civic, social organizations, Building Trades Council, machinists, etc., and request each one to appoint a committee of two which will meet with the general committee of the Board of Trade at a date to be decided upon later. These representatives will be known as an auxiliary committee of arrangements.

Efforts will be made to secure the co-operation of the New Jersey Central and have the company advertise the event and run special trains the day of the celebration.

Among the features of the celebration will be a parade of horses, bicycles, automobiles, etc. The Common Council will be asked to appropriate a sum of money to help cover the expense and the local newspapers will be requested to solicit subscriptions through their columns and publish each day the amounts received.

FARBMAN'S LICENSE REVOKED BY COURT

Judge Schenck in the Somerset County Court, Saturday, revoked the liquor license of Morris Farbman, formerly of the Hotel Arlington, making the order absolute. He did this upon the application of Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed, on Saturday afternoon on a warrant sworn out by Prosecutor Swift, of Union county, and was brought before Judge W. B. Toucey that night. He was held in $5,000 bonds.

The charge against Dr. Cooper is of performing an operation on Nellie Smith, of 119 Broadway, Elizabeth, a 19-year-old girl employed in an office in that city. The alleged operation was performed over a week ago. The girl is now a patient at the Elizabeth General Hospital, where she underwent an operation Thursday night for the purpose of saving her life. At noon today she was reported to be on a good road to recovery. Dr. Cooper is held for a hearing before Judge Toucey on Friday afternoon, February 19, at 2:30 o'clock.

Dr. Cooper has been a resident of Westfield for over forty years, coming here soon after the Civil War, during which he was a surgeon in a Vermont regiment.

PRESIDENT LINCOLN WAS A DEEPLY RELIGIOUS MAN

["Clericus" in the Newark News.]

There has been much speculation about the religious character of Abraham Lincoln. The question has even been raised whether he was a Christian. It is well known that he was not a member of any church or denomination. If in the view of some a church has to be a member of some church is to be a Christian, then Abraham Lincoln was not a Christian. If faith in God and a belief in the fundamental forces of a religious life, in which also Jesus Christ believed, is to be a Christian, then Abraham Lincoln was one of the most eminent of Christians. There was not anything narrow in his attainments of mind and heart. He possessed a charity that included all men and a breadth of view that led him to see beyond the confines of creeds and sectarian boundaries. To him the spirit of goodness and truth, of service and brotherliness, was of greater value than so many definitions; principles were greater than rules. If an humanitarian spirit is a necessary foundation for the development of a religious life, then Abraham Lincoln was profoundly religious.

A year ago a writer in a religious journal raised the question whether Lincoln was "saved." It was declared that it was not to be the point that he was a good and true man; great and wise, or whether we love and revere his memory, but "was he saved?" To many it would seem that to be good and true, wise and beloved, are essential in any salvation. A religious spirit that produces deeds, that elevates the level of human life and put an emphasis on brotherhood has much of the essence of saving character. To narrow the saving quality of Christianity to assent in a creed is to miss the possession of a great deal of the enobling truths and the spirit of Christianity.

The writer who raised the question whether Abraham Lincoln was "saved," exclaims: "How devoutly we hope he was! Though his life and correspondence give no data on which to base the conclusion beyond a peradventure, yet may we not believe that in the supreme moment when he was passing hence he was led to place his confidence in the atoning merits of the Son of God?"

Thus, in this view, the hope of the beloved President's salvation is brought down to the moment of passing consciousness when he was stricken by the assassin's bullet. Is it to be undertood by this view that the many noble utterances and deeds of Lincoln were for naught? His speeches, letters and recorded private conversations show that his spirit had been molded by the fire of heaven. It is known that from the first of his trying experiences, and all through those days of the terrible conflict, Abraham Lincoln was reverent and prayerful, and frequent became his utterances of trust in God.

He once wrote to the late Dr. Duryea, a distinguished clergyman of New York: "If it were not for my firm belief in an over-ruling Providence it would be difficult for me in the midst of such complications of affairs to keep my reason in its seat, but I am confident that the Almighty has his plans and will work them out, and whether we see it or not, they will be the wisest and best for us."

His Faith Strong Expressed.

In his second inaugural address, he expressed most strongly his faith in God to remove the offense of slavery: "Fondly do we hope, fervently do we pray, that this mighty scourge of war may speedily pass away! Yet, if God wills that it continue until all the wealth piled by the bondsman's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid with another drawn with the sword, as was said three thousand years ago, so still it must be said: 'The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.'" This readiness in quoting from scripture and the reverential attitude of spirit of Lincoln reveal, in a measure, his religious nature.

It is possible for a man to assent to a complicated creed or confession of doctrine and still not live, nor help others to live in the spirit of a higher plane of life. Lincoln was too big a spirit and his love too comprehensive to be compressed into a formula. He was too busy in planning to relieve distress and to overcome injustice to understand the intricate details of a theological confession of faith. It was enough to believe the Saviour was right when he affirmed that love of God and love of man, operating as forces in a man's soul, are the substance of the law and the prophets. Abraham Lincoln was in accord with this bedimen in modern life of the requirement. "What doth God require of thee but to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with thy God?"

As a statement Lincoln possessed much of the spirit of the old prophets of Israel. The ordinary Christian points of view of the Hebrew worthies fails to discern their true position and work. Usually they are regarded as men who, by some mysterious process, predicted events to come. They were statesmen, crying out against evils of their day in warning and with inspirational power and insight regarding the future. They stood in the midst of national crisis and pointed the way to national perpetuity and moral salvation. In the character of service their utterances were, for their time, the voice of God expressing His leadership through prophetic instrumentalities. In character and spirit Lincoln belonged the this order, with the simple differences of about three thousand years in time and five thousand miles in distance and a change of national name.

But in Lincoln's confession of faith in the sufficiency of Christ's two-fold commandment to love God and man, as the proper creed for the Christian church, there was an implied prediction of such a church and evidence of prophetic character. Since his utterance of willingness to join such a church when it shall be organized, great progress has been made in this direction. The more complicated creeds are crumbling and are being simplified. The forces of love is tending to become more strongly operative and more comprehensive and inclusive than formerly. The fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man expresses in concise from the thought of Lincoln and is becoming more definitely the dominating test of doctrinal ideas. The denominational barriers, so perplexing to Lincoln, are toppling and ere long the Christian field of life, love and service will be unobstructed, in which those who are like-minded under the leadership of Christ may join in a sweeter and fresher fellowship than the world has known.

Who will say that Abraham Lincoln has not in large measure contributed toward this end? If, as Pope says, "a Christian is the highest style of man," who will say that Lincoln is not thus described? When Dr. Adoniram Judson went on missionary journeys the natives called him "Jesus Christ's man." So as truly may this nation say of Abraham Lincoln.

LACES MAY BE FOUND AT BARGAIN PRICES.

A girl who is always on the hunt for curios found some Turkish embroidery in an Oriental store that she has turned to good account on her winter house frock.

This embroidery or lace looks much like Irish lace, but is not so valuable. Irish lace is not really laced finished as the real Irish, also much less costly. The pieces come in circular shapes and by many are used for doilies and centrepieces, but if cleverly treated make charming trimmings for dresses.

The medallions are joined by the patterns, but can usually be separated carefully and used in many ways, both as medallions or insertions in yokes or as chemisettes.

Odd bits of this lace can often be picked up at low cost and prove so useful in many ways, both as trimming and for the table, that several of the pieces are a wise purchase whenever they can be had at a bargain.

The chief difficulty of much of this Turkish trimming is that though it is made by the Turks in quantities there are seldom more than two or three pieces of the same design, so that often it is necessary to use several different motifs on the same frock.

GIRLS AND THE USE OF PERFUMES.

Many girls who are decked for conquest unconsciously make themselves a nuisance to every one who comes near them by their choice of perfumes. If they would but learn that heavy scent is vulgar they would be more comfortable for those who come their way.

The girl who restrains her love of onions for the sake of her fellow man, who would be horrified at the thought of an odor from persimmon, will saturate herself with cologne or sachet and think she has added the finishing touch of elegance.

There are some persons who are made ill by even a suggestion of perfumery; there are others who become unconscious from the smell of heavy scent in a close room, while still others are made to sneeze violently by breathing sachet powder.

No refined girl would want to make herself a nuisance to her neighbors. It is a question of lack of refinement out of it, perfumes should not be used excessively from a humanitarian standpoint. We should refrain from any practise that may make others uncomfortable.

Long or Short Gloves.

Even if an evening gown has only a jeweled band across the arm for a sleeve the white glove just turns the elbow. The glove that reaches to the top of the arm is out of style this year. Shops insist upon selling them, and it is hard *to find the es*pecial length, which reaches about an inch above the elbow.

There are hundreds of them that come just below, others that reach to the elbow and leave the top of the arm bare. However, it is a simple matter to cut off the very long sleeves to the desired length.

Washing dishes is the bugbear of the kitchen. Doing one's own work would be a pleasure were it not for the inevitable cleaning up.

PRINCETON "PRESS" WILL HAVE A NOTABLE STAFF.

The most interesting feature in connection with the change in management of the Priceton Press is the announcement that a number of citizens of Princeton, many of them members of the university faculty, will assist the new manager.

The Princeton Press was founded in 1786 and was originally the Princeton Packet, and later the Princeton Whig. Charles S. Robinson, who edited the paper for the last forty years, has retired. He had been preceded by his father, John T. Robinson, who had been in charge for thirty years. Edwin M. Norris, editor of the Princeton Alumni Weekly, succeeds Charles S. Robinson in control.

Mr. Norris will be responsible for the general policy of the paper, but, as stated, will have the assistance of his editorial work of a number of citizens of Princeton who have already achieved fame in the literary and journalistic world. They include Professor V. Lansing Collins, who has written on historical subjects continuously since 1898, the author of a work on Princeton during the Revolution; Professor Harry Franklin Covington, Professor Thomas Marc Parrott, Professor Christian Gauss, Professor Alexander H. Phillips and Professor Francis C. MacDonald, of the English department of Princeton University, all of whom have contributed to the magazines or have edited texts; Professor George M. Harper, whose historical essays have appeared in the magazines; Professor Henry Jones Ford, pursuant of the chair of politics in the university, who has been managing editor and editorial writer on several of the most prominent newspapers in the East; Robert R. Whiting, a Princeton graduate, whose editorial time is devoted to magazine writing; Jesse Lynch Williams, a former newspaper man and now one of the best known of Princeton's authors; Rev. Walter T. Leahy, of the Catholic church at Princeton; Professor Winthrop M. Daniels, secretary of the American Economic Association, had a recognized authority on economics, and Rev. Ralph Pomeroy, of the Episcopalian church, Princeton.

WHEN WALL PAPER OFFENDS THE EYE.

Every problem has a solution, could we but find the key.

What woman in moving into a new house has not had to put up with wallpapers that tortured her sense of beauty? The landlord is obdurate and her bills too large to make repapering possible.

The next time, instead of putting up with the blot on your new home for months or years, try the plan of one clever woman and paint the offending paper.

The house into which she moved had been so recently done up that the landlord was horrified at the idea of improvements. The drawing room was an old-fashioned parlor with Corinthian pillars and immense wall space. But those walls! The preceding tenant had papered them with Prussian blue castridge paper, with an impossible raised fresco in reds and gold.

Horror at the thought of green carpets and fine old mahogany ruined by such garishness was the mother of invention. The woman consulted a painter who did cheap work and they finally decided to try what a single coat of water color paint would do.

Somewhat fearfully, a coat of lovely soft gray was put over the wall and raised fresco. The result was charming, the room was cool, refined looking and an artistic background for pictures, curtains and furbishing.

The result was so delightful, and so cheap that the woman decided to continue her painting. An upstairs room equally hideous as to paper was given two coats of paint, this time in oils in a soft, lovely green. The experiment is worth trying.

Filmy Sleeves.

One of the fancies of the day is to run the transparent filet tulle sleeves with quantities of gold embroidery. This is put on by hand with bullion stitches. It is run into straight lines, forms squares, runs in railroad track outlines, or is made up into diamonds. Sometimes silver thread is worked alongside the gold, and the effect is quite glittering. The wearer who has to skim arm and who likes a sleeve in the ball gown can make it suitable for the most formal occasions by covering it with this metal embroidery.

ROTH & CO. EMPLOYES HOLD ANNUAL DANCE.

The employes of Roth & Co.'s store held their first annual dance Thursday night at Saengerbund Hall. It was attended by one of the largest crowds of the season. B. A. Parounbek's full orchestra rendered the music.

The committee in charge was composed of these: J. McCarty, N. Randall, J. W. Midgley, Edward Milan, Edward Colin, Robert Skinner, John Hamilton, Samuel Higgins, Frank Egan.

Save one or two turkey wings. They are the best brushes in the world to use around a stove, and they are splendid for sweeping closet shelves. Weight the wing tip with an iron until it dries.

THE GIRL WHO IS RUDE.

O, if there is a bore it's the "Please-Go-Away" girl. She makes poor Cupid tired.

She is the sort of girl that wants a man to come and see her, to say pretty speeches to her, to give her boxes of chocolates, and she thinks the best way to manage this is to be as rude as possible to the unfortunate fellow.

Now, let me ask you straight out, do you like people better if they are rude and disagreeable to you? Of course you don't. Then why should you be?

The kind of a girl I mean always punctuates her rudeness with an excuse about how shy she is. Her friends take up the chorus. "Poor girl," they chant, "you mustn't take any notice of her ill-manners. She is so shy." "Stuff and nonsense," says Cupid. "That is no excuse. I am not going to waste my golden arrows on a rude girl."

It isn't funny to be cross, dear girls. I assure you that you will terrify half the men you know. They want a gentle wife, a loving companion. I have no doubt that you would be all of these, but the pathetic part is that you give exactly the opposite impression.—Forgetme-not.

OBSERVATIONS.

That the more a wife keeps her husband in hot water the less tender he becomes.

That the young woman with teeth like pearls is rarely as dumb as an oyster.

That no man is really as clever as his fiancee thinks he is.

That while a woman of thirty will claim she is not over twenty-six, a woman of sixty will say she is seventy-five.

That the way some wives break their husband's iron will is by hustling it out with eye-water.

That while matrimony was once looked upon as a life journey, it now proves too often only an excursion trip.

That while love may laugh at locksmiths, the milliner and the dressmaker makes him feel mighty serious.—Boston Transcript.

The Star Tree.

Among the freaks of nature in trees, there stands conspicuous one known as the Asiatic star tree. It is enough tall, growing to a height of from sixty to eighty feet, while from the ground up to a distance of about forty feet the trunk is perfectly bare. From that point there spring a number of tangled limbs, which shoot out clusters of long, pointed leaves, and it is these, grouped together, that emit at night a clear phosphorescent light. This gives the tree a spectral appearance, and is very deceiving to travelers, who frequently mistake the glow for an illuminated window of a house. The light is not brilliant, but is of sufficient strength to allow a newspaper being read by it. It does not flicker, but glows steadily from sunset to daybreak.

EGGLESS RECIPES.

Cocoanut Indian Pudding—Two tablespoons Indian meal, one tablespoon tapioca, one tablespoon cocoanut, one-half cup molasses, one-fourth cup sugar, butter walnut size, one quart milk. Bake slowly two hours.

Poor Man's Pudding—Four cups of milk, one-half cup of rice, one-third cup molasses, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one tablespoon butter. Bake three hours in very slow oven, stirring three times during the first hour to prevent burning and rice from settling.

Chocolate Pudding Sauce—Cream one tablespoon of butter and one of flour together, add one-half teaspoon cocoa and two tablespoons of granulated sugar. Turn over one and one-half cups of warm milk. Cook till creamy. If too thick thin with hot milk or water and flavor with vanilla. On boiled rice it makes a nice dessert.

Mix two heaping teaspoons of corn starch with one cup of sugar and stir into two cups boiling water. Cook eight minutes, stirring often. Add juice of one lemon and one rounded tablespoon of butter. If too thick add more water.

Sour Milk Cake—Beat to a cream one tablespoon butter, one cup sugar, one teaspoon soda in one cup milk, two cups flour, stirring often. Add one teaspoon mixed cloves and nutmeg.—Home-Maker, in Boston Globe.

Photographs.

It is now quite customary to fill a mantel with photographs, and the top of a bookcase looks exceedingly well when decorated in this way. It is not necessary to match frames, although silver and brass ones do look well together. There are all manner of pretty wooden ones in dull colors that look well in a living room. When photographs are used in the sleeping room they should be in silver or leather frames or mounted on the brown boards.

The new 2-cent postage stamp gives a side view of George Washington and the strawberry blossom has been taken from the end of his nose. Another libel is thus happily ended.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Mrs. Knicker—Did the doctor advise a diet?

Mrs. Newbride—Yes; he said I could eat anything I could cook.—New York Sun.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

BY REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—"Pilgrim's Progress" series.—II. The Slough of Despond.—Ps. lxix. 1-4, 13-15; xl. 1-3.

In leaving the City of Destruction Christian was directed by Evangelist as to what to do, and be started on his march to the wicket gate. On the way he met two men, one Obstinate and the other Pliable. He told them his purpose and urged them to accompany him. Obstinate, as his name indicates, refused, but Pliable, as also indicated by his name, was easily persuaded to journey with him toward the kingdom where they were to have everlasting life, wear crowns of glory and garments of splendor, all was to be pleasant and free from evil 'and where they would associate with heavenly creatures.

Conversing about these things as they walked, "they drew nigh to a very miry slough that was in the midst of the plain, and they, being heedless, did both fall suddenly into the bog. The name of the slough was Despond."

The Slough of Despond represents the discouragement and fears of those just starting upon the Christian life. They start with buoyancy, perhaps thinking that they are to be "carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease." But they soon learn their mistakes. All temptations come back. The way is sometimes rough and hard, and they become despondent. Instead of rejoicing they feel, as the psalmist expresses it, that they are in a mire of clay, that they are vile and loathsome, and, like Christian, they seem to sink deeper and deeper into the mire of the slough. And happy are those who if they get into such a condition rise above it by the grace and help of God. But He is able to help us, and in the deepest hours of despondency we should trust Him, for He is thereabout to raise us up into the clear light of firm faith, as "the darkest hour is but before the dawn."

Pliable in the Slough of Despond became offended and angry. He railed at Christian, saying: "Is this the happiness you have told me of all the while? If we have such ill speed at our first setting out, what may we expect between this and our journey's end? May I get out again with my life you shall possess the whole country alone for me." Then he made a desperate struggle and got out of the mire next to his own home, toward which he went, and Christian saw him no more. The picture of Pliable is a familiar one. How many start toward the heavenly city and soon become discouraged and turn back! But this is against divine teaching and typifies a weak character. Christ has said that, "No man having put his hand to the plow and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God."

Christian after the departure of Pliable was left to struggle alone in the slough. But he did not become discouraged. The burden upon his shoulder made the struggle difficult, but he kept on striving to reach the bank nearest the wicket gate. At last he reached it, but could not ascend because of the burden upon his back. Then appeared one named Help, who took him by the hand and drew him out and set him upon the sound ground and bid him go on his way." But before his departure Help explained to him that the slough could not be filled up because after conversion sinners still had their doubts and must pass through these that their faith might become firm and strong. Christian's attitude toward the slough of Despond is the proper one and should be an example to all Christians. We should struggle on and pray on, and Help will come. "God is our refuge and strength, a present help in all time of trouble." "I waited patiently for the Lord," says the psalmist "and He inclined unto me and heard my cry. He brought me up also out of a horrible pit and the miry clay and set my feet upon a rock and established my goings."

Correcting the Records.

Two years ago the Christian Endeavor societies in Congregational churches united several thousand members, according to the year book statistics, and we looked in vain for any reference to this cheering fact. Last year, according to the same authority, the societies lost several thousand members, and one religious paper referred to the "slump" which Mrs have copied it with evident satisfaction. Our friends may be interested to know that the alleged loss was due to the correction of a mistake in the previous year's report and to a further mistake in this year's list, by which a loss of forty was made into a loss of 204. Last year the net increase in societies of Christian Endeavor was 1,288, with nearly 50,000 members. During the summer months, when church work is almost at a standstill, over 200 new societies were organized.

STORY OF LINCOLN'S DEATH IN WASHINGTON PLAYHOUSE

The play was well under way when the Presidential party entered; there was a burst of enthusiasm when Lincoln was recognized, the orchestra played "Hail to the Chief" and everybody cheered. Then the party sat down, Mrs. Lincoln on her husband's right, Miss Harris next to her, and young Major Rathbone near the stage, sitting on the end of a sofa.

Between 8:30 and 10, Booth appeared at the stage door in the alley, leading his horse, which he assisted the boy who tended the stage door to hold for him. Entering the theatre, he asked if he could cross the stage, and was told that he could not as the dairy scene (an open one) was on. So he went down under the stage, through a cellar passage, and up to Tenth street that way.

Booth knew thoroughly the situations of the place and the stage, and that in the second scene of the third act there was a brief time when only one character, Asa Trenchard, was on the stage and few of the other players were in the wings awaiting cues. This was the time to strike, and it would occur about ten minutes to ten. Before that time came Booth was in and out of the theatre five times, passing and repassing Buckingham, the doorkeeper, who thought nothing of this, as he was used to seeing Mr. Booth about almost as familiarly as the Forests.

Booth in the Theatre.

A few minutes past 10, Booth went into the restaurant next door to the theatre and took a glass of whiskey. When he came out he reentered the theatre, humming a tune as he passed Buckingham, ascended the stairs to the dress circle and stood leaning the length wise of the theatre until he was close to the entrance of the President's box. One or two persons say they saw him standing there. One man actually thought he saw Booth and his rival pace between this and one journey's end? May I get out again with my life you shall possess the whole country alone for me." Then he made a desperate struggle and got out of the mire next to his own home, toward which he went, and Christian saw him no more. The picture of Pliable is a familiar one. Then the party sat down, Mrs. Lincoln on her husband's right, Miss Harris next to her, and young Major Rathbone near the stage, sitting on the end of a sofa.

Between 8:30 and 10, Booth appeared at the stage door in the alley, leading his horse, which he assisted the boy who tended the stage door to hold for him. Entering the theatre, he asked if he could cross the stage, and was told that he could not as the dairy scene (an open one) was on. So he went down under the stage, through a cellar passage, and up to Tenth street that way.

Booth knew thoroughly the situations of the place and the stage, and that in the second scene of the third act there was a brief time when only one character, Asa Trenchard, was on the stage and few of the other players were in the wings awaiting cues. This was the time to strike, and it would occur about ten minutes to ten. Before that time came Booth was in and out of the theatre five times, passing and repassing Buckingham, the doorkeeper, who thought nothing of this, as he was used to seeing Mr. Booth about almost as familiarly as the Forests.

Booth in the Theatre.

A few minutes past 10, Booth went into the restaurant next door to the theatre and took a glass of whiskey. When he came out he reentered the theatre, humming a tune as he passed Buckingham, ascended the stairs to the dress circle and stood leaning the length with of the theatre until he was close to the entrance of the President's box. One or two persons say they saw him standing there. One man actually thought he saw Booth and his rival pace between this and one journey's end? May I get out again with my life you shall possess the whole country alone for me." Then he made a desperate struggle and got out of the mire next to his own home, toward which he went, and Christian saw him no more. The picture of Pliable is a familiar one. How many start toward the heavenly city and soon become discouraged and turn back! But this is against divine teaching and typifies a weak character. Christ has said that, "No man having put his hand to the plow and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God."

Christian after the departure of Pliable was left to struggle alone in the slough. But he did not become discouraged. The burden upon his shoulder made the struggle difficult, but he kept on striving to reach the bank nearest the wicket gate. At last he reached it, but could not ascend because of the burden upon his back. Then appeared one named Help, who took him by the hand and drew him out and set him upon the sound ground and bid him go on his way." But before his departure Help explained to him that the slough could not be filled up because after conversion sinners still had their doubts and must pass through these that their faith might become firm and strong. Christian's attitude toward the slough of Despond is the proper one and should be an example to all Christians. We should struggle on and pray on, and Help will come. "God is our refuge and strength, a present help in all time of trouble." "I waited patiently for the Lord," says the psalmist "and He inclined unto me and heard my cry. He brought me up also out of a horrible pit and the miry clay and set my feet upon a rock and established my goings."

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. xxvii, 14; xxviii, 1-9; xiv, 1, 2; Prov. iv, 25-27; John xiv, 1-3; Luke ix, 62; I Cor. xv, 58; Gal. vi, 9; Rev. ii, 10; vii, 11-17; xxi, 1-7.

Correcting the Records.

Two years ago the Christian Endeavor societies in Congregational churches united several thousand members, according to the year book statistics, and we looked in vain for any reference to this cheering fact. Last year, according to the same authority, the societies lost several thousand members, and one religious paper referred to the "slump" which Mrs have copied it with evident satisfaction. Our friends may be interested to know that the alleged loss was due to the correction of a mistake in the previous year's report and to a further mistake in this year's list, by which a loss of forty was made into a loss of 204. Last year the net increase in societies of Christian Endeavor was 1,288, with nearly 50,000 members. During the summer months, when church work is almost at a standstill, over 200 new societies were organized.

Away Up the Kongo.

A thousand miles up the Kongo there is a Christian Endeavor society, the members of which were heathen only years ago. Asked to send a message to British Endeavorers, they said, "Tell them to send more teachers."

All Europe Endeavor Convention.

The next all Europe Christian Endeavor convention is to take place in 1910, and the city in which it will be held will probably be Paris.

Another surgeon was lifted from the stage into the box, and among those ministering to the President was Miss Keene, who took his head into her lap.

Washington was cobble-paved in those days, and the jolting ride to the White House was not to be thought of; so a litter was improvised, the men's coats forming tenderly lifted onto it, and a horse-stricken life the procession started through the sobbing throng that reverently parted to make way for it, toward the head of the stairs. The wound was in the head, just above the left ear, the ball had entered the brain, and there was no hope.

The President Removed Across the Street.

Across Tenth street from the theatre there was the four story brick house of William Peterson, a tailor, who sublet most of the rooms to lodgers. The front door of the house was open when those bearing the dying President reached the street, and a man was standing on the steps. One of the surgeons directed the bearers thither and the man—Peterson—rushed in and shouted, 'The President is coming!" Then he disappeared.

Down the stairs from the floors above came several young men lodgers, meeting the bearers as they entered the hall with their burden. At the end of the hall was a long, narrow bedroom whose temporary tenant, a young soldier named William Clark, was not in. On Willie's neat little bed the President was laid, diagonally—as that was the only way his great length could be accommodated—and messengers were sent in every direction, for Captain Robert Lincoln, at the White House, for Surgeon General Barnes, for the President's private physician, Dr Stone, for the members of the Cabinet, and for others whose right it was to witness the closing scene of the great emancipator's life.

'A Wild Night.

Outside the city seethed with excitement. Rumors grew wilder and wilder as the night grew old. When the papers went to press at two o'clock it was impossible for them to say just what had really happened except that a man declared by some to be John Wilkes Booth had fatally shot the President, and a man believed to be John H. Surratt had stabbed Secretary Seward. Rumors of General Grant's assassination on the train which was carrying him North were rife. Rumors of a vast conspiracy to kill all the heads of government, to burn and sack Washington, to install Peterson Davis in the White House were passing from mouth to mouth and growing as they passed, like gemti out of a battle. There was a frenzy of feeling against the South, against actors, against Copperheads. The panic-stricken men who left the theatre had begun to shout "Burn the theatre!" when they realized it was the assassin of the President who had fled across the stage. The Fords and everybody in their employ were under suspicion. The same unthinking fury that overtook many of the mob that surged through the streets all night.

Afterward a wild tale gained currency; that about eight o'clock on the night of assassination, Booth had gone to the desk of the National Hotel, thrown a bill upon the counter, and declared there was going to be some good acting at Ford's that night. So far from having done this, Booth was not in the hotel at all after the murder was planned, nor did he even sleep there on Thursday night.

Up on Tenth street it was quiet. Cavalry patrolled E and F streets as far as Ninth street on the east and Eleventh street on the west, and kept at bay everyone who had not urgent business within those lines.

Through the Petersen house, above the soft footfalls of those ministering to the dying, above the hushed tones in the back parlor, above the sobbing of Mrs. Lincoln, sounded the incessant moaning of the stertorous breathing of the President. He was entirely unconscious; not the faintest glimmer of understanding had come to him since the fatal bullet paughed its way through his brain.

Dead—"Now He Belongs to the Ages"

At seven in the morning the physicians announced signs of immediate dissolution, and at 7.22 the faint pulse ceased, the last breath fluttered from between the parted lips, and Stanton's voice broke the unbearable stillness, saying: "Now he belongs to the ages."

Three squares away, lying in a small bedroom in the Kirkwood House, sleeping is a drunken stupor lay the unshaven, unkempt, unheeding man into whose hands the deed of man John Booth had given the reins of government.

At nine o'clock the body of the President was placed in a temporary coffin, wrapped in an American flag, and borne by six soldiers to a hearse. Then, very quietly, with only a tiny escort, moving through the least frequented streets, the return to the White House was made. A spring rain was falling, and had been since early morning, and the gay buntings so soon to be replaced with the trappings of woe wore a bedraggled look as the hero of peace went by.

MORE LINCOLN SERMONS

Dr. Chamblies Dwells on the Work Which Tried the Soul of Emancipation.

THE HEART AND THE BRAIN.

Rev. C. S. Kemble's Treatment of His Subject Sunday Night Is Somewhat Unique.

Speaking on Sunday morning in his own pulpit at the First Baptist church from the text, "He that ruleth his spirit is greater than he that taketh a city," the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chamblies, emphasized the difficulty and the nobleness of self-mastery. "Hand-work," he said, "is not the hardest. We hear much of the 'laboring class,' 'the working-man,' and the phrase is fitly enough applied to Edwin Markham's 'Man With the Hoe,' and to all other men and women whose life-symbol would be an implement of manual labor. But the trouble is these working people appear to think that the designation belongs of right to them alone. And the truth is, the hardest of all work is that which puts the soul on the stretch, and there is no wear like the wear of heart and brain.

"Our Blessed Master was a workingman in the now accepted use of the term; until he was thirty years old he drove the hand-saw, the hammer and the plane at the carpenter's bench, but what was this in comparison with the exhausting labor of heart and brain in the few remaining years of his life, when he was laying the foundations of his kingdom and working out our redemption; his day-long teaching and thinking among the unbelieving, unsympathizing, often cruel multitudes; his night-long praying on the lonely mountains, and the toil of his soul, when the sweat of his face was sweat of blood.

"During this last week in thousands of halls and churches throughout the United States, all possible changes have been rung on one of the few immortal names that are not born to die, he had a place—none ever more surely—among the toilers of mankind. But when you speak of Lincoln as a toiler, as one whose toil wrung from him almost crimson drops, do you mean the flat-boatman on Ohio, heaving about sacks of grain, barrels of produce, logs of timber, or the rail-splitter in the woods, cleaving the fallen trees with mighty stroke, splitting four hundred rails for each yard of jeans required to make him a suit of clothes?

"Ah, no! But you think of the man sitting alone in his room at midnight, in the White House, his head bowed on his heaving breast, perchance a tear here and there stealing down the deep furrows of his face, pondering the miseries of the awful conflict which was deluging the land with blood, and which he had striven with heart-rending urgency to prevent; struggling with the momentous political and military problems of the hour; and fighting with himself for the patience, the calmness, the charity, the severity of temper, which no other man of power had so severely tried by the clattering tongues of villifiers and the machinations of foes, even in his own council chamber.

"Does history show us a man in whom self-mastery was more complete? We read so much of his gentleness, kindness, tenderness of heart, goodness of every sort, that there is perhaps a prevalent notion that he was just naturally amiable, soft-natured, all but spiritless where injury or insult was intended, or where opposition assumed contemptuous or violent forms.

"Nothing could be wider of the mark. There was never a man of harder metal, surer to strike fire if assailed when standing for the truth as he saw it, than this man. To be convinced one has only to study his life in young manhood and in maturity, (as during the debates with Douglas) and especially while he sat in the Presidential chair, surrounded by men in his cabinet, and in the Congress, the chief of whom were at heart unfriendly to him, regarding him at first as infinitely inferior to themselves, treating him at times with actual insolence, and never, even when they saw that they had mistaken the measure of the man, giving him the frank, cordial, devoted support which he had the right to expect.

"The truth is simply that he 'ruled his spirit.' There were times when he was tempted to blister and scathe some of the men around him, the self-important Halleck, the irascible Stanton, the mortified and chagrined Seward and especially the jealous and vindictive Chase, all men and devoted to the Union, but most divergent individualities, from one another and above all from Lincoln; often presumptuously critical, and stubbornly opposing the President's will.

"But it was as if he had said to himself, 'I am not here to take care of my own dignity and glory. My pride may suffer if it must. These men are needed, they are strong and valuable for the country. I must endure, must placate them, must keep them in concord, for my country's sake.' And so with infinite forbearance and masterly management he dealt with all those diverse abilities and peculiarities, and skillfully utilized them for the common cause.

"Says Richard Watson Gilder, in his splendid monograph on 'Lincoln the Leader:' 'His sympathy and tolerance, his forgiveness, his distaste for personal contention, his lack of resentment, his great heart, were shown not less in his attitude toward those (the people of the south) whom, for their own good, as he believed, he unrelentingly opposed with all the forces at his command; but also toward his political opponents in the north, and toward those among his nominal supporters, whose zeal led them into positions of open or concealed antagonism.'

"So it was. This man, whom the world came, all too slowly, to understand, was never betrayed into a hasty speech of anger, or resentment. With inexhaustible patience he met every case and by soft answers turned away wrath. He prayed, who knows how much Lincoln prayed! and God helped him. Mr. Gilder says, most impressively, says: 'An intensely important feature of Lincoln's leadership would be omitted if nothing were said of his belief in and conscious communion with an almighty, mysterious and beneficent Power. The Deity was to him an ever present, ever-urgent influence. Always the belief in God was to him a challenge to singleness of purpose. To the All-pure he lifted clean hands and a pure heart.'

"The finest picture I know of in American political history is a man 'ruling his spirit' against the tendency to anger in any of its manifestations; as, impatience, fretfulness, resentment, malice, rashness of speech, vindictiveness, violence of action; showing instead the perfection of forbearance, charity, tolerance, gentleness and judicial calmness of temper, the very finest picture, I say, of all this is seen when we turn our eyes to Abraham Lincoln."

Dr. Kemble's Talk.

Rev. C. S. Kemble's treatment of the Lincoln theme Sunday evening at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church was somewhat unique. Taking his text from Isiah 53-2: "There is no beauty that we should desire him," he referred to the fear of Lincoln's political managers that the homely pictures of him in circulation might seriously injure the chance of election to the Presidency. Hesler, of Chicago, was told to suppress a particularly disreputable looking photograph and given a new sitting for an improved memoir of Lincoln's features. Judge Rear, of Philadelphia, sent an artist to Springfield, Ill., to paint a handsome picture of Lincoln at all hazards. He was greatly relieved to find that the real Lincoln had a charm of his own that made it necessary simply to paint a good portrait of him instead of a fancy picture.

The light of half a century's min*ute investigation of every more and* act of Lincoln has led me to a similar conclusion, that all men need to increase their admiration of Lincoln is no embellished picture but simply a true portraiture of the real Lincoln.

Applying the same line of thought to Christ's candidacy for the Throne of the Universe, Mr. Kemble declared that artists and religious writers had erred for centuries in picturing too effeminate a picture of Jesus. The nineteenth century was the first time attempted a serious literal portrait of the real Jesus, only to find that the more accurate and full our knowledge of the Man of Gallilee the more spontaneous is our admiration. the more heartfelt is our love, the more decided is our vote to make him King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

FORECLOSURE SALE TO SATISFY BOROUGH TAX

The first sale of personal property to satisfy a debt for taxes in the borough has been ordered, to take place next Friday afternoon.

Tuesday afternoon Justice W. C. Allen's case was the first of the delinquents to be acted upon. Other sales will follow, it is announced at the tax collector's office, following in order as they appear on the tax books.

W. J. Allen, in whose case the first action is directed, lives at 159 Somerset street. He happens to be a brother-in-law of Chief of Police George Weiss. His bill is said to be of two years' accumulation, amounting to $3.19. From the sale of household goods the collector must realize, besides the amount due for taxes, the costs of advertising and conducting the sale, which might amount to more than the bill itself.

Deputy Collector Frank A. Neal is going after the delinquents in earnest and when the Mayor and Borough Council meet next Friday night in its adjourned session, held for the purpose, the deputy collector will have some interesting facts to make known.

Oriental Embroideries.

Because of the widespread desire for Egyptian embroidery designs the mummy cases at famous museums have been photographed. On them is still preserved marvelous coloring and line work. When these are transcribed to cloth through paper the embroidery is exceedingly lovely. This thought was worked out by a well-known designer, and the result was most satisfactory.

ALLEGED VICTIM IS DEAD

Nellie Drake Dies in Elizabeth Hospital and Aged Physician is Accused.

ARE SEEKING MISSING MAN.

Dr. Cooper, of Westfield, Will be Given a Hearing on Friday—He Is Out on $5,000 Bail.

Miss Nellie D. Drake, the nineteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Drake, of Fulton street, Elizabeth, following whose statement, Dr. Sherman Cooper, of Westfield, was arrested last Thursday, died at the Elizabeth General Hospital at 8:30 Monday night. Everything possible was done to save the girl's life but without avail. After she was admitted to the institution an operation was performed as a last resort, but the patient did not rally.

According to the complaint upon which Dr. Cooper was arrested, the alleged operation was performed at the physician's office on February 8. John Manz, also of Elizabeth, is wanted by the county authorities. It is said that he accompanied the girl on the trip to Dr. Cooper's office. Miss Drake's body was turned over to Undertaker John S. Stiner, of Elizabeth Monday, and Tuesday a post-mortem examination was held under the direction of Prosecutor C. Addison Swift.

Dr. Cooper, who is seventy-seven years old, is one of the best known physicians in Union county. He was arrested at his home in Westfield last Thursday by County Detective Gallatian, and when he was arraigned before Justice Toucey, Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of this city, appeared in behalf of the State.

Dr. Cooper entered a plea of not guilty and requested a hearing. This was set down for Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The prisoner was released in $5,000 bail, Samuel W. Reese, of Westfield, furnishing the security.

Since the death of Miss Drake no further action regarding Dr. Cooper has been taken. The case will probably be considered by the Grand Jury this week as it has been laid before that body by Mr. Hetfield, who has been in charge of the details. Dr. Cooper is married and has two grown daughters.

HOMER DAVENPORT TO TELL OF TRAVELS

Homer Davenport, the famous cartoonist, writer and speaker, will appear at the New Plainfield theatre on Monday night, March 1, with a series of views and talks of travel on the Arabian desert. Mr. Davenport made this trip for the purpose of purchasing horses which comprise the famous Davenport Arabian desert stud, having authority from the Sultan to procure the animals through a great friendship with Mukarem Pasha, the ruler of the Bedouin tribes of the desert.

This diplomatic ruler accompanied Mr. Davenport on his visit to the various tribes and the latter was thereby able to see life and conditions there as never observed before by a white man. He will illustrate his talk on his trip by views taken with the first camera ever used on the desert.

ACCUSED OF ARSON; RELEASED IN $1,000. BAIL

Charged with setting fire to the barn of Aaron Hill at New Providence, Pete Janelli, nineteen years old, of that place, was taken to the county jail at Elizabeth Monday. Soon afterward he engaged J. Henry Crane, of this city, as counsel and the latter secured the young man's release today on $1,000 bail furnished by Janelli. Hill accuses Janelli of setting fire to his barn at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The structure, with one horse, several carriages, sleighs and quantities of hay and grain, were destroyed.

According to the complainant, he had reprimanded Janelli for his failure to wash a carriage. This was resented and he was finally discharged. Hill declares that Janelli then went to the barn and gathered up his belongings. While seated at the dining table for dinner he arose and again went to the barn. A few minutes later Hill's daughter saw flames shooting from the building. Then a search was made for Janelli but he could not be found. Later it was said that he was seen in the crowd about the place. His arrest followed.

Trenton Flags "White Way."

Lack of money has led Trenton Common Council to deny a request of leading business men that the streets in the heart of Trenton be turned into a "Great White Way" by the use of a new style electric light which is being used with much success in Newark.

3 TRIALS, NO VERDICT

ASKS THE P. S. C. FOR $5,000.

Jury Out Eighteen Hours—Action Result of Woman Falling from Trolley Car.

There was another disagreement in the damage suit of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher C. Meyers, of this city, against the Public Service Corporation, tried Monday in the Union county court. The jury retired at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and remained out until 9:45 Tuesday morning, when it reported to the court that it could not agree. This was the third trial.

The action against the Public Service Corporation was for $5,000 damages as the result of injuries sustained by Mrs. Meyers while trying to board a trolley car on East Second street many months ago. She claimed that she had one foot on the step and was just about to step up when the car started and she was thrown to the ground receiving severe injuries from which she has not recovered.

The three trials in the District court here resulted in a disagreement and the other in a mistrial because of alleged irregularities on the part of some of the jurymen, who left the jury room in search of additional information, one using the telephone. When the action was transferred to the county court, with the result of another disagreement, A. A. Clark represented the defendant company, while Robert Newton Crane and W. S. Angleman were counsel for the plaintiffs.

It is unknown whether at present whether there will be another trial or not.

ARROWSMITH BOYS BEFORE 'SQUIRE SMITH

Three members of the Arrowsmith family, of South Plainfield—Henry, George and John—were haled before Justice W. E. Smith to answer charges preferred against them by Peter Nelson, of the village. Henry was fined $5 and George parted with a two-spot at the old 'Squire's request. The fight took place early in the evening, when Nelson declares he was attacked and beaten by the three.

John Arrowsmith, the only member of the trio who was not fined, came to town today to shut the story down. Stories of publicity should be given in the newspapers. Now it may be that this censorship of the press is a custom in South Plainfield—just like censorship of the drama is in "The City Beautiful." If John was acting officially, he did his duty all right. "Don't use anything in the paper about it," he repeated again and again, after explaining about the incident. He told how the fight took place "on the highway" and how the arrests were made, but positively stated that it was "a family affair," "a private matter," and "none of anybody's business." Just how "a private fight" came to land three prisoners in police court, John refused to explain, but he seemed interested about this point, he believed he was being "pumped" for details so merely shifted his cigar, flashed an eye or two and proclaimed "Don't use anything in the paper about it." John left no names for the next Arrowsmith family fight; perhaps the privacy approaches snobbishness. More details of Saturday's struggle might be recorded, but "according to John"—oh, you say it.

PAY FOR BELCHER CREDITORS.

Estate of $9,750, Left by Paterson Mayor, Now in Jail, To Be Divided.

Edwin G. Adams, referee in bankruptcy, has given notice that the trustee of the estate of William H. Belcher, a bankrupt, at Paterson, is about to be divided among the creditors. The total amount available is $9,750.48, and out of this must be paid the costs.

It is estimated those who have filed claims will receive about ten or twelve per cent. If all who had claims against Belcher had filed them the dividend would be but a trifle, but many corporations charged off their claims.

Belcher, while mayor of Paterson, disappeared when his money transactions and defalcations could no longer be covered up. He went out West and worked as a laborer, but eventually returned and gave himself up and is now in State Prison.

Precbolder King Hart.

Major Benjamin King, director of the Union County Board of Freeholders, has been confined to his home in Clark Township for the past week with injured leg. His plight is due to an accident that befell him while winding up his automobile. The crank slipped and hit him on the shin, nearly fracturing it, besides inflicting an ugly wound.

"SOAKED" BY 'PHONE CO.

A COMMITTEE WILL ACT.

Association Also Decides to Join in July Fourth Celebration — As to Arc Lights.

The Plainfield Merchants' Association has decided to join in the celebration of the fortieth anniversary of the city's charter on Independence Day, and at its monthly meeting Monday the president appointed this committee to represent that body in the affair:

Morris C. Van Arsdale, J. V. E. Vanderhoff, F. A. Duttenhoffer, T. J. Shirley, A. Rondinella, L. Tepper, C. L. Applegate, W. J. Counihan, Harry Dreier, A. E. Giddes, C. H. Frost and A. E. Force. This committee will arrange to meet with the general one from the Board of Trade upon the date to be decided later. There was much enthusiasm displayed and the question of closing the local shops all day or a part of Independence Day will be decided later.

It was the opinion that there would be a lot of strangers in the city that day and it might be profitable to keep open in the morning, prior to the parade. When the association learned that Plainfield was the only city in the State that generally observed Lincoln's birthday by closing the shops all day, there was some dissatisfaction as many of the merchants favored a half-day observance. It was decided to close the stores all day on Washington's Birthday.

There was a lively discussion re*garding the new rules of the New* York and New Jersey Telephone Company, effective January 1 last. By this ruling all business houses using telephones will be put on a limited service hereafter and the subscriber will be required to pay so much for every call in the limited number. This change has been underway since the first of the year and great indignation was shown by the merchants last night concerning it. They declared it to be manifestly unfair and will use every effort to prevent a general adoption of the rules. With this end in view a committee comprising F. A. Duttenhofer, Warren B. Travell and J. V. E. Vanderhoef was appointed to take the matter up with the telephone company.

The question of arc lights was also discussed with a lively interest. This brought out the fact that the association will be satisfied with nothing but arc lights. It does not want Tungsten lamps or any other light of similar character. The association still believes that it is the duty of the city and not the merchants to light the streets. A proposition was submitted requesting the association to send representatives on a demonstration of various lights that will be given in New York tomorrow. At that time there will be an open discussion regarding the lights best suited for street illumination.

Applications for membership in the association were received from the following: Plainfield Auto Tire Company, Horace J. Martin, Sr., Debele & Stahl and the Clarkhurst Farms.

MAYOR ISSUES PERMIT FOR THEIR CELEBRATION

The Young Men's Hebrew Association of the Synagogue of the Children of Israel is planning a celebration of the Feast of Purim to be held on Sunday night, March 7, at Saengerbund Hall. This is an event of the Hebrew church which is celebrated annually and occupies one week, beginning on Saturday night.

The program of the evening will consist of a play in which the children of the Bible school will participate. This will be followed by a ball, a permit for which was issued today by Mayor Townsend. Heretofore, these events have been held in this city. The members of the committees have not been announced. It is expected that more than 300 people will attend.

Several unique features and original figures will be introduced at the ball which will follow the performance.

Mechanical Inventions.

The rapid strides made in mechanical inventions during the last century of our country's progress were graphically told in an interesting paper on "Mechanical Inventions, Their Effect on Social Conditions," presented Monday by Mrs. G. Herbert Condit at a meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club, held at the Hartridge auditorium. The paper was preceded by Current Events and followed by supplemental accounts of inventions presented by a number of members.

The next meeting of the Common Council will be held on Tuesday night, February 23, at which time action will be taken on all licenses. This is necessary at this time because the licenses expire March 1.

NEWARK HAS BIG FIRE IN "GREAT WHITE WAY"

Fire which broke out Sunday in the Commercial Photograph Company's plant on the top floor of a four story, brick building at No. 839 Broad street, in the heart of the Newark business district and on the brilliantly lighted section known as "the Great White Way," caused damage amounting to about $10,000 from flames, smoke and water, the cause of the fire is unknown, but is believed to have been due to spontaneous combustion of chemicals.

The photograph company is owned by Julius M. Merrick, who also has studios on the third floor; Ernest Hunt a custom tailor, occupies the second floor, and C. M. Collamer & Co., hats and furnishing goods, the ground floor. The fire was discovered by Joseph Blost, eighteen years old.

He sent in an alarm and then ran into the building and smashed open two doors by jamming his fist through the glass upper parts. He cut his right wrist severely. He said he wanted to arouse any one who might be in the building, but found none.

While Truck Company No. 1 was raising a ladder there was a pitch in the hoisting machinery caused by the ladder catching on a trolley guy wire. Frank Burroughs, laddersman, went up the ladder, which suddenly fell back into place. He dropped twenty-five feet with it and was picked up unconscious and taken to the City Hospital. He recovered later and was taken home. He was a sprained ankle and severe body bruises.

TELEPHONE CO. PROFITS ARE BIGGER THAN EVER

Although there was a slight falling off in percentage of new business obtained during the past year, both the gross and net earnings of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company for 1908 show a gain over all previous years. This fact demonstrates conclusively that the 'phone has ceased to be a private convenience and has become a public necessity, which the result is not to be easily affected by business depressions, even though such depressions severely affect the commercial world.

That the conservative investing class has taken note of this fact is indicated by the unusual amount of buying of telephone securities during the past year. Local business offices have been established throughout the territory in which all questions affecting the service and individual accounts of customers are dealt with. Another important advance made during the past year was the publication of a series of educational advertisements describing the company's plant and methods of operation, and, in general, its policies. It is felt that such publicity is the best safe-guard against unfounded feelings, unfair criticisms and unreasonable attacks.

FOWLER'S PLAN TO INSPIRE PATRIOTISM

Representative Charles N. Fowler, of the Fifth New Jersey District, wants to inspire patriotism in the minds of Washington tourists by having a replica of the Lincoln log cabin, in bronze, erected somewhere in the capital city, and has introduced a bill in the House authorizing such a memorial.

"The reproduction of the Lincoln cabin here," says the Congressman, "would give a meaning to the other beauties of this city beyond conception. Thousands of people come here every year, and for these visitors to carry away with them, among their memories of the national capital, a lasting impression of the lowly and humble home in which Abraham Lincoln was born could not but be inspiring and productive of better citizenship. The Lincoln cabin, in all its unpretentiousness, in the shadow of the imposing Washington Monument, would be a sight and an object-lesson such as could leave its impress on the mind of every person who saw it."

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The Girls' Athletic Association of the Plainfield High School tendered a reception to the girls' basketball team, champions of the state, at the high school Saturday night. The affair was arranged by Miss Margaret *V. Leggett, president of the associa*tion, assisted by other officers and members. Dancing and sociability were the features of the evening. Music was furnished by the Misses Mabel Maxson, piano, and Arthur Mosher, violin. There were about twenty couples present and a reception committee comprised the Misses Margaret V. Leggett, Elsie Knowlton, Harriett Moody, Dorothy Merrill, Ruth Wean, Marguerite Ramsey and Beatrice Apaugh. After the dance refreshments were served. The basketball team was congratulated upon its success during the past season.

MISS MORSE, SINGER, INVENTOR'S GRANDDAUGHTER

Miss Leila Morse, who is to sing at the Y. W. C. A. Glee Club concert, Thursday night, is a granddaughter of the famous inventor of the telegraph, Samuel F. B. Morse, and has inherited some of his inventing abilities. She has a sweet soprano voice and is destined to be one of the most popular of singers.

*Miss Morse is a resident of Ro*chester, N. Y., and is well known though quite young, to musical critics throughout the country. Assisting her at the Y. W. C. A. auditori*um, Thursday night*, will be Mrs. Edward Caldwell Moore, pianist, sister of Mrs. Henry DeForest, of this city, and a chorus of thirty from the Y. W. C. A. ranks.

PILING UP CITY DEBT

such portion as will retire the entire issue on or before maturity, as has been the custom heretofore, an annual sinking fund of 1 per cent. or $950 has been agreed upon, which, it is estimated, will at 4 per cent. 54 years, provide a fund sufficient to redeem the bonds at maturity. If such rate of interest prevails for fifty years, the calculation is correct but the rates of interest for that period are more likely to average 3 per cent.

Under this plan the full interest for 50 years on $95,000 bonds at 4½ per cent. will be $213,750; 1 per cent. or $950 annual sinking fund, $47,500; total, $261,250. A drawing of $2,000 bonds each year would retire the entire issue in 48 years and the amount of tax levy for that period to cover the principal and interest would be $198,880, a difference of $62,570.

Sufficient to demonstrate the advantage of an annual redemption of a portion of the bonds instead of piling up a fund for fifty years, to say nothing of the risk of the failure of institutions or individuals who may be responsible as custodians of the funds or securities.

It will be said that the bonds could not have been sold at a premium if a portion had been redeemable each year. Probably not, but could no doubt have been sold at par. How does the small premium realized on the $44,000 compare with the $62,570 additional the taxpayers must pay.

There is a difference of opinion as to the wisdom of two other undertakings for which bonds were issued during the year.

How long can Plainfield stand such increase in debt and maintain good credit?

Excessive bond issues bankrupted a near-by city not many years ago.

MEN COOKED, 300 DINED

Holy Cross Men's Banquet Nets a Handsome Sum for Church Expenses.

LAURELS FOR "CHEF" STEVENS

Cooked, Served and Cleared Away by the Men Folks, Second Parish Dinner Excels the First by All Odds.

Conclusively demonstrating that men are not all deficient in fact de cuisine (copyrighted), and showing without doubt that when the suffragette movement goes into effect in the borough, the families will not starve to death during campaign time, the men of Holy Cross church cooked, served and cleared away an elaborate dinner at the church parish house, last night, and provided for the gastric needs of nearly three hundred diners who braved the storm to try their cookery. There are many results to the men's dinner, but the most significant is that nearly $400 has been wiped from the parish indebtedness.

It is to "George Ortex Stevenonski, chief cook and directoire of the culinary department," that the credit for the feast belongs. As the job from noon, he spent the afternoon in preparing the food, assisted by a corps of men of the church, headed by E. N. Erickson. The "Men-U" was as follows:

Bouillion (made from the best Jersey Stock), hors d'oeuvres, olives, celeri en branche, amandes; brouchees aux huitres, (Warn 'er against these-, roti de boeuf, poulet, puree de pomme de terre, (not Japanese, but of the Hoe-Lee variety), petits pois, salade de fruit, (the chef's piece de resistence), fromage camembert a la creme, biscuits, (Charlie bought these for a Nichol), glacee a la vanille gateaux, cafe. The food represented above was every bit as classy as the language of the menu would imply. A note at the foot of the card explained that any guest desiring a translation of the menu could secure the same from the rector, Rev. George A. Warner, upon payment of a small fee.

It was 6:30 o'clock sharp when the "dining room" doors were flung open and the hundred or more people already gathered in the church filed in to their dinner. The room was elaborately decorated with bunting and American flags, and a score of prettily decorated tables were in charge of nearly fifty men of the parish, who acted as waiters. The service was perfect, like clock-work, with occasional alarms from the kitchen, and this, with the excellent meal, brought forth the tips in abundance. All the waiters did not thoroughly enjoy the work, and several registered their solemn oath by saying that they would "never cuss a waiter again, no never."

Mayor Samuel Townsend headed the reception committee, which comprised T. C. Overton and Rev. George A. Warner, and met the diners in the church. The general confusion of a cloak-room was completely avoided by the executive ability of A. E. Force, who had a system of storing wraps in the pews by tens, and kept additional track of umbrellas by card index. Mr. Force was assisted by Edward Mosher and Duncan Patterson. C. S. Powell, C. E. Ketchum, A. M. Abbott and P. O. Ball, adorned with distinguishing ribbons of the church, all colors were like ambassa tors' orders, acted as head waiters, adding to the decorative scheme and confusion of the dining room. Councilman C. L. Nichols, John Brower and N. H. Morrison were the head waiters, bullying the underlings in true professional style. In the kitchen, F. J. Pope, H. A. Woodruff and F. W. Creesy occupied space as officials, and were assisted by a corps of "also rans."

The commissary and menu committee comprised Augustus VanDeventer, Senator C. A. Reed and Frederick Harrington, and they received much praise for the clever "get-up" of the menu card, aside from gathering the sundry hundreds of pounds of eatables. D. J. Randall, Edwin S. Hooley and O. H. Voorhees were the committee on advertising and printing, and Dr. Francis E. DuBois and Mr. Nichols were in charge of the tickets.

They are still washing up the dishes.

Rahway Clubs Held Open House.

Open house was kept by a number of the clubs at Rahway on Monday night. The Republican club rooms were crowded. An entertainment was given and a smoker held at night. In the afternoon a pig race on the St. George avenue ball grounds was won by William Freeman. During the races where the pig was chased, the grandstand fell with a crash, fortunately injuring no one. A huge tree that was blown across the affair Saturday night had weakened the foundations.

SIR C. P. CLARK'S TALK

ON HINDU ARCHITECTURE.

Noted English Connoisseur, a Friend of J. P. Morgan, in Stereopticon Speech Interests a Large Audience Here.

Sir Casper Purdon Clark, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, gave an illustrated talk before the Men's club of Crescent avenue church last night, on the subject of "Architectural Detail in India." He was formerly director of the Kensington Museum now known as the Victoria and Albert Museum, in London, and had been art collector for the British government in the far east. It was Sir Purdon Clark whom J. P. Morgan induced to come to this country after the death of General Dicesnois, former director of the Metropolitan Museum. He is considered a leading authority of the world on all that pertains to art, and his services were secured by Mr. Morgan at a handsome salary.

The pictures Sir Purdon Clark displayed last night were taken by himself in India. They illustrated the elaborate carving, done by the ordinary Hindoo carpenters, which ornaments most of the doors in the western part of that country, where teak and blackwood are plentiful. The inexpensiveness of these ornamentations to the builders there is almost ridiculous. A large specimen of most beautiful design would cost but $12.50. A number of these workmen were taken to London by Mr. Clark and there executed for the Kensington Museum several thousand feet of the wood carving for which they are noted.

Other views showed beautiful designs in stone building fronts. A sand stone similar to the brown stone used in the pretentious houses in New York is employed and varies in color from nearly white to dark gray. A pink marble is also used. The spectacle of listless halfclad Hindoos occupying magnificent buildings of beautiful architecture seemed incongruous. The speaker remarked on the aversion of the natives to the modern system of water supply. They refuse to drink water that has passed through a pipe, declaring it to be contaminated, and persist in using from a cistern, believing that the water therein, having been blessed, must necessarily be wholesome, however long it may have stood.

For the most part the lecturer's words were the analyzing of the detailed architectural designs displayed in the various views thrown on the screen, all of which were beautiful.

D. W. TAYLOR CHAIRMAN OF PUBLIC COMMITTEE.

Following the election of George S. Clay as the successor of R. L. Hall as a Councilman from the Second ward, President R. I. Tolles announced that Councilman Duncan W. Taylor would hereafter be the chairman of the fire and building committee, and it is understood that Mr. Taylor will become chairman of the license committee, succeeding Mr. Taylor. This is the only change in the chairmanships.

Mr. Clay will take Mr. Hall's place on the various committees of which he was a member, as follows: Police and street lighting.

Will Retire Commissioned Officers.

The Vredenburgh retirement bill passed the Senate yesterday and is now ready for the Governor's signature. The bill provides that any commissioned officer attaining the age of sixty-two years be retired from active service and placed on the retired list upon his application to the adjutant-general for that purpose. When any commissioned officer of the National Guard or Naval Reserve of this State shall reach the age of sixty-foru years he shall be retired and placed on the retired list upon the actual rank held by him at the time, unless a brevet rank shall be granted.

Special Lenten Services.

The series of special Lenten services will begin at Hope chapel tomorrow night. The subjects and leaders will be as follows: February 25, "Satisfaction of Self-Denial," William Webster; March 4, "A Covenant with God," Judge W. N. Runyon; March 11, "Consecrated Youth," Rev. George A. Warner; March 18, "Dangers of Appetite," Dr. Norman H. Probaco; March 25, "Arrogance before God," Rev. A. E. Finn; April 1, "Perils of Power," Rev. Dr. Richard S. Campbell; April 8, "The Triumph of the Cross," Rev. John Y. Breck.

RENEW LIQUOR LICENSES; NO DISSENTING VOTES

For the first time in many years the liquor licenses were granted by the Common Council last night without a dissenting vote. Prior to acting upon the applications, Mr. Taylor, chairman of the license committee, offered a resolution which was adopted, providing that the Council refuse to increase the number of places or grant any new applicants. There was one protest from the W. C. T. U., representing 200 members, and this was referred to the license committee. The number of licensed places remains the same as last year, that is four hotels, six saloons and two clubs.

There was only two changes made in granting the applications. In the cases of Michael F. Watson and John and Frank Clark, the words "inn and tavern" were stricken out and the places were licensed as saloons. There was no objection to this, however, on the part of the applicants. The following were granted on motion of Mr. Taylor:

John Burns, Hotel Kensington; Henry Windham, Hotel Waldorf; Jerome W. Leary, Hotel Iroquois; Jacob Blimm, Farmers' Hotel; E. C. Westcott, Michael F. Watson, John and Frank Clark, John Rafferty, Christian Gloeckler, A. D. Findlay, saloons; Frank Lucke and the Eastern Bottling Company, wholesale.

There was a small lobby and but few seemed to be interested in the outcome of the matter. There were two or three lawyers present, presumably for the purpose of looking after clients' interests, but they had nothing whatever to do. The applicants were acted upon quickly and without discussion.

WANT TO OPERATE TAXICABS IN THIS CITY

The Plainfield Taxicab Company, through its representative, W. B. Lockwood, last night, renewed its request for a franchise to operate taxicabs at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council. Prompt action on the application was requested. The concern's agent stated that it was ready to operate from three to ten taxicabs here, charged the rate of fares, the same as in force in other cities. The charge here would be thirty cents for one or four passengers for the first half mile; ten cents for each additional quarter mile and ten cents for each six minutes waiting. Children under ten years are not to be charged for. Minor details accompanied the petition filed.

Later in the evening Mr. Taylor introduced an ordinance amending an ordinance which governs the operation of motor and other vehicles in the city, to provide for taxicabs. The ordinance was read once for general information and will be acted upon at a future meeting after the members have had an opportunity to learn more about the proposition.

Important Realty Deal.

C. H. Wetzel, who now occupies the Clarkson property on East Front street, has just purchased the property, 250-252 East Front street, adjoining the Embury tract on the east, which has for the past century been in the estate of Job Mechem and Samuel Armstrong. Mr. Wetzel will raze the present old structure and erect a modern dwelling more in keeping with the many improvements in contemplation for this main thoroughfare, and business street in "The City Beautiful."

"Find Out Club" Entertained.

The Find Out Club, of which Mrs. William H. Kirch is a member, was entertained by the latter at her home on Dover street, Monday night. There were about thirty members and friends present and the evening was spent in playing games and enjoying a program of music, after which refreshments were served. The club holds an afternoon meeting every other week and once a month a social affair is planned to which the husbands of the members are invited.

Two Notable Musicales.

Joseph McIntyre, of Watchung avenue, announces two fine musicales for Monday afternoons, March 8 and 29, at the home of Mrs. Stephen Ginna on Watchung avenue. At the first musicale, Miss Christine Miller, contralto, of New York, will sing, Maximo Letz, violinist, will play, and at the second musicale, Vladimir Dubinsky, 'cellist, and Mrs. Edith Chapman Goold, soprano, will appear. Mr. McIntyre will be at the piano at both musicales.

Sesame Club to Meet.

The Sesame Club will meet with Mrs. G. S. Simons, of Ninth street, tomorrow morning. The subject will be "Trollope and Reade."

ANNIVERSARY OF CASTLE

Golden Eagles Celebrate their Eighth Birthday at Debele Hall.

WAS AN INFORMAL PROGRAM.

Grand Sir Herald Ferris Compliments Freedom Castle—Minstrels and Speeches.

Freedom Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, celebrated its eighth anniversary last night. Spacious Debele Hall was filled with the members and their families, for whose enjoyment there had been provided an excellent entertainment.

The celebration began with a speech of welcome by Grand Vice-Chief Horace J. Martin, of this city. A brief address was made by Rev. Martin L. Ferris, of Asbury Park, Grand Sir Herald of the Order, who told of principles and advantages. He complimented Freedom Castle, declaring it to be "the finest in the State or anywhere else." It was instituted in February, 1901, and now has a membership of two hundred and fifteen. The speaker advocated the establishment of a ladies' temple.

Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan made the farewell speech but not until after the Dixie minstrels had finished tickling the funny spots with their two hours of jollity.

Elmer D. Cutting was responsible for the antics of the black face comedians and he saw to it that there was no work for the censor committee. As endmen and jokesmiths Harry Messersmith, Harry Blimm, John Todd and George Cose will do. They have the approbation of all who were there, from the kids to the plumed knights. Joseph Martin was interlocutor. The other members of the company were:

This musical program was rendered:

Opening chorus, "Yankee Doodle's Come to Town;" tenor solo, "As Long as the World Rolls On," Elmer Cutting; end song, "You're in the Right Church but the Wrong Pew," George Cose; bass solo, "Any Old Port in a Storm," Joseph Martin; end song, "Meet Me in the Rose Time, Rosey," Harry Messersmith; end song "You Don't Change Your Curling," Harry Blimm; soprano solo, "Roses," Arthur Martin, end song, "I Think I See My Brother Coming Now," John Todd.

The entertainment concluded with a laughable sketch, "The Manager's Dilemma," or "How Two Canal-Boat Drivers Tried to 'Butt Into' the Theatrical Business." Characters: Mr. Hamilton Ham, Joseph Martin, Mr. Jules B. Boots, George Cose; Mr. Jim Jimson, Harry Blimm; "Miss Sadie Patter," Elmer Cutting. Scene, Theatrical Employment Agency.

Violated Garbage Ordinance.

Fernando Brown, a scavenger, was arrested last night by Officer O'Brien, of the Board of Health, charged with violating the health ordinance by collecting garbage in uncovered wooden barrels. Brown's son was on the wagon at the time the arrest was made, but the father will have to answer for the violation at his hearing before City Judge Runyon at the session of court tomorrow morning.

College Club Musical.

The Woman's College Club will give a musical Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Chester A. Rice on West Seventh street. It will be its first open meeting and a special program is being arranged by the president, Miss Catherine Ball. Mrs. Joseph McIntyre will sing a solo and Miss Patten will render a whistling solo. Others to take part are Mrs. Sidney S. Schuyler and Mrs. Chester A. Rice.

Musicale Tomorrow Night.

A high class musicale will be given under the auspices of the Young People's Society in the lecture room of the First Baptist church tomorrow night. Those participating will be Mrs. G. W. Sellick, soprano, and G. Morgan Strickler, tenor, both of New York; Charles L. Lewis, baritone, and Miss Florence Wolfert, violinist; Mrs. C. L. Lewis at the piano. Seats will be free.

District Court Business.

Thirty cases were listed for a hearing in the District court this morning, but nearly all of them went over for another week or two. Possession was given in several land and tenant cases and judgments on proof were allowed in a few minor cases. There were no contested cases.

ROW OVER PROPERTY AIRED IN COMMON COUNCIL

Harry Dreier, of West Front street, who recently purchased from the city the Experience Moe property at West Fourth and New street, occupied by F. M. Bacon, for $2,450.60, reported to the Common Council, last night, that the tenant refuses to move and that he demanded possession. The communication was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances, and soon afterward a lengthy letter was read from Mr. Bacon, setting forth his side of the dispute.

The tenant claimed ownership of the property and said that he stood ready and willing to pay any amount held against it by the city. He explained that he had been subjected to much expense and trouble by being compelled to connect with the sewer, lay a flagging, etc., while the city had allowed the New Jersey Central to drain into the New street sewer forcing an overflow of water near his property in hard rains.

Mr. Bacon said that on several occasions he had offered to settle, but for various reasons the tax collectors would not receive the money, the last effort being when F. H. Smith was collector. Mr. Smith offered the property for sale and when he attended the sale for the purpose of paying the amount against it, the collector adjourned the sale, explaining that it was getting late. Mr. Bacon claimed that the city had damaged his property to a considerable extent and believes he has just cause for complaint. His communication was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances and will be reported on later.

REV. FATHER BOGAN TALKS OF SCENES ACROSS THE SEA

"Around the World in Eighty Minutes" was the title of a delightful stereopticon lecture given by Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, of St. Mary's church last night at St. Mary's Hall. The affair was under the auspices of the Holy Name Society of the church, and was especially for the members of the society and their friends. The storm kept many away, but those who braved the rain were well repaid by the interesting explanation of the slides given by Father Bogan. The views comprised scenes of Ireland, Scotland, England and the Continent, Belgium, Norway, Italy and the country around Gibraltar, and the pictures were excellent. It is planned to repeat the lecture in the near future, when the talk will be followed by a card party and smoker.

Colonial Social.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society and the direction of the social committee, of which Miss Ethel Titsworth is the chairman, a Colonial social and entertainment will be held at the Seventh-Day Baptist church tonight. The Colonial idea will be carried out in the decorations and costumes. There will be a play entitled "A Little Heroine of the Revolution," and a flag drill by a number of children, together with the singing of patriotic songs. Tea will be served afterward.

Murray for Ackerman Bill.

The Senate Judiciary Committee at Trenton yesterday granted a hearing on Senator E. R. Ackerman's employer's liability bill. The principal speaker in behalf of the measure was William D. Murray, of this city, who drafted the measure for Mr. Ackerman. Mr. Murray explained the essential features of the bill. John Cosgrove, business agent of the Union County Trades Council, attended the hearing and endorsed the bill.

Former Plainfielder Promoted.

Harry Thompson, who is now general manager and director of Park & Tilford, New York, formerly of this city, but now of Ridgewood, has been made second vice-president of the firm. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson will sail for Europe sometime in April and while abroad will tour Switzerland and Savoy by automobile. Mrs. Thompson is the daughter of Mrs. J. Ringel and a sister of Mrs. M. Hille, of Westervelt avenue.

Sewing Meeting Date Changed.

The regular sewing meeting of the women of Warren chapel will be held Friday afternoon of this week, and each week in future until further notice. The regular meeting day was Wednesday. The women will assemble at the church at 2 o'clock.

What to Do in Emergency.

Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan will deliver a free lecture at the Y. W. C. A. tomorrow night on "Emergency Action in the Case of Cuts, Bruises, Sprains and Drowning." All women are cordially invited. The lecture will begin at 8 o'clock.

ARREST ALLEGED FIRE-BUG

TO FACE TWO-FOLD CHARGE.

Van Court Declares the Man Attempted to Fire His House After His Barn Burned.

Leonard Martine, alleged to be the incendiary responsible for the blaze which destroyed the barns and outbuildings of William Van Court, of Oak Tree, last September, causing the loss of several head of valuable cattle, which were burned in the stable, was captured by the local police last night, after he was located by William Van Court, who spied him on Park avenue as he was driving to this city. The police have "had Martine's number" since the fire, but he has kept away from town and the Van Court farm and eluded capture until last night.

Martine, who was born in Havana, Cuba, is seventy-six years old, and was employed for some time by Van Court, who is a coal dealer. He will face a two fold charge of arson, for he is alleged by the police to be responsible for an attempt to destroy Van Court's house the night after the barns burned. At that time it was found that six peach baskets had been filled with paper and inflammables, had been set on a hanging shelf in the cellar and ignited. The fact that the home is of old-time construction, with heavy oak beams, prevented the destruction of the place. The bottoms of the baskets were found covered with charred paper on the cellar shelves by the family the following morning.

The night the barns were destroyed by fire, Van Court was in New York. On his way along Liberty street the following morning, he met Martine, and spoke to him. The man said he was coming back to work, but since then has not been seen hereabouts. Van Court spied him out on Park avenue from his rig last night and reported at police headquarters immediately. Patrolman Saffron arrested the man shortly afterwards, near the city limit. At police headquarters the prisoner would make no statement, but Van Court said that he seems to have a long standing grudge against him, and Martine's sullen manner when in his presence seemed to prove this.

Martine was taken to New Brunswick by Detectives Lyons and Marshall, of the Middlesex County prosecutor's office, and was lodged in jail.

THE MILITARY FAIR POPULAR ALL WEEK.

The bugle call of Company K is still enticing large crowds to the drill hall on West Front street. A pelting rain has no terrors for its loyal friends, who last night withstood the drenching rather than miss a good time.

The fair will continue all week and the boys are seeing to it that all who attend are pleased. Dances find a continuous flow of music and there are plenty of partners. If one doesn't dance the general cheer that pervades the place will alone repay him for his visit, though there are dozens of other attractions.

Bad Fall; Slightly Hurt.

William J. Stewart, of 172 Reservoir street, Trenton, had what is thought to be a narrow escape from death Monday afternoon. After pitching headlong from a moving trolley car and rolling down an embankment into a ditch, he suffered no greater injuries than bruises about the body and cuts on the face and hands. His escape is remarkable, because he weighs more than 250 pounds, and fell with great force. He was found unconscious, but was soon revived and brought back to Trenton.

"The Lessons of 1907,"

Congressman Charles Newell Fowler, perhaps one of the best informed men in the country on matters of finance, having been chairman of the committee on banking and currency in the House of Representatives, will deliver an address before the Dudley Avenue Trinity Reformed church, Friday night. His subject will be "The Lessons of 1907," and it should prove of great interest. In addition there will be music by an orchestra. All men are cordially invited to be present.

City Fathers' Banquet.

As the guests of Councilmen Holt and Montgomery, the city fathers last night dined at Timbo's, after the regular monthly meeting was adjourned. Mayor Fisk and City Clerk MacMurray were among the other guests. The repast was as elaborate as could be served for $2.95.

GEO. S. CLAY COUNCILMAN

New York Lawyer Elected by City Fathers to Fill Unexpired Term.

SUCCEEDS HOBERT E. HALL.

Deadlock Broken When Unanimous Vote Is Cast For a Representative Man.

Without a dissenting vote, the city fathers last night elected George Strong Clay, a law partner of former Judge Dillon, of New York, to fill the unexpired term of Robert E. Hall of the Second ward, who resigned several weeks ago. Mr. Clay will appear before Mayor Fisk within a few days to take the oath of office. That the deadlock which existed when several attempts were made to select a successor to Mr. Hall at previous caucuses had been broken was a cause of rejoicing among the city officials generally and it was felt that a capable man had been agreed upon for the honor.

The ten councilmen held a caucus and when the second ballot was taken it was found that the nomination of Mr. Clay had proved acceptable to every member. Councilmen Holt and Montgomery, of the Second, had reported that in compliance with the request of their fellow members they had waited upon Mr. Clay and that he had said that he was a Republican and had expressed his willingness to serve if chosen for Mr. Hall's place. In the open meeting, Mr. Holt placed Mr. Clay's name in nomination without any comment and it was quickly seconded by Mr. Montgomery. The formal ballot was taken and City Clerk MacMurray announced that the choice was unanimous. The City Clerk was ordered to notify Mr. Clay of the Common Council's action.

Mr. Clay is identified with various local organizations. He is a member of the vestry of Grace Episcopal church and is a member of the Plainfield Country Club. His wife was a daughter of the late Charles Guion. Some years ago, Mr. Clay compiled "The Corporation Code" a volume that has been pronounced by barristers as a law work of great usefulness and accuracy. His partner, Judge Dillon, is the lawyer for the Gould interests.

Mr. Clay was born near Esopus, on the Hudson, and is a warm friend of Judge Alton B. Parker, the Democratic presidential nominee four years ago. For eighteen years he has been a resident of Plainfield and has long resided on East Seventh street.

Funeral of Miss Gernon.

The funeral service of Miss Muriel Gernon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Gernon, of Crescent avenue, who died at Battle Creek, Michigan, on Monday, will be held from the late home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of which Miss Gernon was a member, will officiate.

Women of All Churches Invited.

The service of prayer for missions to be held at the First Baptist church, tomorrow afternoon, will be a union one and the women of all the churches of the city and borough are cordially invited to attend. It is not a denominational affair as reported.

Rev. J. B. Voorhees to Speak.

Rev. J. Brownlee Voorhees, traveling secretary of the Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed church in America, will occupy the pulpit at Trinity Reformed church, Sunday night, and he will also visit the Sunday-school in the afternoon.

Commend Mayor Fisk.

Through its corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. E. Benton, the Plainfield Mothers' Association has sent to Mayor Fisk and to the local papers resolutions commending his honor in "establishing a censorship of plays" and moving pictures.

ARMORY CONTRACT LET

Somerville Structure to Cost $24,600, Appropriation Being $25,000.

FRELINGHUYSEN SUCCESSFUL.

Governor Fort Approves the Award —Description of the Building To Be Erected at Somerset's Seat.

Governor Fort has approved the contract award for the building of the Somerville Armory, which award was given at the last meeting of the State Military Board to Charles A. Cramer, of Somerville, for $24,600, the appropriation being $25,000.

There had been intimation that the joint committee of the Legislature to examine into the whole question of New Jersey finance would call out the contract. The Governor did not wait for this report, but went ahead, as the money had been appropriated by the last Legislature and was available.

The first and probably the last company armory to be erected in a county of the third class in New Jersey is to be built at Somerville at once at a cost of $24,590, appropriated by the State. It is understood that a move is now being made to have the law, passed by the State Legislature in 1907, appropriating $25,000 for armories in counties of the third class, repealed, and it required quick action on the part of Company M, G. N. G., to secure its new armory, for which the Somerset county Board of Chosen Freeholders had already purchased a site at the cost of $5,500 to the county.

Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen was instrumental in having the armory bill put through the Legislature two years ago, but the appropriation was held up until Assemblyman William Smalley became a member of the Appropriation Committee, when he succeeded last year in having it added to the budget. Company M, of Somerville, was the first military organization in the State to take advantage of the new law, and it applied to the Board of Freeholders a year ago to furnish a site for the armory at the expense of the county, according to the provisions of the act, which requires a county of the third class in which an armory is built to furnish the site and so construct the foundation walls. After considerable delay the Board of Freeholders, at a meeting held August 11, 1908, voted to purchase a site on Grove street, opposite the new court-house. A lot 400 feet deep by 101 feet in length was recently required by the county, and the site was approved by the State Military Board, which at once invited bids for the proposed armory. The contract by the board ranged from $24,590 to $25,629. Charles A. Cramer, of Somerville, was awarded the contract, which was approved by Governor Fort and the State Military Board yesterday.

The armory is to be a handsome two-story brick structure, with stone trimmings. Its dimensions will be 120 feet in length by sixty feet in width. The basement of the building will be fitted up with a shooting gallery, bowling alleys, shower baths, locker-rooms and a kitchen. The first floor will be devoted to administration rooms and a drill shed. A large meeting-room, a billiard-room and a reading-room will be situated on the third floor. Owing to the expenditure of $10,000 by the county, the armory will not be classed as the exclusive property of the State, but will revert to the county if Company M at any time disbands. It is also understood that in consideration of the county's part ownership of the property the armory is to be used for patriotic meetings and other public functions.

Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, of the Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., who resides at Somerville, has been untiring in his efforts to secure the armory for the town.

Stoneware and Old Furnishings.

Since Colonial furniture, glassware and chintzes are back in fashion, those who make tableware have fallen into line.

One of the new importations is stoneware in Chinese patterns. The decorations are in bright colors, usually of flowers, and the shapes are very quaint.

In the early days the stoneware cups were made without handles, and, although you can still get them, such a cup it not a convenient thing to drink from.

This new-old stoneware wears forever and a day. It was originally invented to be of long service, as in those days people could not pick up table sets at the nearest department shops.

The ware is charming for breakfasts and luncheons, especially when used in a dining room furnished with Colonial mahogany.

Cleaning Photographs.

The owner of fine photographs that are unframed is often distressed to see them the worse for wear from greasy fingers. The next time you are so annoyed try covering the spots with a fine talcum powder. Apply the powder with a soft white rag, rub lightly, then blow off. The picture will be clean and no harm could possibly be done to the paper.

PEANUT SOCIAL BY HEAVENLY REST GUILD

A peanut social, of the nature of a progressive "peanut jackstraw" party, was held last night at the Church of the Heavenly Rest. The affair was held under the auspices of the Women's Guild of the parish, and Mrs. W. E. Brown, as chairman of the Guild, was in charge of the general arrangements. A neat sum was realized, which will be devoted to the church piano fund.

Tables piled with peanuts were arranged in the parish house, and those taking part were supplied with sugar tongs and requested to move peanuts from the pile without disturbing other peanuts. Sixty people took part in the play. The succesful ones "progressed" after two minutes of contest, and prizes were awarded those with the highest score at the conclusion of the play. During the evening there were violin solos by Miss Clara Halland, who was accompanied at the piano by her sister, Mrs. John Ludgate. Refreshments consisting of coffee and cake, were served at the conclusion of the peanut game, when Mrs. J. A. Babcock and Miss Elizabeth Forster, forming the refreshment committee, were assisted by various members of the guild.

YOUNG WOMEN CONDUCT TEA, SALE AND MUSICAL

The attractive new home of Dr. Norman H. Probasco, 1305 West Seventh street, was the scene yesterday afternoon of a charming tea and musicale given for the benefit of the Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, of which Mrs. J. B. Probasco is president. The house was filled with guests when an entertaining program was rendered. Miss Leila Druse, a soprano singer in the choir of the First Baptist church, sang in a sweet, full voice two songs, which were heartily encored. Miss Remmen played the accompaniments. Mrs. Robert Lowry gave much pleasure with her rendering of one of Beatrice Hereford's monologues. the scene a hotel plazza and later recited a dainty bit of verse entitled "Heartease." Miss Corla Duggan, from Paris, France, a sister of Mrs. Probasco, sang with fine effect songs in Italian, French and English, concluding with a Swedish song, of which the accompaniment was played by Mrs. Probasco.

Most of the afternoon was devoted to the tea and sale. Miss Ida Yerkes and Miss Olive Koons poured in the dining room and they were assisted in serving by young women of the society. Mrs. David Sutphen was in charge of the useful and fancy articles, Miss Carrie Demler the cake and Miss Marguerite Ostrom the candy and each one had a committee of young women assisting them. Practically everything was disposed of at the sale and the society will realize a good profit to help in carrying on mission work.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN OUGHT TO KNOW.

Always scald china milk pitchers to make them perfectly sweet smelling.

When the icing of a cake is difficult to cut the knife should be dipped in hot water.

When a big ironing is to be done what a comfort and relief it is to the feet to use a cushion to stand on while ironing: It can be made from an old quilt folded and covered by a piece of carpet. Until it has been tried one can believe the rest it is to tired feet.

When marketing Saturday for Sunday and Monday and celery is added to the purchased foods, keep it by wrapping the stocks in a wet towel and place them in the cold cellar on a shelf or hung from a rafter. It can be kept fresh and crisp in this way for several days.

It is claimed that wild duck sometimes has a fishy flavor and to avoid this the fowl should be parboiled in salt water for a while, after which it can be prepared in the usual manner. Stuff with bread dressing and roast, basting it frequently with the liquor in the pan. Serve with roast apples, lemon marmalade or cranberries.

In Ancient Days.

It was at the great battle of Actium.

"Undone!" grasped Cleopatra, from her position at the bow of the ship. "Undone!"

"Great Cassar!" signaled the startled Antony. "Has an enemy betrayed us?"

"Worse than that, Marc. There are two buttons off my waist in the back. I have just seen them in my hand mirror and I could never think of going through the battle in such a condition. Ho, slaves! back to Egypt!"

This is the real reason why the ship of Cleopatra was seen to withdraw from action and retreat under full sail.—Chicago News.

PROGRAMS IN SCHOOLS

Exercises Marking Anniversary of Washington's Birth Held in City and Borough.

ADDRESSES ON "FATHERS" LIFE

Samuel B. Howe, Jr., Speaks at City High School—Rev. John Brock at Borough High

Exercises commemorating the anniversary of the birth of George Washington were held in the public schools in both city and borough today. The event was observed this morning at the Plainfield high school by appropriate exercises, consisting of speeches and patriotic songs. The principal address was delivered by Samuel B. Howe, Jr., of the school faculty. Incidentally Principal True said, read, President Roosevelt's speech delivered last week at Lincoln's birthplace.

Mr. Howe said, in part:

"Washington was not a great conqueror, yet during the war for independence he was the heart and brain of the continental army. He lost more battles than he gained, but he kept the army together, fighting against greater odds than did any other general in history. He was not one of the world's great generals, but he was a source of strength without which we should never have gained our independence. He was foremost in war.

"As a statesman we may say that his greatest service was in keeping our country free from any entanglement with the politics of other countries during those eight years of constant struggle for a national existence. Washington was the only man of his time in our history who could have filled the place that he did. He was not a genius, nor one of the world's greatest generals, nor a constructive statesman. But he was Washington. He saw a combination of good qualities in all three of these lines, but such a combination as is rarely found.

"Washington urged the people of this country to avoid sectional strife. With almost prophetic vision he foresaw the evils that were to come upon this nation from the clash of interests of different parts of the country. 'Not many days ago the newspapers were filled with the reports of the threatened selfishness of our western states. I do not need to call to your memory the nullification episode in South Carolina of 1832, the Civil War, or the bitter strife between westerners and easterners in the election of 1896. His advice in regard to our foreign policy was 'The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations, is to have with them as little political connection as possible. Our detached and distant situation enables us to pursue a different course. Why entagle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition?' "

Rev. John Y. Brock, of Trinity Reformed church, addressed the pupils of the borough High School this morning on the subject, "George Washington, the man." Patriotic songs were sung by the school.

The primary department of Somerset school held exercises this afternoon in commemoration of Washington's Birthday. This was the program:

Singing by the school, "Our Country;" recitation, "Like George Washington," Martha Simmons; recitation, "The Boy Washington," Joseph Greenwood; recitation, "The Name of Washington," John Hermann; recitation, "Washington's First Service," Alex Milne; recitation, "What's in a Name," Kenneth Lerie; harmonica solo, Lloyd Snell; recitation, "Betsy Ross," by three pupils 2d grade; recitation, "Bennie Banner," Marie Van Winkle; recitation and flag exercise, three girls 1 grade; singing, "There Are Many Flags;" recitation and song, Selina Cornwell, Elizabeth Kellegher and Charlotte Sutton; exercise, "The First Flag," five boys 3b grade; piano duet, Helen George and Russell Conroy; recitation, "Our Flag," Thomas Cuming; exercise and song, nine boys 3b grade; singing, "Little George Washington;" recitation, "Jane Jones," Harold Whalls; recitation, "What Cannot Be Denied," Ubertus Rickert; recitation, "Our Heroes," Franklin Rowley; recitation, "A High Resolve," Carman Trembath; singing, "Bonny Flag."

DR. ZELIE PRESIDENT OF MINISTERS' ASSOCIATION

The election of officers, together with reports from the census committee, the treasurer and the Good Friday service committee, the election of a new member and action concerning the death of Rev. Edward Love, comprised the chief business at the annual meeting of the Plainfield Ministers' Association, yesterday at the Y. M. C. A. building. The meeting was held at the parish house of Grace church and all the members attended.

The report of the committee on church census showed that the association had received $315 for this work, of which amount $296 was paid to Rev. Mr. Thirrell, who took the census and $20 for printing. The committee is not yet ready to present its complete report. There was also a report on the Good Friday service, the details of which have not been completed. The service will be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, where one of the great oratories will be rendered by a large chorus choir. The treasurer's report showed a balance.

Rev. L. G. Calvey announced the death of Rev. Edward Love, a member since organization, and Rev. L. R. Howard and Rev. Charles L. Goodrich were appointed a committee to draft suitable resolutions. The members of the association will attend the funeral service tomorrow afternoon.

Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, was elected a member and was presented at that time. He made a few remarks, thanking the association for the honor and assuring all that it would have his hearty support.

These officers were elected for the coming year:

A GORGEOUS OUTFIT.

Among the most picturesque and becoming fashions of the moment is that modern combinations the wearing of a fur-trimmed hat or toque with a directoire shoulder scarf, muff, and gown carefully arranged to correspond, says the Philadelphia Record. A magnificent example is in peacock blue satin charmeuse.

The gown is made-up in a very simple directoire style, with a band of sable to border the hem of the skirt and an embroidered waist belt worked in several shades of old gold. The bodice is arranged in an exceedingly becoming fashion with a deep collar of fine tucks and a trimming of sable. Above the fur there is a dainty chemisette of soft white net, which is also very prettily embroidered, while the undersleeves are of net to correspond.

The toque is of peacock blue mirror velvet, made in the latest directoire shape, with a band of brown, brightened with a band of old gold embroidery and arranged with a sable brim. High on one side there are three very beautiful ostrich feathers in the same shade of blue. Peacock blue satin shoes, closely gathered, is used to make the stole, bordered with sable and having the ends finished with old gold embroidery, while to complete the picture there is a large granny muff in velvet, lined with satin and trimmed with gold embroidery and an edging of fur.

Your Mirror.

"Every girl who is dissatisfied with herself should remember that she is better looking than the most kind of looking glasses bids her believe," said a writer recently. "A mirror, it is contended, cannot flatter a face that is in its natural state; that is not 'made up.' Even the very best plate-glass has a pale green tinge, which reflects a color a trifle clear than the original; hair also has always a more glossy sheen than the glass shows. If it is wavy the glass never shows the best of the waves, and if it is straight the glass accentuates the straightness.

"More important, and still better to be remembered and carefully treasured, no one ever looks at the face and form so critically as the owner of it looks at the reflection in the glass."

Handkerchiefs.

Each month sees the colored handkerchief used more than the all-white ones. The borders are in the different tones of the new colors, with pink, lavender, blue and jade green leading. They look quite attractive and seem to fit in with the color scheme of the season, better than the plain white ones do. They have an embroidered initial in the corner, usually inclosed in a circle, which is so much prettier than a wreath.

For the Hair.

The evening coiffure is not complete without an ornament of some description.

To be worn with the new spangled robes of the fine mesaline, chiffon and sofe satin gowns are beautiful hair ornaments in odd shapes. Many are gauze butterflies covered with spangles, which nestle on the hair and glitter under the electric lights. They come in bronze, steel, silver and gold effects and often match the tint of the gown.

MEMORIAL SERVICES FOR FRANCES WILLARD

A service in memory of Miss Frances Willard was held at the W. C. T. U. rooms, yesterday afternoon. An article and remarks concerning the faithful leader of the White Ribbon band, comprised the program. Mrs. T. C. Bodine was in charge of the meeting and others who took part included Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Parse, Mrs. William Staats, Mrs. I. N. West and Mrs. Ramsey Blair. Several of them spoke of personal experiences with Miss Willard, telling of their meeting with her in her home and at W. C. T. U. conventions.

All the remarks about Miss Willard tended to show her exceptional qualities as a leader in the temperance cause and it was the opinion that much of the success today is due to her efforts and all agreed that her influence would never pass away, but would always be an inspiration to the large band of women who are striving for the abolition of the liquor traffic.

BLOOD CLOT ON HEART FATAL TO MRS. DOANE

Mrs. Laura Burnett Doane, wife of Charles E. Doane, of Norwood avenue, died early this morning at Muhlenberg Hospital, where she had been removed for an operation for stomach trouble. Death came suddenly for Mrs. Doane had only been ailing a few weeks and her trouble had not been considered serious. She was removed to the hospital Tuesday, but died before an operation was possible. At 6 o'clock today, Mrs. Doane was attacked with severe heart pains and lived but five minutes. Death was due to the formation of a clot of blood on the heart.

Mrs. Doane is the daughter of John H. Burnett, of Brooklyn, and is survived by her husband and two children, Irene and Burnett. She is a sister-in-law to Fire Chief T. O. Doane, J. Hervey Doane and John H. Doane, of this city, and a cousin to Mrs. A. L. Force. No arrange-

A DINNER CARD MADE AT HOME

A novel little dinner card that was much admired at a children's party was distinctly pretty, apparently perched on the edge of the table. These cards, instead of being bought at several dollars a dozen, were made for a few cents.

Crinkly paper, the kind with butterfly effects, was bought by the sheet, the butterflies' bodies were carefully cut out and mounted on pasteboard rests. This was done in such a way that half-inch of the white mount showed below the butterfly in front. On this the name of a young guest was written.

A straight, narrow strip ran up the body of the butterfly and two diagonal strips supported each wing in the desired position. A somewhat broader strip was then pasted to the body stiffening to act as a rest.

In making these cards care should be taken to choose the butterflies with the short bodies. The effect with a number of these gay butterflies around a nicely trimmed table was novel and beautiful.

The People, Oh, Gee!

"The American people—" began the new United States Senator; but the presiding officer rapped him to order.

"The Senator will confine himself to matters of interest to this body."

The Senate then went into committee of the whole for the consideration of the anticipated size of dividends from their holdings for the coming year.—Puck.

Delicious Turkey Dressing.

Take six or eight small mushrooms, peel, put into saucepan with a piece of fresh butter and let simmer gently for about eight minutes. Drain liquor from them and let cool; rub to a smooth paste with a quarter pound of finely grated breadcrumbs. Add slight seasoning of salt, cayenne, grated nutmeg and grated lemon rind, taking care that the mushroom flavor is not overpowered.

Work one ounce of fresh butter into forcemeat, bind together with the yolk of one egg and add as much of the butter in which the mushrooms are stewed as it will take without being made too moist.

Pound the mixture thoroughly and it will be ready for use. Fill turkey with it, and send mushroom sauce to table with it. Time to prepare forcemeat is one hour.

Syphoanated.

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "They are like alarm clocks. They are highly useful, but there isn't a chance in the world of their being popular."—Washington Star.

NEW EDUCATION FOR FARMERS THEIR PLAN

Practical instruction in farming and kindred topics, to be given the farmers direct from special trains on the Pennsylvania Railroad, is a new plan to be inaugurated by the State Board of Agriculture next month. One train will travel through South Jersey and another over the Camden and Amboy division of the Pennsylvania system. Stops will be made at specified points and lectures will be delivered by experts in various agricultural lines.

The trains will also carry exhibits of agricultural products to add a graphic demonstration to the lectures.

Franklin Dye, of Trenton, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, is now completing the final details of this new move to improve the condition of the New Jersey farmers. This State will practically be the leader in this method of extending advanced and scientific farming.

The plan will be made possible through the co-operation of the State board, the county boards of agriculture, the farmers' institutes, the various local granges, the State agricultural college and the different canneries. If the experiment this spring is the success that it is expected it will be the plan will be put into effect throughout the State next fall.

The trains will be composed of two cars. They will run on a special schedule which will have to be main*tained so that the farmers* will have to be prompt in their attendance at the lectures. Each stop will last fifty minutes, forty minutes being devoted to lectures and ten minutes to questions.

Lectures on different subjects will be given in the two cars simultaneously to save time and there will be four lectures at each stop. The lecturers will be Edward B. Voorhees, president of the State Board of Agriculture and head of the Agricultural Experiment College at New Brunswick; Edward Van Alystyne, of Kinderhook, N. Y.; Professor K. C. Davis, superintendent of the short courses in agriculture at the college; Professor M. A. Blake, horticultural director of the college, and Professor F. C. Minkler, head of the animal husbandry department of the college.

The first train will leave Camden at 8 o'clock March 8, and will cover Palmboro, Bridgeport, Paulsboro, Elmer, Daretown, Salem, Glassboro, New Field, Millville, Mau*rice River, Rio Grande, returning to* Camden. The second train will leave Camden over the Amboy division of the Pennsylvania at 8 o'clock March 11 and will reach Masonville, Jobstown, Columbus, Cranbury Station, Lower Jamesburg, Howell, Allenwood, reaching Trenton at 6:50 p. m. No lectures will be given at Trenton.

At each place the train will stop as the citizens and the farmers will be expected to have gathered before the arrival of the train in order to take seats in the cars quickly.

LAUGH AWAY TROUBLES AND BE HEALTHY.

Laughter is the elixir of life, which sends good red blood coursing down through the veins, calls the bloom of health to the cheek, the twinkle of joy to the eye, the elasticity of vigor to the step and banishes the worst with the balm of a good conscience. It braces, invigorates, renews, brings back the sunshine and happiness of life, dispells the darkness and misery which have gathered by the wayside, lifts the funeral pall of gloom from the face of humanity, revives hope in its true beauty and brightness and warms the heart of the world with the genial glow of its benign influence.

Man was made to laugh, for he was created to be happy. And not alone does a cheerful individual create happiness for himself, but he instills it, exudes it around him as a fragrant perfume from some rare exotic, so that others partake of it, too.

If you look on the bright side of things it takes the drudgery and worry and pain out of life, snatches the sting from poverty, robs defeat of its conquest and disease of its worries.

Let no difficulties daunt you but with courage let you breast them and overcome them. Some people, when they come to the last obstacle capitulate without firing a shot as the enemy. This is a poor warfare.

Trials only bring out the good in human nature, strengthen and refine it. Don't worry when you meet them. Face them boldly. Meet them with a cheerful countenance and a merry laugh, and these will chase away the cohorts of gloom by which they are surrounded an dcall happiness to your aid.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

SUPERB GLEE CONCERT

MISS MORSE IS CHARMING.

Soprano Soloist Captivates Her Hearers—Mrs. Moore's Piano Renditions Most Perfect.

The Y. W. C. A. Glee Club more than pleased its large audience last night. It was a cultured musical crowd that assembled in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium and therefore one which valued high vocal art.

A more pleasing singer has never visited this city than Miss Leila Livingston Morse, the soprano soloist of the evening, and Mrs. Edward Caldwell Moore's piano renditions were equally enjoyable. Thirty young women of the association, under the able direction of William Holmes, sang holes through the hearts of their admiring audience and were always greeted with applause when they stood up and again when they sat down.

Miss Morse, who is a grand daughter of the great inventor, Samuel F. B. Morse, has a delightful personality, which is appreciated from the first moment of her appearance on the platform. An easy grace and a beautiful voice, which ripples along smoothly over the most difficult parts of the music, demonstrating her perfection of method and trained faculty, she caught on grandly with her hearers last night and drew torrents of approving applause. Her singing was clear and sweet, both in the German and English selections. A number of fine large bouquets of American beauty roses were carried to the platform after each of her appearances.

Mrs. Moore was also the recipient of several floral tributes, of which her skillful piano renditions were highly deserving. William Holmes had his chorus well trained, its songs were one of the most enjoyable features of the long program. The personnel:

Miss Beatrice Miner, accompanist; Miss Margaret Bird, Miss Cora Brokaw, Miss E. J. Calver, Miss Ella Coddington, Miss Lillian Conover, Miss Mabel Conover, Miss Emily Coriell, Miss Irene Dunham, Miss Mabel Durant, Miss Marie Elmer, Miss Dolph Manning, Miss Florence Randolph, Miss Georgia Ricker,, Miss Nora Schenck, Miss Amanda Schupp, Miss Harriet Squier, Mrs. Charles Steiner, Miss Ada Stark, Miss Bessie Van Nest, Miss Wilhelmina Vroom, Miss Emma Windham, Miss Florence Windham.

The young women of the association are to be congratulated on the success of so excellent an entertainment. The secretary, Miss Amy Tapping, and physical director, Miss Margaret Mosher, have labored not in vain.

Will Appeal Meyer's Case.

Robert Newton Crane and W. S. Angleman, of counsel for Mrs. and Mrs. Christopher S. Meyer in their damage suit against the Public Service Corporation, will appeal the case and there will be a fourth trial. The case has already been tried here twice, one ending in a mistrial and the other a disagreement. The third trial this week also ended in a disagreement after the jury was out for eighteen hours.

Where is Francena C. Phillips?

A request is made by Chief Kiely, of the city police, that Mrs. Francena C. Phillips, who in 1887 lived at 15 Broadway, this city, or any of her kin, communicate with him, as he has important news for them.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 28, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Home missions; present day pioneers.—Ecclesiastes xi, 1-4.

Present day pioneer missionaries are in nowise different from those of the past. They are those who stand alone in their work. It may be on the frontier of our country or among the foreign element in the large centers of our country or in our cities, the islands under our control or among the exceptional populations of our land. The pioneers are the first missionaries. They sow the seed, but do not always gather it when they might expect to in more settled and permanent fields when the sowing has been of long standing. The injunctions to them, as set forth in this passage from Ecclesiastes, are most striking ones and apply to all interested in missions as well as they.

1. The command to preach the gospel regardless of no assurance of immediate returns. "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days." Palestine had irregular droughts and downpours of rain. When the latter came it appeared as though it trod the dried, baked banks of the streams, and then as the rain subsided seeds were cast upon the waters, sank into the now softened soil and brought forth fruit. Some seeds might be washed away and yet at some future time grow and ripen. This is the figure referred to here. Christ is the bread. He is to be proclaimed. The prospects in the pioneer's preaching may not be great, and yet he is to keep on preaching, for "after many days the results will be manifest." Promises are with God, and in His time they will come, and in heaven, if not before, we may be surprised at the largeness of these results. This is true of all Christian and missionary work. "In due season we shall reap if we faint not," hence regardless of prospects, we are "not to be weary in well doing."

2. The gospel is to be preached to all. Christ is the universal Saviour. "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me"; "Give a portion to seven and also to eight." The number is indefinite, symbolizing that all are to be fed upon Christ, the Bread of Life—the rich, the poor, the high, the low, the crowds in the city, the few on the frontier, every nation, people, kindred and tongue. The offcast is as well as the cherished child of the elegant house, those who remain at home and those who travel to sparsely settled portions of our country. And a reason is here put forth for so-doing, "for thou knowest not what evil may be upon the earth" or what evil may befall you. The wheel of fortune turns rapidly in this life. The rich may become poor and the poor rich. Even those who are spiritual should lift up the fallen, "considering themselves lest they also be tempted" and fall and need the help of others to lift them up. And what better claim to it can we have than that in the day of our power we have administered to others? Therefore "whatsoever ye would that men have should do to you do ye even so unto them."

3. The conditions of the times are not to be considered. The man who watches the seasons too closely will not sow and therefore cannot reap. The soul must be ready at any moment. God is always ready and able to bless our labors. We are not to wait, as missionaries or as Christian workers, for the seasons to be propitious. "All seasons are Thine, O Lord," and all seasons are ours. The gospel preached at any time will produce results. "In season and out of season" we are to sow, and "they that sow in tears shall reap in joy."

Tribute to Christian Endeavor.

In the Christian Endeavor Times of London Hon. George Nicholls, M. P., gave the following tribute to the value of Christian Endeavor. Speaking of his actual experience, he says:

First I was a humble but active member of a small society in a country church during the early days of the movement in this country. It furnished several of us (young people) an opportunity for service other than the Sunday school, and these workers became the pastor's "handy men," and a branch mission of the prayer meeting, open air service and week night preaching service. The lookout committee was always on active service, and our sunshine committee carried sunshine into many a sickroom. The Endeavorers also had a fine choir.

I knew every time I entered the pulpit to endeavor to preach that my Christian Endeavorers were praying for me. Week day and Sunday alike they were ever a source of joy to me, and this did not end when I left them to go away to the work at another church, for they still hold up the hands of their present pastor.

During my ministry I have moved in a wider field. Since my election to parliament I could not continue my pastorate, but am preaching every Sunday somewhere. This has given me ample opportunity to see the good work Endeavorers are carrying on, often under trying conditions, and also to hear the splendid testimony of both pastors and people to the effective work of the Endeavorers in both the church and the Sunday school.

I admit there are a few exceptions. Not all are perfect. Not all the ministers and deacons are perfect.

World's Largest Endeavor Union.

The Pennsylvania Christian Endeavor union, the largest in the world, has 4,000 societies, nearly 235,000 members.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN OUGHT TO KNOW.

It is claimed a splendid ironing board cover is made by tacking burlap to the board, and then covering it with a double thickness of old white flannel. This makes a firm, smooth covering which never wrinkles like the blanket covering.

A leather bag of convenient size should be made to keep very fine pointed scissors in, for it not only protects the sharp ends but saves the hands.

When laundering starched articles in winter always add borax to the starch and the cuffs and collars will not lose shape.

A relish made of one can of pimentoes, mixed with finely chopped celery, is well liked. It is covered with French dressing and served on lettuce leaves.

An addition to jelly take a handful of figs, wash them clean and plump them with tepid water. It takes a few hours to do this. Cover them with strawberry gelatine. The figs can be cut and mixed with broken nut kernels.

A woman who likes fads, yet does not care for the accumulation of odd bits of bric-a-brac, purchased a plain silver napkin ring, which she takes with her on her travels, and at each city where she makes an extended visit she has the name of the city, date, etc., engraved upon the ring. It is getting full of names and is very artistic.

When books become badly soiled on the edges, if not gilt edged close the book tightly, then erase the marked with a little soft eraser. This will cut off all rough edges, all soiled marks and leave the book very clean.

In making a glace card ornament, if the card gets soiled with the hands or from mucilage you can dampen a white cloth and wipe off the surface of the card, leaving it perfectly clean. Do not rub the card, for the shiny surface is very thin, much like a veneer.

SIDELIGHTS ON WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

This year 12,554 women registered in Boston to vote for School Committee. Twenty-nine years ago, when the privilege of voting at these elections was first granted to women, only 900 registered, and for the following nine years the average was only a little over 1,000.

The clubwomen of Wisconsin say that in the recent election they answered a question put by Congressman John Jenkins while he was chairman of the committee on the judiciary in the House of Representatives: "Ever since the days of office Congressman Jenkins refused to make any committee report whatsoever upon the proposed sixteenth amendment. He opposed the child labor bill and the bill for a Federal bureau in the interest of children. When the bill for an investigation of the conditions attending the work of women and children was before the committee on the judiciary he is reported to have asked:

"What has Congress to do with women and children?"

In the recent election Congressman Jenkins was retired. The clubwomen of Wisconsin boast that they were directly responsible for the defeat of Mr. Jenkins, and by that defeat they answered his question.

WHEN MOTORING.

Veils are at least three yards long, correspondingly wide and preferably with four ends. They are of silk, of chiffon or of chiffon cloth in plain or sombre shades and finished with wide hems.

For rough weather and for long tours women are sensibly adopting patent calf boots, with waterproof cloth tops treated similarly to the rubberized coats which are invariably worn by men in the motoring outfit. But if the boots are not favored the regulation puttee leggings of pigskin or grained leather may be strapped above the ordinary shoe.

Fur-backed kid or fleece-lined suede gloves are of one-button length, as, owing to the vogue of the mosquetaire sleeved frock and the narrowing of motoring coat sleeves below the elbow, gauntlets and long-waisted gloves are no longer a necessity.

English tan and sole leathers, pigskin and wicker are made into hat, glove and veil boxes, lined throughout with leather and furnished with nickel fastenings. Their fittings are of nickel, copper or silver plate, and from four to eight persons may be served from the combined luncheon and tea kits of the automobile hostess.

CORNS AND THEIR CARE.

These painful excrescences of the skin are generally caused by the uneven pressure of tight or ill-fitting boots or shoes. The first aim should be to get rid of the cause, and then pare the surfaces as close down as possible. Painting every night with strong acetic acid, and anointing with olive oil in the morning, will sometimes cure. Caustic pencils of chloride of zinc are also very effective, if applied freely and covered plasters of felt with a hole in the centre give relief to those much troubled; and soaking the feet every morning in tepid or cold strong salt, or vinegar and water, is worth a trial, especially for soft corns, or those between the toes.—Family Doctor.

SHEEP OF NO AVAIL.

AT LEAST FOR THE PURPOSES OF A NARCOTIC.

If Any One Doubts It, and Will Take the Risk of Asking Mr. Butterwick About It, He Will Be Convinced.

Butterwick had a fit of sleeplessness one night lately, and after vainly trying to lose himself in slumber he happened to remember that he once read in an almanac that a man could force himself to sleep by imagining that he saw a flock of sheep jumping over a fence, and by counting them as they jumped. He determined to try the experiment, and closing his eyes he fancied the sheep jumping, and began to count. He had reached his 140th sheep, and was beginning to doze off, when Mrs. Butterwick suddenly said:

"Joseph!"

"Well, what?"

"I believe that yellow hen of ours wants to set."

"No, don't bother me with such truck as that now! Shut up and go to sleep."

Then Butterwick started his sheep again, and commenced to count. He got up to 120, and was feeling as if he would drop off any moment, when, just as his 121st sheep was about to take that fence, one of the twins began to cry.

"Blame that child!" he shouted at Mrs. Butterwick. "Why don't you tend to it, and put it to sleep. Hush up, you fiend, or I'll spank you!"

When Mrs. Butterwick had quieted it, Butterwick, although a little nervous and excited, concluded to try it again. Turning on the imaginary mutton, he began once more. Only 64 sheep had slid over the fence when Butterwick's mother-in-law knocked at the door, and asked if he was awake. When she learned that he was, she said she believed he had forgotten to close the back shutters, and she thought she heard burglars in the yard.

Then Butterwick arose in wrath and went down to see about it. He ascertained that the shutters were closed as usual, and as he returned to bed, he mused a little over 1,000, over the house for good in the morning, or else he would.

However, he thought he might as well give the almanac plan another trial, and setting the sheep in motion he began to count. This time he reached 240, and would probably have got to sleep before the 300th sheep jumped had not Mix's new dog in the next yard suddenly become homesick and begun to express his feelings in a series of prolonged and exasperating howls.

Butterwick was mad. Dropping the sheep, he leaped from bed and began to bombard Mix's new dog with boots, soap dishes and every loose object he could get his hands on. He hit the animal at last and, with a plaster bust of Daniel Webster and induced the dog to retreat to the stable to think about home in silence.

It seemed almost ridiculous to resume those sheep again, but he determined to give the almanac man one more chance, so as they began to jump the fence he began to count, and after seeing the eighty-second sheep safely over, he was gliding gently into the land of dreams when Mrs. Butterwick rolled out of bed and fell on the floor with such violence that she waked both the twins and started them crying, while Butterwick's mother-in-law came downstairs, four steps at a time, to ask them if they that earthquake.

The situation was too awful for words. Butterwick regarded it for a minute with speechless indignation, and then seizing a pillow he went over to the sofa in the back sitting room and lay down on the lounge. He fell asleep in two minutes without the assistance of the almanac, but he dreamed all night that he was being butted around the equator by a Cotswold ram, and he woke in the morning *with a terrific headache and a convic*tion that sheep are good enough for wool and chops, but not worth a cent as a narcotic.—New York Weekly.

An Old Law.

The late Albert Pell, a conservative member of parliament, who devoted his life to the betterment of agriculture, the prevention of cattle disease and the administration of the poor laws, was a man of ready wit.

It is stated in a recently published volume of reminiscences of Mr. Pell that during an election he was asked if he was not the member who had made that law which commanded poor men to support their parents.

"No," he rapped out, "that is an older law. It was written by God Almighty on two tables of stone and brought down by Moses from Mount Sinai; and as far as I can make out, Thomas, it is the stone and not the law that has got into your heart."—Youth's Companion.

An Exception Noted.

"And what are you going to be, my little man?"

"I'm going to grow up like papa."

"That's right. You want to be just like your papa, don't you?"

"Yes, ma'am. Only I ain't a-goin' to kiss Bella behind the door an' have ma ketch me."

Honestly.

McSosh—Gee! Has he sworn off?

De Lush—No—he's actually quit!—Cleveland Leader.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

PLAINFIELD A SUPER-CITY.

Plainfield, N. J., is becoming a city of censors. Let no Jabberwock come burbling at the gates, lest a vorpal sword flash in the air and a doughty champion get galumphing with the head of a monster. While as for the simple citizen who shall dare to play hide and seek for quarter of a minute on a point, he shall have no quarter whatever. The committee has spoken.

It is a pleasure to write thus of a city which has resolved to be good and let who will be clever. Here is a shining light and a super-city and an example in the division of reform labor. One man is appointed to watch the sometimes daring stage, another will keep an eye on the frequently unblushing billboards, a third will follow wherever the scent of lucre leads to the too friendly game—poker, or bridge, or hearts.

We assume that there are in Plainfield no backbiters and no rollers of the morsel of slander. Else should these too invite the censors. But it will be the whole duty of every husband comes home on the curfew hour and that Manhattan may regard with envious eyes the progress of a town free from the offense of snubbing the canons and the polls.

Although in effect the city is on a hill, Plainfield hesitates really at the base of First Mountain. It is in aspiration for the truly innocuous that the town far o'ertops the summit.—New York World.

"So-Called or Alleged."

It is sincerely to be regretted that the House of Assembly, under the lead of Mr. Martin, of Essex, descended to the use of a parliamentary technicality to cap the Governor and to discredit the work of one of the most zealous, energetic and valuable commissions this State has had the benefit of in many years.

In transmitting to the Legislature the voluminous reports and recommendations of the State Excise Commission Governor Fort took occasion to say that "At the last session of the Legislature a joint resolution was passed and certified to the Governor by the Secretary of State, authorizing the appointment of an Excise Commission, and it was the evident purpose of it in an attempt to discredit the report. For it is claimed that, notwithstanding the certificate of the Secretary of State, the joint resolution was never passed by the House of 1908, and that for this reason the House of 1909 could not properly recognize the State Commission and must designate it "the so-called or alleged commission."

How trival and unbecoming such an objection is, is shown by the fact that both Senate and House last year passed the special appropriation to meet the expenses of just such a commission, though it was not specifically named in the appropriation bill. Furthermore, the Governor has power to appoint such a commission on his own initiative and direction, and if will then be a State commission. And still further, a Governor House did appoint a commission of its own, without the concurrence of the Senate; so that the technical point raised is absurd and could only be made use of as a cover for a motive.

The main purpose is to discredit the work and the report of the Excise Commission, the secondary matter being a rap at the Governor for assuming, upon the certificate of the Secretary of State, that the joint resolution passed both houses. It is a piece of small business from either point of view.

No commission ever appointed in New Jersey has worked more assiduously than that headed by Mr. Fiske. None has reported such an array of facts bearing on excise conditions in this State, and none have thrown more light on a subject of such profound public interest and demanding so much consideration, on the part of the Legislature itself as well as of the every intelligent citizen of this State. The moral effect of the excise commissioners' investigations will not cease to be felt for years to come. They discovered and brought to light violations of the excise law in practically every part of the State, but they did far more: they showed to a startled people the intrigues of excise boards, the ignorance and dereliction of police departments and of municipal officials, and the practically collusive inaction of even some of the courts of justice.

To attempt to belittle such a work and such a commission by dubbing it "so-called or alleged" is to show an utter lack of appreciation of what has been done and well done under perfectly competent authority. The House will do itself and to public sentiment throughout this State to promptly retract its "so-called or alleged" resolution, and act upon the excise report with the dignity and respect due its importance and its merits.—Newark News.

THE NEWEST IN VEILS.

As it is fashionable now to swathe the face with a veil, borders are not an essential trimming of it, perhaps would be left in the folds that are posed under the chin when the bag-shaped veil is worn. Little frills of necessity go, and so do all the other fanciful edgings.

Some of the new veils have a boa and eye at the back, which when drawn up to the brim of the hat gives the veil the baggy appearance that is now approved from the front and side views of the face.

THE LAND OF FEDORA

A Country That Has Long Since Passed Away

"Ha! ha!" cried the first ancient mariner.

"I'll bet ye," said the second, "that ye're thinkin' of Fedora."

"Fedora," said the first, "was a South American country, but you needn't look for it on the map because it ain't there—"

"And this is why," said the second.

"And this is why," said the first. "The ruler of Fedora was an uneasy kind of a potentate, always wanting laws to be passed. The people mustn't do this under penalty, and they mustn't do that under penalty, and with one thing and another it went from bad to worse until he had a law passed that the people must always stick to the literal truth under penalty of imprisonment without the option of a fine."

"And that's how it began," said the second ancient mariner.

"Well, sir, Bill and me landed in Fedora the next day, filled with innocence about the passage of incriminating regulations, and we made a few remarks, pronounced, about a sea serpent or two, a day's run we made, a tidal wave we saw and a few odd things like that—"

"Thinking no harm."

"And first thing we knew we were in jail, tight. But we hadn't been in long when another string of prisoners were conducted to the dungeons. Six. 'What are you in for?' said we. First man said: 'I was telling a certain senorita that she was the most beautiful in all Fedora and they seized me.' Second man said: 'I was telling a friend about the wisdom of my infant child and they seized me.' Third man said: 'I was relating my experience on a recent fishing expedition and they seized me.' Fourth man said: 'I was telling an old fogy that I was glad to see him and they seized me.' Fifth man said: 'I was telling the boys that my wife didn't care how late I stayed out at night and they seized me.' Sixth man said: 'I was telling a stranger how fast my horse could trot, and here I am.'

"Seniors," said I, as they all began to groan, 'rest easy, for I feel an apprehension that we shall soon have company.'"

"A lot of company," corrected the first.

"My muchenedos," said the second. "And while I was still making the observation about the propinquity of company the doors swung open again and a dozen more prisoners were cast into the cells. Three were merchants, three were lawyers, one was the weather man, one was a huckster who had been crying 'Fresh fish,' one was a real estate agent who had been caught saying that the plumbing was in good order, one was a painless dentist and the other two had been caught signing blithesome letters 'Yours truly.'"

"This is outrageosos," said one.

"Mally! But some one shall suffer for this!' said another, and the rest began to gnaw their nails and hiss between their teeth.

"'Seniors,' said I, 'fear not, for unless I greatly mistake the signs and portents, Fedora is in for larks.'"

Whereupon the two ancient mariners made merry and were glad.

"By eight o'clock that night we were six in a cell," said the first.

"By nine o'clock we were ten in a cell," said the second.

"By ten o'clock they were stuffing them into the courtyard," said the first.

"And still they came. In the morning the court had to sign an order enlarging the confines of the jail to include the market place and the grand opera house and before noon the order was amended to include the regimental barracks, the racetrack and all the public parks. Feeding the prisoners became a serious problem and when it came to me I had to do was to tell about a storm he had seen once where the hailstones were as big as hens' eggs and immediately he was placed under arrest, and instead of feeding others somebody had to feed him.

"Well, sir, the prisoners came in by the shoals and droves and the court had to pass another order still further enlarging the limits of the jail to include all that territory lying within the boundaries of Fedora. Next morning there were no hucksters and you ought to have heard the way the prisoners howled, insisting on their constitutional rights to be fed.

"'But, senors, the cooks are all in jail,' said a voice.

"'Then let the judges pardon them,' cried the prisoners in response.

"'But, senors, the judges are in jail, too,' said the voice.

"'Then let the legislature pardon them!'

"'But the legislature is also in jail,' said the voice.

"'Then we'll elect a new legislature,' said the people.

"'But you can't,' said the voice, 'it is the law that any man who is imprisoned shall lose his right to vote and there isn't a free man in Fedora today.'

"What!' said somebody, 'is the ruler a prisoner, too?'

"'Yes,' said the voice, 'somebody called me a fool and I called him a liar—but on reflection I gave myself up.'

"And that," said the first ancient mariner, "was the end of Fedora."

"And that," said the second ancient mariner, "is why you needn't look for't on the map."

THE BOY'S BATTLES.

Mothers should let their boys fight their battles, even though it hurts them to see their darlings come home with black and blue spots and muddy clothes.

Boys have to fight battles today as their fathers before them. All modern teaching that children should be taught that boys should be friendly to each other, is very well in theory, but the "bully" is still in existence today, and the word "liar" is answered by a blow in the best bred circles.

Boys should not get into fights for the sake of fighting, but every boy has to learn to take care of himself when he rolls back of the world, with other boys.

As soon as the mother starts to side with her boy, to show sympathy for him and reprimand other boys for their brutality, she will have to stand for that boy's unpopularity and see him grow into a coward, unless if she allows him to fight his own battles, even at the expense of a few bruises and scratches, he will be worth while. The whimpering child who always runs to his "mother" with every offense has small chance in the big game of life to come. And when he grows up that boy will strongly resent his mother's attitude and her teaching.

PICTURES IN ONE'S ROOM.

It is always a pretty touch in a bedroom to have photographs in evidence. It is always permissible to have the sitting or living room filled with them—not only those of your friends, but those of the family. The latter are not given the posts of honor in handsome frames, but they can be scattered over mantel and table.

Apart from this rule of good taste concerning the family photograph, in prominent positions, the use of photographs as decorations should be wisely taken up.

They give a touch of life, of vitality and of interest to a room as no other pictures do. An informal room crowded with the faces of one's friends has something of the coziness of a brightroom filled with cheerful, well-dressed people.

Photographs, as a rule, are not hung on the walls, except in cases of extra large and handsome ones. It is really not necessary that they should be framed, although the wide variety and reasonable price of frames put this chance in the way of everyone.

The artists who take photographs today do it in such an artistic way that the result is lovely enough to stand on its own merit. The old glazed surface is gone, and colored papers are used instead.

Newark Automobile Show.

Everything is ready for the opening of Newark's second automobile show in the armory Saturday. Workmen have been engaged draping the armory building in the national colors. Every inch of floor space has been taken and the show will be a very representative one. There will be about 75 or 80 cars on view during the week, *aside from a complete line of acces*sory exhibits. An elaborate program has been arranged for the week, which will include music every afternoon and evening and a moving picture exhibition every night. There will include a reproduction of the Grand Prix and Vanderbilt cup contest. Wednesday night will be set aside for the New Jersey National Guards and will be termed "Troop Night." Thursday night will be "Club Night" and the day of the Daguberi creation is entirely too severe and really not practical.

Wait—not for long, for the cat will jump soon. Then the mode for spring will be settled.

The Making of a Gown.

The satin gown often has an absolutely plain skirt—devoid of trimming—that is, though there may be some ripple of drapery to break the severity. Embroidery here and there, chiefly in the color of the frock material, but often with dull gold or silver introduced, is a favorite trimming for satin, and indeed for all materials, such beautiful things of this sort are offered among the ready-made trimmings that it is not always necessary to resort to the more costly expedient of having the embroidery done to order. Where embroidered net in the right color is not to be found, it is advisable to have a white embroidered net dyed to the desired shade, and if it will answer one's purpose this will be found much less expensive than having the embroidery done especially for the making of the frock.

Saw His First.

About the year 1707 William Penn became heavily involved in a lawsuit, and the author of a recent biography, entitled "Quaker and Courtier," says that he was greatly in fear—under the laws of the day —of being arrested. Many noble personages were in the same plight, but no other, it is believed, resorted to Penn's expedient in meeting the situation.

In the door of his London house he had a peeping hole made through which he could see any person who came to him. A waiter was then sent in his name, and, having been *made to wait more than a reason*able time, knocked for the servant and asked him:

"Will not your master see me?"

"Friend, he has seen three," replied the servant, "and does not like the looks of thee."—Youth's Companion.

ARRANGING THE HAIR IN THE PRESENT STYLE.

Styles change in hair dressing as frequently as in body dressing, and just now the crown of glory has all the appearance of a mass that is ready to slip down from the neck. It won't, that is if it is professionally arranged, but it takes a basket of pins to arrange the hair. Possibly your maid is interested in a few simple styles. I would not attempt describing the more elaborate coiffures without photographs. One good style shows the hair parted from the centre of the head to the nape of the neck. The hair is drawn to each side, slightly waved, "ratted" and coiled on rolls back of the ears. These coils, while large, are well brushed and smooth looking, even though rather large. The loose ends of the hair at the back, if not of sufficient quantity to make a Psyche knot or figure "8," are "ratted," pinned in place and covered with the artificial coil.

Another style shows the artificial hair divided into two places, coiled like a rope and banded around the head, each part being drawn out and pinned in place with small pins. The nets are essential in any graceful hair arrangement, but they should be carefully placed, or they are likely to make the hair look banked and heavy.

The side part is youthful and often softens the face of a woman with commonplace features. A fluffiness around the face, without flying curls or wisps of hair, is aimed for and some of the picturesque results are satisfactory in every way. I observe little "fluffy" dressing this season, with plain shell combs, carved combs and ribbons worn in the evening.—Woman's National Daily.

COOKING AND SERVING OYSTERS.

Don't make the mistake of serving big oysters at a woman's luncheon. Men may know that a Lynnhaven is juicier and more delicious than the boasted blue point, but the few women who know it will not acknowledge that their mouths are equal to the swallowing feat.

Don't over-condiment or oversauce. A true oyster epicure uses just a bit of lemon, knowing that more destroys the oyster flavor; the man or woman who does not share the taste of England's George in oysters will go slow on tabasco, horseradish and catsup lest that dreaded bad oyster slip down unawares.

Don't over-cook. Many things may go wrong when one forsakes the oyster raw, but most faults are conquerable as long as the stove has not had too long an inning. However cooked, the epicure knows that a slightly curling beard is a sign that the oyster is done.

To Be or Not To Be.

"Passe is the feminine"—is the prophecy from one side.

"Long live (during this spring and summer) the empire"—comes from another source.

Now, which is it to be?

Quite a stir has been recently caused in Paris by the gown created for the Merovingian Queen in the play, "The Good King Dagobert," which has taken Paris by storm. My, what a drop of waist lines in this gown! Oh, how the empire creations in same couturiers must have shuddered and jealously and at the same time felt the horror of their probable fate!

Let us hope that if the reign of the empire mode is at an end that it will not be succeeded by the exact mode of the Dagobert creation—it is entirely too severe and really not practical.

Wait—not for long, for the cat will jump soon. Then the mode for spring will be settled.

The Making of a Gown.

The satin gown often has an absolutely plain skirt—devoid of trimming—that is, though there may be some ripple of drapery to break the severity. Embroidery here and there, chiefly in the color of the frock material, but often with dull gold or silver introduced, is a favorite trimming for satin, and indeed for all materials, such beautiful things of this sort are offered among the ready-made trimmings that it is not always necessary to resort to the more costly expedient of having the embroidery done to order. Where embroidered net in the right color is not to be found, it is advisable to have a white embroidered net dyed to the desired shade, and if it will answer one's purpose this will be found much less expensive than having the embroidery done especially for the making of the frock.

Saw His First.

About the year 1707 William Penn became heavily involved in a lawsuit, and the author of a recent biography, entitled "Quaker and Courtier," says that he was greatly in fear—under the laws of the day —of being arrested. Many noble personages were in the same plight, but no other, it is believed, resorted to Penn's expedient in meeting the situation.

In the door of his London house he had a peeping hole made through which he could see any person who came to him. A waiter was then sent in his name, and, having been *made to wait more than a reason*able time, knocked for the servant and asked him:

"Will not your master see me?"

"Friend, he has seen three," replied the servant, "and does not like the looks of thee."—Youth's Companion.

THE NEW SKIRTS.

Some pleated—both side-pleated and box-pleated—skirts are still worn, though they are not really smart. For the walking-length skirt the plain, circular effects are best, though some fan-pleated panels are mentioned as possibilities. They solve the difficulties of the woman who dislikes the very narrow skirt of the moment.

But, after all, as the English say it, the directoire fashions are still "going strong." Whether or not this may be only the result of our increased familiarity with these classic dresses seem more graceful than the forms seen a few months ago, and this is especially true of the latter forms. They continue to mould the hips, but almost loosely, so perfectly are they hung, says Harper's Bazar. These skirts, of course, are responsible for the new and pliable stuffs which are surely the softest fabric the western world ever produced. There are serges recently put on the market which are so fine and soft that the width may be crushed in the hand, like a width of chiffon. They are side-pleated, beautifully dyed, and closely woven (notwithstanding their almost loose appearance). They are sure to be generally seen in the spring and summer.

LOW-NECKED GOWNS AT THE THEATRE.

The dress with a choker (it should be choking) collar bids fair to disappear from the theatre in the evening.

The suppression of hats in the theatre has had an excellent result in bringing back among us the "robe decollete," such as the English and the French love, and have long worn, says L'Art et la Mode. We shall have women in evening gowns, as they logically should be.

The guimpes which have been worn with theatre gowns and the big hats have totally disappeared.

Heart-shaped and round decolletes, "baby necks" that show the line of the neck and the shoulders so prettily—all these the infinitely becoming and accompany better than any other fashion the coiffure "en casque" which we have to adopt now.

It has long been evident that the American woman more punctiliously gowned herself in the low cut evening dress for evening dinner than for other occasion. The opera then began to witness her triumph as a well-gowned woman, but the pretty house dress too long did duty as an evening gown.

Women have been slow to adopt the decollete for regular evening wear, but, as a natural consequence of the empire high waist, all varities and shapes of the decollete have appeared.

AN ORIGINAL BABY SHOW.

A baby show which brought none of the heart burnings and maternal jealousies, too, usual on such occasions, in its train was given in a fashionable suburb of New York one day last week.

In most ways it was conducted like the conventional exhibition of the same, the youngsters being dressed in their best, classified according to age, etc.

But here the resemblance ended for instead of a beauty prize, a "finest child in the show prize" and other such dangerous awards, all the trophies were humorous. Thus, one prize was given for the biggest foot, another for the most hair, one for the fattest legs, and yet another for the greatest number of teeth at a certain age. The function ended in laughter and general good feeling.

Safety in Flight.

"I understand you have invented an airship that won't tip over."

"That is my belief," replied the cautious inventor. "At least it won't tip over while on the ground, and it hasn't been anywhere else yet."—Philadelphia Ledger.

ONE WAY TO CURE A COLD.

"How did I keep free from colds last winter?" said the woman who had been a chronic sneezer. "By means of a blanket so old it was almost in holes.

"I kept it tucked under the elder down of my bed, and each night during the winter when I felt myself getting creepy or feared a cold that blanket was dragged forth, made toasty hot and wrapped around me from head to feet.

"It was wrapped so tight that there was no possibility of it slipping off during sleep, and the extra warmth seemed to break a cold without a day's or hour's stinks.

"I kept the blanket within easy reach, so that if I chilled suddenly at night I could drag it under the covers and warm up in a few minutes.

"A woman told me once when I was enthusing upon my blanket cure that she considered it a filthy habit, and preferred colds. I do not as long as my blanket can be aired thoroughly each day and can be popped into the wash-tub at frequent intervals. It is so old that washing it is little trouble.

"Why not wear a flannel night dress instead? Because they are ugly, and, further for nights when I am not 'taking cold' and not warm enough for the times when I am in the preliminary stages of grip or pneumonia or any of the ills that follow chilling."

Politeness Caused His Fall.

After patronizing the back lines for a good many years he climbed onto the water wagon the first of January and took a seat. The news that he was traveling over the opposition route was soon noised abroad and attracted considerable attention. Within a week, however, a friend coming upon him at an unguarded moment caught him fooling in a dilettante way with the brew. "Here," ejaculated the friend, "how is this? I thought you were on the water wagon?"

"I was," he replied, sadly, "I was. But I got up to give my seat to a lady and fell off."—Topeka Capital.

THE DISH PROBLEM AND ITS SOLUTION.

Some women who cannot afford a cook will do without a new dress in order to pay a small girl to keep the dishes clean after each meal. Yet this same woman would be quite horrified at the thought of buying a dish-washing machine.

The modern woman has to be educated up to the idea that it is folly to use one's hands where a machine will do as well. Perhaps the fault lies with the old makes of dish-washers, which took as long to clean as to wash the dishes. The newest machines are simple in construction easy to clean, and moderate in price.

The best dish-washers are made with a galvanized iron cylinder, into which is fitted a cylindrical tray or basket. The cylinder is half filled with soapy water, which is brought to the boiling point when the dishes are put into the tray or basket.

A dish-washer not only saves time, but prevents breakage from harried cooks. When a woman does her own work not the least advantage of machine dish-washing is that it protects the hands from the scalding water.

PLAINT OF THE POETESS.

The poetess lay in her narrow bed
And stared with pain-glazed eyes at
The dirty ceiling overhead, noting, as one in a dream, the great holes in it and half forming a wish that it would rain no more. The sun was high in the heavens. With fancy's eye she could see it flooding hill and dale, with golden glory, dispelling autumnal mists in forest glades and lending richer, rarer tints to the goreous livery of the woods.
In fancy, too, she could hear the sweet songs of birds, the merry laugh of happy children gamboling on village greens, and her whole soul rose in revolt and her heart cried out with its pain. She longed to leave her bed and be up and away, but she knew that it was an impossibility.

"Oh," she cried in her agony of spirit, "why doesn't that washerwoman bring my bloomers?" Beating her pillow frenziedly, the poetess cursed the day she chose literature for a profession.

One Lives and Learns.

An old captain and his mate went into a restaurant near the docks and ordered dinner. The waiter placed a plate of curious liquid before them.

"I say, young fellow, what's this stuff?" shouted the captain.

"Soup, sir," replied the waiter.

"Soup?" shouted the old seadog. "Soup? Bill"—turning to his mate—"just think of that! Here you and me have been sailing on soup all our lives, an' never knowed it till now."—Pearson's Weekly.

HAVING DELIGHTFUL TIME AT TITUSVILLE, FLORIDA.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Wheeler, of Park avenue, who are sojourning at Titusville, Florida, have been guests at a number of important social functions given at that place. Recently they were guests at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. John Newton Porter, prominent residents of Brooklyn, at the Hotel Dixie, Titusville.

During their stay in the South, Mr. Wheeler has been bringing home large strings of duck and quail daily. Last Saturday he and a party spent the day in the woods and bagged twenty-six quail. Mr. Wheeler prepared the lunch for the party and all voted the coffee a great success. Col. Robert N. Thompson, of New York, entertained a large party of friends on his paratial houseboat, "Sunbeam" and gave a tea. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler. They are guests at Hotel Dixie.

NEW YORK SYNDICATE TO DEVELOPE PROPERTY

A syndicate of New York real estate men has planned extensive development of property in the west end of the city and borough. They recently bought in all about ninety acres of land, including portions of farm land owned by Charles Debele, Newton D. Smalley and H. C. Compton, and thus far have paid about $41,000 for their purchases. They propose to erect a number of modern houses and otherwise improve the land.

The good portion of the property will be laid out in park style and the plans also provide for a lake in the centre of the tract, most of which is in the borough. To accomplish this a dam will be built at a point where the borough property adjoins that of Mr. Compton in the city. Mr. Smalley is also planning to erect a number of fine houses on his tract of land in the same vicinity and within the next year great changes will be brought in that part of North Plainfield.

Plans have been decided upon for the opening up and improvement of *Greenbrook road, whereby that thor*oughfare will be made one hundred feet wide. The roads in that vicinity will be improved. Percy Dayton recently purchased the Stiny residence of N. B. and W. L. Smalley, Jr., which is located near West End and Rockview avenues and is making extensive repairs prior to occupying the same. Plans have also been decided upon looking toward a general improvement of all the land near West End avenue and Greenbrook road.

Hooking the Shields.

A girl who has theories on the evils of pinned shields will not use the tiny safety ones sold for that purpose. She compromises by not sewing in her shields after each washing, but hooks them in.

A small non-rustable hook is sewed on the corners of each shield, and an eye to correspond on the proper place on the armhole. The preliminary sewing takes only a few minutes, and is much easier than fastening a shield with a needle and thread each time it is changed.

WARREN CHAPEL MEN FORM BEREAN CLASS

The Men's Bible Class of Warren chapel met at the chapel, last night, for the purpose of effecting a permanent organization. Despite the stormy weather there was a large attendance. E. E. Parvin, who is the teacher of the class, was in charge last night and addressed the men and explained that much better work can be accomplished through a permanent organization, which will be in conjunction with other societies of the chapel.

After Mr. Parvin's remarks, it was decided to organize and the class will be known as the "Berean Bible Study Class of Warren chapel. The following officers were elected: President, C. F. Windham; vice-president, D. A. Mills; secretary, W. S. Kenney; treasurer, W. J. Webb. A social hour followed when there were phonographic selections by Edward Cranston and refreshments were served. The committee in charge comprised Alfred Everitt, chairman; W. P. Welsh, Theodore Martin and Alexander Dresslet. Among the decorations for last night's affair was an American flag owned by Alfred Everitt, of Fairview avenue, which is now forty-seven years old and had been draped for the inaugurations of Presidents Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley.

TWO MASHERS SENT TO JAIL FOR TWENTY DAYS.

The elaborate fiction narrative of Clifford Calehuff and Thomas Hamill, two "mashers," who started in Monday after they had absorbed numerous drinks, and gave the names of two local women as a reason for their arrest, faded to a verscious confession at the city court before Judge Runyon yesterday, and they were given their choice of "$5 or twenty days" at their hearing. Both went "down the road."

Mrs. Catherine Cahill, whose love of strong drink frequently lands her in police court, was arrested again after a week-end carouse, and went to Rahway for a thirty day term in lieu of paying a $5 fine. She was found helplessly drunk Saturday night.

A GEORGE WASHINGTON BALL BY GESANG AND TURN VEREIN.

The Gesang and Turn Verein held a merry dance at Saengerbund hall last night in celebration of Washington's birthday. The members and their friends were out in large numbers and it was one of the largest affairs held by the society this season.

The reception committee was composed of George Schlereth, F. Kohler, Fred Becker, and Frank Sieddler; floor managers, J. Alster and A. R. Vail; committee on arrangements, John Schepp, chairman; A. R. Vail, secretary and treasurer. B. A. Paroubek furnished the music.

GAVE FAREWELL PARTY TO MR. AND MRS. KNOX.

A gay party spent the evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Lynch last night. The affair was a farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Culver B. Knox, of East Second street, who are to move this week to Montclair, and was arranged by Mrs. John McKeon, mother of Mesdames Knox and Lynch.

Thirty people were in attendance and some spirited card games were in progress during the evening. The first prize for women was won by Mrs. Harding; second, Mrs. Mc Cormick; first prize for men, James McKeon; second, Thomas Dorgan. Consolation prizes were awarded to Miss Elsie Knowlton and Fred Todd.

Use for Old Tablecloths.

One housekeeper has found a somewhat novel use for her tablecloths that are too worn for use; she cuts them into covers for her card tables, of which family is an inveterate lover of games of all sorts there are a number of the green-covered card tables in the house. These soon get so dusty as to soil light dresses. To prevent this they are covered each time before playing with squares made from the old tablecloths. The cloth is cut into squares two or three inches larger than the tables, are hemmed neatly all around and tapes are fastened at each corner to tie the cover around the legs of the table.

Horrors of Minstrelsy.

Bones—Mistah Walkah, kin yo' tell me w'y a ward caucus am like a walkin' tarm.

Interlocutor—No, George; that's a hard one. Why is a ward caucus like a valise?

Bones—'Cause yo' most jin-ky packs it afo' yo' carries it.

Interlocutor—Ladies and gentlemen, Sig. Jarr de Footle, the eminent and popular basso, will now sing the touching ballad, "Think of the Microbes on a Street Car Strap!" —Chicago Tribune.

L. M. French Purchases Property.

L. M. French, of Craig place, has purchased the Bishop property on Johnston's drive, north of the Grossman school, consisting of a dwelling house and three acres of land, and will make it his summer home hereafter. By the purchase Mr. French now owns seven acres on the highest point of the mountain.

HEALTH BOARD TENURE

Mayor Townsend Provides for Proper Rotation in Office for Borough Members.

MAKES NEW NOMINATIONS.

Isaac Schwed, Joseph O. Osgood, C. H. Rugg, A. E. Kenney and Dr. Dundon Appointed.

Mayor Townsend, last night, unravelled the tangle in the matter of the tenure of office of the members of the North Plainfield Board of Health, by reappointing them all and specifying the length of time each is to continue in office. His appointments were confirmed by the Council, then in session. The Mayor's message in regard to the matter follows:

"Gentlemen of the Council:

"Some question having recently been raised relative to the term of office of members of the Board of Health, I have investigated the matter, in conjunction with the Borough Counsel, and found the facts to be as follows:

"The statutes creating Boards of Health provided that the term of office of members should be not exceed four years and in North Plainfield such terms were arranged originally so that while the terms of different members expired in different years, yet all expired in March.

"On February 15, 1905, a statute was enacted which extended the term of office of all members of the Board then serving, from the following March to the first day of the following January.

"At the time this statute became effective the Board was made up as follows:

"Mr. Honeyman, whose term naturally would expire March, 1905, but was extended by said statute to January 1, 1906.

"Mr. Loyd, whose term naturally would expire March, 1906, but was extended by said statute to January 1, 1907.

"Mr. McLoughlin, whose term naturally would expire March, 1906, but was extended by said statute to January 1, 1907.

"Mr. Osgood, whose term naturally would expire March, 1907, but was extended by said statute to January 1, 1908.

"Dr. Adams, whose term naturally would expire March, 1908, but was extended by said statute to January 1, 1909.

"However, the fact that these terms had been extended by the statute referred to was lost sight of with the result that the members whose term expired gave up their office in March just as if the term had expired. Such giving up by them, I am advised by our counsel, had the same legal effect as if the members had resigned.

"In some instances new members were appointed, and in others the old members were re-appointed. These appointments were made ostensibly for the full term of four years in each case. However, the statute expressly declares that when ever any vacancy occurs in these offices, whether caused by resignation or otherwise, it can only be filled for the unexpired term. Consequently, in no matter what may have been the belief or intention at the time, the legal effect was that whenever a member of the Board was appointed to take office subsequently to February 15, 1905, he was in law appointed only for the unexpired term. Examination with this fact in view shows that every present member of said Board was in law appointed only for an unexpired term, which unexpired term has in turn now expired. Each present member is therefore now in the position of holding over until his successor is appointed. The statute provides for this, declaring that whenever a term expires the incumbent shall hold over until his successor is appointed and takes office. Consequently all acts of the Board are just as legal and binding as if the members had been appointed in strict accordance with the statute.

"The conclusion is reached, therefore, that the present members of the Board, all of whom are holding over as above stated, are representing as follows:

"Honeyman term, now filled by Dr. Dundon, expires January 1, 1910; should now be appointed for 1 year.

"Love term, now filled by Mr. Kenney, expires January 1, 1911, should now be appointed for 1 year.

"McLoughlin term, now filled by Mr. Rugg, expires January 1, 1911; should now be appointed for 2 years.

"Osgood term, now filled by Mr. Osgood, expires January 1, 1912; should now be appointed for 3 years.

"Adams term, now filled by Mr. Schwed, expires January 1, 1913; should now be appointed for 4 years.

"In order to straighten out this matter and comply strictly with the statutes, I now nominate, and by and with your consent, appoint for members of the Board of Health of this borough as follows:

"Dr. A. H. Dundon, to serve for the unexpired term ending January 1, 1910.

"Andrew E. Kenney, to serve for the unexpired term ending January 1, 1911.

"Calvin H. Rugg, to serve for the unexpired term ending January 1, 1911.

"Joseph O. Osgood, to serve for the unexpired term ending January 1, 1912.

"Isaac Schwed, to serve for the full term of four years ending January 1, 1913.

"By these appointments, if confirmed by you, these gentlemen will each serve out the full term for which it was supposed he was appointed.

"I have put this communication in this somewhat formal and detailed shape in order that our minutes may contain a record to which reference may be had in the future whenever question may arise as to the terms of members of said Board. In the past the records have been kept in so detached a manner that it was extremely difficult to work out the exact state of facts.

"Dated, January 8, 1909.

"Respectfully,

"Samuel Townsend, Mayor."

JAWBONE IS BROKEN BY KICK OF A MULE

John Smith, of South Second street, colored, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital this morning suffering from a compound fracture of the jawbone and the loss of six teeth, the result of being kicked by a mule. Mr. Smith has been employed for a month by The Glaser Company at the fat rending factory at Alton. This morning he was carting fat rending materials from the stables to the factory, and the mule he was driving became balky.

"Maude" made a sudden stop and refused to proceed. Smith had employed about every known method, without success, and then began to apply the whip. This was more than the mule could stand and without the least warning the animal raised his hind foot and planted it in Smith's face, with all the power it its command. The man was knocked senseless and was found lying in the road by another employe. Mr. Glaser was summoned and the injured man was taken to the hospital. While his injuries are serious, he will recover.

YALE 'M. B.' SELECTED AS CHURCH ORGANIST

William Smith, M. B., formerly of Hartford, Conn., known throughout the country as an organist and director of church music, has been engaged as organist by the music committee of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, to succeed William Dunn, who now holds that position. The change will become effective May 1.

Mr. Smith is a graduate of Yale University, where he was given a degree in music, and he has had an extensive English training in music. He has a wide reputation in the execution of church music and has had great success in directing choirs. He formerly held a position of organist in one of the leading churches in Hartford. He is about forty years of age. As yet nothing has been decided upon as to the choir for the coming year.

HEIRS CLAIM BOUGHT BY CLINTON S. HARRIS

The agreement between Floyd Cooper, of Westfield, and Isaac S. Randolph, administrator of Jonathan Randolph, deceased, has been sold by Isaac P. Runyon, attorney for the administrator, to Clinton S. Harris, trustee, for the full amount of $5,000. The assignment, papers and collateral security with it and the agreement were delivered today to William A. Coddington, attorney for Mr. Cooper.

By the terms of the agreement Mr. Cooper, through whose negligence, while driving an automobile, Jonathan Randolph lost his life, the former is to pay $50 every month until $5,000 is paid in settlement of damages to the widow and next of kin of Jonathan Randolph. When Mr. Cooper was arraigned before E. S. Atwater in the Union county court last week, a fine of $1,000 was imposed after leniency was requested, and then the terms of settlement with the Randolph family were agreed upon, through counsel, Isaac P. Runyon, representing the estate and W. A. Coddington for Mr. Cooper.

Wife Murderer Gets Thirty Years.

Michael Leo, the wife murderer, who was convicted of murder in the second degree, was sentenced by Judge Ten Eyck at Newark yesterday to thirty years' imprisonment. The prisoner's counsel gave notice of appeal. Leo's wife was buried to death while she slept. The crime was alleged to have been committed to secure insurance money.

LOCAL BOY WORLD BEATER

Russell J. Lawrence Hurls Shot to Fame; Breaks Record and Gains Plaudits.

WINS THE BOYS' CHAMPIONSHIP.

Pupil of Leal's School, at Meet in Brooklyn, Makes Shot Putting Record 54 Feet 1½ Inches.

Russell J. Lawrence, of this city, a pupil of Leal's school, broke the world's scholastic 12-pound shotput record Saturday, at the 23rd Regiment armory, Brooklyn, hurling the shot 54 feet 1½ inches. The best previous record was held by Ralph Rose, who at San Francisco, on October 10, 1903, heaved the missile 52 feet, 8 2-5 inches.

The event Saturday was the annual indoor meet of the Polytechnic Preparatory Athletic Association. Three public school athletic league records were broken, making it a record smashing carnival. A. B. Cozzens, of the Manual Training High School, the schoolboy champion quarter miler, lowered the time for that distance, doing it in 54 2-5 seconds. P. Crafts, of Poly Prep, and K. Curtis, of Barringer High School, were tied for first place in the pole vault, both breaking the record at 11 feet.

The most notable performance, however, was that of Lawrence, who, besides his wonderful shot-putting, broke the standing broad jump in 9 feet, 3 inches. His nearest competitor was Lentz, of De Witt Clinton School, 9 feet. Lawrence was in fine form, and, although not as heavy to build as some of his competitors, outclassed them all.

For a time six hundred school boys took part in the seventeen events of the meet.

The Plainfield boy has for several years held most of the records of the local Y. M. C. A. and his prowess has enabled his school to compete successfully in the interscholastic championship meets.

CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP THE CALLING FOR MEN

Dr. Stanley White, of New York, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, speaking on "Christian Leadership," at the Y. M. C. A. men's meeting Sunday afternoon, said President Roosevelt's greatest influence had been to inspire men to a new kind of leadership; men who stand for a new idea. Continuing, he said:

"Leadership of forces is at the present time in a state of flux. Some have said that Christian leadership is losing power, but it is not. Men are now challenging and looking into certain phases that heretofore were accepted unquestioned. I would liken the life of an individual to a puzzle picture, the assembling of the different parts of which are for one united purpose. All the purposes of life should be fitted into one great motive, one that is clearly defined.

"To possess Christian leadership one must have a strong and determined will. The person with the power to say no has the power to say yes; to lead; to exercise will. He must have a strong will and live a blameless life; he must recognize his privilege of communion with God. Christ was the ideal leader among men. You cannot picture a more potent life in everything that men call leadership, than was Christ's.

"The Christian may die and have a nameless grave, but he will have started forces that will live long after him. You cannot get away from the responsibility."

BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR MRS. HENRY WINDHAM.

In honor of the thirty-seventh birthday anniversary of Mrs. Henry Windham, which occurred yesterday, Mr. Windham, who is proprietor of the Hotel Waldorf, gave an elaborate banquet at his hotel last night. Covers were laid for fifty guests and the "spread" was one of the best for which Mr. Windham is famous. The banquet was served in the large room on the second floor, which was *handsomely decorated for the occa*sion.

Sociability was the feature of the evening and Mrs. Windham was showered with congratulations by her guests, who wished her many happy returns of the day. During the evening there was a fine program of instrumental and vocal music, which added much to the pleasure of those present. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Gottfried Herold, of Brooklyn, parents of Mrs. Windham. The latter received a number of handsome and costly gifts.

SOLUTION FOR STATE'S FINANCIAL PROBLEMS

If School District Treasuries Have Surpluses, Use Rail Road Tax Funds for Institutions.

SENATOR ACKERMAN'S PLAN.

Union County Solon Gives His Views and Advances Scheme to Prevent Hardships.

State Senator E. R. Ackerman advances an idea that will prevent any deficiency in the treasury and at the same time prevent any State tax being levied on the people. Great weight attaches to his suggestion inasmuch as he is chairman of the Senate's appropriation committee and is known never to define his position on any matter without giving the subject mature consideration.

The Senator believes that if any large surpluses are to be found in the various school districts, obtained from revenue received through the State railroad tax, that there is a good chance of preserving unimpaired the efficiency of the State's institutions, particularly the tuberculosis sanitorium. Part of the large amount received from the railroad tax and now devoted to school purposes, the Senator argues could be used for such institutions in such case.

"In the statement to the voters," said the Senator, "which I issued before the election I said, 'It is axiomatic that the public schools are a priceless safeguard of our liberty and are of untold value to the State. Every effort should be made to guard and protect them in order to meet the requirements of an ever-increasing population.'

"This is not a new thought," said Mr. Ackerman. "It is in direct line with my attitude toward the public school system for many years, as shown by the competitive prizes which the members of our excellent local Board of Education have permitted me to offer to the pupils of the public schools for efficient work.

"The Republican party has always stood for and given liberal support to the public school system of the State and I stand second to none in my desire to see that policy maintained and the schools kept to the highest degree of efficiency and progress.

"If it should be found that as a result of Republican legislation that the railroad taxation for the benefit of free public schools has left a *larger balance of funds in the differ*ent school treasuries of the State, what would be the proper course to pursue? Should we continue the present method and cut down the necessary appropriations for the other institutions of the State be cause too large a percentage of State funds have been distributed among the counties for school purposes? Or must we continue all the appropriations and have a State tax?

"Among the many deserving institutions of the State," continued the Union county Senator, "will be found the Sanitorium for Tuberculous Diseases which let us take as an Illustration of the situation. Shall we falsely economize, cut down and render ineffective the very important work now being done in the direction of battling with the disastrous white plague?

"Which would the people prefer a direct State tax to continue this work and others of a kindred nature or have part of the large amount now devoted exclusively for school purposes appropriated for this specific purpose?

"If it is ascertained that the school boards throughout the State are holding a surplus of funds, could not the interests of the people be protected by using a small part of the railroad tax for the other necessary institutions without impairing the efficiency of the school system?

"It must be conclusively demonstrated, however, that the public school system shall not be impaired before such a suggestion takes substantial form, for at no time in our history has the public school system been so important a factor as it is today in bringing together and making harmonious to our institutions the children of the newly arrived emigrants from many foreign shores."

P. S. C. to Change Office.

The Public Service Corporation has leased the vacant store at 210 Park avenue, the Stirling building, two doors south of The Plainfield Trust Company, where on April 1 it will establish its gas and electric light office now located on East Front street.

Dr. Albert Pittis, of East Front street, has been appointed a surgeon for the New Jersey Central to succeed the late Dr. J. T. Fritts, who held the position for thirty years.

PURCHASE PROPOSED SITE FOR POSTOFFICE

Messrs. Woodhull and Martin have purchased the Embury estate property on East Front street, opposite the First Presbyterian church. Considerable interest attaches to this deal for the reason that this is one of the likely sites for Plainfield's new Federal building. The property was offered with numerous others for the government building.

After a consideration of the various properties, this one was said to be the only one available for the purpose in view of the price. That the land was to change hands so soon was not generally known, and this may affect the site made to the government. Neither Mr. Woodhull nor Mr. Martin could be seen today and their plans for the future could not be learned. This firm a few days ago purchased the Probasco residence property on East Front street, adjoining their large building.

WILL HAVE $21,124.64 FOR BOROUGH EXPENSES

An estimate of the expenditures the borough will have to make this year, is made in a message to the Common Council by Mayor Samuel Townsend. The members will have to wrestle with the problem of trying to make the ends meet at its next meeting, March 5.

This is the mayor's estimate:

"Feb. 19, 1909.

"Mayor's Office,
"North Plainfield, N. J.

"Gentlemen of the Council:

"I submit for your consideration the following:

"The total amount of borough ratables for the year 1908, after deducting the amount taken off by the County Board of Taxation, viz. $117,842, was $4,381,408.

"The tax rate for the year 1908 was $1.68 per $100 taxable valuation (not including State school tax).

"The highest rate that can lawfully be made for the year 1909 is $1.75 on $100 taxable valuation. Assuming the taxable valuation for 1909 to remain the same, this rate would yield the sum of $76,674.64.

"As the budget of the Board of Education has been made up and the voters will be asked to authorize the raising by tax of the sums called for, we can now estimate the amount required for the year 1909 exclusive of borough expenditures to be as follows:

Special school tax asked for:
Current expenses	$20,905
Repairs	1,900
Manual training	1,825
Bonds and interest	5,920
County tax (estimated)	25,000
Total	$55,550

"Deducting this sum from the total amount that can lawfully be raised, $76,674.64, and there will be left for the borough the sum of $21,124.64 to pay for work on streets, street lighting, police, fire protection and all other expenses.

"The borough expenditures for 1908 aggregated $20,884.95 and while the expenses for the year were $4,192.51 less than those for the year of 1907, it is difficult to see where a further saving can be made for the present year.

"I shall not ask you to take up this question now but hope that you will give it consideration and be prepared to take action at our next meeting.

"Samuel Townsend, Mayor."

HE TOLD THE TRUTH:
GOT A LIGHT SENTENCE.

Imbued with the cardinal principle of truth as exemplified by George Washington, on whose birthday he went on a combative drunk, which involved John Mara, a fellow iron molder, Daniel Kiely, who lives on West Fifth street, "fessed up" as the trouble maker in a lively fight on Front street yesterday, which landed both in police court this morning. Kiely had to pay $5 only for his fun and Mara was given a suspended sentence.

"I guess I was drunk, Judge," said Kiely today, after Mara had outlined the bout by rounds and explained how he had been harrased by the other until forced to fight in self-defense. He was good on the witness stand, for he early had a nasty "abrasion" under the right eye, which just fitted his knuckles. It seems that the sight of latent power in each other, and the realization of the effects of booze, just got the pair naturally scrappy. It was no easy tapping during the fight, and Detective-Sergeant Flynn and Patrolman Charles Flynn were both needed to get them under control.

INSURANCE MEN'S DINNER

Those Who Help Keep Concern as Strong as Gibralter Hold a Feast.

SUPT. EVANS TOASTMASTER.

Morton Schiff, W. H. Riker, G. W. Hope and R. B. Bowman Among the Speakers.

As a reward for faithfulness and for attaining a certain record in the amount of new business during the past year, the Prudential Insurance Company of America, tendered a banquet last night to Superintendent D. O. Evans and staff, of the Plainfield district, and debarring from the usual custom, included the wives and sweethearts of the agents in the entertainment. The affair was held at The Park Club, and was the best in the history of the local district.

The pretty clubhouse was appropriately decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns and cut flowers and American flags. Displayed on the stage was a fine photograph of President John F. Dryden, who, during the evening was likened to Lincoln as an emancipator and benefactor of the people; also a picture of the well-known symbol, the Rock of Gibraltar, together with this year's motto: "Expansion, Production and Promotion."

After enjoying a fine dinner prepared and served by Mrs. Henry Johnson, of the club, there were a few speeches. Charles Suhr's imperial orchestra occupied a place on the stage and throughout the dinner and after the speeches, rendered an attractive program of popular selections.

Superintendent D. O. Evans was the toastmaster and many pleasant things were said about him in the course of the evening. In his opening remarks Mr. Evans said that the Plainfield district was sixth in the increase of industrial business during the year and eighth in lucrease of ordinary business; that the district ranked fifth in reduction of gross arrears. In referring to the company's fine record during the past year he said that it has issued and paid for $306,000,000 worth of insurance. Adding that the Prudential Insurance Company leads the world, he dwelt briefly on President Dryden's motto for 1909, taking occasion to commend it to every agent. He congratulated the men on their past achievements and urged them to even better things. Letters of regret were received and read from W. R. Konow, supervisor; J. A. Sandford, division manager, of the Home office, and S. S. Swackhamer, who were to have made addresses but were detained for various reasons.

Morton Schiff represented Mr. Sandford, and gave a few interesting facts concerning the achievement of the company. He said that the Prudential company comprised about 25,000 employes in all, there being 2,000 in the Home office and 4,000 members of the old guard. Last year 349 claims were paid each working day or fifty-three an hour. There was $1,000,000 worth of insurance issued each working day last year. He complimented the wives of the members, adding that they are responsible for much of the good work by the agents.

Superintendent W. H. Riker, of the Paterson district, under whom Mr. Evans was assistant for five years, made a few remarks in which he congratulated the latter and his men and cautioned the agents against allowing policyholders to get in arrears. Short addresses were made by Assistant George W. Hope, of Somerville; assistants H. W. Farley and G. L. Adriance, of this city; Inspector R. B. Bowman, of the Home office. Secretary H. E. Parker, of the Y. M. C. A. praised the life insurance agent as being close to human needs and in his opinion it is a mission and not a trade or business. He suggested two qualifications as essential —enthusiasm and loyalty. Agents, he said are high grade men and are capable of taking any position. The speechmaking concluded with a few eloquent words by Superintendent J. Gibson, of New Brunswick, the district won the company's flag this year for increase in business. Before the guests departed all joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne."

Lieut. Rogers Brought Here.

Lieut. N. Pendelton Rogers, Jr., who was injured in a coasting accident early in the winter, sustaining a compound fracture of the thigh bone, and who has been under treatment in the Tuxedo, N. Y., hospital, was brought to Plainfield Saturday night in a special car, and is now at "The Cedarcroft," on Park avenue, and is under the care of Dr. G. W. Endicott. Lieut. Rogers's parents are with him. Mr. Rogers is steadily improving and it is only a question of time when he will be able to return to his duties in the army.

Of All Sad Words.

Said a poet to an unfortunate speculator: "Don't you think that the opening lines of Tennyson's little poem, 'Break, break, break,' are plaintive and sad?"

"Yes," was the melancholy reply, "but I think that 'Broke, broke, broke,' is a good deal sadder."—Current Literature.

DISCUSS COLLECTION OF DELINQUENT TAXES

The delinquent tax problem was again taken up by the North Plainfield Borough Council last night when it held an adjourned meeting, principally for that purpose. What it learned was that $239.16 in personal taxes had been collected since its last meeting, February 5, on the 1908 list, and $58.72 on the 1907 list. Deputy Collector Frank A. Neal was cross examined by the Mayor and some of the members as to what had been done towards stirring up the delinquents. He stated that he had been delayed somewhat by the necessity of having to first prepare the warrants; that he had personally collected $225 of the above amount, representing 20 names and that two against whom foreclosure proceedings had been begun, had voluntarily paid up. Two more had been advertised, and there were seven more on whose property he was about to levy.

The deputy collector had found that delinquents representing more than $100 in taxes had moved out of jurisdiction. Mayor Townsend explained that it was not in the province of the Council to go into the method of making the collections, but that the books showed the money to be due, and it was important that it be paid.

As reported by Borough Clerk Fred A. Miller, there is outstanding $2,299.65 in personal taxes and about $10,000 in real estate taxes. On the personal delinquent list there Of the former amount, $526.40 is due on personal property of the Public Service Co., and it is to be paid immediately now that a dispute over one item has been settled. This will leave only $1,700 personal tax outstanding. On the personal delinquent list there are 300 names, as against 600 at this time last year, but there were 1,500 more assessments made this year than last. It was finally decided to let the matter rest until the next meeting of the Council, March 5, when a detailed report would be expected from the collector.

Mayor Townsend announced that he had received a communication from Herring & Fuller, the contractors in charge of the trunk sewer system, stating that they would shortly place their report in the hands of the committees of the various municipalities interested.

A resolution introduced by Councilman Van Arsdale, was adopted granting the petition of residents on Duer street an additional light, to be placed between Dupont street and Greenbrook road.

A permit was granted Stahl & Kinney to erect a building on Chatham street, similar to the other buildings in that neighborhood. A resolution to that effect was introduced by Councilman Stahl.

Councilman Nichol's resolution that bids be accepted for crushed stone for the streets was adopted.

Birthday Party.

In honor of the fifth anniversary of her birthday, Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh, of East Second street, gave a valentine party this afternoon for their daughter, Marjorie, to which eleven of her young friends were invited. The little folks played all sorts of games, enjoyed the delicate of a Jack Horner pie, after which all were invited to the dining room for refreshments. The table was very attractively decorated for the affair and the children just had the best time of their lives and Little Marjorie was showered with best wishes; also receiving a number of gifts. The guests were Katherine Benton and George Kline, of Elizabeth; Frances Schaffus, Katherine Hughes, Bessie Case, Elizabeth Hicks, Dorothy Wilkie, Dorothy Osland, Ruth Buxton, Caroline Burr and Elsie Timmerscheidt.

Eagles Nestle in New Aerie.

Plainfield Aerie, Fraternal Order Eagles, attended the celebration attendant upon the opening of the new home of the Newark Aerie at Newark, yesterday. There were Eagles from all parts of Northern New Jersey to take part in a big parade and the festivities following at the new home on West Park street. After the inspection of the new quarters there was an address by Mayor Haussling, who is a member of the Newark Aerie. The day celebration was followed in the evening by a banquet at the Holland House in Newark.

James S. Kenney was agreeably surprised while entertaining the K. R. C. at his home on Saturday night. Mr. Kenney is a stationer in Elizabeth Saturday and while entertaining the society of which he is a member, a large company of young women friends called to shower him with congratulations. He was the recipient of a handsome gold stickpin from the K. R. C. and a gold ring from his mother. The evening was pleasantly spent in playing parlor games, after which refreshments were served.

Chocolate Club Entertains.

The Chocolate club met at the home of Miss Alice Mehl, Fourth street and Madison avenue last night. The home was decorated with palms and flowers, and the evening was spent playing games, after which refreshments were served.

MOTHERS COMMEND FISK

A WAR ON POST CARDS.

Immoral Postal Cards to Be Banished—Bill Board Committee Finishes Its Work.

Mayor Fisk is shortly to receive a letter approving his efforts in endeavoring to raise the moral standard of the city. This communication is to come from the Plainfield Mothers' Association. A resolution instructing its secretary to prepare such a letter was adopted by that organization at its monthly meeting yesterday afternoon at the city High School.

The secretary was further *instructed to send copies of the resolu*tion to the papers of the city for publication. This "in view of the fact," as one of the members expressed it, "that the papers have belittled the mayor's acting." Mrs. William M. Sandford, Jr., president of the association, suggested that possibly the local papers had been influenced by the New York publications as she had seen similar stories relating to Mayor Fisk's censor committee in them, and that he felt that the papers had been misunderstood. She said she believed that the papers favored the object but not the methods employed. The other members were acquiescent to their president's polite notice, and it is to be Insisted that the copies be sent anyway. In order to determine how each member felt on the question the usual method of voting by acclamation was abandoned and those in favor of the resolution were asked to stand. As everybody arose it was, of course, unanimous.

The bill board committee, through its chairman, Mrs. I. W. Travell, reported that its mission had about been fulfilled as but few landscape slogans remained for it to attack and slay. She announced, however, that the committee would turn its attention to post cards, some of which were unfit to be circulated among children, and warned her hearers to be on the lookout that none of the improper or distasteful kind were allowed to be brought into their homes. This committee consists of Mrs. I. W. Travell, Mrs. W. B. Travell, Mrs. O. G. Dale, Mrs. Walter S. Freeman, Mrs. F. G. Mead, Miss M. M. Chadwick and A. J. Garret.

Another resolution adopted by the Mothers was one endorsing the bill, which is to be introduced at the next session of the United States Senate, and which provides for taking unfortunate children out of the charitable institutions and placing them in private homes. The secretary was instructed to send a copy of the resolution to the senator from this district.

Recording Secretary Mrs. H. T. Philbrook read a petition, which is be*ing circulated by the Mothers'* Association of Franklin School, and is directed to the City Common Council, asking that body to lay concrete walks through the city parks in order that the children may have a safe place to play. It was voted that the secretary be given permission to sign the petition.

Mrs. Robert O. Dodd, of Upper Montclair, read a paper entitled, "Organized Mothers' Work." The discussion explained the purposes of the association, chief of which is the training of the children, who are to be the future citizens and rulers of the nation. It desires to make it possible for ignorant and inexperienced parents to learn how to educate their children. She said, in part:

"The less favored children with whom ours play may become their rulers in after life, or their husbands and wives, and it is to our interest that their characters are properly formed. Young mothers sometimes underestimate the good the association does, and declare that their "mother's instinct" is sufficient guide in the bringing up of their little ones. But that is where they make a mistake. If each generation would but profit by additional knowledge from experience, that would be an example to future generations, and the world would be continually improved.

"Mothers, whose children have grown up should still take an interest in child culture, because they can give inspiration and helpful aid to others. When school director's and teachers find it beneficial to organize there is all the more reason why mothers should organize. The Mothers' Association plans to aid children everywhere by agitating the establishing of kindergartens, which have been found to be the best means of forming character. So important because character is the foundation of the future life."

COUNTY TAX REDUCTIONS AGGREGATE $5,053,351

Figures compiled by the Union county tax board show that the reduction in the amount of assessments for 1908 are $5,053,351.96 less than those of the preceding year. This shows that the board is gradually securing an equalization of the assessments. Last year the board received 412 appeals from assessments upon property in the county. Of these 304 were granted. The board received 252 appeals less during 1908 than it did in 1907.

The amount of the reductions in Plainfield is as follows: Land, $3,450; buildings, $11,175; personal, $16,387, making a total of $31,012. The total reduction in the county is as follows: Land, $50,734.97; buildings, $105,375.00; personal, $43,412.07; total, $202,172.04.

BALL CLUB WILL HOLD A CARNIVAL IN MAY.

The question of the location for the outdoor affair has not been chosen, but a site that will be convenient to everyone will be secured. Within a few days further details will be announced.

There will be at least thirty-five separate attractions and it is proposed to conduct the carnival strictly first-class in every detail.

Told of South African Mission Work.

The work of Congregational missionaries among the South African Zulus was outlined in connection with an illustrated lecture given by Rev. C. L. Goodrich at the Congregational church Sunday night. The subject, "The Christmas Land," was explained by the lecturer in the statement that Natal, South Africa, as the landing place of Vasco da Game, on Christmas Day, 1835. The stereopticon slides showed the life and customs of the South African people, and were elaborately colored. A substantial offering was received for the benefit of the work.

CONVICTED DIVEKEEPER ACCEPTS HIS SENTENCE.

The writ of error taken out by counsel of Joseph Davis, convicted recently of keeping a disorderly house in what was known as the Cleveland Boarding house on Trout man avenue, Long Branch, has been withdrawn. Davis will doubtless be taken to State prison tomorrow. He was sentenced to one year in State prison and to pay a fine of $1,000. The appeal of Philip Jaresky, who was convicted of the same charge has not as yet been withdrawn, but it is understood it will soon be. Jaresky's sentence is the same as that imposed upon Davis.

Detectives were sent to the home last summer by Assistant Prosecutor A. J. C. Stokes, under orders from Judge John E. Foster, and later Mr. Stokes conducted a raid upon the house and secured evidence that was used at the trials. The grand jurors, however, neglected to return indictments against the two men until after Judge Foster severely rebuked them and refused to give them their discharge until they had found the indictments. He told the grand jury at that time that he knew sufficient evidence upon which to base indictments had been presented.

MAY JAIL DRUGGISTS WHO SELL LIQUOR ILLEGALLY.

William R. Ham, of Main street, Asbury Park, a druggist, who was convicted last week of the illegal sale of liquor from his drug store last summer, was fined $500 and costs by Judge John E. Foster yesterday afternoon. He was warned that should he ever come before the court again on such a charge he would be sent to the prison. R. T. Stout, counsel for Mr. Ham, admitted that his client had been convicted on a like charge before, but said that the conviction had been appealed and had been reversed by the higher court. Judge Foster said that he recalled that case and he knew that the conviction was set aside on a technicality.

He said that Mr. Ham had been a flagrant violator of the law. The court expressed that a precedent had not been established of sending such violators to prison. The judge thought, however, that either he or his successor "would yet have that pleasure."

FOUND A YOUNG WOMAN UNCONSCIOUS IN ROAD.

North Bergen, Feb. 20.—Constable Napoleon, of East New Durham, found a young woman in a distressing plight Thursday night. She was without hats, shoes or stockings, wearing only a light kimono, and was lying unconscious by the side of the Hudson Boulevard. An ambulance conveyed her to the police station. The town physician found that she had a bad bruise on her head, which might have been caused by a fall, but gave it as his opinion that she was stupid from drink. She is still ill a cell at police headquarters and still unconscious. So far efforts to learn who she is have proved futile. She is about thirty years old, and looks like one accustomed to hard work.

SAYS SHE TOOK LAUDANUM.

Young Wife Explains Farwell Message to Husband After Quarrel.

"Goodby, Jack. When you get this I will be dead. I've taken poison," read the telegram which John Sheppard received at Bridgeton Thursday night from his young bride of a few months at Millville.

After a courtship of only a few hours, last August, Mr. Sheppard married Miss Nora Greaves, the pretty nineteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Greaves. The friends of the young couple thought it a genuine love match.

When asked yesterday concerning the strange message, Mr. Sheppard said: "Yes, I took laudanum, but, unfortunately, I got too much and it only made me sick. Jack and I can't agree, and he won't take me back. I'm going to drown myself."

BOICE DEAD OF HIS INJURIES.

Michael Boice, the gateman injured at Scott avenue crossing at Rahway Thursday, while standing on the track, died of his injuries at St. Michael's Hospital in Elizabeth Thursday. He leaves a widow and six grown-up children, three sons and three daughters.

He was a member of St. Mary's church, Rahway, where the funeral will be held. Mr. Boice had never had an accident on any of his crossings during his many years' experience as a flagman. Ten minutes before the affair happened Commissioner Benjamin Hughes and George Ball warned him of the danger of standing on the tracks. "I always watch both ways," was his reply.

IDLE MAN SOUGHT DEATH.

Despondent because he had been out of work for some time, Cyprian Pluckus, thirty-six years old, tried to commit suicide Thursday night at his boarding-house, 216 Second street, Elizabethport. He was discovered by a roomer in bed early yesterday morning.

The room was filled with gas and the jet was turned on full.

The man was hurried in an ambulance to the Alexian Hospital, where it was said later his condition was very serious and there was little hope of his recovery. He was a painter and had been only a few years in the United States.

Green Divorce Suit on.

Vice-Chancellor Stevens heard testimony in the suit for divorce brought by George W. Green, of Morristown, against Myra Wilson Green at Newark yesterday. The suit is based on the grounds of desertion and infidelity. The principal witness for Mr. Green was Katie Cadmus, a private detective, who said she had roomed in Mrs. Green's apartments, and that William G. Nimmins, who is named as one of the correspondents, was a boarder (Co. No. 706-W there also. She testified she had seen Mrs. Green kiss Nimmins, and that Bert Dinsdale, another man named in the suit, was a frequent visitor.

Mass Meeting at Elizabeth.

Under the auspices of the Elizabeth Local Union of Christian Endeavor and Epworth League a large temperance mass meeting will be held in Proctor's theatre, Elizabeth, tomorrow afternoon. The doors will be open at 3:15 and delegations from all parts of the county are expected. Seaborn Wright, the Southern orator, known as "Georgia's Best Loved Son," will address the meeting. He brings reports of the great temperance movement in the south, as a result of which so many States have gone "dry." Last Sunday Mr. Wright spoke to 5,000 men in Baltimore.

MIDDLESEX FIRE COMPANY HOLDS MONTHLY MEETING.

The regular monthly meeting of the Middlesex Volunteer Fire Company was held in the South Plainfield fire house last night. It was announced that a promise had been received from the Middlesex Water Co. that the fire plugs would be in place by April 1. The company had offered to extend pipe line from its main 250 feet in any direction.

The hose committee was authorized to purchase 1,000 feet of hose at a price not to exceed 70 cents.

Suit Against Mott's Widow.

Further investigation made yesterday into the books of the late Charles T. Mott, who was collector of taxes for Vernon Township, near Newton, reveals that there was a shortage, which the official attempted to conceal by entering arrears of taxes under smaller amounts and balancing the accounts with corresponding figures in receipts. Suit has been brought by the township against the widow. It is believed that the shortage will amount into the thousands.

Roselle Citizens' Banquet.

The Roselle Citizens' League banquet, held in the Van Court Inn here Thursday, was very successful. About fifty men attended. E. P. Tenney, president of the league, was toastmaster. Ira B. Wheeler, of Elizabeth, spoke on the great good that could come out of such an association. He styled it as a great organization, formed for a great purpose. Assemblyman Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, after lauding President-elect Taft, urged that the league take for its principles those exemplified by Taft.

Hurt by Fall From Train.

Frederick Evans, nineteen years old, who resides at 177 Spring street, Elizabeth was badly injured yesterday morning by falling off a freight train on the Pennsylvania Railroad. He was on his way home from Perth Amboy, where he had been looking for work. One leg was fractured and he was severely bruised about the body and perhaps internally hurt. He was born in Pennsylvania and has been a couple of years in Elizabeth. He was removed to the Elizabeth General Hospital.

Ghost Dancers Parade Streets.

A ghost dance at Nutley Thursday night caused a number of people to shudder when the members of the West Nutley Country Club on their way to Masonic Hall, at Nutley, arrayed in white shrouds and white masks, passed through the main streets. There were fifty young women attired in this manner, and to make a still more ghostly effect the electric lights were shaded in the hall where the dance was held.

Sells Historic Mansion.

Former Governor Franklin Murphy has sold the old Dey mansion at Lower Preakness, which was used by Washington as his headquarters on the occasion of the retreat of the American soldiers from New York across New Jersey to Morristown, to Edward S. Wright for $6,500. The property was once owned by former Mayor William H. Belcher.

Lockjaw From Toy Pistol.

Long Branch, Feb. 20.—William Meredith, nine years old, a son of John Meredith, train dispatcher of the New Jersey Central Railroad at East Long Branch, was taken to the Monmouth Memorial Hospital yesterday suffering from lockjaw. About a week ago young Meredith was shot in the hand while playing with a toy pistol.

Gets Her Boy Two Days a Week.

Vice-Chancellor Stevens, who awarded the custody of Hugh Mullen Smith, eleven years old, to his father, Thursday at Montclair, decided that the boy should be allowed to spend two days of each week at the home of his mother, Mrs. Katherine Mullen Smith, in Newark.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN OUGHT TO KNOW.

Small burns are too lightly regarded; though seemingly slight, if they are not properly treated or if the blood is in bad condition they may fatally mar one's beauty.

A young girl dropped some hot fudge on the forefinger of her right hand. It did not pain very much, and after the preliminary scream little attention was paid to it.

The blister that was raised was allowed to break rather than be opened carefully with an antiseptic needle; poison got into it, the finger became infected and eventually had to be removed below the second joint.

Exclude air from any burn, however slight. This can be done in several ways. If on other remedy is at hand common kitchen soap applied in a thick paste helps remove pain.

Wrapping the burned place in a rag wet in baking soda or keeping it moist with witch hazel will quickly give relief, even to rather severe burns. A good proportion for the former is to use a heaping tablespoonful of the soda to a pint of water.

For deeper burns, that are yet not serious enough to call in a doctor, use oils. Carron oil is possibly the one most easily secured; indeed, a bottle of it should be kept convenient in the kitchen, where burnt fingers are prevalent.

This carron oil is nothing but equal parts of lime water and linseed oil, but it is most soothing and healing in its effect.

Do not neglect a burn as soon as the first sting is passed. Should there be the least sign of inflammation or of pus accumulating call in a doctor at once.

In case of bad burns it is sometimes necessary to wrap the victim in cotton to keep out all air. In such case the doctor would naturally be in charge.

THE BEST TREATMENT FOR UNSIGHTLY WARTS.

These are better left alone than treated injudiciously. They may be safely and certainly cured by keeping them constantly damp with rag dipped in vinegar, then sticking them off with a tiny day by day, and applying powdered alum to the fresh surface. Another plan is to touch them every second day or so with the pointed end of a slate pencil or match dipped in acetic, glacial-acetic, muriatic, nitric or sulphuric acid, or a mixture of chromic acid, one part to four parts water, daily. All these demand great care. A safer though slower process is to moisten each wart with a drop of water or the tip of the tongue, then rub it well in with lunar caustic; next day, or in two days, carefully remove the black surface with a knife, repeating the caustic, and so on as may be necessary.—The Family Doctor.

THE LATEST TABLECLOTH.

One of the fads of the fashionable London dinner table at present is an electric tablecloth, which may be shaded from the snowy white of the conventional damask to a glistening silver. It is a favorite trick of the London hostess to surprise her guests with the tablecloth gradually taking on color, or, as it were, growing a brilliance until it seems to be aflame, says the Chicago Daily Journal. To gain this effect only a few heavily shaded candles are on the table.

The invention is a secret, and so far the luminous cloths have been in the exclusive possession of a few wealth women. One of these is Mrs. Potter Palmer, who is always one of the first to turn new and clever inventions to her social advantage.

Option Hearing March 8.

Monday, March 8, at 2 p. m., is the time set by the Senate Committee on Judiciary for a hearing on the Plummer local option bill. SONS OF OLD NASSAU MAKE MERRY AT DINNER

Dr. Farrand, Prof. Mc Clenahan, Ezra Prentice and Others Respond to Toasts at Princeton Banquet.

POKE FUN AT CENSOR HALL.

Henry L. Hall, a member of Mayor C. J. Fisk's censor cabinet, was called upon by Toastmaster Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan to give his "official seal of purity" to the banquet of the Plainfield Princeton Club held last night at Truell Hall. Mr. Hall is a Columbia man, but, it is said, was invited to the dinner that he might give this official "O. K." that would put the diners beyond the pale of criticism. Everything was quite proper, for half the oysters' shells were served with them, and the roast turkey was served "with dressing."

It was just before the singing of "Old Nassau" with which the banquet broke up, that Dr. Buchanan rose to deliver this speech: "In view of the iron-bound rules of purity which hold this town as in a vise, we all want to feel that we have behaved well and wisely in the sight of him who has been sent to watch over us, and we therefore ask the member of the censor committee present to bestow upon us the official white seal of purity 'ere we go." Rising, Mr. Hall said: "Princeton men; there seems to have been a good deal of fun spread around because of the fact that our Mayor has appointed a censor committee to watch over the morals of Plainfield. I assure you that in making up this committee, Mr. Fisk did not consider the individual purity of its members. If you want the stamp of approval from the censors, I gladly give it—for the man who doesn't appreciate the Princeton men of Plainfield, doesn't know a good thing."

Cheers and howls of joy greeted the ranking of the gathering with the white sheep of Plainfield, and the censor was roundly applauded by the slogan, "For he's a jolly good fellow."

The banquet, attended by forty loyal sons of Old Nassau, was marked by the mingled jollity and hilarity which goes to make up good fellowship when college men get together to be 'under graduate' again, just for a night. A quartet of under-graduates from the university, imported for the occasion, were in charge of the melody department, and kept the diners in fine humor throughout the time they started up the "Cannon Song" as the oyster shells disappeared until the last notes of "Old Nassau" rose from the rows of standing men boardering the table.

The affair was made an occasion of co-operation between the Princeton clubs of this city and Orange, when, shortly after midnight, a delegation of about a score of members of the Orange club, headed by their president, Kenneth C. Kirtland, blew in, having made the trip from Orange in a special trolley, and tore the smoke clouds of the banquet room with a series of raucous "locomotives" as they stood behind a screen near the door. Hon. Ezra P. Prentice, Assistant Deputy Attorney-General of New York, was giving a serious talk on "college men in politics," when the Orange delegation let loose, and it looked for a time as though the censor was only a figure head, such was the disorder. But when the Orange men came out into view, and marched around the table, singing "We are Pilgrims; We're from Orange, and we tarry but a night," a ballad composed for the occasion—all was explained and the visitors were given a royal welcome.

The annual meeting of the club was held early in the evening, when the diners assembled, and it was 7:45 when the doors of the banquet room were thrown open and the club members went to their places. The room was lavishly decorated with Princeton colors and banners and the diners were seated at a single long table. The speakers were: Dr. J. Howard McClenahan, '94, of the university; Edward A. Stevenson, Yale, '88, president of the Plainfield Yale Club; Royal S. Goldsbury, '91, of Montclair; Dr. Wilson Farrand, '86, of Orange; and Hon. Ezra P. Prentice, of New York.

Professor M'Clenahan, who is an Orange man, gave a newsy talk on recent doings at Princeton. He is a member of the college committee and spoke with gratification upon the abolishment of mid-year "horsing," declaring that the custom had intended to obliterate the individuality of Princeton men. As member of the committee on outdoor sports, he summarized the athletics of the university, and told of the introduction of rowing on "Loch Carnegie." He told of the advancement in the curriculum work by the recent introduction of the political science courses and concluded by saying that " in cleanly living, sobriety, scholarship and the things that go to make up good citizens, Princeton is far and away the best undergraduate college of this or any other country."

Edward A. Stevenson, president of the local Yale Club, was the invited guest of honor. His speech was short, but he said that next to Yale, Princeton was the best college. Dr. Farrand, of Orange, gave a rattling good talk on the changes in American colleges, due to the changes in the spirit of the times. He said that the American college is a steady growth, the underlying purpose of which is to train leaders of men. Ministers were in former days the leaders of men, and then all college graduates entered the ministry, but today the study of the sciences is considered the best training for business life, and the leaders of men today are those in the business world. "The English university," he said, exists to train the men of the higher classes, and is the product of British imperialism; the German university trains scholars and officials, and are institutions of *imperialism, but the American col*lege caters to the democracy, and the new Princeton is a college for the whole people. Royal S. Goldsbury said he was going to speak on "the influence of environment upon the tendency of heredity toward transcendentalism," but the tone of a line of real witty chatter which drew the plaudits of the diners. His serious paragraph was a message of good-will from Princeton men of Montclair and Glen Ridge.

Hon. Ezra P. Prentice was the last speaker, and he had a first-class speech on "Practical Politics for the College Man." He was introduced as the "intellectual desert" of the evening, but said that until he spied Mr. Hall at the table, he had planned to give a talk on "Salome." "The college man who enters politics," he said, "makes to practical *application of his ideals and stand*ards. As a rule, he doesn't work in the parties, but allies himself with some short-lived 'movement,' which rarely accomplishes its purpose. In New York city, the political parties are of assistance to the needy and the destitute and the leaders infuse a personality into politics by studying the every-day wants of their constituency rather than talking tariff and a big navy. The college man fails in just this particular. He is too abstract.

"I would urge that the college men take a more intelligent interest in political matters. We don't want everybody in politics, but we want everybody interested. The rottenness of politics today is not due to the system which puts men in office, but to the fact that the people don't watch to see that these men perform their duties after they get in."

When the hilarity due to the reception of the Orange visitors had subsided and the songs and yells had died away, Toastmaster Buchanan called on President Kirtland and J. J. Condict for "remarks," as visitors. Both thanked the Plainfield Club for their hearty welcome and assured the local club of hearty cooperation by the Princetonians of Essex county. The committee in charge of the dinner comprised Edward J. Patterson, Dr. William H. Murray, Dr. V. Van D. Hedges, Owen H. Fleming and C. Ames Brooks.

COURT BEATS THE SHOW

That's What South Plainfielders Said After Attending Kerwin Trial.

TWO HUNDRED WERE THERE.

No Censorship of Testimony, Either, and There was Some "Hot Stuff" E' Gosh! Opined Villagers.

In the presence of nearly 200 South Plainfield residents, who crowded Justice Smith's court-room to the doors, the neighborhood troubles of the Kerwin and Brant families, of Rock avenue, were threshed over at great length Tuesday night. The hearing was begun promptly at 7:30 o'clock in the evening, and it was after midnight when the principals in a bitter inter-neighbor quarrel shook hands and publicly resolved to be friends. The court found the fault to lie with Mrs. Joseph Brant, who is said to be a woman with an unfriendly tongue, as far as Mrs. Kerwin and her daughter Julia is concerned, and she was placed under bond of $100 to keep the peace for one year. The court further ruled that she must apologize to Mrs. Kerwin and her daughter, and this was done in the court-room, although the South Plainfield folk gasped and stood breathless as the two women shook hands before the justice.

Although Mrs. Brant is alleged to have been a trouble-maker in the years past, the cause of the court scene was a visit on the part of Mrs. Kerwin and her daughter at the Brant home Wednesday night. On this occasion the two visitors demanded the retraction of certain stories defamatory to Miss Julia Kerwin, which are alleged to have emanted from Mrs. Brant. No retraction was secured, but instead the visitors were showered with dirty water, according to witnesses. The interest in the case was village broad, and the crowd turned out to see a hot fight.

Justice Smith's court-room is on the second floor of his barn, and the village folk were on hand as early as an hour before the trial. When the Judge finally elbowed his way to his desk, it was impossible to cram another person into the room. The rain beat down noisily on the roof, and the lamps gave but a feeble light. Somebody passed lemon water from time to time and the parties in the case stood in a small cleared space before the Judge's desk. The official stenographer was not present, and for this reason the going-to-and-fro-ings were drowned out the testimony as it came from the mouths of the many witnesses. All this took time, and lessened the dramatic interest of the hearing, but some of the testimony was "hot stuff" and the South Plainfielders stood there, straining to catch every word. One man lost many firm friends because he had an uproarious cough, which is said to have prevented some of the choicest of the testimony from reaching persons standing on the stairs.

William G. DeMeza was lawyer for Mrs. Kerwin, who brought the complaint in the case, and his summing up after testimony was received, brought forth much enthusiasm from his friends, as it was delivered through the haze of dust and lamp smoke. Francis J. Blatz was Mrs. Brant's lawyer, but South Plainfielders say he "had the wrong end of the case."

ALFRED DAVIS IS HURT IN COASTING ACCIDENT

As the result of a coasting accident at Alfred, N. Y., Wednesday night, six professors and students of Alfred University were injured, among them being Alfred Davis, '09, of Shanghai, China, a brother of Theodore G. Davis, of this city, who had both shoulders broken. He is well known here. Prof. C. L. Clark is in a hospital in a critical condition.

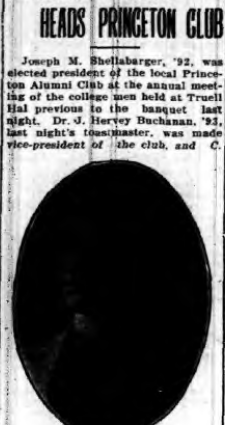
The men took a bobsled out on a hill, and were riding down on the snow crust. At the foot of the hill Prof. Clark lost control of the sled and it plunged into the river, throwing the men against the stone abutments of a bridge.

The injured are Prof. C. L. Clark, knee smashed, injured internally; Prof. Neil Annis, ankle broken, foot smashed; Alfred Davis, '09, Shanghai, China, both shoulders broken; Arthur Stokie, '10, internal injuries; Charles L. Clark, '09, Brooklyn, both legs broken, and Fred Clark, '09, flesh wounds.

Question of Street Sprinkling.

Within the next month the Common Council will probably consider and decide the question of street sprinkling for the coming year. There has been considerable dissatisfaction over the present arrangement and it is possible that there may be a change. The matter of keeping the dust down is an expensive thing and the street committee is now in favor of treating the macadam roads with some approved preparation. It is believed that this will be the least expensive in the long run.

J. M. SHELLABARGER HEADS PRINCETON CLUB



President Shellabarger.

Joseph M. Shellabarger, '92, was elected president of the local Princeton Alumni Club at the annual meeting of the college men held at Truell Hal previous to the banquet last night. Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, '93, last night's toastmaster, was made vice-president of the club, and C. Ames Brooks, '05, its secretary and treasurer. The meeting was called by president Edward A. Paterson, '94, as soon as the banqueters assembled, and the report of Owen H. Fleming, retiring secretary-treasurer showed a membership of nearly seventy-five Princeton men of this city and vicinity, and a neat balance in the treasury.

An amendment to the club constitution, providing that the annual meeting shall be held the third Thursday in February, or such other date in the same month as the officers may decide upon, was passed. A communication from Kenneth C. Kirtland, president of the New Jersey Princeton Club, of Orange, was read, in which he urged that the two organizations "get together" and cooperate with each other for the interests of the college. It was decided to send a committee of three members of the club to a meeting of the Orange club in the near future for this purpose. President Shellabarger was named as chairman of this committee, and he will appoint the other two members.

GRAND JURORS DINE FOREMEN IN GOTHAM

The members of the Union County Grand Jury, prosecutor C. Addison Swift, Judge Edward S. Atwater and Robert L. Eaton, clerk of the Grand Jury, attended a dinner given to the foreman, Calvin C. Orcutt. The dinner was held in the Terminal Building, 30 Church street. A loving cup was presented to the foreman.

A dinner to the foreman is usually given by the members of a Grand Jury when it has finished work. The last session of the present Grand Jury was held yesterday morning, and when it returned the indictments found to Judge Atwater in the Court of Quarter Sessions its work was completed.

The members of the Grand Jury from Plainfield are Marion S. Ackerman, Harry C. Van Emburg and Harry W. Marshall.

TOWNSHIP MEETING SET FOR TUESDAY, MARCH 9.

The North Plainfield Township Committee has been besieged with requests from various sections to furnish lights, and whenever they have granted lights in one place they have been accused by some taxpayers in other sections of showing favoritism. At a meeting which was held a few days ago, it was decided to call a mass meeting of the tax*payers of the entire township for* the purpose of discussing the various means of lighting the entire township to be held at the school-house on Tuesday night, March 9, at 8 o'clock. The newly-elected assessor, Francis E. Bodin, desires to procure a township map as the assessors have had a great deal of trouble in the past locating and properly valuing the various properties. It is expected that the township counsel will be in attendance at this meeting to give such advice as will enable the taxpayers to proceed in such a manner that will be to their best interest.

How Erastus Found Light.

Election is over, and some of us are wondering whether we voted wisely. Voting is something of a hazard at times, if we do not happen to have the plain guidance of the old darkey lanited in Princeton. Erastus, being asked how he had voted, replied: "In the mahin', sah, I was inclined to do de Republican cause, for they gave me three dollahs; but in the afternoon de Democrats gave me five dollahs. So, sah, I voted de Democrat ticket straight, because dey was de leas' corrup,' sah—do leas' corrup' sah'"—Success.

SCHLOSS PROPERTY SOLD

TO BUILD APARTMENT THERE.

Three Story Brick Building to be Erected At Once it is Said —Consideration $2,300.

The VanDeventer Corporation, a real estate and investment firm, of which President A. J. Brunsen, of the First National Bank is president, has purchased the Emanuel Schloss property extending from the rear of C. M. Nagle's drug store at Front and Grove streets, along Grove street to the brook, and, it is said, is planning the erection of a three-story apartment house on the property, which measures ninety-four feet, and is seventy-two feet deep. Speaking to a Daily Press reporter about the matter today, Mr. Brunsen said that the deal had not yet actually been completed, but that the corporation would undoubtedly secure the property. He would not deny that an apartment would be built, but said that no plans had been framed for the building.

Emanuel Schloss, former owner of the property, said today that the property had been sold and stated that the consideration was $2,500. The deal was negotiated through Jacob Sachar.

At the request of the corporation, F. L. Lancaster, the architect, has prepared plans for an apartment suitable for the property. The building will be three stories and 50 feet on Grove street. It is reported that the corporation plans to erect an apartment house of eighteen suites, where the rent will be from $20 to $30 a month. It is stated that the building will be of brick, with a concrete block facade, and will occupy the entire property. No contracts have yet been given out, but it is said that work will be commenced in the spring.

NEURALGIA IS FATAL TO WOMAN EVANGELIST

Mrs. J. W. Harrison who, with her husband, became famous as an evangelist, traveling over 5,000 miles in this country in a prairie schooner, preaching the Gospel, died suddenly at her home on Central avenue at 3 o'clock this morning from neuralgia of the heart. She had been under treatment for nervous trouble, but her condition was not considered serious.

Mrs. Harrison was born seventy years ago in London, Eng., and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Tickle. When a girl she left there and went to Melbourne, Australia, where she met and married Mr. Harrison, who was a native of Liverpool. After their marriage they returned to Liverpool, where for twenty-one years Mr. Harrison was engaged in the crockery business.

The couple came to this country in 1884 and soon afterward they engaged in evangelistic work, adopting the prairie schooner as the method of travel. They worked unceasingly without pay or salary. Three years ago they came to Plainfield with the idea of making this their permanent home, Mrs. Harrison being unable to continue the long travels. She was a faithful member of the Church of Christ.

Besides a husband, four daughters and one son survive. Two daughters and one son live in New York, one daughter lives in Pittsburg, and the other one in Fitzgerald, Ga. Announcement of funeral will be made later.

FASHION JOTTINGS.

Not only is the fashion settled of a garment that fastens in one line from neck to hem, but the long tight sleeves are also in to stay. They are not absolute for semi-formal evening gowns, as every one thought they would be at the beginning of the season, but they are universal in every lesser garment.

Shirtwaists, blouses, coats, house gowns, dressing gowns, have the sleeves that reach the wrist and fit the arm. The short, scanty skirt for street wear is holding its own and will continue at least until spring. Whether or not it keeps going in the fashions of other countries against it, is still a question. This skirt is distinctly American, and, as there is everything in favor of it, it should remain.

"Have you thrown the cow into the antiseptic tank?"

"Yes."

"Have you washed the can with carbolic acid solution?

"I have."

"Have you plunged into the germ-destroying bath yourself?"

"Certainly."

BAYONNE TO BECOME WORLD'S OIL CENTRE

Ground was broken Monday for the immense oil refining plant which the Texas Oil Company will establish in Bayonne. The company is capitalized at $18,000,000, with J. C. Cullinam president and Arnold Schlaet vice-president. The oil yards will be located on the old Tremblay estate, a plot comprising seventy acres, and situated at the extreme southwestern end of the city. The location is ideal for the company's purposes, both rail and water facilities being afforded.

Permission has been granted by the Bayonne Common Council for the vacation of Raveneau avenue, which cuts through the property. Families residing on the site had been given a three weeks' notice to move, but one or two tardy ones still occupied their homes when work was begun yesterday. The advent of the oil yards will be a blow to bathing in Bayonne. The only beach and bathing pavilion in Bergen Point was situated on the site, and a popular resort it has been daily during the summer. With the new plant in operation and the plants of the Standard and Tidewater oil companies already located there, Bayonne will be the largest oil-shipping city in the world.

EXCISE LEGISLATION.

Whether any new excise laws will be enacted by the present Legislature is a question that cannot be determined with a full degree of accuracy at this time, but certainly the way has already been opened from six different directions, with probably one or two more to be heard from in the near future. If something doesn't come out of this rush of excise bills it will not be for lack of opportunity.

Probably the most important of all these is the bill transmitted by Governor Fort to the Legislature as a part of the majority report of the State Commissioners. The public is familiar with this bill, and will agree with the Governor that its recommendations are many, some of them quite radical and all of them worthy of careful consideration. Coming from an officially authorized source, they naturally command attention, but that all of its provisions will be adopted may well be doubted. And then follow five other bills, some of them quite as radical as the Fisk bill, but in the opposite direction. The Senator Osborne bill is one of these, so is the bill prepared by Senator Wilson for the express purpose of legalizing the present illegal practises of Atlantic City. Assemblyman Kenny, of Hudson, has also a liberal measure, but Assemblyman Otto, the only Republican from the same county, has one which outHerods Herod by practically wiping all excise laws off the statute book and permitting municipalities to do exactly as they please with regard to the liquor traffic, Sundays as well as other days. Assemblyman Wilson, of Salem, has a bill which presents last year's unsuccessful local option bill with all the features then seriously objected to stricken out; that is, all excepting the policy of local option itself. But there will be no lack of objections to it this year, no matter how carefully it has been prepared. Here, then, are six excise measures, all piled in upon the Legislature. It is much easier to pick out four or five that will not be passed than to name the one that will be enacted.—Newark News.

MRS. FRANK RANDOLPH OF OAK TREE, IS DEAD

Mrs. Frank Randolph, a well-known resident of Oak Tree for many years, died suddenly at her home about 11 o'clock Tuesday night. Early in the evening she with other members of the family was engaged in playing games and was in her usual good health. She retired at the usual hour. About 11 o'clock her husband was awakened by her heavy breathing.

Mrs. Randolph did not respond when her husband attempted to arouse her from her stupor and with the speed of the wind he passed within a few minutes. Mrs. Randolph was a faithful member of the Presbyterian church at Metuchen and was highly respected by all who knew her. She is survived by a husband. There are no children.

The funeral services will be held from her late residence Saturday afternoon at 2:30.

Announce Engagement.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Olive Amanda Randolph, of Plainfield avenue, and Fred Bakker, also of this city. The latter has been a resident of this city for nine years and is employed as a machinist at the Potter Press Works. The wedding will take place early in the spring.

Puzzled.

"Nature makes nothing in vain," said the philosopher.

"Perhaps," answered Colonel Stillwell; "though I can't quite explain the presence of a great, big, beautiful mint bed in a local-option country."—Washington Star.

CENSORS MISSED THIS

Minstrel Jokes Might Have Shocked Committee, But It Wasn't There.

AMATEURS AT HARTRIDGE.

The Franklin Troupe Gives Annual Show and Ball—Cast of Thirty in Entertainment.

While the Public Censors were hidden at headquarters, The Franklin Minstrel troupe last night at the Hartridge auditorium were doing some censoring themselves and many of their shots were directed at the committee, and Mayor Fisk especially. Many of the so-called jokes were decidedly off color and brought blushes to the cheeks of the audience. Some of the "hits" were "most suggestive."

There are those who claim to believe that if the committee had been properly performing its duty last night instead of smoking cigars behind closed doors in a room down town, it would have been present at this display of wit and would have heard expressions not entirely in keeping with its moral code.

The show was the third annual minstrel and ball given by this amateur organization. The house was comfortably filled and the performance was received with generous applause.

Interlocutor C. V. Rittenhouse and End Men William J. Firstbrook, George Rittenhouse, George Wilson and George Smith had a pleasing array of jokes. Kenyon's orchestra furnished the music.

The program: Selection by Overture, Kenyon's orchestra; grand ensemble; "It looks to me like a big night tonight," End men; solo, "If I Had a Thousand Lives to Live," William Anderson; "Everybody Turned and Looked Right at Me," George Smith; song, "When You Love Me, Summer Girl," Walter Vail; "Common Sense," George D. Wilson; solo, "To the End of the World with You," Clarence Rittenhouse; "Studdering Dick," George Rittenhouse; "Good Evening, Caroline," William J. Firstbrook; solo, "As Long as the World Rolls On," Edward Harding; grand finale, "The Booker T's Are On Parade," by the comedians. A musical sketch was rendered by Messrs. Kenyon and Winans; William B. Anderson sang a Scotch dialect; song and a sketch, "Uncle Remus's Dream," concluded the performance. This was the cast: Uncle Remus, Harry Southard; Rastus Jones, Walter Vail; Mandy Lane, William Anderson; Ephriham Johnson, James Moore; Eph's other half, George Rittenhouse.

Following the minstrel show the hall was cleared and dancing was indulged in until an early hour.

She was born at Yorktown Heights, Westchester county, N. Y., and has lived in Plainfield forty-three years. She was a woman of strong Christian character and was a faithful member of the Religious Society of Friends and attended the Plainfield meeting on Watchung avenue.

MONROE CHURCH AFFAIR WAS A BIG SUCCESS.

Of all the entertainments in the city last night of like nature, not the least in enjoyment and attendance was the supper and social of the Monroe Avenue church. Given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, it received a liberal patronage.

Mrs. Charles T. Shreve sang several solos and the children of the Sunday school rendered a number of musical selections. The affair was under the general supervision of Mrs. Line, president of the society. On the reception committee were Mrs. C. S. Kemble, Mrs. Nicholas Brouard and Mrs. VanArsdale. Presiding over the tables, individually, were: Mrs. R. Mansfield Smith, Mrs. J. C. Pierson, Mrs. Robert Lee, Mrs. LaRue, Mrs. Shephen Higham and Mrs. Byard.

SOLDIERS HAVE BIG NIGHT

DANCING PROVES A FEATURE.

Captain Kitchell and His Men Gallant and Resplendent in Uniforms, Greet With Glad Hand.

Company K's fair opened Saturday night with an attendance of more than 700. Last night's crowd was nearly as large, despite the many other holiday events in the city. But the soldier boys are popular with the public and an assured success awaits them for the balance of the week.

The drill hall on West Front street, where the fair is being held, has been converted into a brilliantly lighted paradise. The management has studied the problem of ventilation, and has succeeded in devising a way for keeping the place airy and comfortable. No smoking is allowed in any part of the hall.

Dancing is the principal feature of the entertainment and it is kept going continuously. Suhr's orchestra furnishes the music.

On entering the door the first object the visitor sees is the letter "K" on the opposite side of the room, composed of tiny electric lights. It hangs above the refreshment booth and is the work of Private Percy Clark, the company electrician, who are all of the other electrical decorations.

Comprising the general committee are: Chairman, Captain H. B. Kitchell; treasurer, Sergeant Nathaniel Hort; secretary, Private Thurston Pearsall.

Advertising, printing and door committee: Sergeant A. R. Trancband, Lieutenant C. A. Peterson, Corporal James Cooking, Corporal Philip Winter, H. E. Wiley, J. O. Perry and Charles Ingmann.

Refreshment committee: Corporal Roy De Camp, chairman; Arthur Dow and Archie Mills. At the ice cream booth is Frank Cantaloupo.

Donation committee: Sergeant H. Bellyeu, chairman; Corporal Harry Manning, Arthur Randolph, William Hartpence and Stephen Millwater.

Decorations: Corporal James Niles, Percy Clark, George Howell and J. Arthur Dow.

One of the greatest contributory forces to the success of the affair is the work of the women. These are: Miss Emma C. Faulks, Miss Nellie Apgar, Mrs. H. B. Kitchell, Mrs. A. I. Littell, Mrs. George L. Apgar, Mrs. H. Trenchand, Mrs. C. H. Bilyeu and Mrs. Nathaniel Hort. At the candy counter are Miss Celeute Kolb and Miss Clara Gyer.

The hall was tastefully decorated with the national colors, and music was by Saat's orchestra. A feature of the dancing was a Virginia reel, led by Rev. Morgan Ashley, rector of the church.

TRAVELING EVANGELIST GONE TO HER REWARD

The funeral services of Mrs. J. W. Harrison, the traveling evangelist, were held from the late home on Central avenue, Sunday afternoon, and were largely attended. There were also a large number of beautiful floral tributes. Rev. Dr. S. G. Wills, pastor of the Church of Christ, 169th street, New York, of which Mrs. Harrison was a member, assisted by Rev. A. E. Finn, of the Park avenue Baptist church, officiated.

Dr. Willis spoke impressive words of the fine Christian character of Mrs. Harrison and of her devotion not only to her home, but her great and long service for the Master in traveling throughout the country, accompanied by her husband, preaching the gospel and winning souls to Christ. Mr. Flan read Scripture selections and offered prayer. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Harrison was a native of London, Eng., being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Tickle, of that place. She and her husband came to this country in 1884 and for several years they traveled nearly 8,000 miles in a prairie schooner, preaching the gospel. Their only source of revenue was in the sale of potato peelers, the couple refusing any other compensation for their work. Three years ago they came to Plainfield to live and expected to spend the remainder of their days here. During Mrs. Harrison's residence here she made a host of friends and was loved and esteemed for her many rare Christian qualities.

CATHOLIC MISSION HEAD VISIT ST. MARY'S PARISH

Rev. John E. Burke, supervising general of Catholic missions for the United States, spoke at each of the five masses celebrated at St. Mary's church Sunday, making an appeal for the work being carried on among the colored people in the South. The various collections for the work totalled $45.

MRS. COMER'S BEST JUDGMENT.

Like That of Others, It Occasionally Was at Fault.

The mistakes which were plentifully sprinkled along Mrs. Comer's career were never regretted by any one more than by Mrs. Comer herself. "I said the very best judgment I had," she said, referring to one unfortunate occurrence, "but as usual, everything went wrong.

"You see, I went to Greenville in the morning with Mrs. Hobart, intending to go on to Nashua, but I changed my mind when the weather turned cool and spent the day with Anna Woods, going home at dusk. I'd forgotten my little bag with my key in it, so I went right over to Mrs. Hobart's.

"She'd gone down the road to Mrs. Cole's, but I found her key behind the left-hand blind, and went right in.

"The house was dark, but I said to myself: 'I won't light a lamp for fear of scaring her, as this woman living all alone as she does.' So I sat in the dark till I heard her coming up the walk.

"When she found the door was unlocked she gave a kind of a gasp; so I stepped forward, and then as long as I had a cold so my voice didn't sound natural, and I was afraid 'twould scare her, she being so timid, I put out my hand and said it on her arm.

"And it you'll believe me," finished Mrs. Comer, positively, "she fell right over in a faint, and cut her forehead on the edge of the rocking chair, and I thought I'd never bring her to!

IRVING THE ASSTEMIOUS ONE.

Poet Had Forgotten Finishing Bottle of Port Himself.

It was while Irving was rehearsing "Becket" that he related a story of Tennyson that has both pathetic and humorous significance. In the earlier days, when "The Cup" was in preparation, he had been to see Tennyson in the Isle of Wight to discuss his ideas for the presentation of the drama. After the dessert and wine were set out upon a separate table and when they were seated the poet asked Irving if he would like a glass of port.

"Yes, I like a glass of port," replied the actor.

Upon which Tennyson, taking him at his word, poured him out a glass of port and, all unconsciously, finished the remainder of the bottle himself.

Next morning the actor had to leave and had therefore taken leave of his host overnight. But he had scarcely awakened when he saw Lord Tennyson sitting at the foot of his bed.

"How are you this morning?" he questioned, anxiously.

"Very well, indeed," was the guest's reply.

"Are you" came the response, with just a tinge of doubt in the tones of the voice. "You drank a lot of port last night."

That was Tennyson's way of repenting after a bottle of port!

East for Their Ancesters.

The Chinese are rapacious eaters at the feasts which are given in honor of their ancestors. At these feasts the tables groan with all the good things which the most efficient cooks can provide—pork, snow white rice, pickled cucumbers, chickens, ducks and bird's nest soup. For some minutes before the feast begins one hundred men sit at the tables in silence. Then at a given signal begin the clinking of chopsticks and the noise of indrawn breaths by which the Chinese cool the hot mouthfuls of rice which they shovel down their throats. Presently, when the hot samshu begins to work and the faces become flushed, a babel of voices fills the temple.

Irish Witty Before Foe.

Col. Nugent, commanding officer of the Irish guards, at the annual dinner of the Windsor and Eton chamber of commerce, told a story of an Irish soldier in the last war.

At dusk of a day throughout which they had been fighting heavy fire, an officer crawled up with orders for the battalion to assault, upon which the Irishman got up, shook himself and said: "And whoy not?"

On another occasion when a man screamed at the loss of a finger on the battlefield a sergeant shouted to him: "Hold yer row, yer cowardly skut; there's a man over there who's lost his head, and he hasn't said a word."

The Decorations.

The housekeeping bride was particular to keep a flower or two in a vase on the dining-room table. One afternoon she came in late and started to arrange some roses when her sorcd maid spoke to her:

"Oh, you got some, did you? I was afraid you'd forget, seeing it was so late, and I knowed we had to have something green; so I just fixed it."

The bride went into the dining-room, in the center of the mahogany table stood one of her handsomest vases full of romaine salad leaves.

His Professional Way.

The new waitress sidled up to a dapper young man at the breakfast table, who, after glancing at the bill, opened his mouth, and a noise issued forth that sounded like the ripping off of all the cogs on one of the wheels in the power house. The new waitress made her escape to the kitchen. "Fellow out there insulted me," she said.

The head waiter looked at him. "I'll get it," he said. "That's just the train caller ordering his breakfast."

JAPANESE STORIES BY WOMAN ENTERTAINER.

The Men's Club of the First Baptist church has secured for its meeting on Monday night what will doubtless prove one of the most delightful entertainments of the year.

Miss Grace Violet Correll, a niece of John Luther Long, has been a most successful impersonator in Madam Butterfly and other Japanese stories to the public. She will give a program to the Men's Club and the ladies of the congregation. Miss Correll reads in Japanese costume. She has lived with her parents in Japan and thus interprets her selections with first hand knowledge.

CO-OPERATE TO CLEAN UP DIRTY GREEN BROOK

The Boards of Health of Plainfield and North Plainfield will hold a conference in the office of the city board on Tuesday night, March 9, for the purpose of considering ways and means for the improvement of the sanitary condition of Green brook. This matter has been one of contention for a long time and the health authorities have at last decided to take it up with a view of accomplishing something.

The attention of the Boards of Freeholders of Union and Somerset counties has been called to the condition of the stream, but both boards disclaim responsibility in the premises and the members say that it is not up to them to make any improvements. The Plainfield Common Council has also considered the question, but without any tangible result. For this reason the health boards have agreed to see what can be done.

LECTURE ON "FIRST AID" MADE REAL PRACTICAL

An unexpected opportunity to put into practise practical methods of resuscitation as they were being outlined at the time in a lecture by City Physician Charles B. Lufburrow was afforded the local police officers at police headquarters yesterday afternoon when Patrolman Cornelius McCarthy fainted dead away in the lecture room. The medical man had been speaking of the best methods of reviving a fainting person, when suddenly "Con" keeled over without a bit of warning. He was eagerly pounced upon as laboratory material by the policemen, and was "brought around" according to the most approved methods, as they had just been explained and chartered on the blackboard of the lecture room. So thorough was the work of resuscitation by his fellow officers that McCarthy was shortly fine as a fiddle, and laughingly accepted the thanks of the men for the practise he had afforded them.

The lecture was one of the course on "First Aid to the Injured," which is being given to the stockade of the members' of the police force by Dr. Lufburrow. Practical methods for taking care of the suddenly stricken, the wounded and the accident victim are outlined in the course by the physician, and all the policemen gather in the court room, which is fitted up with a temporary blackboard on lecture days.

PICTORIAL NARRATIVE OF LIFE OF LINCOLN

Although the story of Abraham Lincoln's life has been told over and over again during the past month in lecture, sermon and school recitation, in newspapers, magazines and books, that it is still a popular subject was proven last night when a large audience gathered at the First Presbyterian church to hear Dr. Julius E. Ward in a pictoria, narrative of the great man's history.

The illustrations included a large assortment of photographs taken at the different stages of Lincoln's career. There were views of the crude cabins in which the ancestors lived, and traced the wanderings of the family from the stockade settlement in the Kentucky mountains, where the grandfather was killed by Indians, to the lonesome birth place of the future President. The migrations of his people continuing into Indiana and Illinois, the homes were much the same in general aspect, always of roughly hewn timber.

The lecturer gave many of the details of Lincoln's rise to fame and of the closing chapter of his life.

GAVE MISSIONS $1,200.

Women of Crescent Avenue Church Society Report Year's Achievement.

MONEY FOR LOVELL'S WORK.

Treasury Balance Voted to His Work in China at Annual Meeting Yesterday—The Officers.

The report of Mrs. William E. Hoyt, treasurer of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church, read at the annual meeting of the society at the church parlors yesterday afternoon show that during the past year the organization has contributed a total of more than $1,200 toward the support of missionary teachers abroad and the maintainance of their work. The society has contributed money for the work being done by the missionaries in Brazil, India, Siam and Laos, a considerable amount for scholarships in Christian schools in Brazil and money for the maintainance of work at various foreign medi*cal missions. The society numbers* 225 members of the church.

A feature of this report was the fact that the members of the society voted unanimously to send the balance in the treasury—about $87.—to Gilbert Lovell as a donation for his work in the boys' school he founded there. Mr. Lovell is the representative of the Crescent Avenue church in the mission work in China. The donation of the neat treasury balance was entirely without precedent, for the society does not regularly assist in the support of Mr. Lovell's school.

The election of officers resulted in the re-naming of all last year's officers except one, Mrs. I. W. Cochran, who declined second vice-president, in place of Mrs. William S. Hubbell, who resigned, and the resignation of Miss Elsie Hammond was the cause for the election of Mrs. Frank Clark as secretary of young people's literature. These are the officers for the coming year:

President, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller; first vice-president, Mrs. John Gray Foster; second vice-president, Mrs. I. W. Cochran; third vice-president, Mrs. J. S. Zelie; secretary, Mrs. Orson G. Dale; treasurer, Mrs. William E. Hoyt; secretary of literature, Mrs. Isaac N. Field; secretary of young people's literature, Mrs. Frank Clark and superintendent of collections, Miss Julia S. Scribner.

In connection with her report as supervisor of the Boys' Mission Band of the church, Mrs. Isaac I. Miller tendered her resignation from the work. During the thirteen years that she has been at the head of the boys' band, the organization has raised about $1,150 which has been sent to boys' schools abroad, and barrels of clothing have also been sent off regularly. The resignation of Mrs. Miller came as a surprise to the meeting, and no one has yet been named to take her place in carrying on the work of the band. The report of the Sunshine Mission Band, an organization of the girls of the church, was made by Miss Helen Brown, in the absence of the president, Miss Harriet Goddard, and showed that the girls too have made an excellent showing through donations to foreign missions.

In connection with the meeting there was a short address by Rev. Dr. Richard S. Campbell, formerly of Southampton, Long Island. Following the session, an informal hour was passed by the women, and tea was served by the social committee, of which Mrs. Daniel Ginns is chairman.

ANOTHER INDUSTRY SOON TO BE STARTED.

Another industry for Plainfield will soon be in operation. This will be the manufacturing agency for the famous Simplex motor-cycles, which recently came in contact on record several machines a day. The Simplex now holds the world's records both in endurance and speed, having made a mile in 32 3-5 seconds. Another notable race won by the Simplex was the climbing of the famous Wilkes Barre, Pa., hill in 102 seconds.

"Scope of Motherhood."

The Plainfield Mothers' Association will meet at the Plainfield High School Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Elizabeth Powell Bond will speak on "Scope of Motherhood."

HEARING BEFORE JUDGE WHO ARRESTED HIM

John Lang, who was arrested in Dunellen yesterday morning by Recorder David S. Campbell, was given a hearing last night, his captor sitting in judgment over him. He was bound over to the grand jury and was taken to New Brunswick by Marshal William R. Sliney, today, where he was lodged in jail.

The man is a stranger, sixty-one years old. Chief Kiely, of this city, on being furnished with his description, suspicioned that he was a well known crook, but in a personal interview with the prisoner was unable to identify him. When arrested he had in his possession, besides fifty pounds of stolen tin, to which was attached a stone, his implements for pulling down the wires.

PURCHASE BIG TRACT; PLAN IMPROVEMENTS

That improvements on a large scale will be made in the near fu*ture on the L-shaped* piece of property recently purchased by David C. Smalley and Frank Mobus at the south side of the railroad and fronting on Park avenue and Fourth street, is the statement made by Mr. Smalley today about the big transfer.

"Mr. Mobus and I," he said, "now jointly own a strip about forty feet wide, extending from Park avenue into south of the Central Railroad Company's property to a point opposite the eastbound station platform where the property is now occupied by that intelligence office building. From there, our property runs on East Fourth street at right angles, the strip being forty feet wide and terminating at Fourth street with the building occupied by the Morey-LaRue laundry.

"We are planning to begin improvements in the near future, and will have a block on this property from Park avenue to the station park. This will have a concrete sidewalk, ten feet wide, leading from the street, and the roadway here will be of macadam, thirty eight feet wide. It is likely we will neces*sitate the demolition of Miss Lin*coln's flower store and the intelligence office, which was formerly the old police station.

"The statement that there will be a roadway leading up to the depot park from Fourth street is entirely unfounded. The building of the laundry company will be preserved. It is planned to erect some buildings along the drive frontage of the property in the near future. You can say that these buildings won't be 'one-story sky-scrapers either, but will be permanent, good-sized business houses." Charles H. Lyman made the deal.

HEALTH BOARD MAKES ITS MONTHLY REPORT

According to the reports presented at the monthly meeting of the Plainfield Board of Health, yesterday, the general condition of the city is good. The following communicable diseases were reported during February: Scarlet fever, 6; diphtheria, 1; typhoid fever, 1; tuberculosis, 6; measles, 11; chickenpox, 2; total, 27.

The cases of scarlet fever were in different sections of the city and there was no common source of infection. The one case of typhoid fever reported was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital from Westfield and was not a Plainfield case.

During February 30 samples of milk were collected and analyzed. The average bacteria was very low. The following is the average of the thirty samples: Fats, 4.3 per cent.; solids, 13.42; solids not fat, 9.12; lactometer, 115; bacteria per cubic centimeter.

Numerous complaints were received during the month of the various camps about the city and as a result four were closed. An endeavor was made to make the garbage collectors pay more attention to the city ordinances. Two were arrested, taken before City Judge Runyon and fined $3 in each case. Two plumbers were prosecuted for violation of the city ordinance. In one case sentence was suspended and in the other a fine of $25 was imposed. A permit was granted to the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company to carry on the business of scavanger and the number's bonds of A. L. Carner, P. E. Naylon and John L. Miller were ordered filed.

These returns were made to the office during February: Marriages, 11; births, 34; still-births, 1; deaths, 26. Forty-six per cent. of the deaths were of persons over sixty years of age.

HEPTASOPHS BIG RALLY

Delegates From Many Cities Attend District Meeting of Protective Conclave.

THE VISITORS MAKE SPEECHES.

Object of Meeting Was to Discuss Proposed Legislation to be Considered at the Saratoga Supreme Session.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the Improved Oedrr Heptasophs was held last night, when there was a joint installation and district meeting in Exempt Firemen's hall. In addition to the members of Protective Conclave, No. 505, of this city, there were present large delegations from Westfield, Elizabeth, Somerville, Asbury Park, Trenton and Morristown, the members from Morristown coming here in large touring cars.

The object of the meeting, which was presided over by J. V. E. Vanderhoef, supreme committeeman of the order, was to discuss the proposed legislation to be acted on at the next supreme session to be held in Saratoga in June. A vote of thanks was extended to him at the close of his remarks.

The officers of Westfield and Protective Conclaves were installed by District Deputy Supreme Archon Joseph K. Beand, of Trenton, assisted by Supreme Inspector Howard Heath of Asbury Park. Allen H. Vanderhoef was installed as archon of the local conclave, who by the way is the youngest archon in New Jersey, and possibly in the order. He is following in the footsteps of his father, who has been one of the leading members of the order for twelve years.

MRS. MEAD PRESIDENT OF M'ALL AUXILIARY

The annual meeting of the Plainfield branch of the McAll Auxiliary was held this morning at the Plainfield Public Library, when these officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Frederick C. Mead; secretary, Mrs. Herbert L. Baright; treasurer, Mrs. John Gray Foster; honorary vice-president, Mrs. Lawrence Myers; acting vice-presidents, Mrs. J. S. Zelie, Mrs. W. A. The report of the treasurer showed the receipts for the year to be in advance of the previous twelve months. There was a discussion of the conference to be held here May 5 and 6, and several committees were named to look after the details. At that time representatives of the association from all parts of the country will be present.

CHIEF CROKER'S ADVICE AGAINST "FIRE DEVILS"

The question of equiping the new East End fire-house with an automobile apparatus will by no means be fair. The Councilmanic fire committee or at least some of the members are not convinced that it would be a wise move. Mr. Mygatt, who has made more or less of a study of the question, had a personal interview with Chief Croker of the New York fire department a few days ago, and the latter informed him that in all opinion the automobile apparatus is still in the experimental stage and is not considered absolutely reliable for fire purposes. However, he believes that it will be the coming thing for fire-fighting.

This opinion does not agree with that of Chief Doane, who says that he still believes the automobile apparatus to be the only thing, although it was not long ago that he had the same idea as Chief Croker. Chief Doane says that the machine has passed the experimental stage and is reliable in every respect, this city. Still, while the fire committee is undivided in its opinion the Common Council is not likely to purchase an auto machine. The committee now intends to advertise for bids for a combination chemical and hose wagon, but the resolution authorizing this did not state what kind of power is desired. Perhaps the prices on both kinds will be received.

WIZARD PRESS IS MADE HERE FOR NEWARK PAPER

The Morning and Evening Stars of Newark, owned by former U. S. Senator James Smith, Jr., have just purchased from the Potter Printing Press Company, of this city, a wonderful sextuple press of the latest model and thoroughly equipped with all the modern devices, some of which are to be found in no other press of this style. It is a fine compliment to a local industry. It is the most perfect modern printing machine and will be installed in a few weeks. James E. Martine was instrumental in making the sale.

The thirty-seven hours this press would print a chain of Stars reaching 3,000 miles or from New York to San Francisco. In approximately two weeks the press would print enough Stars to form a belt around the world at the equator.

The press will print in colors, giving perfect results in solids or tints. There is no waste of paper; the fold and the margin are accurate and the cutting is perfect. All shafts and cylinder are of steel. All cylinder bearings are of phosphor bronze and rolls and shafts are fitted with phosphor bronze slip bushings. An entirely new stereotyping outfit will be installed with the new press, making it possible for the Star to make greater speed on editions than any other New Jersey newspaper. By the terms of the contract the new press will be installed and in operation in the Star building within a few weeks.

COAL PRICE TO ADVANCE

Strike of Anthracite Miners on April 1 Will Make Fuel Dearer.

CONSUMERS ARE GETTING BUSY.

Local Dealers Report An Unusually Large Business For This Season of the Year.

The affirmation by the anthracite coal operators of their refusal to accede to the demands of the mine workers, which are counter to the agreement of the Anthracite Commission in nearly every important detail, is causing the local coal men to corral as many of the shark diamonds as they can before the miners go out on strike. The announcement has been made that the strike will begin April 1, unless the causes for dissatisfaction can be adjusted in a conference before that time.

The local coal men, many of whom have secured a large supply of coal, it is said, are advising their patrons to lay in a supply of coal this month, declaring that there may be a repetition of high coal prices of the strike of seven years ago. At that time, it will be remembered, the city's supply of coal was quickly exhausted and people had great trouble in securing the fuel, paying as much as $13 a ton for it for a considerable time.

The miners, it appears, want union recognition, and the labor situation at the principal anthracite mines is in a very unsettled condition. The miners demand an eight-hour day, and declare that their minimum day's pay shall be $3. They further want to be paid by weight, instead of by the car, as is the present system. The airing of these demands of the workers in the regions, together with the local strike in Canada, is causing a great demand for coal throughout this section, and although the price remains the same, the coal men are doing a notable amount of business for this season of the year.

FOWLER SOUNDS WARNING

Congressman Explains the Recent Panic and Expounds His Panacea.

"THE LESSONS OF 1907."

He Outlines His Credit Currency Views Before Large Audience at Dutch Arms Meeting.

More than three hundred men greeted Congressman Charles Newell Fowler, when he addressed the Dutch Arms of Trinity reformed church Friday night, and for nearly three hours listened with deep interest to their representative as he explained "The Lessons of 1907." The church was appropriately decorated for the occasion with large American flags, draped about the organ and platform. A feature greatly enjoyed by the large assemblage of men was the fine music rendered by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra.

President H. C. Cutter, of the Dutch Arms, was in charge and he introduced Congressman Fowler, who was received with hearty applause. He expressed his pleasure in being present to speak to such a wide-awake organization, and then regretted that he was not able to say "ladies and gentlemen." He said that in these times men everywhere are organizing to study current topics of the day and he considered it an encouraging sign. In part Mr. Fowler said:

"I will discuss this financial question as broadly as possible for I am particularly anxious that everyone here shall understand it if possible. The troubles of 1907 in the world of finance were the result of bad principles. The banking business is a public business, not like that of a butcher or grocer. The State lays its hands on the banks and says 'thus far and no further shalt thou go.' The State and Nation have its examinations and associations as one living vital body. Checks and drafts come here to your banks from every nook and corner of the globe.

"Of all men in who are unfit to think about great financial changes is the banker. He immediately says: 'How will they affect me?' The merchant and manufacturer can grasp the situation far better. If your banking system is wrong, it is wrong in principle. The general impression of the public is that the banks are safe. It is only when rumors take hold of the people that they grow suspicious. If all our banks were examined then they would be able to meet any panic.

"It would be impossible to make all banks equal unless the boards of directorate were identical, the capital the same, and that could never happen. In 1890 we had sixteen billions of dollars, and today we have twenty billions, while there are thirty billions in all the rest of the world. In other words we have twofifths of the total resources of the world. The question of the tariff is of little or no importance as compared with our financial matters. In 1907 everyone was convinced that there was something radically wrong. During that time four billions of dollars were wasted in wars, etc., and practically all investment capital was expended.

"The Knickerbocker Trust Company, of New York, with an imposing board of directors, failed. The depositors began drawing their money out of circulation and the banks in New York did not have the necessary money to send West to move the crops when the call for help came. The reason for this was largely due to the fact that so many people locked their money up in private vaults. When New York could not help the West, Chicago could not do it, neither could St. Louis and the whole country felt the stringency.

"If we had had the right kind of currency this thing would not have happened. If the New York banks could have converted their notes that panic would never have occurred and no one can tell when the same thing is likely to occur again.

"The system of credit currency, is fundamental. During 1907 Pittsburg was like a foreign country. You had no financial communication with that centre. Such a condition should not exist. In the fall of 1891 when a condition of expansion existed, there was less money and in the spring when there was less expansion the capital was greater. The system worked just the reverse to what it should. It is one of the peculiar features of our currency system. If an automobile worked as well we would not think much of the machine.

"Now as to credit currency. I know that the system is right. The banks would pay 2 per cent. on notes not due and it would put notes on the basis of checks. The life of a note in Scotland is eighteen days and in Canada twenty days, while in this country it is until it crumbles away. As to the question of a reserve, if the standard of value be gold our reserve should be gold and nothing else. Today we have two, three or four hundred millions of bank reserve in 'I promise to pay' where we should have nothing but gold for reserve.

"In 1895 we had a run on our Treasury and at that time Cleveland sold $262,000,000 worth of bonds, and I thanked God that Cleveland was President of the United States in February, 1895. But this thing is likely to happen again at any time. This country is sleeping on a vast volcano."

The Congressman then launched forth the principles of his ideas regarding a central bank. He favors a central bank, with say thirty branches in a definite commercial zone, all merged in one, one supporting and working for the best interest of each. In this way the country would be developed. Mr. Fowler said that he believed that the Government should do nothing for the American people that they can do for themselves.

"It is a beautiful condition we have in this country, with eighty millions of people and two-fifths of the banking resources of the world and yet the people have no confidence in their banks," continued Mr. Fowler. "Suppose we had a central bank in New York and every bank within a radius of fifty miles a branch, with a guarantee on all deposits. There would be an approved system of bank examination of all accounts and there could be no run on any bank. The people would simply say the banks cannot fail for one is supported by the other.

"Now, let us assume that these banks were organized into an association divided into seven territories, and the banks pledged to contribute five per cent. on deposits as a guarantee reserve fund We would not have a run. There would be a proper board of control with absolute power. Under such conditions the 'Knickerbocker Trust Company could not fail, Morse would not be where he is today. There would be perfect co-ordination. Now supposing we had thirty such commercial zones with $700,000,000 reserve fund" there would be plenty of money to move crops and take care of all the manufacturing industries of the country. One big banker said recently, 'I believe Fowler is right, but his plan is against my principles.' When a bank fails it is quite likely to affect manufacturing interests in the community in which the institution is located. If properly protected this would not happen.

"New York should be the financial centre of the world, but it never will be with a reserve of three per cent. averaging from one to one hundred per cent. Give us a level rate of interest and the financial centre will be New York.

"What condition are we in to face a great war? Our financial ship is an old sailing vessel with rotten hulk. We may spend millions to turn out brilliant and well equipped officers at West Point and build battleships, but the fortress of all fortresses in all times is the strength of the treasury of the country. Be patriotic enough to study this question and as lovers of your country think for yourself."

During the latter part of his talk, the Congressman was called upon to answer various questions put by different men in the audience, including James E. Martine, the old opponent of Mr. Fowler in several campaigns. The latter seemed to meet every question fairly and explain it to the satisfaction of the inquirer. Afterward an opportunity was given all to meet Mr. Fowler.

Charles L. Lewis, instructor of music in the public schools, gave an illustrated lecture on "Panama and the Big Canal," at Plainfield High School Friday morning. Mr. Lewis' pictures were obtained during his recent visit to the canal zone, and graphically depicted to the pupils the scenery of that region, as well as showing the way in which the great waterway is being cut through between the two great seas.

The manner of living there has undergone a great change since the government has assumed the task of completing the canal, according to the pictures. The cottages occupied by the ordinary laborers are comfortable and clean and a complete sanitary system which has been installed considerably lessens the possibility of disease epidemic, which formerly was the subject. Mr. Lewis' lecture was highly entertaining as well as instructing. He is qualified to talk on this great project because he has been there and seen for himself, and he presents the subject in an interesting manner, showing beyond all doubt that the government was right in determining on the lock system. It is believed that the canal will be completed not later than 1914.

The special shipment from the general topic at times to tell about the country surrounding the canal zone. His pictures of the tropical wilderness brought exclamations from the audience, and his unlimited supply of amusing anecdotes concerning the natives were "immense." The lecture was a great treat for the pupils of the high school and their parents and friends, who are always welcome when there is an event of this kind in the big auditorium.

RED MEN CONDEMN GOVERNOR'S TAX PLAN

Resolution condemning Governor Fort for his proposal to divert part of the much needed taxes from the school fund so as to aid the depleted State treasury was passed unanimously Thursday at the annual convention of the New Jersey Improved Order of Red Men at Trenton. The resolution declares that the public schools should be held free of all political consideration and should be held as a sacred trust of the people. Continuing the resolution said:

"Whereas, organization emphatically protests against one penny of the school fund being used for any other purpose than the maintenance of the public schools of this State."

Joseph K. Blattner, of Cape May, and David G. Rolfe, of Wildwood, both members of the School Boards of their respective municipalities, strongly advocated the passage of the resolution. Both declared that if the Governor's plan were carried out it would be necessary to cut down the teaching force and the course of instruction.

These officers were elected during the afternoon: Great Prophet, E. W. Schabilion, Hackensack; Great Sachem, Harry A. Rathbone, Trenton; Great Senior Sagamore, John Thompson, Asbury Park; Great Junior Sagamore, John B. Wright, Camden; Representatives to the Great Council, Frederick P. Rees, Trenton; Thomas D. Thompson, Atlantic City; Andrew T. Young, Paterson; E. W. Schabilion, Hackensack.

As a fine judge of tone,
To which Mrs. Saugstad added:

Mrs. Julius G. Williams added this line:
"I acknowledge from personal test."

BOULEVARD FOLK TESTIFY.

In City Court Hearing West End Fracas Two Weeks Ago Is Aired for Nearly Two Hours.

The finale of the famous West End fight, which furnished excitement for a large proportion of the Boulevard population two Sundays ago, was threshed out in the city court before Judge Runyon Saturday, when Mrs. Helen Schneiderbeck and Mrs. Mary Barburici, the principal combatants made a verbal conclusion to the fracas, which comprised several fast rounds by eight witnesses. The Judge ruled that both were in the wrong and imposed a fine of $8 or twenty days on each of the women. Both paid.

William G. DeMeza was Mrs. Schneiderbeck's attorney, while W. L. Hetfield represented Mrs. Barburici. It was a case of the city against both parties, but each lawyer sought to free his client and this effort brought about some lively words between the attorneys on several occasions. The testimony proved chiasmatically contradictory, and this was emphasized by the fact that both lawyers succeeded in confusing the witnesses, five of whom were children. It took about two hours for the "merits" of the case to be set forth, and as it was after 11 o'clock when the sentences were given, Judge Runyon announced that the three other cases scheduled for the session would be postponed until Monday morning.

Harvey Van Pelt, who was the city's first witness, told how he, as a passer-by, had seen Mrs. Schneiderbeck teased by a party of a dozen small boys near the Barburici house. He testified that Angelo, the 14-year-old son of Mrs. Barburici, had told the boys to "have pity on a poor married woman" and seemed to think *that this angered Mrs. Schneider*beck. The fight came on soon afterwards, when Angelo "defended himself with both feet and fists." Mrs. Schneiderbeck was pitted against Mrs. Barburici and her seventy-year-old mother. When the fracas ended, Mrs. Schneiderbeck smashed a window in the Barburici house before going to her home.

The combat, which was the principal topic of conversation in the West End several weeks ago, was rehearsed by rounds, each witness keeping firmly in mind which of the women he was supposed to be testifying for. If there had been no outside interference, it would have been too one-sided to be interesting, for Mrs. Schneiderbeck has a big advantage in weight and strength. But the entire Barburici family got in on the scrap, and the women, with fingers locked in each other's hair, rolled around in the muddy gutter while the valiant Angelo "defended himself" with the chair leg. It was Van Pelt who separated them.

And then the scrappers came to the stand. Mrs. Schneiderbeck, dramatically heart-broken over the disgrace of the thing, played the role of the wronged woman and spun out the harrowing details of her injuries and insults. Mrs. Barburici and Angelo, in mellow Italian accent, each had a tale of woe which made the woman's opponent out as the sole wrong-doer. A physician told of the injuries to both women, and Harry Goff, Anthony Winuiski, Nancy Sabino, Joseph Dorsi and Angelo Winuiski, all youthful and excitable, mixed the case up further by telling different stories of the fight. All seemed to have been cowed with fear at the belligerent attitude of Mrs. Schneiderbeck, and Joseph said that Mrs. Schneiderbeck had declared that she must kill somebody that afternoon.

An inter-attorney tiff broke the blood and thunder testimony when Lawyer Hetfield sought to probe into the police court records of Mrs. Schneiderbeck, and each lawyer came out strong in the summing-up.

BIBLE CLASS FAREWELL DINNER FOR RANDOLPH

Judge William N. Runyon's Bible class gave a farewell dinner Friday night to Clifford F. Randolph, a fellow-member, who will leave in a few days to join the pitching staff of the Newark Eastern League baseball team. The Judge presided at the long table, and after counting noses announced that there was full Heinz complement of 57 varieties.

The committee on arrangement was composed of Arthur Fluck, chairman; Charles Vincent, Russell Randolph, D. B. Martin, Henry Keen, James D. Robson, Charles Cooper, Charles Hess, William Baker and James Harris. To them the rest of the varieties were indebted for a good dinner and one of the most enjoyable affairs the Hope chapel boys have ever held.

Rev. Dr. John S. Zelie responded to a toast and was followed by G. Herbert Condict, superintendent of the Sunday-school; Rev. Lorenzo R. Howard, the pastor; John Leal, James Penny and George Firstbrook.

Lorne Runyon paid a tribute to "Cliff" as a class member and a baseball twirler, and on behalf of the class presented him with a suit case and a frosted cake, on top of which were molded all of the accoutrements of the game. In accepting the tokens, Cliff promised not to forget the fellows of Hope when he went to the training grounds in Georgia, and to always bear them in mind while making the circuit during the summer.

THY ADMINISTRATOR'S ACCOUNT CONFIRMED

The session of the Somerset County Orphans' Court at Somerville was taken up Friday by the hearing on the exceptions to the account of Frank S. Flagg, as administrator of the estate of the late John Thys. Mr. Thys, who was killed in an automobile accident in New York in the summer of 1907, lived in North Plainfield with his sister.

Counsellor George Ball of this city, acted as counsel for the administrator, and Adolph Engleke, of Jersey City, represented Mary E. MacPaerson, of Brooklyn, the exceptant to the accounts. After hearing the evidence and the arguments of counsel, Judge Schenck sustained Mr. Boll's contentions and approved the accounts.

BOROUGH SCHOOL WINS FROM FAST LEAL'S FIVE.

N. P. H. S. again defeated Leal's five Friday afternoon at Y. M. C. A. gym. The game was fast and played with vim and energy. Time out for injury to players was a frequent occurrence and the gallery was in a state of excitement most of the time.

Scorers for both teams were there in large numbers, and enthusiasm, Conroy, as usual, was the sensation, and he was ably supported by the team work of his fellows. The final score was 22 to 15.

The line-up:

COMPARES AMERICAN AND ENGLISH HUMOR

American humor was analyzed, criticised and the audience was given a fund of knowledge about it and the old time humorists that had either slipped the memory or been overlooked entirely at Vincent chapel Thursday afternoon in a lecture by Leon Vincent, given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church. His subject was "American Humor; Artemus Ward to Mark Twain."

For instance, the speaker declared that the inimical funny American, Artemus Ward, was not popular neither were his works much read in this country, though in England he was made much of and his writings quoted, not by phrases and paragraphs, but by whole pages, even to the present day; that the English accepted his misspelled wit as typical American literature and compared the author to their own Byron, Dickens and the rest of the literary genuises.

"The English," said he, "often take seriously what is meant by the American to be humor, because they cannot recognize it as such. American humor relies on exaggeration and blending of jest and earnest, which is telling a preposterous story with a grave face. He likes to color his story, while the humor of the English consists in its truth; a portrayal of the absurd side of human life.

"Artemus Ward was funny as a lecturer, but much of the amusement in his writings relies on bad spelling and therefore a great deal of the humor is lost in the telling. He attained great success on the lecture platform by his droll and eccentric humor, especially in England where he was exceedingly popular. He died in that country in less than a year after his arrival there, and was but thirty-six years of age. His real name was Charles Farrar Browne. "Artemus Ward," being the nom de plume he assumed for his stories in the Cleveland Plaindealer, which first brought him into the limelight."

Mark Twain was also discussed by Mr. Vincent, who believes the venerable humorist to be the typical American product.

SOCIALISTIC MINISTER ON ECONOMIC GOSPEL

Rev. J. D. Long, pastor of the Park Side Presbyterian church, Brooklyn, whose auctioning of human beings at a church recently, as noted by the newspapers of this country, spoke in this city Thursday before the members of the Men's club of Heavenly Rest church. He is national secretary of the Christian Socialist Fellowship Society. His subject was "The Economic Gospel of Jesus."

Rev. Long has socialistic convictions and his talk dwelt on the relations of Christianity to socialism. The point brought out was that the fundamental principle of the gospel in Christ is the brotherhood of man, therefore Christianity must be interested in socialism. A short discussion followed the speech, in which the members expressed their views.

Charles Townsend, in a ten minute address, replying to Rev. Long's assertion that the great thing needed in the world is socialistic legislation, declared that what the world really needs is reformation of individual character and that socialism's cure-all is the church and that it is the christian church, because it is in the church that man's individualism will be reformed.

About seventy men were present, which is an indication of the club's popularity, the total membership being eighty. A smoker and social chat was enjoyed after the speaking.

The next lecturer is Hugh Pew, who will talk on the child labor problem. The date is Thursday night, March 11.

Mr. Besler has been a resident of the borough since his appointment to his present position with the New Jersey Central. The land deal was made by Charles H. Lyman, real estate broker.

'ADV.' FOLK IN REAL LIFE

"Gold Dust Twins" and "Woo Soap" Boy Hidden from View for Fear of Censors.

SEE "LIVING ADVERTISEMENTS"

Park Avenue Sunday-school Pupils Present Unique Entertainment Favors Were Samples of Goods Advertised.

Entertainment on the occasion of the joint sociable given by the members of the Sunday-school of Rev. A. E. Finn, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and his wife, Thursday, was provided by "automatic advertisement," a clever adaptation of "living advertisements" and "Mrs. Jarley's wax works." Members of the classes, costumed in faithful reproduction of several of the best known magazine advertisements, were introduced, "wound up," and "operated" before the audience, by "Professor" Harry Johnson.

In introducing the "exhibit," "Professor" Johnson took occasion to put one over on the censor commission. "I have just been told," he said, at the beginning of the presentations, "that a member of the recently appointed censor committee is in the audience. For this reason, I shall be unable to look on the advertisements on the program for tonight. Those to be omitted will be 'The Gold Dust Twins,' and the boy whose mamma did not use 'Wool Soap.'"

Among the cleverest advertisements were those for Hall's machine mineral oil, Scott's Emulsion, and the old couple listening to the Victor talking machine. Mrs. B. R. Henry was the woman at the sewing machine in the first ad., Frederick Hopler was the fisherman so familiar in the Scott's Emulsion publicity, and Mrs. Charles M. Dayton and D. M. Runyon were the couple before the phonograph. The costumes and make-ups of those who took part were especially accurate and clever. Among the other advertisements presented were the following:

Mennen's talcum powder, L. H. Gage; the doctor of Spotless Town, Nelson Van Winkle; Phoebe Snow, Mrs. Casper Simms and Miss Mary Simms; Mrs. Casper Simms and Miss Simms; Campbell's condensed soups, Miss Lillian Hardcastle; Van Houten's Dutch cocoa, Mrs. Charles Steiner; Danderine, Mrs. B. F. Hadley; Dutch Cleanser, Mrs. T. B. Sims; Hemorrhoidine, Mrs. Hammand; Peter's cartridges, J. C. Tate; the Fidelity Trust Co., E. F. Dorman.

The Sunday-school room, where the entertainment was presented, was elaborately decorated with bunting and advertising signs. Favors, consisting of generous samples of several of the advertised articles, were distributed among the 250 people present.

At the conclusion of the presentation of the ads, partners were chosen by snapping favors. Each favor contained an original verse of poetry. One of these was "Little Girl, go in and win; then steer him around to Dr. Finn." In connection with the choosing of partners Rev. Finn's "Professor" Johnson announced that the pastor would be on hand during the entire evening, with special rates. Mrs. N. H. Wilson was in charge of the fortune booth, where snappers were distributed. Refreshments consisting of ice cream, coffee and cake were served during the evening. The committee in charge of the affair was made up of Charles F. Dayton, E. F. Dorman and H. F. Bruen, of Rev. Mr. Finn's class, and the Misses Olive DeLany, Lillian Hardcastle and Mary Giles from Mrs. Finn's class. During the evening, music was rendered by a ten piece orchestra in charge of Arthur Mosher.

PLAINFIELDER ANOBODY FOR N. Y. GAS REBATES.

Judge E. Henry Lacombe, of the United States District Court, has engaged the services of Suffern & Son to act as auditors in connection with the gas repayments. Henry J. Cochran, of this city, has been appointed auditor by them. The amount of money due to each consumer representing the difference between eighty cent and $1.00 as decided by the court will be refunded as soon as possible. The first checks will probably be mailed to consumers on Monday, March 1.

There are nine distributing bureaus and a large force of men is now at work preparing the proper lists, vouchers and checks.

Another Postoffice Site.

It was reported today that efforts are being made to secure options on the Bender property at West Second street and Madison avenue, and the land adjoining as a site for Plainfield's proposed new Federal building. It is said that little trouble is being experienced in getting options, as most of the property-owners in that vicinity consider the site an ideal one for the building.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 7, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—Life lessons for me from the Psalms.—Ps. xlvi, 1-11. (Consecration meeting.)

The expression "for me" indicated in the topic has a special significance as related to the Psalms. Every book of the Bible applies more or less to the individual, but the Psalms in this respect surpass all others. No other book has been more widely read, and no other has had so many comments written upon it. The reason for these things lies close to the surface. The Psalms are largely devotional. They are the expressions of the soul in its relation to God under the most varied circumstances. The experiences of the soul are and always have been essentially the same, and hence when the soul is cast down or exalted, when under depression or blessed with a perfect trust, we turn to the Psalms to read the experiences of others under similar circumstances, and we never go away without a blessing. The Psalms have been a powerful factor both in church life and national life, but, above all, they have filled longing wants in the individual life. If you have neglected or are neglecting this book as a means of your personal growth in experimental religion and in all graces you are making a sad mistake. In the Twenty-third Psalm, for instance, only the singular personal pronoun is used, illustrating that they are "for me."

The book of Psalms is a collection of sacred poems, used in song and composed by various authors, but principally by David, and hence they are commonly called the "Psalms of David." They include historical references, confessions of men, Messianic prophecies, the outpourings of the soul in times of doubt and despair and praises and rejoicings in times of implicit trust and joy. The book consists of 150 Psalms, yet there is no division as to time or as to the subjects used. The Jews divide them into five books, which division has been followed by the revisers of the Old Testament:

Book I.—Ps. 1-41.
Book II.—Ps. 42-72.
Book III.—Ps. 73-89.
Book IV.—Ps. 90-106.
Book V.—Ps. 107-150.

Nor are the divisions arbitrary. At the end of each there is a natural stopping place. The first book closes with the words, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting, amen and amen" (Ps. xli. 13); the second, "The prayers of David, the son of Jesse, are ended" (Ps. lxxii. 20); *the third, "Blessed be the Lord for*evermore, amen and amen" (Ps. lxxxix, 52); the fourth, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting, and let all the people say amen; praise ye the Lord" (Ps. cvi. 48); the fifth, "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord; praise ye the Lord" (Ps. cl. 6).

The Forty-sixth Psalm is a lesson to the church and to us as members of it. In the midst of all the trials of the church "God is in the midst of her; she shall not be mired. God shall help her, and that right early." So it is with our lives. God is in the midst of them, and we need not fear though the earth and the mountains be moved or the waters roar. "God is our refuge and strength."

The following letter was presented and read:

Plainfield, N. J.

Mr. S. R. Ryno.

Dear Sir:—At the next meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders would you do me the favor to call the attention of the board of the conference of trustees and committees to be held in Trenton in February, of which I enclose a preliminary program.

These conferences have heretofore proved most interesting and inspiring, and I sincerely hope the gentlemen of the board will avail themselves of this opportunity to hear the best thought on subjects of deep interest and importance to the entire county.

Very truly yours,
ELIZABETH TIFFANY.

January 16, 1909.

On motion of Freeholder Smith accepted and filed.

The following communications was read:

January 22, 1909.

To the Board of Freeholders:

Gentlemen—The New Jersey Conference of Charities and Corrections is to be held in the State House in Trenton, February 18, 19 and 20.

We enclose a copy of the program which will develop many points of great value and those interested in community welfare. We can send *you additional copies of this pro*gram if you can use them.

We are asking every Board of Freeholders to appoint delegates, both from their board and the institutions in their care and to send us the names of those appointed.

In order to do any progressive work it is essential to meet and compare methods, and this conference has been so carefully planned such a meeting place and provided the stimulus for renewed effort.

Lists of Trenton hotels will be found in the program. Further information regarding accommodations will be gladly furnished by Miss Laura C. Johnson, 116 West State street, Trenton, chairman of the Hospitality Committee. We advise making early arrangements in regard to accommodations.

Hoping that you will send a good representation, we are,

Very truly yours,
N. J. CONFERENCE OF CHARITIES AND CORRECTIONS.
E. V. H. MANSELL,
Secretary.

On motion of Freeholder Cady the Director appointed the members of the Committee on Jail Inspection as delegates to the said conference.

From the State Road Commission er as follows:

January 15, 1909.

Major Benjamin King, Director Board of Freeholders, City.

My Dear Mr. King—I am returning herewith, with my approval, the requests for authority to survey cer*tain roads* and to expend a sum not to exceed permanently improving them under State aid during the present year.

As stated to you on the occasion of your interview with me we propose to abandon the old method of macadam road construction and substitute some improved method which will hold our roads together and eliminate the dust nuisance; there fore, consent to survey these roads is contingent upon your board agreeing to meet the requirements of this department before preparing your plans and specifications.

Please let me know in particular method of construction can be decided later on or as soon as possible after your engineer has made the necessary surveys and prepared his plans and cross sections.

Very truly yours,
FREDERICK LAWYSON,
Commissioner.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse, received and referred to the County Road Committee.

From the Grand Jury:

February 3, 1909.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—By the direction of the January Grand Jury we were requested to appeal to your honorable body to provide some system of ventilation for the Grand Jury room that the same may be operative during the winter months as well as summer, as it is now. The present conditions are vile and should be remedied at once.

As you well know, the Grand Jury is made up composed of the business men, who at all times wish to keep in touch with their several interests. For that reason we request your honorable body to have a telephone booth located in the same floor with the Grand Jury room.

A modern public building, such as this county owns, is incomplete without an elevator. Aged and infirm witnesses as well as those who are not in good health, often have a difficulty in ascending the stairs leading to the court-rooms. We would therefore recommend the early installation of an elevator.

Respectfully submitted,
M. F. MOORE,
M. S. ACKERMAN,
H. C. VAN FLEET,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Cady, received and placed on file.

The following petition was read:

Elizabeth, January 30, 1909.

To the Honorable Board of Free holders of Union County:

Gentlemen—I do hereby make application for the position of bridge*tender, on the South First street* bridge, which is about to be opened. I have had some twenty years' ex*perience as a machinist, during* which time I have operated electric cranes motors. With this knowledge I feel competent to apply for the above position and respectfully ask your careful consideration of the same.

Very truly yours,

Signed by P. E. Richter, Andrew Strand, Francis W. Kirwan and twenty others.

On motion of Freeholder Doane received anu referred to Committee on First Street Bridge.

The following petition was read:

Elizabeth, January 27, 1909.

To the Honorable Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen — The undersigned, John Seeland, respectfully makes application for the appointment as bridgetender at the Elizabeth Street bridge in the city of Elizabeth.

Trusting you will give my application favorable consideration, I am

Respectfully yours,
JOHN SEELAND,

Signed by Adolph Degerking, J. P. Arnold, L. O'Donnell and nine others.

On motion of Freeholder Smith, received and referred to the Committee on First Street Bridge.

Three petitions, each bearing the same heading, were presented and read as follows:

Elizabeth, December 16, 1908.

To the Honorable Board of Free holders of the County of Union, N. J.:

Gentlemen—We, the undersigned workmen and taxpayers of the city of Elizabeth, petition your honorable body to place a bridge over the Elizabeth River at Baltic street. By so doing some 1,500 workmen will avoid walking on the tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, going to and from their daily work.

BOWKER FERTILIZER WORKS,
and two hundred and fifty six others.

After some discussion, during which several members of the board expressed the feeling of the city of Elizabeth to comply with its agree*ment to construct* that part of South First street on each side of the new bridge, it was, ordered, on motion of Freeholder Cady, that the foregoing petition be received and laid on the table.

From Benjamin H. Williamson, as follows:

Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 3, 1909.

Major King, President of the Board of Freeholders, City.

My Dear Major King—As I have in the past experienced difficulty in getting the sick poor into the Elizabeth General Hospital on account of their having no one to pay for them, I am willing to ask what is the status of the appropriation made by the county for the sick poor in the hospitals of the county. I know that the Freeholders appropriate quite a large sum of money for this purpose but I have never been able to understand how the county appropriation is used in connection with the sick poor. How are the cases defined, that is, are the money appropriated by the county for the general use of its citizens in municipalities and boroughs?

I know that the city of Elizabeth appropriates *money for the Eliza*beth General Hospital. I believe that the Alms Houses have no appropriation from the county, but no difficulty ever arises in that institution in regard to admission, as they have the confidence everyone without question, who needs attention.

I have long been wanting to ask this question of your honorable body and knowing that it is near the beginning of your fiscal year, I take the liberty of addressing you on this subject.

Very sincerely yours,
E. E. WILLIAMSON.

Freeholder Krouse moved that the communication be received and referred to a special committee of three together with the county attorney and county collector, which was so ordered.

The director appointed as the said committee Freeholders Krouse, Garrison and Wilbur.

From the N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Company as follows:

February 4, 1909.

Mr. Jacob L. Bauer, County Engineer, Union County, N. J.

Dear Sir—The underground cables recently placed in Westfield, on Broad street between Dorian road and Prospect streets, are in a serious condition which will result in their damage due to the fact that a large amount of current from the trolley rail is flowing over these cables.

The connection between the underground cable and the trolley rail is made, we believe, by the casings of the bridge over the culvert on Broad street coming in contact with the iron pipes through which our cables are drawn.

We are about to make application to the city of Westfield to open the street pavement above this culvert and desire permission to make such slight changes to the ironwork of the bridge as may be necessary to break this contact which is causing the trouble. After opening this street, no changes will be made without your approval and authority.

Very truly yours,
EDGAR S. BLOOM,
Div. Plant Supt.

On motion of Freeholder Cady received and referred to the freeholders from the town of Westfield with power.

By Committee on New Lift Bridge on South First street, Elizabeth, N. J.:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—Your Committee on the New Lift Bridge now being completed at South First street, Elizabethport, New Jersey, would respectfully report that the bridge is completed with the exception of some riveting and the placing of small parts of the machinery and the floor; all the materials and machinery, timbers, etc., are on the ground or in place, and we believe that the bridge will be ready for operation before the next regular meeting of the board. However, a serious condition of affairs confronts us due to the neglect of the City Council of the city of Elizabeth to keep its agreement made through its Mayor, Street Commissioner and several councilmen before this bridge was started and while the same was building, with the committee in charge of the bridge of this board, to build the approaches on both sides of this bridge.

The board will remember the discussion at the time the city of Elizabeth and the Merchants' Association of Elizabeth appeared before the board for this bridge, the objections made by some of the members of this board at that time being that the bridge should be finished in connection with the approaches as promised, and the situation today is that on the one side of the stream there is a roadway partly filled in with ashes and refuse that has been there for years and years while on the other side there is no approach whatever.

This bridge was built at a cost of some $25,000 at the request and for the sole benefit of the city of Elizabeth, and the city has not taken one step to remedy the conditions that existed before this bridge was built. The bridge will open up a large section of the city of Elizabeth available for manufacturing sites and will make a direct line of communication out of the heart of the downtown section of the city toward the Bayway section and Carteret. Another feature is that the bridge is also designed as a relief to the much-used South First street bridge; the South Front street bridge has heretofore been the only means of travel from the city proper over to the factory districts along South Front street and is some thirty-seven years old, with the usual possibility of its breaking down. Should this occur the damage that would result to the city in the outing off of travelling communication between these two sections cannot be estimated; another fact is that the nearest approach is about a mile away from this site.

With all these benefits in view, resulting from the building of this bridge, which was done at the earnest solicitation of the city officials, *by its citizens, this board is con*fronted with the fact that although this bridge is nearly completed, it is absolutely useless simply because the city officials of the city of Elizabeth will not keep its promise.

Your committee recommends that a copy of this report, with the request that the bridge be opened with immediate action in the building of the approaches to this bridge, be sent to the City Council of Elizabeth.

CHARLES J. JENSEN,
THOMAS F. HAVILAND,
JOHN ROBISON,
JOHN N. CADY,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Smith the report was received and recommendation therein contained adopted without dissent.

By Committee on Culvert in Cranford.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to investigate the advisability of building a culvert at High street and Lincoln avenue, Cranford, would respectfully report that it has visited the spot and viewed the locality and would recommend the building of a new concrete culvert at that point at a cost not to exceed $215.

E. K. ADAMS,
JOSEPH PERRY,
AARON D. CRANE,
Committee.

Freeholder Darby moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which so ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

New Business.

By Freeholder Krouse:

Whereas, Numerous requests have come to this board from private citizens, public officers, and public bodies requesting the installation of an elevator in the Courthouse, for public accommodations, and

Whereas, An elevator would be a great convenience and accommodation, not only to public officers of the county and the public, but to all who have business at the Courhouse; therefore be it

Resolved, That an elevator be installed in the Courthouse at an expense not exceeding $5,500.

Freeholder Cady moved the adoption of the foregoing preamble and resolution and on roll call they were unanimously adopted.

By Freeholder Doane:

Whereas, It is rumored that an effort is to be made during the present session of the Legislature of this State, to repeal the law whereby the various County Boards of Taxation were created, and

Whereas, It is the opinion of this board that since the establishment of said Board of Taxation in Union county the assessments and equitable valuation of taxable properties in this county has been secured, through the faithful and conscientious work of said Union County Board of Taxation; therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this board that such act should not be repealed, and that considering the best interests of the public said County Boards of Taxation should be continued for further use.

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Senator and various members of the Legislature from Union county, and that they be requested to use their efforts to continue the establishments of County Boards of Taxation as now by law provided for.

On motion of Freeholder Jones the foregoing preamble and resolutions were adopted without dissent.

By Freeholder Krouse:

Whereas, The city is paying at the rate of from $200 to $300 per month for electric light furnished by the Public Service Corporation, and

Whereas, Said light expense is for the increase from month to month; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Public Grounds and Building be authorized to be authorized and requested to take said matter into consideration and consider the advisability of installing an electric light plant for the use of this county, the probable cost, and report to this board at a future meeting.

On motion of Freeholder Cladek, the foregoing preamble and resolution were adopted without dissent.

'PHONE COMPANY ARROGANT.

When the Board of Trade appointed a committee to make an investigation of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company's recent action in doubling the cost of service in the business section by discontinuing the unlimited plan it made a move in the right direction. It is well known that this arrogant utility concern, which admits that its profits during the last year have been the greatest in its whole history, has levied upon its business houses of Plainfield a rate that is higher than in many cities of larger population in which it operates.

After having obtained from the municipal government all the favors needed for the present, at least, the 'phone company has assumed a most domineering and independent agitude and it is high time that it be brought to book. The Board of Trade in doing what it has is pursuing the right course and we suggest that the Plainfield Progressive Association which did signal service for the community when its electric light and gas agitation resulted in a reduction of rates for local consumers, consider this important matter.

If the telephone company is reaping such big profits, what warrant has it for "soaking" its local patrons? This query is the keynote of the campaign in which every patron should take an active part.

AWARD STONE CONTRACT TO N. B. SMALLEY & CO.

Rivalry in the matter of bids for the work of furnishing crushed stone to the city for the coming year was renewed at the March meeting of the Common Council Monday, between N. B. Smalley & Co. and the Watchung Stone Company. Smalley & Co. won by a good margin, thereby getting the contract away from Warren B. Travell's concern. The latter, however, gets the contract for furnishing crosswalks, culverts, etc., his bid being the lowest.

N. B. Smalley & Co. submitted the following bid for crushed stone: Fine screenings, 78 cents; ½ inch, 78 cents; 1½ inch, 78 cents; 2½ inch, 70 cents. The bid of the Watchung Stone Company is as follows. Fine screenings, 84 cents; ½ inch, 84 cents; 1½ inch, 78 cents; 2½ inch, 68 cents. The Watchung Stone Company presented an endorsement from L. W. Page, of the Department of Agriculture, stating that its stone meets every test.

The Watchung Stone Company, Andrew Roach and Patrick Nugent presented bids for furnishing crosswalks, culverts, curbing, etc., but that of the company for the various sizes of stone being 22, 43, 47, 66 and 75 cents a foot, was the lowest and the contract will be awarded the concern on these bids when referred to the street committee.

PASTOR'S AID SOCIETY

RE-ELECTS ITS OFFICERS.

At the annual meeting of the Pastor's Aid Society of the First Presbyterian church, held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. W. Dunn, of West Fifth street, the officers were elected to serve for another term. The single exception in this re-election was the naming of Miss Catherine Lounsbury as secretary, in place of the late Miss Helen Burroughs. The officers are Mrs. Clarence E. Bond, president; Mrs. George B. Wean, vice-president, and Mrs. Freeman Shotwell, treasurer. Reports on the year's work showed the society to have a membership of thirty-five members and be in a flourishing condition.

In connection with the business session came an informal discussion of plans for the spring work of the organization, and the various committees are soon to get busy. At the conclusion of the session, an informal social hour was passed, and refreshments were served.

They Want Sidewalks.

Charles C. Graves and other residents of Clinton avenue and vicinity petitioned for sidewalks on that avenue between West Front and Fourth streets at the Common Council meeting Monday. The matter was referred to the report of the alms committee showed the total outside expense for the past month to be $244.75. Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that fifteen permits were granted during February, and H. G. Adams, clerk of the District court, reported receipts of $106.70 for the past month with a balance of $77.10.

Elected an Executive Committee.

Mrs. Champlain L. Riley, of Myrtle avenue, was elected on the executive committee of the Consumers League of New Jersey at the meeting of the league held last week at Newark.

FRIENDLY SONS PLAN BANQUET ON BIG SCALE

For fourteen years, consecutively, the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, composed of leading Irish-Americans, of Elizabeth, and vicinity, have held a banquet on St. Patrick's Day, and each of the affairs has proven successful and enjoyable from every standpoint. The year's will be the fifteenth, and will be no exception, judging from the elaborate arrangements being made for it by the committee. It will take place in the hall of the Young Men's Catholic Literary Association, Rahway avenue, Elizabeth. Governor Fort will be present, if unforseen circumstances do not interfere with the plan. He has given his promise.

Congressman James A. Hamill, of Jersey City, will speak, as well as others prominent in the political and business life of the State. P. J. Madden, of Chicago, called by the Friendly Sons the "Thousand-Mile Man," because he always attends the banquet if he is within a thousand miles of Elizabeth, will very likely be present. The Rev. John A. Dillon, curate at St. Mary's church, and formerly in charge of Seton Hall College, will be one of the orators.

Practically every official in Elizabeth and many of the county officials will be present. Chief Kiely, Mayor Fisk, former Mayor James F. Bucklin, Amos Andrews, E. C. Westcott and George J. Tobin will represent Plainfield.

Purcell, of East Orange will do the catering. Henry Leahy and John R. Laggren, the decorating and Harry Wetton will furnish the music. T. Arthur Baker will lead the choruses, as usual.

The committee in charge of the banquet consists of General D. F. Collins, chairman; Edward Nugent, George J. S. Murphy, Richard T. Potts, W. Jerome Meeker, William Whelan, Henry Leahy and William J. McCloud. The officers of the Friendly Sons are: General D. F. Collins, president; Henry Leahy, treasurer; George J. S. Murphy, secretary.

NEW JERSEY'S ECONOMY

PLAN AS MAPPED OUT.

Members of the special New Jersey Legislative Committee, who have been making an inquiry into the condition of the State's finances, with a view of submitting recommendations for the relief thereof, conferred Saturday at the office of Senator Joseph Frelinghuysen, at 30 William street, New York. A final draft of the report the committee will make is being gone over carefully, and Mr. Frelinghuysen, after a conference with his associates, said it was quite probable this would be signed this week or early next week and presented to the Legislature a Trenton tonight.

Mr. Frelinghuysen was not inclined to discuss any of the recommendations the committee have embodied in the document, but he did say it was quite voluminous and went fully into the financial situation. It was stated there was nothing drastic about the suggestions to be made, and the belief was expressed the report would be adopted without dissent upon presentation.

The committeemen took occasion to deny indignantly that any outside influences had been at work in the compilation of the report and particularly that the statement that former Governor Edward C. Stokes had conferred with any of them about it.

"Governor Stokes or no one else has had anything whatever to do with the findings of the committee," said Mr. Frelinghuysen. "He has never conferred with us or met with us, either collectively or individually, nor have we as a body or as individuals been to see or talk with him or any one else about it."

It is understood legislative bills drawn in conformity with the committee's report will be offered in the Senate the same time the report is presented.

Rescue Mission Anniversary.

The Rescue Mission at Elizabeth celebrated Sunday night at Westminster Presbyterian church its seventeenth anniversary. The mission was established in 1892, and has done splendid work, reclaiming fallen humanity. The mission is in a flourishing condition. An excellent musical and literary program was rendered Sunday night and several addresses were made by ex-workers and others praising the institution for its untiring labors toward the betterment of those who applied to it for help.

Waterways and Railways.

A paper full of valuable information and of great interest on "Waterways and Railways" was presented by Miss Julia I. Scribner at the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club held Monday at the Hartridge auditorium. Supplementary remarks on the different modes of transportation used in our country were made by a number of members. The paper was preceded by an animated discussion on the subject, "What Are We Leaving to Our Descendents?"

Dr. Cooley Buys Pasture.

Dr. Justus H. Cooley has purchased sixty-five acres of the Phillip Acker farm on the mountain. The tract is valley land and will be used for grazing his stock.

AMUSEMENTS.

There is a tense and gripping moment of suspense toward the close of an act in "A Gentleman from Mississippi," which has held New York's fickle fancy at the Bijou Theatre ever since last summer. The genial old Southern Senator, roused to indignation by the corrupt naval base scheme, rounds upon the legislative plotters and roars forth that next day he will call them to account on the floor. "What are you going to do tomorrow at 12:30?" asks his secretary, as the others withdraw. "Damned if I know," replies the Senator ruefully. And the curtain falls amid shouts of laughter and is raised for a dozen scene calls. The dramatic values of surprise and sudden transition from serious to comic are strikingly illustrated. Nothing is more significant of dramatic success in New York than out of town comment in hotels and upon railways. This is no other play of the period so generally discussed as "A Gentleman from Mississippi."

Miss Grace George has scored a tremendous hit at the Hackett theatre in her new comedy, "A Woman's Way," by Thompson Buchanan, which opened at the matinee on Washington's Birthday. Those who were charmed with the beautiful work of Miss George in Sardou's "Divorcons" should not fail to see her in her new play, for in the part of Marion Stanton she has a role which fits her even better than Cyprienne. Cyprienne is a spoiled French girl, but Marion Stanton is a more independent and brave American girl, whose courage and sense of humor in the face of a trying situation wins all hearts. Marion Stanton discovers that her husband has become infatuated with a fascinating Southern widow, and instead of yielding to the hysteria and tears that might ordinarily be expected, she recognizes the fact that a man is likely to go to a woman who appeals the most to his nature. The one thing to do is to get her husband's confidence cleverly accomplishes it, bringing the widow into the Stanton home, and by the force of contrast and clever manipulation showing her shallowness and general undesirability.

Newspaper criticisms, reviews and comments on the sensation of the theatrical season, "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," has incited a unique controversy between the two critics, Thomas W. Ryley, and its author, Paul M. Potter. Despite, or perhaps because of the statements of newspaper writers that the play goes beyond all former theatrical daring in its presentation of sensations, and that it is salacious in its exposition of it is salacious in its exposition of a night of revelry in the most notorious, and therefore, noted, district of Paris, the Moulin Rouge, and in its depiction of the characters who go to make up the "Underworld of Paris," "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," is in its second month of truly phenomenal success and is destined to be continued at the Circle Theatre at least through the summer months. This very success has caused a continued "chorus" of condemnation of what its critics term "a beautiful production marred by its frank exposition of women in scant garb, especially in its parade of students' models clad only in fleshings, the undressing scene in the jail and the two side-shows that belong only to their home, the cabarets of Paris." These two dances the "Underworld" and the "Kicking" polka, were brought by Mr. Ryley from Paris.

CORPORATION COUNSEL

SAYS LET THEM FIGHT.

Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh, to whom was referred the matter in dispute between Harry Dreier and Frank Marsh, relative to the sale of the Experience Moe property by the city to the former, submitted his report at the March meeting of the Common Council Monday night. Mr. Marsh said that inasmuch as Mr. Dreier had purchased the property from the city, according to the provisions of such sales, that the city has no power or authority in the matter, that the matter in dispute is solely between Mr. Dreier and Mr. Bacon as the former had had the title searched and saw fit to accept the deeds, etc.

The corporation counsel said also that the courts are open for the settlement of such matters. The opinion and other papers in the case were ordered filed.

Surprise For Theodore Martin.

A surprise party was given in honor of Theodore Martin at his home on Chatham street, Monday by a select company of friends. On behalf of those present Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, presented Mr. Martin with a dress suit case and a silk umbrella. The evening was spent playing various games, after which refreshments were served. Mr. Martin was assisted by Mrs. John Schenck, Miss Nora Schenck, Miss Dolly Bolsterli and Charles F. Windham.

Chief Entertained Army Friend.

Sidney B. Weer, of East Hartford, N. Y., and Mr. Whipple, of Rutledge, Vermont, spent Sunday in this city as the guests of Chief T. O. Doane. They had been to Hampton Roads to see the demonstration over the return of the fleet. Mr. Weed was an army companion of Chief Doane's in the Veteran Reserve Corps.

REV. H. RAYMOND LODER LEAVES HOLY CROSS

H. Raymond Loder, of New York city, whose resignation as organist and choirmaster of Holy Cross church was recently accepted reluctantly by the vestry, was in charge of the music at the church for the last time at Sunday's services. The music at the various services yesterday was of an especially high order, the full vested choir of forty voices taking part. At the morning service a soprano offertory solo by Carroll Taylor was the feature of the day's music. It is through the efforts of Mr. Loder that Holy Cross music has been raised to its present standard.

Beginning with next Sunday, Mr. Eglinton, of New York city, will be temporary organist and choir master of the church. Mr. Eglinton comes from Trinity church parish, and is a pupil of Felix Lamond.

SPECIAL SERMON FOR HOPE CHAPEL'S MEN

At Hope chapel Sunday morning the pastor, Rev. L. R. Howard, preached a sermon for young men. There were many young men present and a large number of them being from Judge Runyon's Bible Class which had requested a special address. The subject was "The Cost of Discipleship," and it was the first of a series of sermons on "Discipleship" which will be continued on Sunday mornings until Easter.

The text used by Mr. Howard was Luke 9:23, "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." He said in part:

"It costs immensely to be anything worth while," said the minister. "There is nothing in the world which costs as much as being a real follower of Jesus Christ, but there is nothing else that begins to be so desirable. Being a follower of Jesus means seeking the best life possible, and, contrary to the belief of some shallow observers, the young men of today are more desirous of the best life than those of any other age. The question is, how many of them are willing to pay the price? The young man who went to Jesus asking what he must do to obtain eternal life was like the young man of today who wants to life an enduring life, a life whose influence will last after him. He loved his money more than he did the chance to get such a life, however, so he could not get it. He lacked the faith and the courage to pay the cost. Not every man is asked to pay in money, because many care little for money and prize other things most highly. The demand of Jesus is that nothing be prized equally with following him in a life of service to humanity, and to the will of God. If you choose anything in preference to that you cannot be his follower.

"This was not only the teaching of Jesus lips, however, it was the teaching of his life as known to us, from the renunciation of the forty days in the wilderness to the great sacrifice of the cross, where he sealed the pledge of his life with his blood, and proved forever that he himself believed what he said when he declared that it is more blessed to give than to receive." The young man who did this is the one great leader of the church, and through the church is ever giving the invitation to other young men to follow him. He wants men who will consecrate in a manner like unto his work which he began, making the world better in every way possible and at any cost to self.

"The ways a young man is called upon to deny self in order to do a higher duty are legion. The world is innumerable, but one of the commonest is in the matter of indulging appetite. If such indulgence means injury to some one else, and in thousands of cases it does, then of course the best life requires its denial.

"A still commoner opportunity of service is enough influence in that which comes in various ways to young men at the cost of personal popularity. A man cannot be permanently popular who is really following Christ. The approval of one's companions is good only if kept within the surrender of that which is right. The bitter criticism to which President Roosevelt has been subjected is to many persons an additional indication that he is honestly seeking the best things for the country.

"The giving of time and thought to the support of good work of all sorts, like the work of the church for example, is another way of service which often calls for self denial, but it is far more than worthy the cost. Hope chapel itself is the result of just such forgetfulness of self on the part of people who have been trying to follow Jesus. Until within quite recent years, moreover, the proportion of young men in Hope chapel making this sacrifice has been strangely small. It offers one of the finest opportunities for the highest life that is open any where to the young men of the West End, but of course they cannot take advantage of it unless they are willing in the spirit of Jesus to pay the cost in self denial."

MR. COLBY'S CHAUFFEUR VIOLATED SPEED LIMIT

Edward Horn, chauffeur for Howard Colby, brother of State Senator Everett Colby, was nabbed on South avenue by Officer George Dobson Saturday morning for exceeding the speed limit in Mr. Colby's big French touring car. With Horn were two of Mrs. Colby's maids, whom he was taking to the station. He told Judge Runyon that "they had to meet the Misses in New York a certain time, and were very late for the train." Although the officer stated that the car was moving at a rate of forty miles an hour, the chauffeur denied this and said he had it under perfect control, although he was exceeding the speed limit. The flying auto created considerable excitement in its whirlwind trip to the station. Somebody telephoned to Chief Kiely at police headquarters that it had just passed along Fifth street and as the Chief hung up the receiver, he glanced from the window and saw the car going by. He sent an officer out to nab Horn Dobson had already taken the chauffeur's number on South avenue for his subsequent arrest, but the Chief's prompt action saved him the trouble of having to look up his man. Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

Kent Bender, manager of a local garage, also faced the Judge at the session of court Monday to answer a charge of speeding. Officer Dobson caught him on Watchung avenue Saturday, and declared that he was going thirty miles an hour. Bender said that he was trying to make up time in order to keep an appointment, and told the court that he didn't realize how fast he was going. Judge Runyon suspended sentence with a warning.

STARTED IN TO DRINK UP HIS BIG LEGACY

Richard Geary, a South Plainfielder, whose folks are good people, concluded a two days' jag in a police court cell Sunday, whither he was steered by Officer Nolan for trying to pick a scrap at the cab stand last night. Geary, who is only twenty-two years old, came into a legacy of $1,050 a short time ago and started out the last of the week to drink it up. His promises to do better and to have some consideration for his mother in future won him a suspended sentence from City Judge Runyon Monday morning.

It was Geary who presided at a short reign of terror at Muhlenberg Hospital Friday night and those in the wards were kept awake almost the entire night by his kicks, threats and language, "He said, ate 'hurt his hip" in some way in the midst of his drinking bouts on that evening and had a cabman drive him to the hospital. Once there, it is reported that he found fault with everything and wanted to make up the whole with one of the orderlies. When urged to go to bed, he maligned the night shirt brought to him in lurid language, according to report, declaring that he was "used to fine flannel nightshirts and wouldn't wear this." In the morning, he left the institution that his inmates might get some sleep, and, according to the police, started in to treat his hip with internal spiritual applications. At his hearing today, he said that he knew nothing of what he'd said and done Friday night and was willing to autograph a pledge blank.

FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS GIVE MRS. ENOCH BERRY SURPRISE

A surprise party was tendered to Mrs. Enoch Berry, of Leland avenue, Saturday night by her friends and neighbors. An enjoyable time was spent, and a fine program of vocal and instrumental music and recitations was presented. Mrs. Wood, Miss Wood and Miss Laude L. Berry delighted all by well rendered piano selections, vocal and instrumental.

After refreshments were served Enoch Berry recited to the amusement of all, "The Patience of Job." Mrs. Richard Barwise, Mr. and Mrs. Merkle, seconded Mrs. Yeoman in her proposal on behalf of those present the health and happiness of Mrs. Berry, wishing her many happy returns of the day, which was suitably responded to by Mrs. Berry. The guests departed at a late hour, leaving their best wishes.

COAL THIEF GANG IS NABBED AND FINED

Continuing his campaign against the wholesale stealing of coal from freight trains, Detective Laverett, of the Central Railroad brought three young coal thieves before City Judge Runyon Monday, whom he declared were members of a band which makes a practise of boarding coal trains as they pass through town, kicking off the coal and later collecting it from the tracks. The prisoners were Leon Guinaud, nineteen, and George Buss and Pedro Sergo, fourteen and twelve respectively. Each was fined $5.

The arrests were made Saturday night. They pleaded guilty to the charge and acknowledged that they had boarded a train, filled five large bags with coal and threw them off. They were arrested when they were gathering them up to take them to a common coal bin, which they maintain. Detective Laverett outlined the wholesale stealing of coal, which he says has cost the railroad *hundreds of dollars. The three prison*ers are alleged to be members of a regularly organized gang of coal thieves, who now have about two tons of the black diamonds in their store house.

The trio denied that they were "caught with the goods," but owned them let slip the fact that he had ridden on trains Saturday and kicked off a good deal of coal for the collectors. The railroad's detectives throughout this region are constantly running down such coal thieves, and Detective Laverett has been on the trail of this gang for some time.

COLLEGE CLUB PLANS A SCHOLARSHIP FUND

College women of Plainfield and vicinity gathered Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles Rice, of West Seventh street on the occasion of a musicale held in connection with a regular meeting of The College Club. Four new members were admitted to the club, which now comprises seventy members, graduates of the various colleges. It was decided to make the next meeting, which will take place early in April, an occasion for theatricals, and two playlets, "Six Cups of Chocolate" and "A Little Savage" will be presented in the Unique auditorium at that time. The proceeds will be devoted to scholarship aid for young girls who lack funds for a college education. To maintain such a fund is the primary object of the organization, of which Miss Katherine Bell is president.

The musical program comprised vocal, instrumental and whistling selections by the members. Mrs. Joseph McIntyre rendered two piano solos, Fantasie by Donizetti Liste, and a Russian cradle song, by Heaps from Wieniawski Concerto, and a delightful Scotch Highland song, "Turn Ye to Me," "You and I," by Liva Lehman, "A May Morning," and "Love Me if I Live and Love Me if I Die." Miss Helen Patterson played two violin solos, an Adagio from the Wieniawski Concerto, and a cradle song by Drdla. Mrs. Bird rendered a pleasing whistling solo, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Arthur Chamberlain.

At the conclusion of the music refreshments were served and the members enjoyed a social hour. Mrs. Rice was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Henry C. White, chairman of the entertainment committee of the club.

Mrs. Pope's Card Party.

A delightful card party was given by Mrs. James LeRoy Pope, of Grant avenue, *at her home Saturday after*noon. Out-of-town guests came from Cranford, Bound Brook, Newton, and Scotch Plains, and there were about a dozen players. Refreshments were served in the dining room, which were tastefully decorated with hearts.

WON'T PAY THEIR BILLS

INCLUDES SOME BIG ITEMS.

Governor Will Not Send Proposed Law Framed by Proctors to Legislature.

It begins to look as though the six months' work of Governor J. Franklin Fort's State Excise Commission would go for naught. There is a merry war on over the law framed by the commission of which Charles J. Fisk was president, and Governor Fort believing that it is too radical, has declared that the proposed liquor traffic regulation measure would not reach the Legislature, thereby stirring up a hornet's nest.

There is not only a heated discussion on as to the wisdom of such a law, but Peter Backes and Senator John Hinchliffe, of Passaic, are the two principals in an argument that bids fair to interest the whole State. Mr. Backes, who was the chief prover for the commission and who is thoroughly posted on every phase of the question, says "Senator Hinchliffe has got the facts twisted," while on the other hand the Senator is saying some warm things about Mr. Backes, who was the chief prover for the commission and who is thoroughly posted on every phase of the question, says "Senator Hinchliffe has got the facts twisted," while on the other hand the Senator is saying some warm things about Mr. Backes, who was the chief prover for the commission and who is thoroughly posted on every phase of the question, says "Senator Hinchliffe has got the facts twisted," while on the other hand the Senator is saying some warm things about Mr. Backes, when he says that the amount of his bill, not including his services, was $177, which simply covers money that he paid out of his own pocket. He says that not a red cent of this was for services.

Mr. Backes further states that like the other men who served on the commission he does not expect a penny of compensation for his work in any way or form, but there are some bills put in for work done by others during the investigation that he considers himself morally obligated to have paid and if the State does not liquidate them he will do so himself.

It is also understood that Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, who was chairman of the commission, advanced over $1,000 for various personal items. The chief items of expense incurred by the commission has caused quite a stir and plenty of comment. They are as follows:

John P. Dengler, for stenographic notes and transcript of testimony, together with payments to hotel and traveling expenses on trips to different parts of the State for all members of the commission, $8,000. Cosgrove Detective Agency, Newark, for obtaining evidence of violations of law, $2,500. Patrick Kiely, chief of police of the city, detective work, $1,000. Baker Printing Company, Newark, for printing, $1,000. Benjamin Murphy, Jersey City, (since deceased), for detective work, $1,000. State Gazette, Trenton, for printing, $1,198. J. Henry Crane, lawyer, this city, for legal work, $1,000.

At the personal request of Governor Fort, Mr. Dengler was employed as secretary to the commission, with the understanding that compensation for his services should be paid out of the emergency fund in possession of the Chief Executive. This has not been done, however, for Mr. Fort refused to pay Mr. Dengler his bill out of this fund and insisted on referring it to the legislative appropriation committee. It is understood that Mr. Dengler made his services generously toward the election of Governor Fort, and that he declined a position as executive clerk because the salary of $1,800 did not appeal to him as sufficient.

CONFESSION IN PUBLIC

ESSENTIAL TO FAITH.

A sermon bearing the lesson of the importance of public confession was delivered by Rev. John Y. Broek at Trinity church Sunday night. He said in part:

"In order to make a full confession we must recognize Jesus as Lord of all. Our life is God's investment in us. He is the rightful owner of what we possess and expects us to come to Him for communion and to be not ashamed to make confession of faith by word of mouth. Our feelings may change every day but if our hearts are true we will confess and enter into the fullness of Jesus love and be saved."

Celebrated Washington's Birthday.

The Washington Club, of Ottawa University, of which T. Otto Linke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Linke, of this city, is the president, gave its fifth annual banquet at Hoit's Hotel, Aylmer, Quebec, on Monday night, February 22. It was an elaborate affair and Mr. Linke was toastmaster for the occasion. There were a number of notable speeches. On the menu there appear "Linke's soft drinks," and "Roquefort a la Plainfield," in honor of the club's president.

CHARTER BOROUGH BANK

Treasury Comptroller Grants Application for North Plainfield Institution.

CAPITALIZATION IS $50,000.

Both Counsel McCaulley and Newton

B. Small Deny Reports

About Less

Capital.

Decorators are at work today putting the finishing touches on the interior of the Somerset street building to serve as the home of the new Borough National Bank, which will be opened at an early date with a capitalization of $50,000. The promoters are incensed over a report, which has gained wide circulation, to the effect that they made an unsuccessful attempt to get a charter with an authorized capital of $25,000, and that they failed in an effort to have the institution known as the First National Bank of North Plainfield.

To a Daily Press representative today, Mr. McCaulley, of Hoboken, the counsel for the proposed banking institution, stated that no application had been made to the State for a charter for a trust company, for, from the first, it was proposed to incorporate a national bank.

"Our dealings have been with the comptroller of the Treasury, at Washington," said Mr. McCaulley, "and we never thought of asking for a $25,000 charter. Neither did we apply to have the institution named the First National Bank of North Plainfield. What we did do was to make application for a charter authorizing $50,000 capital, and I might say right here that we already have $35,000 and there will be no trouble in getting all that is needed. On the original application were the names of some out of town men and we were advised by the comptroller that it would be better to have those signatures of six representative residents of North Plainfield. This request was immediately complied with. The application for the charter for the institution, which will be called the Borough National Bank, was granted last Wednesday."

Former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, one of the principal promoters, confirmed Mr. McCaulley's statement. He said that when the story of the $25,000 charter application was published that it had been inspired by persons inimical to the promoters' interests. Mr. Smalley feels very encouraged over the outlook for the institution which will be the first to be established in that end of Somerset county.

BOY SOPRANO AT FIRST PRESBYTERIAN

Master C. Shelton Moora, boy soprano of historic Trinity church, New York, was the soloist Sunday at the monthly musicale service at the First Presbyterian church, and the edifice was crowded to overflowing with persons desirous of hearing him. He delighted all with his fine singing. He has a pure, sweet soprano voice and is a complete master of it. His first selection was "Here is Rest," assisted by the quartet choir. This was followed with a solo number and then he sang the solo part to the anthem, "Seek Ye the Lord," accompanied by the quartet.

The musical program also included a duet by Miss Anna L. Case, soprano, and Miss Jessamine Burd, contralto, and several anthems. Clifford A. Braider was at the organ. During the course of a short sermon by Dr. Herring, the pastor, he referred to the singing of Master Moora in words of praise. The service was considered one of the best of the series given once a month.

MAKES EARNEST PLEA FOR DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Rev. J. Brownlee, filed secretary for the Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed Church in America, spoke Sunday morning instead of evening at Trinity Reformed church, due to a mixup of the time by the board. He took his text from Isaiah 54, 2:3. He is a very able speaker and commanded the close attention of the large congregation. He made an earnest plea for more interest in domestic missions.

Rev. Mr. Voorhees also spoke to the Sunday-school in the afternoon. Last night he made an address in East Orange.

Big Crowd at Fair.

THEIR HOUSE WAS FIRED WHILE THEY WERE AWAY

Fire of a supposedly incendiary origin, completely destroyed the house of David Clark, a wealthy farmer, on the Mountain road near the Stony Hill school-house, Saturday night. As was known to be their custom for years, Mr. and Mrs. Clark had locked up their home and had driven five miles over the mountain to this city to do their weekly shopping. They had been gone but an hour when at the nearest farm house flames were seen to shoot from the roof of their home and before aid could be summoned the place was razed to the ground.

Persons in that section well knew Mr. Clark's often expressed views on banks and that he had made it a practise to keep a large sum of money stowed away in the house. This is believed to have led to the fire, Mr. Clark's opinion being that some one who came to rob covered up his deed by setting the house afire. At the time of the blaze, there was $200 in bills hidden away in a desk. The loss on the house was $5,500.

JESSE H. LOUNSBURY WINS BALTIMORE BRIDE

Miss Clara Marie Slade, daughter of Mrs. Helen Slade, of Baltimore, and Jesse Horton Lounsbury, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Lounsbury, of Plainfield avenue, were quietly married at the home of Mrs. Mary Radford, on West Fifth street, Saturday night. Only the relatives and a few intimate friends witnessed the ceremony which was performed by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church.

The bride was attended by Miss Mary Radford, as maid of honor, and Orlando H. Lounsbury, brother of the groom, was best man. The double ring service was used. Following the ceremony a reception was held and the bride and groom were showered with congratulations and best wishes. The home was attractively decorated for the occasion with palms and ferns. During the reception supper was served. The couple will reside here, the groom being associated with his father at the Crescent Embossing Works. The wedding march was played by Miss Lillian Colton, of Brooklyn, who later rendered several selections on the piano.

L. E. HART, BUILDER, HAS PASSED AWAY

Lemuel E. Hart for nearly fifty years a resident of this city, during which time was prominent as a contractor and builder, died at 4:45 o'clock Monday morning at his home on West Front street from a complication of disease with which he had been ill for several weeks. A few days ago he underwent an operation in the hope of staying the progress of disease, but he did not rally from it and he failed rapidly afterward.

Mr. Hart was born in Brooklyn, and removed here about fifty years ago. He married Miss M Carrie French, daughter of the late Moses French, who for many years conducted a grist mill at Watchung. Mr. Hart during his residence in Plainfield built a great many dwellings and acquired a great deal of property in various parts of the city. He never took an active part in civic affairs. He was identified with the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. A wife survives him.

The funeral service will be held from the late home, 523 West Front street, Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

CHARLES SHEPHERD BURIED BY BROTHER CARPENTERS

The Brotherhood of Carpenters, Sunday, marching in a body escorted to the cemetery the remains of Charles Shepherd, its first president, who died on Wednesday, February 24. The funeral service was held at the late residence on Somerset street. There was a large attendance of friends and relatives. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, preached the sermon. He was assisted in the service by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich of the Congregational church.

The pall bearers were Lucien C. Sheppard, J. F. Case, Alfred Vail, N. C. Pennington and S. S. Smalley. Interment was made at Hillside cemetery.

The liveliest season the local cyclists have ever had is coming with the opening of spring, so the devotees declare, and their activity the past few days would seem to indicate that there is something to it. Preparations are being made for the opening of the new club rooms, about April 1.

The principal racing event of the late spring will be a twenty-five mile road race on Decoration Day. The details have not been given out yet, but Jack Horner and Clarence Thorn, who have the matter in charge, are busy with the arrangements. At a recent meeting of the club it was decided to offer prizes to members making the greatest number of centuries for the season and to those having the best averages for the season's runs. The road runs have already been announced by the road captain, and include trips covering New Jersey, parts of New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland, and the grand finale will be a run to Boston, Mass.

Among bicycle clubs all over the country Plainfield is known as a home of "live ones." It was through the efforts of the P. C. C. that racing was revived at Westfield, and it was the inspiration given by one of its club runs to Trenton that a club was formed in that city.

The group picture published today is that of the 1908 racing team. Of these riders, Robert Wood and Percy Haberle are considered to have brightest prospects during the coming season.

It was Sherman Haberle who broke the world's road record for one mile last year at Westfield, doing it in 2.02, which was one of the most notable cycling events of the year. He was also winner of the Decoration Day ten mile road race, held in this city.

Harry Hooks won the mile city championship held by the club on Labor Day. Raymond Mantz was second in this race. He had finished well up in front at Westfield, and also in the Plainfield ten mile road races. George Adams was considered a possibility in the city championship race, but he had hard luck, falling a number of times while in a good position.

George Simons, one of the younger members, finished second in the ten mile road race at Westfield.

James Vail finished second at Plainfield in the ten mile race in a field of fifty starters. Wiley, Cubberley and Thompson retired from racing after the Decoration Day road race and so did not compete in the later events.

CENSURES A DETECTIVE

BOY CRAP SHOOTERS NABBED.

Seven Colored Lads, Caught on Flat Car, Badly Scared by Detective's Gun Play—Sentence Suspended.

Censuring Detective Rabig of the Central Railroad squad for firing on seven colored boys discovered shooting crap on a gondola car near the freight house Monday afternoon, City Judge Runyon released the prisoners with suspended sentences. The culprits, all of whom are between fourteen and eighteen years of age, were badly scared.

"This custom of railroad detectives firing on trespassers," said Judge Runyon, "is a method of justice which this court cannot approve. We realize that the railroad loses much coal by the practice of jumping on the cars and stealing it and we are willing to co-operate with the railroad in stopping these robberies. But gun-play has been abused by the detectives, who seem too willing to fire upon trespassers. Shooting should only be resorted to in extreme cases, where life has been taken or is in danger. The court considers that Detective Rabig's actions in firing on these boys was entirely uncalled for and will therefore suspend sentence on these prisoners, who have been badly scared."

It was late Monday afternoon when Rabig spied the lads shooting crap on a flat car. He opened fire, but says he only fired three times, with blank cartridges, shooting in the air. The prisoners gave their names as Fred Somerset, of East Third street; David Martin, of Fillmore avenue; Theodore Scotland, of East Second street; Walter Robinson, of East Third street; Frank Peterson, of Berkman street; Edward Ford, of Richmond street, and LeRoy Johnson, of Plainfield avenue. The boys told Judge Runyon that they were fired on no less than ten times, and testified that one of the bullets hit the iron support of the flat car on which they were playing. As soon as the gun-play began, the party "dusted," but as one of them had left his bicycle, the detective nabbed him with a companion who returned with him shortly afterward. The boys gave the names of the other members of the party and Officer Dobson rounded up the five for the hearing.

Questioned about the shooting, Detective Rabig told Judge Runyon that he always carried blank cartridges in his revolver and had fired in the air to show the boys that he meant business. He said he had his revolver with him, but no blanks. In speaking of the practise of shooting at trespassers, Judge Runyon took occasion to refer to the recent shooting by Detective Doody, who wounded an alleged coal-stealer at Fanwood. Chief Kiely told the detective that if any of the city officers had fired upon a man under those circumstances he would be haled before the police board.

After the trial, Joshua Gray, chief of detectives for the Jersey Central, learned of the reckless use of the revolver made by his man and had something to say. He informed Chief Kiely that he never knew how wantonly the weapon had been used by some of his staff and that he would make it his business to have it stopped at once.

HIGH LICENSE TENDENCY.

There is undoubtedly a tendency upward in liquor license fees in New Jersey. The City Council at Salem, in this State, is the last municipality making the change to high license. In that place this week the governing body has instituted several reforms. All hotels are to pay $600 instead of $800 for their licenses. Furthermore, they are to close their bars at 11 p. m., and are not to reopen them until 5 a. m. the following day, Sunday, of course excepted. There are four hotels in the city, which has a population of 7,000. "Only one city in the State," says a Salem dispatch to the Philadelphia Ledger, "imposes a higher license fee upon the hotels than Salem. This is Plainfield, of which Charles J. Fisk, who was the chairman of Governor Fort's Excise Commission, is Mayor. In Plainfield, with a population of 22,000, the six hotels and four saloons pay a tax of $1,000 each, and two wholesale liquor dealers $800 each and one club $500. This city closes its bars from 11 to 6; Montclair, in Essex county, charges hotelkeepers $800 and wholesale liquor dealers $700. Its population is 18,000. There are nine hotels and three wholesale places, which are closed from 11 to 7. In Summit, Union county, while three wholesalers pay $350 each and one club $200. The city, which has 8,000 inhabitants, closes its bars at 11 and they are permitted to open at 6. The fees in North Plainfield, a borough of Somerset county, with 5,000 inhabitants, four hotels and four wholesalers, are, respectively, $700 and $400. Other cities of New Jersey in which the fee for hotels is $500 or more are: Atlantic City, $500; Camden, $500; Cape May, $500; East Orange, $500; Jersey City, $500; Hightstown and New Brunswick, where license are graduated, from $200 to $600." There is evidence enough in New Jersey to indicate that high license is coming more and more to be regarded as essential to intelligent regulation of the liquor traffic. In northern New Jersey it is probably much more in favor than local option. In cities where there is more or less drinking, especially among the foreign born or the populace, and where it is believed that the custom would not be easily eliminated, high license appears to be becoming the sensible method of keeping the liquor traffic within bounds. It is worthy of note that Salem county gave the candidate for Senator on a local option platform a majority of 754 in the last election, while Taft's was 540. Senator Plummer has since introduced a local option bill in to State Legislature.—Elizabeth Journal.

The home and foreign missionary societies of the First Presbyterian church will hold their annual meetings at the church Wednesday. The home society will meet in the morning with an address by Mrs. Fraser, and the foreign society will meet in the afternoon and will be addressed by Dr. Nelson, of Syria. Luncheon will be served at noon. Officers will be elected by the societies.

JOY THAT IS GONE

BUCKWHEAT CAKES AND PORK CHOPS ARE NO MORE.

City Man Voices Regret for the Breakfast of His Youth—It Comes to Him Now in Memory Only.

"I have wondered sometimes," said the amiable head of a voracious family, "why we didn't have more griddle cakes, wheat and buckwheat, and that sort of thing in our house, because I am very fond of such cakes, and so are all the children, and of buckwheat cakes in particular I have a very pleasant recollection.

"When I was a boy I used to have always buckwheat cakes for breakfast in winter, with fried pork chops or fried sausages, and I used to think that that was a breakfast good enough for anybody, and I am still of the same opinion.

"The cakes we used to mix in a batter pot that was different from any piece of crockery I ever saw, and that I can see now in my mind's eye as plainly as if it stood before me, a deep, straight sided, earthenware pot of a very dark brown glaze and in capacity about a gallon and a half and having in one side of its edge a pouring lip and on the other side a handle; the only pot of just that style and dimensions that I ever saw, and perhaps it was the only one ever made.

"And we valued it highly, I know that if anything had happened to that pot it would have been regarded as a household calamity, familiar to us all as it had become through year after year of use, and the mixing of the batter in it was mighty familiar household rite, the last thing done in the house in winter before we went to bed.

"Every morning when the cakes were cooked there was left in the pot just enough of the material to serve as yeast for the next day's batch; and every night the last thing we did was to pot out the buckwheat batter pot and mix up in it the batter for the next morning's cakes; and then we would put a loose cover on the pot and then set it near the kitchen stove where it would get a little warmth, but not too much so that the batter would rise just right. And sometimes it would run over, but not often, for our folks were high experts in making buckwheat batter, and usually our batter rose just enough to fill the pot, rising at the same time to the highest attainable quality; and then in the morning the batter was thinned down a little, so that it would spread just exactly right when poured on the griddle, and then the family was ready to eat 'em.

"It seems to me that the pork chops we had in those days were better than any to be had now; they were from locally raised and fattened pigs and they were very tender and superior, and certainly it would be difficult to find now such sausages as we had then.

"And we used to eat those buckwheat cakes red hot off the griddle, with those superior pork chops, or those extra superlative sausages, and with the pork or sausage grease on the cakes—a morning meal of great delight and glory.

"One calculated to tax the stoutest constitution surely, but we all had cast iron stomachs and it did us no harm; and I have wondered sometimes why we couldn't have something of that sort now; but she, meaning thereby my better half, tells me that cooking cakes means a headache and a burned face and a tired back; that cooking cakes for this family would be an awful task and that it wouldn't do. And so that grand breakfast of buckwheat and sausages comes to us now in memory only."

An Anti-Art Building.

Reinforced concrete is the material which will be used almost exclusively in the construction of the new government buildings to be erected by the United States at San Juan, Porto Rico, for use as a postoffice, courthouse and custom house. Wood is to be practically excluded from the structure, the only place about the building where wood will be employed will be in the window sashes on one side of the edifice. The interior doors will be rattan. The reason why wood is being avoided by the government in this case is because there is a small ant indigenous to the island of Porto Rico which eats its way up through wooden chairs, doors and desks and makes them spongy on the inside.—Cement Age.

Critical Audience.

Clara, aged six, did not know the meaning of an encore, and was very much disgusted with the audience, at the children's concert in which she took part.

"I don't know we didn't make a single mistake," she exclaimed, "yet the people in front got cross and made such a fuss that we had to do it all over again."—Tit-Bits.

GREET BRIDE AND GROOM

Reception for Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Herring Given by First Presbyterian Flock.

SILVER SERVICE AS PRESENT.

More Than 500 Attend the Affair—Original Poem by Theophilus Bond is Read.

An event in local religious circles of more than usual interest was the reception given to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Herring at the First Presbyterian church Thursday, following their return from a wedding trip. They were married at Indian Orchard, Mass., on Tuesday, February 2, and the members of the church and congregation planned to give the pastor and his bride a cordial welcome on their return home. Members of nearly every church in the city and borough, together with the various pastors were present to extend congratulations and best wishes.

The affair was held in the Sunday-school room, which was attractively decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns and smilax. Dr. and Mrs. Herring were assisted in receiving their friends by Mrs. Herring's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Miller, of Indian Orchard, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Flannery, the latter a sister of Dr. Herring. The bride, who has been a member of the First Presbyterian church and an active worker there, was showered with the congratulations of her many friends, while Dr. Herring was given an equally hearty reception.

The evening was devoted entirely to sociability and the more than 500 guests thoroughly enjoyed this feature. Glueckner's orchestra, of Elizabeth, rendered a fine program of classical and popular selections throughout the reception, adding to the pleasure of all.

An object of much interest to all was the display of a solid silver service of 185 pieces, accompanied by a beautiful book containing the names of those who made the gift and this inscription: "Presented to Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Herring as a wedding gift and further token of esteem and affection of members of the congregation of the First Presbyterian church and other friends."

The whole affair was under the direction of the Pastor's Aid Society, and Mrs. Clarence E. Bond, as president, was in charge of the details. The committees on arrangements comprised Mrs. D. K. Young, Mrs. Chas. Clarke, Mrs. LeRoy Gates, Mrs. E. W. Poinier, Mrs. Alvin E. Hoagland, Mrs. M. Bettman, Mrs. G. A. Schafuss, Mrs. Freeman Shotwell, Mrs. William Brower, Mrs. W. R. Cawsbrook, Mrs. John S. Johnston. Those who served as ushers were Frank Hazeltine, Arthur Hazeltine, Allen E. Beals, Fred Lounsbury, Jr., Fred Allen, C. Leslie Bond, Edgar George, Wilbur Dunning, Lester Radford, Chauncey Murphy, Edward Abbott.

To Rev. and Mrs. Charles E. Herring.

Again within these walls we meet,
Our pastor, well beloved, to greet,
Rejoiced once more his hand to hold,
And bid him welcome as of old.

And yet, if all the truth be told,
'Tis not precisely as of old;
Another now hath prior claim
Upon his mind, his heart, his name.

For lo! there standeth by his side,
With radiant face, a fair young bride;
And love hath joined them, heart to heart,
With ties that naught but death shall part.

And so, while both your hands we press,
We wish you two-fold happiness,
And health, and strength and double joy
And wealth of love without alloy.

And may the God whom you adore
Be with you now and evermore,
His presence guard, His wisdom guide,
His perfect peace with you abide.

Together may we strive anew
The blessed Master's work to do,
Until, at last, our weary feet
In triumph tread the golden street.

And now, in past this wedding day;
Time flies apace; we only pray
That future years may bring to you
The silver and the golden too.

In a Safe Place.

"We have a man in this prison who never tried to escape," declared the head keeper.

"What's he in for?" inquired the visitor.

"Bigamy," replied the head keeper.—The Bohemian.

Surprised on Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Berkman, of Watchung avenue, were given a surprise Monday night, the occasion being the twenty-second anniversary of their marriage. The evening was spent in a social way and the couple received a number of gifts.

INDICTED PHYSICIAN PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Dr. Sherman Cooper, recently arrested on a charge of malpractice in the case of Miss Nellie Drake, who since died in the Elizabeth General Hospital, Elizabeth, was arraigned before Judge E. S. Atwater in the Union county court Thursday. Through his counsel, Paul G. Oliver, of Westfield, Dr. Cooper entered a plea of not guilty, and was granted the privilege of changing his plea later if he so desired. The reading of thec harge was waived and trial was set down for Monday, March 29.

The $10,000 bail under which Dr. Cooper was released, was continued. This was furnished by Samuel W. Reese, and M. H. Clark, of Westfield.

Dr. Cooper's arrest followed within a few days after the alleged operation on Miss Drake at Westfield. He was taken before Justice Toucey and entered a plea of not guilty. He was then released in $5,000 bail to appear later for a hearing, which he demanded. In the meantime the girl died and the examination was waived and Dr. Cooper was held for the Grand Jury after his bail was increased to $10,000.

RED TAPE HINDERS BUILDING IN BOROUGH

No more building permits will be granted in the borough without the sanction of the Council. This makes it necessary for applicants to wait until after the next meeting of the borough fathers and in case there should not be four-fifths of the members present, it would be necessary to wait for a meeting when there should be enough.

As the ordinance now reads no member of the building committee has power to give permission to start a building, but in the past the members have given such permission whenever they were satisfied that the specifications as submitted in the application would promptly with the law and be adhered to.

A citizen desiring to build a barn on Pearl street is the first instance under the new interpretation of the ordinance pertaining to permits. Some years ago he built a barn, with the permission of the authorities and afterwards added to it. Now he finds that he will have to obtain another permit to replace the barn with another and, though he is ready to begin building, must wait until the next Council meeting to get action on his application.

Councilman Julius J. Stahl expressed his disapproval of such an ordinance this morning, believing it to be a check to progress. He is in favor of one member of the committee having the power to issue permits, subject to the final approval of the Councilmanic body. As the borough needs the money he figures that all the freedom possible should be given to building operations.

If the builder will see each councilman and obtain his sanction, he may begin construction, but must take chances on the body changing about at the meeting and rendering an adverse decision.

PATHETIC EXHIBITION OF AUTOMOBILE DRIVING

With an impetus like that when Greek meets Greek, the automobiles owned by Dr. Thomas S. Davis, of Park avenue, and Frank W. Weed, of West Front street, crashed together at Second street and Watchung avenue Thursday afternoon at about 5 o'clock. Both cars were badly damaged and the wrecked machines occasioned considerable delay in the trolley service at the rush hour.

Dr. Davis, who was with his colored chauffeur, was driving his car along East Front street, and as he attempted to turn south into Watchung avenue, his car was side swiped by the big machine owned and driven by Frank W. Weed. None of the men was injured. Bystanders allege that Mr. Weed's car, which was going toward Front street, was on the left side of the roadway. The crash splintered the right front wheels of both machines, breaking also the left front wheel of Dr. Davis' car and denting the radiator. One of the front springs on Mr. Weed's car was broken and the radiator and lamp bent. It was only about a month ago that Mr. Weed's car was damaged by a collision with a truck in Newark.

A large crowd gathered and a line of trolley cars was stalled by the autos, which blocked the tracks. It was nearly a half hour before the cars were again running on schedule time.

In Trouble.

"Brown's in awful trouble."

"What's the matter? Has he killed a man?"

"No, worse than that. He stole a postage stamp and there doesn't seem to be any possible way of keeping him out of prison."—Detroit Free Press.

BRIDE IS SIXTY-FIVE AND GROOM SIXTY-TWO

Mrs. Katherine Alpaugh, of Cokesbury, mother of Mrs. Garner Teets, of Potterville, and Frederick Landsberry, of High Bridge, were married at 6 Wednesday night, at the home of the bride's granddaughter, Mrs. Bertram Davis, 172 Duer street, the borough, in the presence of a few relatives and intimate friends. Rev. John V. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiated.

The bride, who is sixty-five years old, is a member of one of the oldest families of Hunterdon county, while Mr. Lindeberry, who is sixty-two years of age, is also well-known in that county. He has been engaged in the livery business at High Bridge for many years.

There were four generations present at the wedding, the bride, her granddaughter, Mrs. Bertram Davis; her daughter, Mrs. Garner Teets and her great granddaughter, Gladys Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Davis.

The home was decorated for the occasion, white and green being the prevailing colors. In the parlor the color scheme, there being a pleasing arrangement of palms and ferns. After the ceremony and congratulations supper was served. Later the couple left for High Bridge, where they will reside.

PLAINFIELD'S ELKS PETITION CONGRESS

The members of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks have decided to do all in their power to preserve the American elk and in accordance with the action taken by the grand lodge at its last grand session in Dallas, Texas, lodge throughout the country are sending petitions to their representatives in Congress asking that a reservation for the preservation of the eld be established.

Representative Charles N. Fowler has received a petition from the Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, as well as one from Elizabeth lodge and one from the Humane Society Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. This action was taken following so many reports concerning the starvation of the American elk by wire fences and civilization, which has been the means of destroying this noble animal. Last winter the grand lodge purchased hundreds of tons of hay to feed to the elks and thus save them from starvation. The question of a reservation has been considered and one of the probable sites is in Wyoming, where the elk is more plentiful.

EPWORTH LEAGUEDS PLAY GEORGE WASHINGTON GAMES

The Epworth League of Grace M. E. church, gave a George Washington social Friday night in the church parlors. Most of the members and a large number of their friends attended.

One of the most entertaining features was the reading of a selection by Miss Ada Van Horn, entitled "George Washington and His Cherry Tree." A number of Washington games were played and refreshments served.

The committees of arrangements comprised Miss Lucetta Clark, David D. Smalley, Miss Ada VanHorn, Miss May Hoagland, Miss Edith Mager, Miss Nettie Bauersachs, Miss May Steiner, Miss Grace Clark, Raymond Miller, Russel Hardin and Benjamin Schuck.

Phone Co.'s Exorbitant Rates.

In Plainfield the business men are already after the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. Indignant over what they allege to be exorbitant rates and arrogance on the part of the employes, the Merchants' Association has appointed a committee to confer with the officials of the telephone company. A specific demand will be made that the company rescind a new rule providing limited service only for the business section. The rule, it is alleged, has doubled the cost of patrons. The claim is made by the merchants that the new rates are much higher than any many cities of similar size supplied by the company.—New Brunswick Home-News.

Charles A. Reed Sells His Home.

Former Senator and Mrs. Charles A. Reed have sold their residence property on Myrtle avenue, the borough, to Mr. and Mrs. L. Sill, a well-known New York stock broker and possession will be taken April 1. Mr. and Mrs. Reed have not decided upon their plans for the future and whether they will continue their residence in the borough after April 1 is not known at present. The above deal was made by Edmund Rushmore, real estate broker.

FALL FROM TRAIN FATAL

HAD GRABBED FOR HIS HAT.

Victim of Accident near Leland Avenue, Last Night, Was 64 years Old—A Wife Survives Him.

Presumably in an effort to recover his hat, which blew off as he was passing from a day coach to the smoker on the Dunellen local train due in this city at 8:38 o'clock, Emil Gabel, 64 years old, of 112 Richmond street, fell from the train near the Leland ave. bridge Thursday and was instantly killed. The accident happened as the train was slowing down to stop at Netherwood. The body was removed to Cole's undertaking rooms, being brought in on the same train. Dr. Albert Pitts and County Physician Westcott were summoned and an examination showed that the man's skull was fractured, his face and head horribly mangled, and his left arm and hip broken.

Joseph Block, of 221 West Third street, was sitting in the same seat with Mr. Gabel, who had spent the day on business in Newark and boarded the local at Roselle. Mr. Block said that as the train neared Netherwood the man's seat mate rose to go into the smoker. He did not see him cross the platform between the cars, but it is believed that the high wind caught his hat, and in reaching to recover it, he lost his balance and fell from the train. The train was in charge of Conductor Newton Amerman and Engineer F. K. Wilcox.

Mr. Gabel, who was a leather belt manufacturer, came to this city from Brooklyn about four years ago, and took up his residence in Richmond street. His widow survives him. The dead man was a member of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M.

The funeral will be from Mr. Gabel's late residence on Richmond street Saturday night at 8 o'clock. The interment will be private.

F. L. C. MARTIN TO MAKE VOYAGE IN AN AIRSHIP

F. L. C. Martin, of Plainfield, who has taken the State agency for the R. Bowman Airship Company, which concern has a line of airships as well as motors, will make an ascent on an airship early in April. Mr. Martin wants to acquaint himself with the air, so as to be prepared for the future. He has received many inquiries for airships, and is confident that the time is not far off when all of the automobile dealers will be selling these machines as well as motorcars.

Speaking about Mitchell cars, Mr. Martin said that his salesman at the show had already sold four machines and further said that at least twenty more would be sold directly as a result of the show.—Newark Star.

SUBSTITUTE TEACHERS.

"OFFICE TENURE BILL.

With the approval of Speaker Prince, *author of the original mea*sure, the House Committee on Education, at Trenton, of which Mr. Nichols, of Cumberland, is chairman, has prepared a substitute for the teachers' tenure of office bill.

In its amended form the bill applies *only to principals and teach*ers, excluding superintendents, and provides for a probationary period of three years in one district after the passage of the act.

No teacher is to be dismissed or subjected to reduction of salary except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct or other just cause, and then only upon written charges which have been investigated by the school board, the teacher complained of having the privilege of being represented by counsel at the inquiry.

Tramps Sleep in Rectory.

The discovery has just been made that tramps have been making themselves comfortable in the beds in the unoccupied rectory of St. Peter's Episcopal church at Washington, N. J. The rectory has not been occupied since Rev. Dr. R. A. Campbell moved to Washington, D. C. The tramps gained access to the house by means of a broken window. There was evidence that they had enjoyed some good meals and the beds were much the worse for being occupied. There were no signs of the intruders having damaged the property and a thorough housecleaning is all that is needed.

A "Dutsche Market."

The Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed church, is making elaborate preparations for "A Dutsche Market," to be held in the lecture room of the church on Tuesday evening, March 9. Tickets may be had at Hodge's. This will be the fourth number in Association Star Course.

Tax Sale Called Off.

The foreclosure sale to satisfy a debt for taxes due the borough from Adam Alster will not take place as the amount due has been paid.

"THE POOR, WEAK-KNEED" COURIER'S LAMENTATION

The Elizabeth Journal says editorially: "The poor, weak-kneed Plainfield Courier-News is afraid of being laughed at because of the theatrical township established by Mayor Charles J. Fisk. In its mild way it stands for clean amusements, but it regrets that the 'yellows' have made Plainfield appear ridiculous. 'Some men say with all earnestness,' to quote the News, 'that they do not like to write their addresses on hotel registers, because of the jokes which have followed when they have so registered.' 'We are out for decent amusements,' it adds as a final word, 'and in common with the majority insist upon them.' We still feel that we could have had them without the fact being made fun of to the embarrassment of the city.'

"It would be easier to sympathize with the mental agony of the Courier-News at having been laughed at by the newspapers of the whole country whose moral purpose keeps somewhere near abreast of the ambition for financial success had not given Plainfield the best kind of advertising. It has been a matter of exceptional interest to note the sorriness with which Mayor Fisk's plan has been received by the better element of the American press. Instead of mourning with it for having been laughed at by newspapers which are either cheap or obliged to bow to their power, congratulations may well be offered. While other cities are looking high and low for some way to advertise themselves Mayor Fisk, very unconsciously, no doubt, has given it publicity which half a million would not buy. It is the best kind of advertising, too, showing Plainfield to be not only alert to the practical problems facing it, but clean and notably progressive.

"The laugh is really on the rest of the country and the Courier-News. Nearly all the American municipalities today permit the careless, unintelligent and altogether pernicious plan of letting the public discover the rottenness of the theatrical production. We can revoke the license if a play is not all right, can't we? queries the Courier-News in effect.

'A simple warning to the playhouse managers,' it adds, 'of any complaint against any attraction would be enough to ensure cutting it out.' This, of course, is missing the whole point of Mayor Fisk's effort. He believes that the people of Plainfield, especially the young people, should be spared altogether the contaminating influence of the vicious theatrical production. He has thrown out, therefore, a safeguard which removes the tempting danger and we are fully in accord with the best thought of the most expert investigators of criminal tendencies the world over. What the latter are emphasizing today more than ever before is the necessity of removing the contaminating influences rather than the problem of how to save the downfallen."

SENATOR KEAN'S HELP MAY SOON BE NEEDED.

It is not improbable that Senator John Kean, of New Jersey, says the Washington correspondent of the Newark News, may be a member of the Finance Committee of the Senate, which will put the finishing touches on the tariff revision bill at the next session. There will be three vacancies and possibly four, on the Finance Committee next session of the Senate. Allison, of Iowa, is dead; Platt, of New York, and Hansborough, of North Dakota, have been defeated for re-election, and Hopkins, of Illinois, stands a fairly good chance to be defeated for re-election. Kean is being talked of as one of the men being seriously considered for one of the vacant places. Other probabilities for these important committee assignments are Dolliver, of Iowa; Carter, of Montana, and Nelson, of Minnesota.

Big financial and commercial interests which are giving much attention to the question of tariff revision are deeply interested in these committee places, in the placing of four new Republicans on the committee having charge of all tax measures, at this time, is of utmost importance. All the four men named, including Kean, are said to have been declared by K. and Wall street interests and other high tariff dignitaries.

The Republican members of the Finance Committee who will remain undisturbed are: Aldrich, of Rhode Island, chairman; Burrows, of Michigan; Penrose, of Pennsylvania, and Hale, of Maine.

Masquerade a Success.

The masqurade party given by Mrs. C. Edward Pincke, of 1122 Sedgwick avenue, was a great success. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. H. O. Wemple, of Woodstock, Vt., and Jack Curley, of New York, for the most fancy and grotesque costume. Music and refreshments were features. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Lenz, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Curley, of New York; Mrs. H. G. Wemple, of Woodstock, Vt.; Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Wernig, Mr. and Mrs. F. Wernig, C. Wernig, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. D. Verscheuer, Miss E. E. Renner, William Gonangan and Mr. and Mrs. C. Edward Pincke, of this city.

10,000 LINCOLN STAMPS SOLD HERE IN 2 DAYS

There was an unusual demand for the Lincoln memorial two-cent stamp which was placed on sale in all postoffices on February 12, and Postmaster E. H. Bird, who received about 10,000 stamps of this issue, disposed of them all within two days. The issue commemorates the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Lincoln. There was an instance here of where one man purchased five hundred Lincoln stamps, some of which he distributed among his friends.

Unfortunately, Postmaster Bird has not requested the department to send him another supply and therefore Plainfielders who desire to keep one of these handsome stamps as a souvenir of the centenary of the Martyr-President's birth will have to get them at Elizabeth, that patriotic city (?), where they have been "a drug on the market." Elizabeth observed the centenary after a fashion, but it was a very poor fashion for the Grand Army of the Republic was ignored and the celebration was one arranged by Union county and not by the county seat.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS HOLD COLONIAL SOCIAL

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh Day Baptist church, a Colonial entertainment, social and tea was held in the parlors of church, Wednesday. The whole affair was under the direction of the social committe of which Miss Ethel Titsworth was the chairman, assisted by Miss Anna Stillman, Miss Helen Rogers, Miss Margaret Mortensen and Roy Titsworth.

All those taking part in the entertainment were Colonial costume, presenting an attractive appearance. There was a flag drill, which was hearting inaugurated by the audience, Mrs. J. E. Kimball, assisted by Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard drilled the children. The girls wore white dress and red hair ribbons, while the boys wore white suits and red satin ties. Mary Hunting, Dorothy Hubbard, John Cottrell, Celia Cottrell, Beatrice Cottrell, Laura Stillman, Ernest Stillman, Harold Stillman, Ruth Morris, Leland Shaw, Stephana Shaw, Elston Shaw, Witter Clawson, Margaret Kimball, Lewis Kimball, Evelyn Hunting, Violet Johnston and Madie Kellogg.

Another attraction was a play, "A Little Heroine of the Revolution," which was given in clever fashion. It showed a little girl carrying an important message through the British lines to the American army. Those taking the various parts were Mr. and Mrs. Theodore G. Davis, Miss Eva Rogers, Miss Mary Green, Raymond Burdick, Roland Davis, David E. Titsworth and Charles Neal-ple. Theodore G. Davis coached the participants.

Interspersing the flag drill and play the audience joined in singing patriotic selections and after the entertainment tea and wafers were served and a social hour enjoyed. Mrs. O. S. Rogers and Miss Ida Spicer poured, while the children taking part in the drill served the refreshments. The church parlors were decorated in patriotic fashion for the affair and it was considered one of the best of the season.

NORTH PLAINFIELD BOROUGH.

One-twentieth of Entire Assessed Valuation of Borough Charged Up to Four Wealthy Men.

Interesting facts regarding "who's who" among North Plainfield tax payers are revealed by the tax assessment list of the borough for 1908, which gives the total land valuation of the borough as $3,962,850 and has been recently published in accordance with a resolution adopted last year by the borough fathers. Last year's taxes for North Plainfielders totalled to $4,499,250, which amount includes taxes on land, buildings and individuals.

The "big four" among North Plainfield tax payers for last year comprised Col. John F. Wilson, W. J. Buttfield, the McCutchens and the Hooleys. These property owners have land and buildings aggregating $212,207, and their personal taxes amount to $51,050. They paid last year taxes amount to $4,824.22.

Col. John F. Wilson, who owns twenty-nine properties in North Plainfield, has them valued at $25,325, and buildings on this land are valued at $19,025. Col. Wilson's tax bill last year was $926.90. He owns a good deal of real estate "this side the borough bridge," his properties owned by W. J. Buttfield are valued at $12,857.70, while the assessors place a valuation of $19,700 on the buildings on them. Mr. Buttfield's taxes for 1908 were $340.21.

The Hooleys and the McCutchens have large borough holdings, the land holdings of the Hooley brothers amounting to $26,500, while buildings owned by them are valued at $30,250. The Hooleys' taxes last year were $1,147.58. Exceeding this by several thousands of dollars in Hunterdon are 40-25, "Map of Lands of C. W. and S. St. John McCutchen. Their land is valued at $33,900 and their buildings at $44,650, while they turned over to the borough tax collector last year $1,909.74 as their share in the borough budget.

There were numerous appeals to the County Board of Taxation for reductions in the tax valuations, and this resulted in Board knocking off $117,842. At the same time, it has been necessary for the borough to pay the County and School tax, amounting to $1,649.79.

The Park Club, of Washington avenue, is valued at $13,050, the valuation on the club house being $11,450. The taxes last year on the club amounted to $269.78. The telephone company's rights are valued at $10,000, the Public Service paid on taxes on gas mains and meters amounting to $23,000 in value, while their tracks, wires and poles are valued at $9,000. The Suburban building was assessed for $800 taxes on the building, $900 on the land and a personal tax of $28,000. The water company is assessed for land value of $45,800.

Everybody doesn't pay high taxes in North Plainfield, despite the many big holdings. There are four boroughites whose tax bills amounted to but ninety-four cents last year.

INDIAN NO LONGER PAGAN

Rapidly Becoming Christianized as the Race Disappears From the Earth.

40 YEARS IN NORTHERN WILDS.

Dr. Egerton Young, in Y. M. C. A., Address Tells of Life in the Hudson Bay Country.

Dr. Egerton Young, of New York, formerly a missionary among the Indians of the southwest, interested a large audience of men at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon with a narrative of the forty years which he spent in the domains of the Hudson's Bay Company. Paganism had been entirely overcome, he said, but as civilization had advanced the Indian race had gradually died out. There was no reason why this should be so as there was nothing in the Indian's constitution that should have swept him off the face of the earth. He had fewer diseases than the white man, but was an easy victim of those of the new comers, and having no natural remedy for them easily did just the opposite thing that he should do.

That there was an enormous death rate among the children was due to the unsanitary wigwams. If they could get along until they were seven or eight years old, they were tolerably safe. Dr. Young had seen many Indians who were past 100 years of age. One whom he had been particularly fond of, he described as being a "charming, polite old Indian gentleman." This Indian's name had appeared on the Hudson's Bay Company's books as an active fur trader for eighty years. He had been retired for a dozen years, and as the company does not enroll them under eighteen or twenty, he was, therefore, considerably past 100. Consumption had been the most ravaging disease, and owing to their mode of living was difficult to cope with. The Canadian government has adopted the policy of separating the consumptives and appointing doctors to the colonies.

The speaker believed it to be the government's duty to give the Indians an idea of the gospel and civilization. He declared that if he had his work to do over again he would not make them all farmers as has been the custom, because many of them are natural gunsmiths and could be made useful trades.

Dr. Young's early missionary work was performed in northern Ontario. Later he was transferred to the territory beyond Saskatchewan and made the trip by dog sled and canoe, going by way of St. Paul and then north to Winnipeg. Food was sometimes scarce. As the moose thrived on the bark of spruce trees, he often found it necessary to do likewise. At the new post to which he went vegetables were unknown, but a fur carrier, on one of his trips to civilization one year brought the missionary four potatoes. It was in August, but he planted them and when frost came and clipped the tops of the vines, he dug them, only to find, however, that his potatoes were not bigger than peanuts. Placing them in a bag, he suspended them from the ceiling and left them until spring.

Though the weather was sixty below zero out of doors, inside the cabin was a stove kept hot day and night so that the potatoes could not freeze. What they did do though, was to dry and shrivel up. He planted them anyway when the weather came and was rewarded in the fall with a pail full of small sized potatoes. From these he raised six bushels the next year, and the following year 120 bushels. "When you have nothing to eat but the hind leg of a wild cat, some nice mealy potatoes go mighty fine," he said.

In describing the long steady cold which does not let up all winter long, Dr. Young said if a bucket of water was thrown out the door it would hit the ground in chunks of ice, and if the ice should be skooped up and melted there would not be a half pint of water missing.

While the Indians had become good farmers, industrious and prosperous, a reformation had not been easily brought about. A former governor general had made up his mind that he could civilize them with nothing bothered with the missionaries. To this their friendship he sent loads of dressed beef and pork to the reservation near Ottawa, and when they had become used to living high with no effort on their part to procure food, he went to them and announced that he was going to teach them how to till the soil and raise their own produce. "How-how," they replied, meaning, "yes, yes." He told them that some plows and harrows, dated 23 and 24; be sent and they should get to work. "How how," they said, "yes, yes."

The outfit arrived in due time and consisted of plows, wagons and oxen. The Indians looked them over, grunted and then fell upon the oxen and killed them. They saw a way of having some fun with the wagons, so taking them to the top of a hill, they got in and pushed off. They managed to get out before it reached the bottom, and thus escaped injury, but the wagon was a total wreck. Thus the governor-general's plan was unsuccessful and proved that the Indian, to be civilized, must first be christianized.

Dr. Young will address the men's meeting next Sunday.

CITY RETIRES $5,000 WORTH OF ST. BONDS

The street improvement bonds to the amount of $5,000 which were retired at the March meeting of the Common Council, Monday night were issued for a term of three years, with the proviso that they could be paid off at any time during that period. The assessments having been paid so promptly, City Treasurer W. F. Arnold found it possible to liquidate the indebtedness at the expiration of a year and half, which is quite unusual.

There are three lots of street bonds, one issue being for $3,000, which will be retired in May, another for $10,000 and a third for $14,000 which will be retired just as soon as the assessments come in. The fact that $5,000 were paid off at this time, shows that the tax collector and treasurer have been very active in their duties.

EXPECT BIG CROWD AT TRADE BOARD'S BANQUET

The Board of Trade banquet committee, at its meeting held last night at the office of Secretary A. S. Herr, reported that about 250 tickets for the affair have already been sold and all arrangements are practically completed. The work of arranging the seating at the various tables still remains to be done.

D. DeMoiff has been secured as caterer, and the dinner will be served by him at Truell Hall. A number of important matters relative to the final arrangements for the banquet are to come up at the March meeting of the Board of Trade, to be held at the Board rooms, Coward building, Thursday night. All those having tickets for sale are urgently requested to hand in their reports to E. M. Laing previous to this meeting.

TO BUY APPARATUS FOR NEW FIRE HOUSE

Now that the new East End firehouse is nearing completion and will soon be ready for occupancy, Mr. Taylor, chairman of the committee on fire and buildings, offered a resolution at the March meeting of the Common Council Monday, authorizing the advertising of bids for a combination chemical engine and hose wagon. The resolution was adopted, but not until there was some discussion which was started by Mr. Buxton.

In the opinion of the Fourth ward member he believed that the advertisement should be inserted in trade journals as well as the official papers of this city. "Why," said Mr. Buxton, "I think we should advertise as far as Westfield." This bit of sarcasm led Mr. Taylor to remark that the committee intends to send the advertisement out from the local newspapers to trade journals and thus the object would be attained.

Following up the argument, Mr. Buxton suggested that an advertisement be placed in the "Engineering News, as well as other periodicals devoted to fire matters." This brought a smile to the countenances of several members who were surprised to learn that the Engineering News has gone into the fire business. It was finally decided that the committee insert the advertisement to be inserted in such trade journals as they deem desirable, in addition to the official newspapers of this city.

Another resolution introduced by Mr. Taylor, which was adopted, authorized the city clerk to advertise for bids for furnishing oats and hay for the use of the fire department, according to the previously adopted policy of the Common Council.

PLANT TO EMPLOY 200

The American Cement Tile Company to Locate in North Plainfield.

ISADORE MEYERS IS PRESIDENT.

Head of Concern is Interested in Proposed Borough Bank—Will Attract Others.

The first big industry to be located in North Plainfield promises to be a concern that will employ at least 200 and possibly 250 skilled men when it starts operations. It is the American Cement Tile Company, a concern firmly established for several years in Pennsylvania. A ready a large tract of ground convenient to the Jersey Central tracks has been purchased but the exact site has not been made known by the company's directors.

Isadore Meyers, a Baltimore capitalist, who spends much of his time in New York, is president of the company, and was instrumental in having the plant located in the borough. It manufactures a large fire proof tile by a secret process and it is said that the output of the Pennsylvania plant is in great demand.

At the present time the concern disposes of most of its cement tile to the Standard Oil Company, which has adopted the make exclusively for construction work on all its large buildings in the East. Considerable of the product is sold to the Federal government and is used on new army buildings now in the course of construction.

Mr. Meyers is one of the leading spirits in the Borough National Bank to be opened on Somerset street in the near future and it is said that he will be the means of bringing other manufacturers to North Plainfield.

PLAN FOR EXTENSION OF WEST FIFTH STREET

During a suspension of business at the March meeting of the Common Council, Monday. Mr. Gloak, chairman of the streets and sewer committee, moved for a public hearing on the ordinance to open West Fifth street, between Grant and Darrow avenues. C. W. Nash, Jr., appearing for John Rafferty, owner of considerable property in that vicinity, requested a postponement of action for two weeks or a month until he could look into the matter. It appeared to be believed the improvement would be a disadvantage to him and on those grounds opposed it. In view of this opposition, on motion of Mr. Gloak, the ordinance was laid over for the present.

There was also a public hearing on the ordinance to open Mariners place, but no one appeared to speak either for or against this proposition, and it is the intention of the Council to adopt the ordinance according to the original plans.

TELLS OF THE WORK AT SCHOFIELD SCHOOL

The Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church held a largely-attended and interesting meeting in the parlor of the edifice, yesterday. Mrs. Sarah Taylor, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Philadelphia, and one of the trustees of the Martha Schofield School at Aiken, S. C., made an address, telling of the great work being accomplished there. Miss Schofield, for whom the school was named and who has been engaged in the work for over forty years, celebrated the seventieth anniversary of her birthday last week. Mrs. Taylor spoke only words of praise of her devotion.

It was reported that the society realized $286.20 as profit from the recent turkey supper, and several donations were made at the meeting, aggregating $275 to various objects in the church. The society also voted $10 as a birthday gift for Miss Schofield. Two new members were elected. The reports showed the society to be in a flourishing condition in the prospects for the coming year being very bright.

Airships.

I hold it true, with him who sings, to one clear harp in divers tones, that men who'fly, ere they have wings are apt to break their blooming bones. The birds may think it full worth their while to soar from tree to tree, but while I live this good old earth is plenty smooth enough for me.—Emporia Gazette.

The first of these musicales will be given Monday afternoon at the residence of Miss Stephen Gloak on Watchung avenue, at 4 o'clock. Hans Letz, who has been playing with Mr. McIntyre's trio so successfully this winter, will collaborate with Miss Miller. Mr. McIntyre will preside at the piano. Further particulars regarding the affair can be obtained from Mr. McIntyre by telephone.

WILL ISSUE MORE BONDS

Public Hearing on Ordinance Providing for Improvement of Certain Streets.

BONDS TO AGGREGATE $11,000.

Petitions Are Received for Macadamizing Other Thoroughfares At Early Date.

Steps were taken by the Common Council at its March meeting Monday night, toward improving certain streets during the coming year, as proposed at a previous meeting. Mr. Gloak offered an ordinance which was read twice and ordered advertised, providing for the improvement of Union street, Stelle, Madison, Darrow, Compton avenues and Ravine road, the macadam to be done under the improved methods, which calls for the use of an asphalt binder. According to the provisions of the ordinance the streets are to be macadamized the full width and the work must be completed on or before September 30 next.

To cover the cost of the work it is proposed to issue eleven coupon bonds of $1,000 denomination each, bearing five per cent. interest per annum, to be retired within three years from date of issue, and the abutting property-owners are to be assessed for the benefits of the improvements. The contract for the work is to be awarded the lowest bidder. A public hearing on the ordinance will be granted on Monday night, April 5.

Various matters relative to the improvement of Union street and West Front street, between Clinton and Grant avenues, were returned at the Common Council meeting last night by Councilman Gloak, chairman of the street committee, with the explanation that it is the intention to improve West Front street, from Madison to Clinton avenues, also Union street. The auditing committee reported tax collections for various years, during the past month, of $10,898.85.

Councilman Wilson, chairman of the auditing committee at the Common Council meeting last night, offered a resolution which was adopted, providing that all bills be signed by at least two members of the committees prior to a council meeting night before each regular meeting. Councilman Bixton was the only member to vote in the negative. The change will be a decided advantage to the auditing committee. When Council adjourned it did so to meet on Monday night, March 22, at 8 o'clock.

CITY CO-OPERATES FOR CHARTER CELEBRATION

The March meeting of the Common Council held Monday, was one of the shortest of the year. There was but little business of importance to be considered due to the fact that an adjourned session was held last week, when several matters were disposed of, including liquor licenses. Mr. Tolles named P. L. Holt, Herbert Buxton and C. C. Randolph as a committee to represent that body in the Fourth of July celebration of the granting of the city charter, as requested by the Board of Trade.

Councilman Clay, the new member from the Second ward, who succeeds R. L. Hall was present for the first time. President Tolles announced that he had appointed him chairman of the license committee and also a member of the committees on police, lights and trees and laws and ordinances and that Mr. Mygatt was relieved from membership on the laws and ordinance committee.

The contract with the Buffalo concern for a new steam roller and scarifier for a consideration of $2,300 and the old roller was reported and filed.

A petition received from L. C. VanNest for permission to erect a cement block stone building at 218 East Fourth street in which to store tools and implements was referred to the fire and building committee, and later granted on motion of the chairman. Mr. Taylor, it being understood that the structure will be erected under the direction of Building Inspector T. O. Doane.

The Board of School Estimate certified to the Common Council last night that it had determined that the amount necessary to furnish the new public school building on Darrow avenue would be $10,000. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

CHARMING CONTRALTO TO SING AT RECITAL.

Miss Christine Miller, the contralto, who appears at the first of Joseph McIntyre's two Lenten musicales, has a wide reputation as an interpreter of songs. The Indianapolis News, speaking of the recent appearance of Miss Miller in that city, has this to say of her:

"Miss Christine Miller received an ovation. She has a rich contralto voice, reliable method and sincere art, combined with irresistible personal qualities."

COMMENCEMENT ORATOR

G. H. Utter, Ex-Governor of Rhode Island, Selected by Education Board.

TRANSACT ROUTINE BUSINESS.

Reports are Submitted—Superintendent H. M. Maxson Tells of His Recent Trip.

Former Governor George H. Utter, of Rhode Island, will be the speaker at the Plainfield High School commencement exercises, to be held Thursday evening, June 24. Mr. Utter, who is owner and editor of the Westerly, Rhode Island, Sun, was born in this city and is a relative of Miss Jessie Utter, of Central avenue. He is a graduate of Amherst College.

It was the intention of the Board to have Mr. Utter as the speaker at last year's commencement exercises, but he was engaged to speak at a national Sunday-school convention being held in Kentucky at that time. The Board of Education has not announced where the exercises will be held this year.

At the meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education held Monday at the Plainfield High School, the certificate of the Board of School Estimate, providing for the expenditure of $10,000 instead of $5,000 for furniture in the new Barrow School, was presented. It had been signed by all the members of the Board and later in the evening was submitted to the Common Council. At the last meeting, it was claimed that an appropriation of $5,000 was insufficient for furnishing the new building, and the amount was doubled. At last night's meeting bids were ordered advertised for this furniture, and these will be opened at the next regular meeting of the Board, to be held April 5.

Routine business occupied the time of the members, and the meeting adjourned before 9 o'clock. Mr. Abbott was the only member absent. Bills amounting to $1,000 were audited and ordered paid. The report of the custodian of schools showed a balance of $93,366.44 to the credit of the Board on February 28. The report of the medical inspectors showed that 638 pupils have been examined at the various schools during the month.

Superintendent H. M. Maxson, of the city schools, presented his report on the recent national convention of the school superintendents at Chicago which he attended. The report will be published in full tomorrow.

ANNOUNCE CAST FOR A HOPE CHAPEL PLAY

Rehearsals are going along nicely for the Christian Endeavor play, "Men, Maids and Matchmakers," to be presented at Hope chapel on Friday night by members of the Endeavor society of the chapel, for the benefit of the music fund of the church. Mrs. G. Stuart Simons, herself a talented elocutionist, is acting as coach for the society and under her direction the cast is making decided improvement.

The play in itself is interesting, there being three acts and an abundance of fun. The bachelors and maids are presented to each other and to the audience. Aunt Selina appears on the scene, interferes with the course of true love and brings about an engagement. That is in the first act. In the second act, one month later, Dr. Imoff turns up and proves irrepressible. Mr. Vincent gets a lesson in love-making; Mr. Richards gets in hot water; Miss Howard understood and everybody gets into a state of dissatisfaction.

In the third act, one day later, Mr. Vincent is peace-maker. Aunt Selina upsets Miss Marshall's plans. The course of true love runs smoothly for once and everyone is made happy. The cast:

Surprised John Keough.

A surprise party was given in honor of Mr. Keough at his home in Lee place, Saturday night. Games and singing were enjoyed during the first part of the evening, while violin, piano and phonographic selections completed the program. The affair was arranged by Miss Mary London. Mr. Keough rendered several violin solos, while Charles Eller assisted on the piano. Those who entertained with solos were Miss Anna Frazier, Miss Florence Long, John Foley, James Keough and Frank Frazier. Dancing was a feature and supper was served at midnight.

MRS. BARTINE DEAD

AGED SIXTY-TWO YRS.

The funeral services of Mrs. Maggie Vanderveer Bartine, aged 62 years, widow of Judge John D. Bartine, who died Sunday night in Somerset Hospital, will be held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Miss Rebecca Vanderveer, by whom she had lived at Somerville for several months. Mrs. Bartine had been under treatment for a long time and her death was not wholly unexpected. She was one of the best known residents of Somerville and had a host of friends in this city. She was deeply interested in religious and charitable enterprises.

Mrs. Bartine was a member of the First Reformed church, Somerville and for many years a teacher in the Sunday-school. She was married to Judge Bartine in 1863 at Rocky Hill and soon afterward moved to Somerville. Judge Bartine was well-known in legal circles throughout the State and was an executor of the William A. Rice estate, for whose murder Lawyer Patrick is now serving a life sentence.

Surviving are one son, Edwin V. Bartine, of this city; a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Dyer, of Wing's Station, N. Y.; also one brother, George V. Vanderveer, of Somerville.

Y. W. C. A.'S WORKERS ATTEND A SUPPER

Members of the Board of Directors of the Y. W. C. A., together with the women serving on the various committees of association work, met at the association rooms Monday night, when an informal supper was served. The occasion was a social gathering, held that the members of the various committees might become better acquainted.

The collation, which was prepared at the association, was served in the dining-room, which was loyally decorated with yellow jonquils and asparagus fern. The dainty place cards were hand-painted with jonquils and violets. Covers were laid for sixty. The arrangements were in charge of Mrs. Elliott W. Barrows, chairman of the social committee of the association.

At the conclusion of the supper, Mrs. F. G. Mead, president of the association, made a few remarks in keeping with the occasion. She briefly concluded the evening with an informal hour of music and song.

GEORGE STRONG CLAY THANKS CITY FATHERS

Just before the Common Council adjourned Monday night, President Tolles called upon the new member from the Second ward, George S. Clay, to make a few remarks.

"Mr. President," responded Mr. Clay, "I am very glad of this opportunity to express to you, and the other members of the Council, my appreciation of the honor which you have conferred upon me, by election to your honorable body. The Common Council of the city of Plainfield has long sustained a very high reputation for disinterested and effective service for the public, and I consider it a great honor to be a member of this body; and thank you very heartily for your action."

Mr. Clay's remarks were followed with applause on the part of all the members.

E. C. DEAL REMEMBERED BY HIS FELLOW P. S. C. MEN.

Erastus C. Deal, formerly of this city, who was general manager of the central division of the electric branch of the Public Service Corporation, and who resigned on Saturday to take a position in the South, was presented with a handsome loving cup and a watch studded with diamonds by the employees of his department, Sunday afternoon. The affair took place in Elizabeth.

The presentation was made by Assistant Manager E. R. French, of Elizabeth, and a suitable response was made by Mr. Deal to whom the gifts were a great surprise. A collation followed. Mr. Deal goes to Greensboro, N. C., to become superintendent of the gas, electric and trolley departments of the public service there. Mr. French will succeed Mr. Deal.

Hugh Fox to Address Men.

Hugh F. Fox, of this city, will address the Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest on Thursday night, March 11. The association now has a membership of about eighty men and is steadily growing. Among others soon to address the club are Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan and Charles W. McCutchen.

TO BUILD AN ICE PLANT

NEW SYSTEM COSTS $20,000.

Promoters Purchase Land From Jersey Central and Will Remodel Its Old Plant.

Realizing that it will be practically an impossibility to harvest a sufficient crop of ice here this winter the Natural Ice Company has taken steps to remodel the hygeia ice plant on North avenue and to install an approved system. The plant will be run day and night and the capacity of thirty tons every twenty-four hours will be used to help meet the local demand.

In making the proposed extensive changes, the company has just purchased from the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Co., through its agent, F. W. Morse, of this city, the tracts of land on both sides of the hygeia plant on North avenue, giving it a total frontage of 1,000 feet. A modern, up-to-date overhead trestle of iron piers and steel girders will be built possible for the carrying of the heaviest loads. In addition to the ice industry, the company will also make the place a storage for coal and lumber and will also sell grain, hay, and feed, having purchased the fixtures and machinery in the plant of the Dunham Grain Company.

The work of preparations to make this the best equipped plant of its kind in the State. In remodelling the ice plant, the present system whereby "block" ice can be made, will be taken out entirely and a contract has been awarded to F. W. Hallam & Co., of New York, to install a forty-ton York machine, which will make "can" ice from distilled water. The contract price for the new system is $20,000 and it is hoped to have it in operation between May 15 and June 1.

In speaking of the present ice situation, Andrew Wilson, manager for the company, said today, that it is really worse than nineteen years ago, when the crop was a failure. At that time the retail price was seventy cents a hundred and the wholesale price $1 a hundred. Mr. Wilson says that in that year he shipped ice from Lake Champlain to Plainfield and lost money. Today the ice situation is a serious one in this part of the State and the best bargain possible for natural ice f. o. b. is $7.50 a ton. Should the plans of the company should be obliged to purchase its entire supply out of the city, would make the price almost prohibitive to the consumer. Notice has been given that commencing Monday the retail price of ice will be advanced from forty cents a hundred and the wholesale price from twenty-five to forty cents a hundred.

When the Natural Ice Company's new plant is completed on North avenue, it will conduct a retail and wholesale business in ice, coal, wood, lumber, hay, grain and feed.

LIGHTED SIGNAL FOR PRINCETON "BOBBIES."

The efficiency of the police force of Princeton, consisting of a marshal and two assistants, is shortly to be increased by a novel scheme. A red lamp is to be suspended from a cornice of the First National Bank building, on the corner of Witherspoon and Nassau streets, the most central point in the town.

By its connection with the Mayor's office, the flaring of the light will make known to the borough policemen that there is trouble afoot. The corner where the lamp will be placed can be seen from almost all parts of the town. The guardians of the police who are accustomed to saunter along Nassau street have hitherto been out of reach several times when there was mischief under way, particularly in the backwoods section of the town where negro settlements have sprung up.

Telephoning the Mayor's office has not always been the solution to the difficulty, for the Mayor then must find one of the three policemen, a task not so easy in a town of Princeton's dimensions. There is some talk now of connecting the red light with the telephone wires, so that a ring in the Mayor's office sure will bring one of the officers.

Judge Cuts Off His Own Light.

Vice-Chancellor Garrison had to decide a case against his own interest in Jersey City on Monday, and Counselor George Holmes was in the same boat, for he represented the Central Railroad of New Jersey, which the borough of Seabright sought to enjoin from removing the wires of the electric company from the railway company's poles which were placed there, it was alleged, illegally. In permitting the Vice-Chancellor denied the injunction and the wires will come down, and the lighting will be by oil lamps unless an amicable adjustment is made. The vice-chancellor and Mr. Holmes have summer homes at Seabright that have been equipped with wire for electric lighting, and they may have to burn oil.

SCHOOL APPROPRIATION

Borough Votes $24,625. for Running Expenses of Its Public Schools.

THREE TRUSTEES RE-ELECTED.

Mayor Townsend Makes a Statement —Councilmen Attend the Interesting Session.

The voters of the North Plainfield school district, at the annual election held last night in the Somerset school building, chose three new members for the Board of Education and decided in favor of the full allowance of $24,625 for school expenses as asked for by the Board. There was some discussion as to whether the amount could not be reduced, the question being raised by Mayor Townsend, who pointed out that the borough was likely to be hard pressed this year to meet expenses. He read a communication explaining the conditions, and this was replied to by James R. Joy, who told why a larger apportionment had been asked for this year than last, in spite of the fact that the allowance from the State would be $7,000 less.

He said that the crowded condition of the graded schools necessitated the hiring of an additional teacher, at a salary of $600 per year; that a teacher of mathematics was needed, the salary to be about $1,200; and that as it was customary to increase the teachers' salaries a little each year, the board had asked for $1,200 for this purpose. There being forty teachers this would be an average increase for each one of $25. The three items named would make a total of $2,000 of which $2,000 could be cut and the work be carried on the same as last year, but the board felt the expense was necessary to maintain efficient service.

Mayor Townsend said he did not want to be understood as antagonistic to the board, but merely desired that the members be acquainted with the true financial conditions. The Mayor and Borough Council attended the meeting in a body.

J. Herbert Case expressed the belief that every cent asked for was absolutely necessary and should be allowed. He declared that the expenses of last year were not figured liberally enough; that unforeseen expenses were continually coming up, especially in the way of repairs.

Councilman L. B. Woolston said that he favored the increase in the teachers' salaries and the hiring of an additional grade teacher if it was necessary, but believed the teaching of mathematics could be dispensed with. He was in favor of making the total apportionment $1,200 less.

The election resulted in 27 men voting for the full amount, $24,625; five voted for the reduction of $1,200; two voted to make the current expenses $8,900, while some one else voted for a total apportionment of $40,000.

The items specified on the ballot, which carried by a majority vote were: For current expenses, $20,900; for repairs, $1,900; for manual training, $1,825.

These men were re-elected unanimously to membership of the Board: Edmund Rushmore, Nelson A. Miller and Hiram A. Woodruff, each to serve three years. This is Mayor Townsend's communication, which he read before the meeting of the voters:

"If it may be permitted, I would like to call your attention to some facts that are of interest to the taxpayers of the borough and which I feel it my duty as its Mayor to lay before you.

"It is my purpose to show the relation of the school to the borough in the matter of expenditures for public purposes and how dependent is the borough upon the action of the voters tonight in appropriating money for school purposes. By a law passed in 1906 a maximum limit was placed on the rate of taxation for local purposes which includes in its operation county, borough and special school taxes. This limit, unless hereafter changed, will be for the present year $1.75 on the $100 of taxable valuations.

"The assessed borough taxable valuations for the year 1908 were $4,381,408. As these valuations were largely increased over the preceding year, they cannot be increased the present year without adding to our already heavy burden of county taxation, consequently they will probably remain about the same or possibly be less than for 1908. If they remain the same the rate of $1.75 per $100 valuation will produce the sum of $76,674.64.

"The total borough expenditures for 1908 were $20,854.95. Estimating the same expenditures for 1909 and adding to the budget an amount of $4,000 to meet contingencies as was done in 1908, it will

SUES FOR A DIVORCE FROM CHAS. J. WILBUR

A petition for divorce has been filed in the Court of Chancery at Trenton, N. J., by Sarah Francis Wilbur, of Neptune, N. J., against Charles J. Wilbur, of this city. The Wilburs were married August 5, 1900, at Asbury Park by Rev. Z. C. Martin.

Mrs. Wilbur charges that Wilbur was arrested and indicted and sentenced to six years on a charge preferred by Violet Mosher, a fourteen-year-old girl.

The papers were served in Wilbur last Saturday at the State prison and at first he would not take them, but finally did. The fact that Mrs. Wilbur's charges are the same on which he was convicted will no doubt give her a divorce.

BOROUGH TO LICENSE HACKMEN AND JUNKMEN

When the Borough Council assembled last night, a recess was immediately taken and the Mayor and Councilmen went in a body to the meeting of the North Plainfield school district voters, held in the Somerset school building. Because of the time taken up in this way, it was decided, on returning to the Council rooms, not to begin the discussion of the yearly budget, but to hold another adjourned meeting on Monday night, March 29, when the chairman of the various committees should have their reports ready.

Councilman B. R. Waldron introduced an ordinance which provides for regulating and licensing hackmen, ash carts, hand carts and junk dealers. An ordinance repealing the former ordinance regulating these things was first passed on its first and second readings.

The new ordinance, which was drawn up by Recorder Charles M. Somerville, provides for an increase in the junk dealers' license from $10 to $20; ash carts to $5; hand carts to $10 and horse and wagon to $25. The new prices are about 20 per cent. less than those in Plainfield.

ACTION IS DEFERRED ON BUILDING PERMITS

The cumbersomeness of the borough building laws, as to the issuing of permits, was again emphasized last night at the meeting of the borough Council. Councilman Stahl had three petitions to present, but as two members of the Council were not present and it requires a four-fifths vote to pass on bills, no action could be taken. The matter was discussed by the Mayor and members present and it was regretted that authority could not be given the chairman of the committee to issue permits when satisfied that the building specifications would meet with the requirements of the law.

Among the petitions awaiting action by the Council is one of W. G. Debele, asking permission to erect a two story brick building in the rear of the Debele and Stahl store on Somerset street. The structure is to be 60x20x60 feet and will be used as a candy factory and storehouse.

Mayor Townsend expressed himself as being willing to meet with the Council every week if necessary for the purpose of taking action on the building permits, if it would encourage building activity. Another adjourned meeting will be held Monday night, March 29.

Will Consider Lang's Case.

Fred Lang, who has been sentenced to be hanged next Tuesday for the murder of Katie Gordon, of Piscataway Township, has been granted one more chance for his life. His Counsel, Alan B. Strong, has succeeded in persuading the Board of Pardons to consider the case and it has decided to meet Friday noon for that purpose. However, it is the general opinion that the board will not interfere, but that Lang will pay the penalty for his deed.

METHODIST WOMEN MEET

Foreign Missionary Society of Elizabeth District in All-Day Session.

MANY ADDRESSES ARE MADE.

All M. E. Churches Between Roselle and Bound Brook Represented At the Sessions.

Delegates to the number of about seventy-five attended the group meeting of the Women's Foreign Society of the Elizabeth District held in Vincent chapel, of the First M. E. church, yesterday. They represented all the Methodist churches between Bound Brook and Roselle Park, and the entire day was given up to a discussion of foreign missionary topics and at noon a basket luncheon was served.

Mrs. M. Winter, president of the foreign missionary society, was in the chair and had charge of the program. The morning session began about 10:30 o'clock with devotional exercises led by Mrs. William Everitt, of Roselle Park. Then followed a symposium, the topics and speakers being "How to Get People Interested?" Mrs. Robert L. Lee, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church; "How to Assume Responsibility?" Mrs. William Corbett, of Cranford; "How to Make Reports?" Mrs. M. Albert Harris, of Westfield; "Prayer," Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Grace M. E. church; "Mite Boxes," Mrs. J. C. Pierson, of Monroe Avenue M. E. church; "Bible Reading," Mrs. E. C. Dutcher.

The basket luncheon was then served under the direction of Mrs. Nelson Y. Hull, chairman; Miss Minnie Sharp, Mrs. Maurice McGrath, Mrs. C. E. Prior, Mrs. John Lane and Miss Susie Jackson.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock with a Bible reading by Mrs. E. C. Dutcher, of Dunellen. Under the topic "By Wireless, or Letters from the Foreign Field," Mrs. William Bayrock, of Westfield, read a number of messages from missionaries in different parts of the foreign field. These afforded much encouragement to the women. This was followed with a recitation, "The Two Mites," by Miss Corbett, of Westfield, and a soprano solo by Miss Irene Miller. Mrs. Nelson A. Miller was the accompanist.

An interesting feature of the afternoon was a mat drill conducted by Mrs. Addison C. Hayes, of Westfield. The conference closed with a vocal solo by Mrs. Emily G. Wilkinson, of this city.

CLERGYMAN'S WARNING ON FAKE PRAYER CHAIN

The endless chain prayer has made its appearance here and so annoying has it become to many that Rev. Dr. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, has issued a public statement warning the people against the fraud.

The clergyman says:

"I enter my protest in behalf of the Church and in justice to Bishop Lawrence against the endless prayer chain nuisance which is again in evidence and purporting to come from Bishop Lawrence. The Bishop of Massachusetts denies publicly, in The Churchman, disclaimed any part in the prayer (?) which has gone forth as under his approval.

"The crude superstition contained in the prayer—the experiencing 'at the end of nine days some great joy' and 'he or she who writes this prayer will be delivered from some great calamity,' ought to satisfy sane people of its being a forgery as well as a public nuisance. If only a few more people would be sensible and break this illadvised and false chain we might be spared further afflictions."

COURT WATCHUNG, I. O. F., GIVES A EUCHRE PARTY.

Court Watchung, No. 3871, Independent Order Foresters, gave a euchre party last night in its rooms, Knights of Columbus Hall. It was largely attended, there being twenty-seven tables, and it was considered the best social affair yet given by the Court. The evening was devoted to playing euchre, after which refreshments were served and there was a social time enjoyed.

At the conclusion of play Mrs. Charles Reese, of Westfield, received a cut-glass pitcher; Miss Julia Lynch, a piece of cut-glass; Mrs. Peter A. VanFleet a dish; J. L. Bennett a mission clock, William A. Cochran, of this city, and Charles Slater, of Westfield, each a stein.

WHAT ACCOUNTANT DOES

HE SKETCHES THEIR HISTORY.

Expert Tells What a Certified Accountant Is and How He Aids A Business Man.

"The Accountant, What He Is, and What He Does" was the subject of an interesting business men's talk given before the Men's Club of the Congregational church, last night by E. L. Suffern, of North Plainfield, who is the senior member of the firm of E. L. Suffern & Son, certified public accountants. Mr. Suffern is one of the four or five oldest certified public accountants in this part of the country and especially well qualified to speak on the subject.

Beginning with the earliest history of accountancy, about 200 years ago, when an organization was effected in Scotland, known as chartered accountants, Mr. Suffern traced step by step the progress made. He said that England and Wales has always been far ahead of this country as regards the work of public accountants.

The Scottish laws, he said, recognize accountants and they are appointed by the courts to act as receivers and administrators and in many instances foreign corporations elect a certified accountant as a member of the board of directors. In this country the public accountant has only been known in the smallest possible way. Thirty-five years ago there were but two or three certified accountants in this country and twenty-four years ago in Boston, Philadelphia and New York there were between fifteen or twenty such men.

Mr. Suffern defined accountancy as the assembling and recording of facts of business so that they can be easily distinguished and understood, and that of an accountant as one who applies these principles in practice, to determine whether a business is fruitful or adverse, find the defects and reasons therefore and suggest a remedy.

Mr. Suffern said that an accountant is expected to tell a business man why he is not making money and give him every detail, showing whether there is any weakness and to suggest means and ways for attaining the highest proficiency. New business problems are constantly arising and this has led to a realization of the fact that in the past accountants lacked much. He has had to blaze his way through.

Continuing, Mr. Suffern said: "Unfortunately in some instances an accountant is supposed to prepare a report to suit the convenience of certain directors of a corporation or other big business concern, whereas he should be allowed to render an impartial report. In 1896 Legislative recognition of public accountants obtained in New York State and the Board of Regents were given absolute control in arranging examinations. The board is a self-perpetual body. At first it required an applicant to pass on forty-eight counts, while now it has forty-eight or sixty counts. An idea of the severity of the examination can be gained when it is known that out of 1,800 applicants only 350 were successful.

"There are now seventeen States, including New Jersey, which give certificates to certified public accountants. It is a growing body now with a total membership of between 850 and 900."

In conclusion Mr. Suffern described somewhat in detail what certified public accountants do, showing the extensive duties required in the accounting of all kinds of businesses. He also talked briefly on the future of the accountant, giving some good advice to young men of contemplate taking up that business. He said that in his long experience he had always found accountants absolutely trustworthy and technically correct. Afterward Alexander Miller paid a tribute to the profession of public accountancy and especially to the firm of E. L. Suffern & Son.

A social hour followed during which a committee served sandwiches and coffee. The next meeting of the club will be for the entertainment of the women.

ELECT SCHOOL TRUSTEES

Township Meetings at Fanwood, North Plainfield, Dunellen and Elsewhere.

VOTE ANNUAL APPROPRIATIONS

Addition to Cost $9,000 to be Made to the Scotch Plains School Building—Few Contests.

The annual district school meetings were held last night in the surrounding townships.

The Fanwood township school meeting resulted in a decision to erect a $9,000 addition to the present school building at Scotch Plains. The appropriation includes the cost of furnishing the new wing, the work on which will be begun in June and completed in September. The bond issue will run for eighteen years, one $500 bond to be returned each succeeding year. There were only 12 votes against the improvement. The appropriation, $4,000, asked for by the Board for the annual expenses, was also voted. These were re-elected members of the Board: Dr. F. W. Westcott, T. J. Nichol and John Z. Hatfield. Harry Knight acted as chairman and T. J. Nichol as secretary.

The annual school meeting was held at Dunellen last night and contrary to expectation there was no contest. It was confidently believed that there would be a bitter fight against the regular ticket, but it failed to materialize. J. Newton Apgar was chairman of the meeting and Abner Coriell the secretary, while J. P. Fenner and L. T. Churchill were tellers.

Three trustees were elected for three years, Silas W. Nellor receiving 111 votes, George Cameron 112 and Wilson S. Frederick was high man with 134 votes. The meeting was harmonious throughout.

John Mundy, John Hemmer and Jacob Reimann were elected school trustees at the annual school meeting of Warren township held at Mt. Bethel, last night. There was no contest and the regular ticket went through without the slightest opposition.

At the school meeting held in North Plainfield township, Francis E. Bodin was elected a trustee to succeed William Brokaw. There was no contest at that meeting.

Piscataway Township voters re-elected Jeremiah F. Ten Eyck and Harry Piddington to the Board of Education last night and elected Augustus Lieb to fill the vacancy made by Eugene S. Veghte. A $5,000 appropriation was voted for an addition to the East Bound Brook school building.

$200 BROOCH MISSING; DOMESTIC HASN'T IT

An effort to locate a valuable diamond brooch belonging to Mrs. Arnold Sampter, at 1111 Putnam avenue, which has been missing for a week, proved fruitless in the case of suspicions against Mary Patylor, a domestic, who was haled before City Judge Runyon today. The warrant for the woman's appearance charged her with having taken two other pins, a dress belonging to Mrs. Sampter, and some linen belonging to the family. The woman acknowledged having the articles, but proved to the court that they had been given to her. The charges were not pressed.

The missing brooch is valued at $200, and is a four-leaf clover of heavy gold, set with a diamond. The fact that the domestic had entertained her "gentleman friend" at the Sampter home during the recent absence of the family led to the suspicions. The woman and her friend, who is a South Plainfield man, absolutely denied any knowledge of the pin, which they said they had never seen, and satisfactorily explained to the court just what happened during the man's visit at the house.

Warning Against Safe Sneaks.

The city police have been notified of the operations of a series of safe sneaks in Easton, Pa., and Chief Kiely, fearing that the men may be working this way, warns local merchants to keep an eye on their safes while talking with strangers. There are three members to the gang of safe sneaks, and one of them works at the safe while another gets the merchant to show goods. The third is the outside "lookout."

MRS. BEULAH RALEIGH APPLIES FOR DIVORCE

Mrs. Beulah Raleigh has filed a petition for divorce in the Chancery Court at Trenton alleging that her husband, John Raleigh, deserted her and has not contributed to her support. The couple were married on Feb. 20, 1903, Rev. Lawrence Rice Howard officiating, and took up their residence at Westerly, Rhode Island. Mrs. Raleigh says that they lived a happy life for nineteen months and that then he abandoned her. She asks for the custody of a four-year-old child. Mrs. Raleigh was formerly Miss Beulah Waters and since separating from her husband has resided here.

Robert Newton Crane is counsel for Mrs. Raleigh.

GATHERING IN STRAY CANINES ABOUT THE CITY

As a result of Monday's mad dog scare, when Miss Alice Biggins' mad bull terrier "Beau" ran through North Plainfield streets, biting seven other dogs, one of the victims, was shot. It belonged to Mrs. Henry Rumbaul, of Park place, who feared it was developing hydrophobia. Another boroughite, Henry Eickert, reported to the borough police today that a dog belonging to him had been acting strangely and had also been shot. None of the other dogs bitten by "Beau" have developed the disease, but all are being closely watched by their owners.

A crusade against stray, unmuzzled dogs found at large in the city streets was begun this morning in accordance with Mayor Pick's ordinance issued yesterday. William H. Kitchen, of Everett place, has been appointed pound-keeper and sixteen stray canines were rounded up early this morning by Dog Catcher Kiely. They were taken to police headquarters and later removed to the pound, which is now located on Everett place. The impounded animals will be held to await redemption by their owners for four days, and at the expiration of that time will be destroyed.

ASKS DIVORCE FROM FREDERICK BETTMAN

A petition for divorce has been filed in the Chancery Court at Trenton by Margaret W. Bettman for an absolute divorce from her husband, Frederick C. Bettman. Mrs. Bettman says in her petition that she was married to Bettman on April 15, 1899, before John Duff, a justice of the peace at Jersey City, and that from that time until November, 1906, she lived together with her husband at the home of John M. Bettman, in North Plainfield, when her husband then deserted her.

Since then Mrs. Bettman swears he has wilfully remained away from her, although she has endeavored to get him to return and live with her, and that he has not supported her nor contributed in anyway to her support since he left.

Bettman at present is living at 1191 Broad street, Newark, where he was served with the papers in the divorce case by Sheriff Harrigan. He had no comment to make when the papers were served on him.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Bettman was quite a surprise in this city, because they eloped and were married secretly in Jersey City, Mrs. Bettman is the daughter of Eugene M. Carw, of Sanford avenue. Bettman was left an orphan at the age of eleven months and was taken by his uncle, John M. Bettman, who cared for him until he deserted his wife.

FIRE CAUSES $9,000 LOSS

ONE FIREMAN WAS OVERCOME.

Origin Unknown—Dense Smoke and Illuminating Gas Make Firemen's Work Dangerous.

Fire which for a time threatened the destruction of the West Front street business block between Madison avenue and Grove street, was checked with a loss of $9,000 early last evening. The flames were discovered in the cellar of the linen and embroidery store of Samuel C. Peck, 316 West Front street, and spread to J. W. Gavett's china and glass store next door, badly gutting the basement and part of the main floor of the building, which is owned by Mr. Gavett. The fire, which was discovered at 5:40 o'clock, gave the firemen a hard fight for an hour, and they were badly hampered by illuminating gas and smoke in the cellars. Callman William Jaeger, who was working with a line of hose in the cellar, was overcome by the gas and smoke, but was carried out and revived without medical attention.

The cause of the fire is unknown. It was discovered by a clerk of J. W. Gavett's store when he went to the cellar to turn out the gas in the basement; show rooms and close the place for the night. He ran and told Mr. Gavett of the fire, and an alarm was sounded from box 42 at Front and Grove streets. At practically the same time, Miss Elizabeth Sanders, a saleswoman in Peck's store, smelled smoke as she was waiting on a customer and sent the delivery boy, Edward Kline, to the cellar to find the cause. He reported that the firm's store room was a mass of flames. George Muir, a truckman, discovered the fire from the front of the building at about the time, for the dense cloud of smoke rolled up at him from the cellar as he raised the sidewalk door to carry down an express box.

When Chief Doane of the fire department arrived at the burning building, he ordered an alarm sounded from box 12 on West Front street, and this brought No. 3 hose company. Two lines of hose were stretched to the rear of the building and three in the front, including a cellar pipe.

The total loss will amount to about $9,000 and is covered by insurance. Of this more than half is loss in stock of the two firms. The flames ate their way through the floor in the rear of Peck's store and there was great damage by smoke. Mr. Peck places his loss there at $3,500. Mr. Gavett's loss was principally through breakage in the basement display rooms. It will reach $3,000. The loss to the building will amount to $2,500.

Speaking about the cause of the fire to a Daily Press reporter today, Chief Doane said: "The fire certainly started in Peck's store room, which is a small room in the rear of the cellar under his store. I don't believe the cause will ever be known; it might have been spontaneous combustion or some mischief of rats. Mr. Peck was extremely careful in his precautions against fire, and the store room was as neatly and carefully kept as any could be. The report that the fire started from the heater, which Peck's claims, is a firing furnace, is entirely false, as an inspection of the building will show."

Excise Changes in New Brunswick.

BIGGEST AND BEST BANQUET IN ALL ITS HISTORY IS ENJOYED BY THREE HUNDRED MEMBERS OF THE LOCAL BOARD OF TRADE

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, as Toastmaster, and State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, Frank Bergen and Calvin Tompkins Deliver Rattling Good Speeches on Timely Topics Following the Dinner.

Men from all walks of life to the number of about three hundred, attended the annual banquet of the Board of Trade held last night at Truell Hall, and helped to make the affair a success. The banquet was served in the large dining room, which was decorated with American flags and bunting. The arrangement was such that everyone had an unobstructed view of the speakers' table.

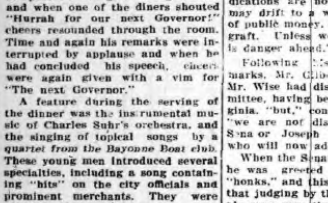
Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert was the toastmaster, and seated with him were State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, Frank Bergen, Calvin Tompkins and W. E. Tuttle, Jr. Mr. Gilbert regretted that he was obliged to announce that John S. Wise, one of the principal speakers, was detained in Virginia and could not be present. Letters of regret were also read from Mayor Charles Joel Fisk and State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, who explained their inability to attend.

The hit of the evening was made by Senator Frelinghuysen. That every man in the hall counted himself as a personal friend and admirer of the Somerset man was plainly evident from the first. When he arose to speak he was given a big ovation and when one of the diners shouted "Hurrah for our next Governor!" cheers resounded through the room. Time and again his remarks were interrupted by applause and when he had concluded his speech, cheers were again given with a vim for "The next Governor."

A feature during the serving of the dinner was the instrumental music of Charles Suhr's orchestra, and the singing of topical songs by a quartet from the Bayonne Boat club. These young men introduced several specialties, including a song containing "hits" on the city officials and prominent merchants. They were received with great applause. The large assemblage joined heartily in the singing of the popular songs and there was no lack of enthusiasm from start to finish.

Gilbert as Toastmaster.

Toastmaster Gilbert in his introductory remarks said a few things that made everyone take notice as he touched questions of vital interest to every citizen. "The Board of Trade is now thoroughly established," said Mr. Gilbert, "and it has succeeded in injecting considerable spice and life into Plainfield's social life. During its existence it has wrestled with many difficult problems, important ones, too. When the board was first organized some people doubted its necessity, but I think it has proved its right to existence and Plainfield today is in need of just such body of men.



Alexander Gilbert.

"This year we will celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the granting of the city charter and the city is still wrestling with problems. It is needful that all watch the city government, especially in view of our rapidly increasing bonded indebtedness. Twenty years ago no Common Council would think of issuing bonds without first submitting the question to a vote of the people. Today no one takes any interest, although last year our indebtedness increased seventy per cent. and at present we have a bonded indebtedness of $600,000, and we are talking of building a sub line sewer, buying a water works and want to improve our suburbs.

Public Extravagance.

"Our credit is good, but our desires out-run our necessities. The only object a man has to be is to keep the tax rate within reason. This is not confined solely to Plainfield. Every State is doing the same thing—running in debt. Education, sanitation and good roads are before the country and everyone wants the best. This is a debt-making era. Plainfield will never owe less money than it does today and this requires careful watching and care. We have lived a quiet simple life and enjoyed a natural healthy growth, but the indications are not wanting that we may drift to a wasteful expenditure of public money, out of which grows graft. Unless we are careful there is danger ahead."

Joseph S. Frelinghuysen.

Following his introductory remarks, Mr. Gilbert announced that Mr. Wise had disappointed the committee, having been detained in Virginia, "but," continued Mr. Gilbert, "we are not disappointed in State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, who will now address you."

When the Senator arose to his feet he was greeted with a storm of "honks," and this led him to remark that judging by the sound some people were expecting to take a ride in an airship. Senator Frelinghuysen received the greatest ovation of the evening and all were interested in what he had to say. He was frequently interrupted by hearty applause.

Frelinghuysen Speaks.

The Senator said:

"I am glad to be here tonight to tell you of the real pleasure and satisfaction in meeting the men who have taken such an active part in promoting the prosperity and progress of this, one of the most beautiful cities in the State of New Jersey, and to congratulate you on the high standard of your city government, and the splendid character of your city fathers. Plainfield has long been noted as a city whose record is clean. In fact, it might well be called 'Spotless Town.'

"The activity and efforts of the Board of Trade have resulted in industrial progress within your limits. The city with a board of trade means good government, good utilities, transportation, water and sewerage, well kept streets, and a happy and contented people. The city without one you will find generally behind in paint, bricks, tooth brushes and quinine pills. The city of Plainfield shows two sides. The people passing through it on the great artery of travel, over which course the trains of three great railroad systems, seeing the great factories, ask 'What is the name of this busy manufacturing town?' But when they visit and drive through your side streets under the arching boughs of the beautiful elms, and view the handsome residential section, with well kept lawns and lots of room for God's free air and sun, they say, 'This is not only a manufacturing city, but a city of homes.' It is indeed the beautiful city of the plains.

Calvin Tompkins.

Throws the Bouquet.

"Plainfield, as well as Union county, is to be congratulated upon their representatives in the State Legislature. Your Senator Ackerman is one of the ablest and strongest men in the body, safe, sane and conservative, and next year he will be the majority leader I believe, and pays for it with a copper cent, the copper of which is refined at the great smelters of Raritan Bay. He gets in an automobile, the body of which is made by Quinby, of Newark, is lighted by the famous Rushmore lamp, manufactured here in Plainfield, which shines around the world. When he dies, a tombstone is placed over him, the granite of which is taken from the hills of Morris county. Then, if he is prudent, his wife collects from the great life insurance company that has made the Rock of Gibraltar famous. This shows, in comparison, what two hundred and fifty years of progress will do.

"Plainfield, and is coincident with the name 'Westfield' and 'Scotch Plains.' I also note with some satisfaction your city was incorporated in 1869, the year of my birth, and is celebrating this year the birth of its incorporation. This section is rich in memories of the Revolution, with Washington Rock and exciting events surrounding it from 1776 to 1781. The two winters that Washington spent at Morristown were the scene of much Whig and Tory raiding, and was the bulwark of Washington's defense. The Republican party will do well to place their interests in his hands.

"I might mention also the honorable Mayor, who in addition to other valuable services to the State has just served as chairman of the excise investigation committee appointed by Governor Fort. While this report seems to be like a hot potato—everybody afraid to touch it—I believe as times goes on the valuable information that it contains, will be of immense benefit to the State as a guide for future legislation.

"Plainfield should also be proud of the many prominent men who live within its borders, of those who form the structure of its government as well as of those who make their homes here, but who go to the great metropolis doing their share in the world's work in its financial, industrial and commercial life.

Plainfield's History.

"Interested somewhat in ascertaining some facts about your city and the reason for its name, I found in 1685, the first settler to this section wrote 'We have the honor of being the first settlers in this inland part of America.' Plainfield, before and after the Revolution was known as Milltown by reason of a mill here, and also as 'Towtown.' In 1812 there were several hat factories here. In 1736 the Society of Friends erected a meeting house as a place of worship, and in 1788 their present house was built. The name of Plainfield is from the English, against the British General Howe, who laid like a crouching wolf at New Brunswick. We read much of the settlement of this locality in the early days, about the Dutch settling along the Hudson and Raritan rivers and finding their habitant in this locality. At that time there sprung up in the clearing a clustering village of log cabins, and it seems curious to us today when we look back 250 years ago to the colonization of the State.

Jersey's Manufactures.

"In these older days the settler was dependent upon his own ingenuity and his strong right arm for the necessities of life. Contrasting with the conditions of today, not only can a man help himself with the necessities but also luxuries within reason. He decides to raise a habitation here in the Raritan Valley. He goes to the brick yards of Perth Amboy for brick, or, possibly, he uses the cement manufactured by our friend, Senator Ackerman. He roofs his habitation with rubberoid manufactured at Jersey City or Dover. He lights it with electric lights invented by the great Jersey man, Edison, manufactured at Harrison, N. J., possibly, gasoline, ring kerosene oil, he patronizes the Oil company, located at Bayonne, N. J. He papers the walls with paper manufactured at New Brunswick. He carpets it from the great manufactories in Camden. He puts curtains on the windows made at the silk mills of Paterson. He places a sewing machine in one room, manufactured here in your own county by that great concern, The Singer Manufacturing Co. He places a piano in another corner manufactured at Washington, N. J. He reads a paper printed on a printing press manufactured in Plainfield and from type made in Rahway, and lush 'plain-field,' and is coincident with the name 'Westfield' and 'Scotch Plains.' I also note with some satisfaction your city was incorporated in 1869, the year of my birth, and is celebrating this year the birth of its incorporation. This section is rich in memories of the Revolution, with Washington Rock and exciting events surrounding it from 1776 to 1781. The two winters that Washington spent at Morristown were the scene of much Whig and Tory raiding, and was the bulwark of Washington's defense. The Republican party will do well to place their interests in his hands.

"I might mention also the honorable Mayor, who in addition to other valuable services to the State has just served as chairman of the excise investigation committee appointed by Governor Fort. "The New Ideas."

"In these days when 'National Morality' is exploited on every hand when strenuously in evidence seems to be the spirit of the age, when good government clubs are formed every where, and even the humblest citizen becomes an ambitious politician, it is the duty of all public spirited citizens to carefully consider all public questions.

"The trend of today seems to be toward sociological legislation in State and Nation. The blue laws of former days are not a curcumstance to the popular demand for prying inquiries and investigations and stringent control of corporate and all other business.

"I need not remind you how complicated our legislation has become. No sooner is a public need perceived than some one begins to harp upon it, then a society is formed to look after it, and sooner or later the already overburdened legislature is called upon to turn the world upside down by an all-regulating command of government.

Laws' Enforcement.

"Most people think that as soon as any matter of importance becomes formulated in our code of laws, everything is settled. In New Jersey there are a thousand obsolete and useless laws on our statute books. The enthusiasts believe the simple enactment of laws a cure for all the diseases of the body politic. The really important part of all government is not the making of laws but their faithful execution. No mistaken legislation can endure the test of a rigorous enforcement, and a really good law receives an indisputable recognition when it is found beneficial in practice.

"But behind and beneath, above and around all law enforcement, stands public opinion. In the ultimate analysis this is a government by the people. Just as far as they want it, they will have it, no whit further, will such law be carried out, and when a law is outgrown by the people and becomes antiquated, it hardly needs to be repealed. By a sort of unanimous consent it drops out of consideration, and is relegated to the archives of defunct legislation.

"The problem then today is the careful instruction and direction of the public mind. In this respect men of trained minds and persuasive speech, as well as same temperament, are the civic guards, the intellectual militia of a Nation's armament.

"I presume there are some automobilists in the audience tonight and some expression of opinion might be expected from me on automobile legislation.

"I appreciate the great benefit of the automobile to the State of New Jersey and to its industries.

Auto Legislation.

"The impression seems to have gone abroad that my views on the question of automobile registration were arbitrary, and that I was the enemy to automobilists. This can hardly be so, inasmuch as I enjoy the sport myself, owning three machines, but I only believe and maintain that the law should protect every user of the highway. Possibly the speed limit, in view of the improved control of machines, is too limited, although the question of the advisability of a change to a greater speed than is allowed in Pennsylvania and New York States, might be questioned. The law should be strong enough to protect all citizens of the State, and license tolls should not be any less to non-residents than they are to residents. Non-residents should not be granted any privileges that the residents of the State do not enjoy.

"I am in favor of a fair adjustment of these license tolls, so that visitors may enjoy our roads, and the beauty of the State, but they should pay the same proportion for the privilege that the residents pay. Our road system has attracted thousands from other States. We must collect from the automobilists in a measure to repair the roads. Unless we maintain roads visitors will not come to motor through the State.

New Jersey.

"But my subject, 'New Jersey.' I have exhausted my time, and, I fear, my patience as well. Just a few brief words about New Jersey, our beloved State.

"'Breathes there a man with soul so dead, who to himself hath never said, "This is my own, my native land?"'

"The government of New Jersey has always been the highest class. Her laws have always been dispensed with justice and fairness by the ablest of judges.

"While our neighbors have spent millions of their substance building canals and trotting speedways, while thousands of children were turned from the schools unaccommodated, New Jersey has spent her millions for free education, and no child, be its parents rich or poor, has ever been turned from the schoolhouse door. She is merciful to her sick and charitable to her afflicted. She does not follow, but leads the trend of thought in advanced legislation, although mistakes are, and have been made. In my association with those who frame the laws, I know the majority of the men who now compose the legislature are broad, high-minded men, unselfishly actuated by their time for the best interest and welfare of the State. No State can fail to succeed with such a standard, and we welcome in our government the higher order of things.

"I think New Jersey is the greatest State religiously, intellectually, commercially and industrially in the constellation of forty-six States, of which she is the brightest jewel. Territorially, she has the finest position of any State. Embraced on each side by two larger sisters, she has all their virtue and none of their vices.

"Her smooth broad highways make her the parkway of the East. On her wave-lapped sands the people from all over the world come to play. Her mountains and plains speak and her rivers and lakes sing of her beauty. Her outline of shore is the first to welcome the storm-tossed mariner returning home to the 'Land of the Free.'

Jersey's Richness.

"She contributes her thousands daily to make the immense marts in the two great cities throb with the pulse-beats of energetic life. It is Jersey brawn and brain; Jersey justice and Jersey lightning that have diverted all trade and traffic to New York and Philadelphia from the relaxed grasp of our anaemic neighbors, the villages of Chicago, Cincinnati and Toledo.

"New Jersey is rich in history—the battleground of the Republic—the battlefields of Trenton, Princeton and Monmouth can never be effaced from the annals of history.

"New Jersey's coat of arms reflects her traditions. Upon the shield are the three plows, indicative of agricultural pursuits. The horse's head is emblematic of the State's one-time industry, for in Colonial days she was the emporium and breeding-ground of the world. The helmet indicating the sovereignty of the human mind in every sphere of civilized life. Upon the scroll beneath are the words 'Liberty and Prosperity.' Liberty, that priceless boon of a free people was purchased for eternity by her sons on every battlefield of the Revolutionary and Civil wars, and by reason of honesty and righteousness in government and the favor of God, we hope New Jersey will forever enjoy that prosperity which we think she so richly deserves."

Tompkins Talk.

"The Port of New York," was the toast assigned to Calvin Tompkins, of East Orange and New York, and his remarks contained a wealth of facts and figures tending to show the relation of New Jersey to New York as regards transportation and commerce. "What helps a part helps the whole," continued Mr. Tompkins. "New York is today the centre of all traffic and whatever helps that city will help New Jersey. There is no wind that can bring ill to Manhattan and at the same time the outlying districts are benefitted.

"The attitude of New Jersey on New York is always to be counted upon. This State is awake and doing things and the building and extension of tunnels is of the greatest importance in the development of both New York and New Jersey. A unified plan of development means a maximum division. If we fail in this we will lose a great deal.

"At present New York has no such railroad opportunities as New Jersey, no great system of railroads, and New Jersey's great opportunity is now while New York is wrestling with almost insurmountable problems. When these are solved, New Jersey's future will not be so promising. New York now has one decided advantage and that is control over its public utilities and this condition should exist in New Jersey. When all of the tunnels are connected there will be a tendency on the part of New York's population to flow out into the suburbs and it will then be up to New Jersey to take care of this increase. New Jersey has the opportunity of great manufacturing sites and it is important that she organize to obtain the great advantages due her. There is one way of gaging improvements and that is through public opinion."

Bergen on Extravagance.

The third and last speaker of the evening was Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, who was called upon to complete the toasts. In introducing him, Mr. Gilbert assigned to him the topic, "Where Are We At?" the one upon which John S. Wise was to have spoken. Mr. Bergen said that he had a grudge against Mr. Wise for this was the third time that the Virginian had failed to keep such an appointment and he was not surprised to be heard that he would not be present.

Continuing, Mr. Bergen said that he would have to be as careful as to what he did not say as to what he would have to say. "This subject, 'Where Are We At' is a big one," said Mr. Bergen, "in its application to the Nation, State and municipalities. During the past twelve years there has been a profound change in the methods of government and this has greatly increased our responsibilities. We must direct our attention to local, State and county interests.

"New Jersey encouraged the corporations until she became an incubator and nursery for them. That policy inaugurated a policy of extravagance, but three years ago with the vast resources and revenue no one would have believed that the State today would have to resort to its present system of taxation.

Favors Consolidation.

"If I was a resident of Plainfield I would rally around the standard of Former Mayor W. L. Saunders and Mayor Townsend and others who seek to bring about a consolidation of Plainfield and North Plainfield. I was born in Somerset county, and now live in Union county and I am convinced that the convenience of North Plainfield makes it imperative that the two municipalities unite. If I were a Czar in Plainfield, and I would like to be, I would force the people to build on the beautiful hills adjacent thereto and would annex Fanwood, also. But you cannot work against the laws of nature. Man would rather live on the plains than the hills.

"There is much that could be said regarding the relations of public service corporations to municipalities, but time will not permit. The storm clouds are now passing away and confidence is returning which means a large amount of money seeking its way into all trades and I feel sure that the interests with which I am connected will do all that is possible to bring about a condition satisfactory to all."

This concluded the speechmaking and before parting all joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne."

Eugene M. Laing was the chairman of the banquet committee, succeeding Judge William Newcorn, who was unable to be present last night. A. S. Herr was the secretary. Mr. Laing also served as chairman of the finance committee.

The following were the members of the various sub-committees: Speakers: Henry L. Hall, C. J. Fisk, Alexander Gilbert, William L. Saunders and Samuel Townsend. Entertainment: A. E. Force, Edward C. Hardingham and Ralph L. Morrow. Committee on Arrangements: J. Hervey Doane, F. J. Blatz, Milton Mendel, and Edmund Rushmore. Tickets and printing: E. M. Laing and J. Fred MacDonald. Publicity: A. S. Herr, J. Herbert Case, and Hugh B. Sweeney. Service committee: A. E. Force, Hugh B. Sweeney, Henry L. Hall, E. M. Laing, A. S. Herr, F. J. Blatz, Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield; J. Fred MacDonald, former Mayor W. L. Saunders, Edward Hardingham, J. Herbert Case, Milton Mendel and J. Hervey Doane.

KING'S DAUGHTERS PLAN FOR BLUE STOCKING TEA

The City Union of King's Daughters at a meeting at the Charity Organization Society rooms yesterday afternoon arranged to hold a "Blue Stocking Tea" at the Park Club on Friday afternoon, April 23. The purpose is to raise funds for the union's work. At the meeting yesterday each of the twelve circles was represented by its secretary and on other member and much interest was shown in the undertaking.

Four circles will take charge of the tea tables. They will be Silver Cross, Loyal Daughters, Beecher Band and Cheerful Workers. The Cup Bearers and In His Name will preside at the candy tables. Charity Circle and The Daughters of the Cross will have cake for sale, while Whatsoever, Brightside, Golden Rule and Emmanuel will dispense lemonade.

This affair will be one of the largest planned for the year and each circle will strive to do its utmost to gather in as much money as possible for the general fund.

This is where the "Blue Stocking" part of the enterprise comes in. Each member will be assessed in proportion to the size of stocking she wears. Those who prefer not to reveal such a secret will be given the opportunity of contributing a nominal sum of fifty cents. Dainty little socks attached to a card bearing an appropriate verse will be supplied to hold the contributions.

CLEVELAND'S FARM SOLD TO NEW YORKER.

The farm of the late Grover Cleveland, lying about three miles from Princeton, was sold yesterday to David V. Pickers, a retired merchant of New York city, who will make extensive improvements, and use it as a country seat. The farm was one of the President's favorited spots, and there was considerable woodland, which afforded the finest kind of shooting.

It was there that Richard Cleveland was taught by his father to shoot the cotton-tail as they jumped in front of the ex-President's faithful dog.

READY TO FIGHT DISEASE

Establishment of a Tuberculosis Isolation Camp Here Now a Certainty.

TO BE READY BY SUMMER.

White Plague Society Raising Money for Campaign Which Will Stamp Out Disease In This City.

That Plainfield will join with the other large cities in this State for a determined campaign against tuberculosis this summer is now definitely assured, and there is every reason to believe that a tuberculosis isolation camp will be founded in this city by June first and that a vigorous campaign will be conducted to stamp out every trace of the White Plague here.

Already subscription lists have been put in circulation by members of the executive committee of the local society and it is reported that considerable money has been raised. In order to maintain a camp here, it is estimated that $5,000 will be needed each year to fight the disease. The work of raising the money is in the hands of the finance committee of the society. Dr. B. Van D. Hardie is chairman, and with him as on the committee are Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany, Dr. F. J. Hughes and Augustus V. Heely.

Henry L. Hall is chairman of the camp committee, which is looking around for a site for the proposed camp. Once the scientific fighting of the plague, it is planned to have sparate quarters for the incipient and the advanced stages. The realization that the work of stamping out tuberculosis will become more difficult if further delay, has spured the various committees to the greatest expediency. With Mr. Hall on the camp committe are Miss Margaret C. Holly and Duncan W. Taylor, and, while nothing definite can be learned regarding a site for the camp, it is reported that the committee will have something to report about a location at the next meeting of the society which is to be held within a few days. Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow, in speaking about the establishment of a local camp to a Daily Press reporter today, said that the activity of the various committees of the society would very probably make certain the establishment of a camp, fully equipped and in readiness for the accommodation of patients by midsummer.

The war against tuberculosis has been for some time successfully carried on by the Plainfield Society for culosis, of which Rev. E. Vicars Stevculosis, of which Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, rector of Grace church, is president. Miss Mary L. Leahy has been secured as visting nurse by the society and she has made some work in supervision, reporting and care of tuberculosis cases in this city.

Tuberculosis was the chief cause of death in this city during the year 1908, when forty-two deaths were reported and there were found to be forty-seven cases. The percentage of deaths from tuberculosis per thousand of the city's population was 2.06 last year, and this was 12.73 per cent of the total deaths during the year. Of the 42 cases, 28 are in the advanced stage, 10 are moderately advanced and four are incipient. According to Miss Leahy's report, twenty of the consumptives were married and in nineteen of the cases there had been previous cases in the family. The report further showed that in three cases the conditions were unfavorable for recovery, ten of the persons should have been sent to a sanatarium and twenty cases could better be treated at a sanatarium.

LOCAL DENTISTS HEAR DR. W. H. H. WHEELER

At a meeting of the Plainfield Dental Society at the Park Club, last night, articles of incorporation were presented, the official name being "The Plainfield Dental Society." The objects are social purposes and the advancement of the profession.

In connection with the meeting the society held a banquet, and afterward Dr. W. H. H. Wheeler, of New York, presented a paper on "The Use of the Jackson System in Orthodontia." He also displayed appliances and models to demonstrate the system. This talk will be continued Wednesday night at the office of Dr. Frank T. Clawson on Park avenue.

Those present were Drs. Frank S. Wells, Elmer Giddis, George Moore, Guy Hillman, C. W. and B. F. Leonard, O. B. Whitford, W. E. Stelle, Frank W. French, Charles L. Moore, Raymond S. Stevens, John R. Westervelt, Clive Montfort, all of this city; Dr. C. M. Fagan, of Westfield; Dr. W. H. W. Wheeler and Dr. Starr, of New York.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 21, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—"Pilgrim's Progress" series.—III. The wicket gate.—Matt. 7:13, 14.

This portion of Bunyan's book carries us from the Slough of Despond through the wicket gate to the house of interpreter. After Pliable had returned to his house and Help had lifted Christian from the Slough of Despond and had started him with him somewhat Christian walked solitarily toward the wicket gate.

Straight was the gate and narrow the way to it, and Christian should have followed in the narrow way toward the gate. But instead he was deflected for a time from his course. On his way he soon met Mr. Worldly Wiseman, who dwelt in the town of Carnal Policy, which was near by the City of Destruction. He had heard of Christian, and he recognized him, especially by the burden on his back. They immediately became friends, and Worldly Wiseman tried to persuade him to return to his home and pointed out the dangers on the way to the City of Destruction. He even claimed to know how he might get rid of his burden. Christian confessed to him that it was his great desire to be rid of the burden. Worldly Wiseman then directed him to the village of Morality, where dwelt one named Legality. Christian was loath to leave his pathway, but was finally persuaded to do so by Worldly Wiseman's counsel to it and must needs go over a hill to reach it, and as he approached the hill it seemed so high, its sides to lean over, and its burden grew heavier, so that he was greatly perplexed.

In the journey of the Christian life almost every Christian must meet the types here represented in Mr. Worldly Wiseman of Carnal Policy and Legality of Morality. One urges him to take life easy and to enjoy the world, and "the children of this age are wiser than the children of light," so far as this world is concerned, the argument used is usually a strong one and hard to resist. Worldly Wiseman seems respectable and prosperous, and his voice is very persuasive, and he leads many astray. But we should stand out against him, "for we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen, for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." Mr. Legality of the town of Morality is also a dangerous enemy of the soul. His advice is that through our personal righteousness we may be saved. There are many moralists and legalists. They depend upon their own righteousness for present and eternal life. But this is a false basis for salvation. God tried the law, but man did not and now cannot keep the laws perfectly, and hence cannot thus be saved. "But what the law could not do, in that it was weak, God did through His Son"—that is, provided for salvation and entrance into the City of Zion. The folly of leaving the narrow way through the advice of Worldly Wiseman to visit Mr. Legality was well represented by Christian's and we should profit by his example.

In Christian's perplexity Evangelist appeared again and, hearing his story, warned him of his danger and started him on his way to the wicket gate. Here he was received by Mr. Good Will, who, after hearing of his experiences, started him forward again. The gate is Christ Himself, through whom we enter into the gracious acceptance of God and finally into the kingdom. "I am the door. By Me if any man enter in he shall be saved."

BIBLE READINGS.

Deut. xxx, 15-20; Ps. i, 1-6; xxxvii, 5; Prov. iv, 25-27; xiv, 12; Isa. xxxv, 8-12; Matt. vii, 24-27; Luke xiii, 24; John xiv, 1-7.

"Oh, Taste and See."

Rev. Henry W. Hunter, Christian Endeavor superintendent of Missouri for the Christian church, relates the following pointed anecdote. The boy is Paul Alexander, and he lives in Paris, Mo.

This boy when six years of age had a recitation to give before a teachers' institute, entitled "Grandma's Cooky Jar." In learning the piece he said to his instructor, "I'll say it so they will taste cookies." A gentleman said after the performance, "That boy made me hungry."

"My brother Christian," adds Mr. Hunter, "let us so live Christ that men may want to 'taste' of Him and His goodness. Make the world around us "hungry" for Him. Be a model pattern after His ideals." This is the way we should talk in our Christian Endeavor prayer meetings.

Dallas Wants 1911 Convention.

Dallas, Tex., is going to leave no stone unturned to get the International Christian Endeavor convention of 1911. Eighty-three of the workers met at a banquet lately to discuss plans for this purpose, and similar meetings are to follow. A special train or two will carry Texas workers to the convention at St. Paul, and if hard work and hustling can attract a convention to their state it is likely to "go." At the banquet several fine addresses were given, and an enjoyable evening was spent.

The Extension Campaign.

The Christian Endeavor societies have started on a fivefold campaign to cover Christian Endeavor extension —missionary activities in meetings, study classes and giving; evangelistic endeavor for training personal workers, Christian citizenship and temperance and a publicity campaign to increase the circulation of religious papers and missionary publications.

SOME TOAST IDEAS

VARIOUS APPETIZING WAYS OF PREPARING IT.

Of Course Stale Bread Should Always Be Used—Served with Eggs It is a Change from Usual Buttered Style.

German Toast.—Beat three eggs slightly. Add two tablespoons of milk to each egg, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespoons sugar. Cut stale bread in half-inch thick slices, remove the crust, dip the slices into egg mixture. Cook on a well-greased griddle, using equal parts of lard and butter; brown on one side; then turn and brown on the other side. Serve with maple syrup for breakfast or luncheon, or with apricot sauce for desert. Stale sponge cake may be used in the same manner.

Dry Toast.—Cut stale bread in one-third inch slices. Remove the crust, or not, as you desire. Lay slices on the broiler some distance from the gas flame, and toast the bread, turning often until it is evenly browned. If a toaster is used and a coal fire, the slices may be placed in the toaster, the latter locked, and placed over clear fire to dry, holding it a safe distance from coals. Turn and dry opposite side; then lower the toaster near the coals, and brown the bread a rich color. In the gas stove, one slice on top of the other, toast will soon become moist. Toast may or may not be buttered before sending it to the table.

Moistened Toast.—Add one-half teaspoon salt to one cup boiling water; turn water into a shallow sauce pan, and keep water just below the boiling point. With a fork dip each slice of toast into the water and spread with soft butter. Serve at once on a hot plate.

Milk Toast.—Dilute three tablespoons of bread with cold water to make a thin, smooth paste. Add this slowly to two and one-half cups of scalded milk in double boiler, stirring constantly until thickened. Cover and cook 20 minutes. Season with salt and add two and one-half tablespoons butter. Dip six slices of toast, one at a time, into the sauce. When soft remove to hot platter and strain remaining sauce over all.

Cream Toast.—Make a cream sauce as follows: Melt four tablespoons butter in a sauce pan; add three tablespoons flour; stir to a smooth paste; let cook one minute; then dilute with one cup each of scalded milk and thin cream, or all cream. Season with salt, and dip toast as for milk toast.

Marigold Toast.—Follow recipe for cream toast. Arrange slices and sauce on hot serving platter. Slice the whites of hard cooked eggs in rings and arrange them around the rim of platters. Force the yolks through a sieve. Cook press them over the top of all. Sprinkle with paprika and serve at once.

Brown Bread Toast.—Prepare a cream sauce as in the foregoing, using slices of brown bread in place of white bread. First dry the slices of brown bread in the oven, after which toast it and dip into sauce. Serve as milk toast.

Calf's Foot Jelly.

Take four calf's feet, properly dressed and cleaned, in a gallon of water into a saucepan, add feet, and let them boil very gently but continuously until the liquid is reduced to half. Strain it and let it stand until cold. Then remove from it every bit of fat, pouring a cupful of boiling water over it and placing a piece of blotting paper on the top after you have take it off to insure it being free from grease. Leave the sediment behind when you use stock. Boil the feet six or seven hours.

Farmer's Cake.

Sift together four teacupfuls of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat to a cream one teacupful of butter and a teacupful and half of sugar, add two beaten eggs, one teacupful milk, and mix to a batter with the flour prepared as indicated above. Soak over night, drain, and stew in a cup of molasses two teacupfuls sour apples; mix in the batter with one teaspoonful each of cloves and allspice, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, and half a grated nutmeg. Bake in a moderate oven.

Stuffed Mutton Shoulder.

Get the butcher to remove the bone. Spread the mutton on the table, and season the inside well with salt and pepper. Over it lay a forcemeat composed of a quarter of a pound of chopped suet, bread crumbs with spice, thyme and parsley, or, if thyme is not liked, marjoram. Roll up the meat, tie it tightly round, and roast it for one hour and a quarter, basting it liberally.

Cooled Salad Dressing.

Put in a saucepan a dash of cayenne, a quarter teaspoonful of mustard and three eggs, and beat them for a minute. Mix together one-third of a cupful of sugar and vinegar and water, add to the eggs, and beat until thinned. Drop in two tablespoonfuls of butter and stir over hot water until thick and smooth. Strain and add a pinch of salt. This dressing will keep for some time.

Clam Fritters.

Take two dozen clams, one egg, one cupful of milk, two small cupfuls of flour, or enough to make a thin batter, salt and pepper. Chop clams fine and stir them into batter made of the milk, clam liquor, beaten eggs and flour. Season to taste and fry by the spoonful in very hot lard.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

No Subsidized Press.

Our esteemed morning contemporary ventures the assertion that the Governor of New Jersey, with hundreds upon hundreds of offices at his disposal, he also commands the means to influence public opinion through the subsidization of the press, when he is supported by scores of newspapers whose editors draw a dollar from the State treasury with every flourish of their editorial pen. Our esteemed contemporary declares daily that: "It is the object of a free press to discuss principles and to state facts." To be consistent, our Democratic friend should name the "scores of newspapers whose editors draw a dollar from the State treasury with every flourish of the editorial pen." We are of the opinion that he would have a high old time finding a single score of editors of newspapers in this State who hold public office and who in view of their services. We are of the opinion also that he would have an elevated and ancient time proving that there is a single editor in the State who draws a dollar from the State treasury with every flourish of the editorial pen. If this were true, there would be a whole lot of wealthy editors in New Jersey. So far as we know, there is not a single wealthy editor in the State. Truth is a good thing to stick to. Facts are profitable things for a newspaper editor to stick to. And the safe and sane editor will live up to his pretentions. So far as a subsidized press is concerned, it doesn't exist in New Jersey, and it is an insult to the editors of New Jersey newspapers to say that they have been bought by appointment to public office to forward the interests of any man who has the appointing power. We know of no editor in the public service today whose purposes are not honest, who hasn't the courage to approve what he believes is right and to condemn what he believes is wrong, and whose citizenship isn't equal in quality to that of any other man in the State, whether he be a new comer of an old settler. It is the happy and holy prerogative of a newspaper editor to have faith and confidence in a certain political organization and to approve the actions of men who are faithful to these principles and policies of their political party, even though they are occasionally criticised by the enemy. A little more indulgence in the discussion of principles would enable our esteemed contemporary to come to a keener realization of the value of facts than it appears to have at this time.—Trenton State Gazette.

BLANKETS AND WHAT YOU MAY DO WITH THEM.

Necessity is the mother of invention truly, and the woman in the home is constantly inventing small devices to lighten her task. Now about blankets. It has become a very general custom to divide and rebind the large double blanket, making two single ones; but much newer is the idea of a thrifty housewife, who was maid as well as mistress. She divided, once, more, the single blanket, carefully binding each section, and then felled these bound edges together again.

This was done that she might dissect the parts for laundering purposes. It may seem something of a sacrifice of good material, but her whole excuse—and is it not worth while considering—was her strength for she had found it inadvisable to handle the half-sized or single blanket when wet and heavy.

And, while blankets are under consideration, there is another suggestion—the piecing of those of ordinary length with a width of white outing flannel to make the lower edge so as to secure a tuck-in portion. No blanket will give the requisite warmth for a cold night, though it covers the bed, if it pulls out below. Even one blanket so lengthened will give the desired tuck-in material.

THE ADJUTANT GENERAL.

The story that Governor Fort contemplates appointing Wilbur F. Sadler, of Trenton to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of R. Heber Breintnall as adjutant general is a pretty fair sample of the tactics being pursued by Fort's political enemies. In the first place Mr. Sadler has been a member of the State militia for less than a year, having been taken from civil life and commissioned a major on July 9, 1908. At that time he had never had one bit of military experience. It is true that the Trenton man is close to the Governor personally and is most ambitious in certain directions. That is all well enough, but when it comes to raising him many numbers over the heads of men who have served the State long and loyally as officers of the National Guard, that's a different subject.

That such honors should be bestowed upon a man in no sense entitled to them and should be denied to those to whom of right they belong, no one having the best of the militia at heart would dare advocate. It would not only be a dangerous precedent to set, but it would have a most demoralising effect at once upon the whole National Guard for it would demonstrate that general efficiency or length of service cuts no figure when it comes to a matter of promotion. Certainly it is unjust to accuse the Governor of using his office for such a purpose.

Y.W.C.A.'S QUARTERS WILL BE ENLARGED

Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, of West Seventh street, has purchased the property on East Front street, adjoining that of the Y. W. C. A., from Henry Leifke, Eugene M. Laing and B. Frank Coriell, joint owners, and the Y. W. C. A., in which she is greatly interested, will have the use of it to meet the demands for enlarged quarters in early spring.

The property consists of a large two-apartment house, which was remodelled during the past year and equipped in modern fashion, and owing to its close proximity to the association property is especially desirable to officers and members of the association were in absolute ignorance of the deal until yesterday when a meeting was held at the rooms on East Front street.

The transaction was made through a third party and the owners did not know for real purpose until the deed was passed. It was then learned that Mrs. Eleanor Cochran-Stewart was the purchaser, the deed being transferred to her. The association is much pleased over the arrangement, especially as it means protection to its present home and will prevent the occupancy of the newly-acquired property by undesirable parties.

MRS. SUSAN B. STRONG SUCCUMBS AT FANWOOD

Mrs. Susan B. Strong, wife of Albert H. Strong, aged 64 years, died Monday afternoon at the home of her sister, Mrs. F. W. Westcott, in Fanwood. Mrs. Strong and her husband lived with her sister during the past two years and had been in poor health for three years. Mrs. Strong was born at Monroe, Orange county, New York, and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Heaton, of that place. She was a life-long member of the Methodist church, although her parents were Friends.

Mrs. Strong was a resident of Newton Highlands, Mass., for eight years, and her husband still resides there. Besides a husband she leaves a mother, who is eighty-four years old; a son, W. C. Strong, a sister, Mrs. F. W. Westcott, and one brother, Stephen B. Strong, of Monroe, N. Y.

Old G. O. P. Ticket.

Mrs. George W. P. Randolph, of West Front street, while searching through some old papers a few days ago, came across a copy of the Republican ticket nominated in Plainfield in 1872, when the city had but two districts. Among the names appearing thereon are those familiar to the older residents. In that year Mrs. Randolph's husband was elected a freeholder. Among those who were on the ticket and are now living are Samuel T. Varian, Nelson Runyon, Alexander Gilbert, J. D. Spicer, John H. Stewart, now a Bishop in the Methodist church; J. A. Hubbard. The ticket is in excellent state of preservation.

Class Oracle Staff.

Editors for the P. H. S. Oracle have been chosen for the year, beginning in April. They are: Miss Margaret Leggett, Miss Meta Pennick, Russel Miller and Louise Bird.

AMUSEMENTS

Blanche Bates will soon reach the 200 mark at the Belasco theatre where the Belasco star and her vivid play, "The Fighting Hope," are proving magnets to draw appreciative capacity audiences.

Frances Starr's truthful portrayal of the weak, and vascillating Laura Murdock of Eugene Walter's play, "The Easiest Way," has placed this Belasco star in an enviable position on the American stage. After witnessing Miss Starr's enactment of the role at the Belasco Stuyvesant one cannot imagine another actress successfully playing the part, which is a true tribute to this young artist's genius and to David Belasco's judgment in selecting Miss Starr to portray the difficult character.

After it was informally arranged between Charles Frohman and William Collier some five or six years ago, that Mr. Collier should come under Mr. Frohman's management, the comedian was invited to the manager's office in the Empire theatre for a little chat. The manager's office is on the third floor of The Empire theatre building, and is approached by the lobby of the Empire theatre itself, past walls that are lined with the golden framed portraits of the various Frohman stars. As soon as a new name is added to the list of "what Mr. Frohman is fond of calling his children," a new face is added to the walls of the lobby of the theatre itself. They are rather elaborate frames, especially designed by Thomas Hastings, the architect, who erected the theatre itself.

The engagement of that distinguished Shakespearean player, Robert Mantell, at the New Amsterdam theatre is of more than ordinary moment to lovers of the classic and the serious drama. The leading tragedian of his time and with a repertoire of unusual variety, he has chosen Shakespeare's historical drama, "King John," for his season. No incident of the present theatrical year exceeds this revival in literary importance and interest. The rarity of its presentation has precluded the presentation from an acquaintance with this tragedy. Garrick undertook the role with success in the Victorian era, and MacCready produced the play at the Theatre Royal, Druary Lane, London, in a style of unusual magnificence. Later, Charles Kean introduced it to the American public at the old Park theatre. Edwin Booth also included "King John" in his repertoire. It is pertinent to add that unusual significance attaches to this present revival, which will be made in most elaborate fashion.

CLERGYMAN TO SPEAK ON "THE BOY PROBLEM"

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church, will deliver an address on "The Boy Problem" at the first meeting of the Plainfield Sunday School Institute, which will be held at Grace church parish house Saturday afternoon, March 27. The institute, which has been but recently formed, will hold this as the first of a series of meetings, designed to be of value to Sunday-school officers and teachers. All rectors, superintendents, teachers, officers and the older pupils of various schools of this section of the diocese are invited. Rev. Arthur S. Phelps, of Bound Brook, is secretary of the organization.

"Teachers Training" will be the subject of an address to be made at this meeting by Rev. Henry H. Sleeper, Ph. D., rector of Grace church, Elizabeth, and Rev. E. Morris Ferguson, general secretary of the New Jersey State Sunday School Association, will speak on "Methods of the Modern Sunday School."

NOTICE TO PARENTS TO VACCINATE CHILDREN.

Borough parents are warned to have their children vaccinated. A notice is being sent out from the high school by Superintendent H. C. Kreps. It reads:

The Board of Health of the Borough of North Plainfield wishes me to suggest to parents the desirability of having their children vaccinated if they have not been successfully vaccinated within the past five years. This is a law of New Jersey authorizing the Board of Education to exclude from school any unvaccinated child. Should there be any considerable number of cases of smallpox in this vicinity, this measure would doubtless be enforced. To avoid the loss of time in school that this may necessarily mean to the pupils, vaccination at this time is suggested.

Funeral of Mrs. J. B. Morrison.

The funeral services of Mrs. Joseph B. Morrison were held at the late home on Watchung avenue, Saturday afternoon, Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, officiating. There was a large gathering of relatives and freinds, and there were also many beautiful floral tributes from those who loved and esteemed Mrs. Morrison, for her Christian qualities. The interment was in Hillside cemetery and the bearers were Arthur Stryker, Samuel Larson, Burt Pluck, Arthur Robinson, Alfred Osborn and James Morrison.

OUTSIDERS MAY WORK FOR JERSEY

Should the amendment to the civil service law, as proposed by Senator Ackerman, pass the Legislature and get Governor Fort's signature, it is alleged, every Pennsylvanian could come to Jersey and take the examinations for entering the public service. He need not be a Jerseyman, it is said, either before the examination or afterward, to hold positions here.

There is much criticism of this proposed law springing up. Those behind it say that the state cannot get the hospital attendants wanted, and therefore there is nothing to do but take down the bars and let persons from every State compete for the public service. It is impossible to confine the examination of non-residents to this one branch of the service, and therefore comes the opposition.

Physicians say that under this amendment doctors from Pennsylvania and New York could take the civil service examination for posts in hospitals, and, passing such examination, could practice in the hospitals there, despite the fact that the State law makes them pass an examination before the State Medical Board before being eligible to practice in this State.

PATERSON BOY LED ASTRAY BY READING DIME NOVELS.

Sensational dime novels and "blood and thunder" shows had a bad moral effect upon 15-year-old Peter Dekker, son of Frederick G. Dekker, pastor of the First Holland church of Paterson, who ran away from home last Thursday to see the world, only to be returned Sunday after reaching Providence R. I. When Peter started from Paterson he had $5. At Boston this sum had dwindled down to a single dollar, and arriving in Providence a further inventory of cash on hand showed but 7 cents.

The would-be globe trotter then appealed to the police and the first thing he asked for was a big dinner. He was turned over to Probation Officer Wallace, from whom he was identified and the start for home was made. Wallace and his charge reached Paterson early last night. The young wanderer was welcomed by his father, who, instead of administering the parental slipper, delivered a philippic against juvenile literature, motion pictures and other classes of amusement.

"I intend," said Dr. Dekker, "to bring this matter to the attention of the police authorities and the show censors. I believe that a censor should be appointed to look after and inquire into the books that children read after school hours. The harm that this class of literature does cannot be overestimated. My boy attends high school. He is not incorrigible and heretofore never gave us trouble, but I know any number of other boys he contracted the habit of reading this low literature and has what is called 'Wanderlust.'"

COMPLICATIONS DUE TO THE FEE BEING DELAYED.

The Supreme Court, in a memorandum filed by Justice Reed at Trenton on Saturday, refused an application of Sanford M. Lafray for a mandamus to compel the secretary of State to file a certificate of payment of capital stock of the United Syndicate Buyers' Company as of May 29, 1908, instead of May 29.

The certificate in question was received from Robert J. McDermott, of Paterson, on May 25, accompanied by a letter, requesting that it be filed and a bill sent for the fees. In accordance with the usual custom, the office notified Mr. McDermott that the certificate would be filed upon receipt of the fee of $5.

This was received on May 29, when the certificate was filed. In the mean time a thirty-day notice to the officers of the company to file certificates had expired.

Under the corporation act failure to file the certificate within the prescribed time makes the officers of the company liable for all debts contracted prior to the filing of the certificate.

Under this section proceedings were instituted against the officers of the United Syndicate Buyers' Company, to offset which the mandamus proceedings were instituted.

METROPOLITAN CONSTRUCTION COMPANY IS ORGANIZED.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the Secretary of State for the Metropolitan Construction Company with principal offices at 136 Park avenue. The incorporators are William Jeffery, Annie Jeffery, William Berrdell and Henry Rogers. The capital is $50,000.

William Jeffery will control the company, so that the success of the concern's operations will be assured.

Mr. Jeffery is the president of the Berkeley Realty Co., secretary of the Berkeley Heights Association and was the organizer of the Investors' Realty Co., of this city, which was so successful. He is vice-president of the N. J. & N. Y. Real Estate Exchange, stands high in the real estate world, and is chairman of several important committees and has made good.

J. A. Staats, of Mountain avenue, and Dr. F. C. Ard, of Park avenue, have received Cadillac runabouts, purchased through the F. L. C. Martin Auto Company.

ANOTHER SEWAGE CONFAB

Township Committee Attends Conference at Borough Mayor's Office.

TO ASCERTAIN SENTIMENT.

Mrs. Brown, Whose Estate Adjoins Kraemer Farm, Engages Counsel as Does "Bob" Fitzsimmons.

The proposition being considered by the city and borough with Dunellen for a joint sewer was discussed at a meeting in Mayor Samuel Townsend's office in the borough Saturday afternoon, when the North Plainfield Township Committee appeared in opposition to the proposition of the Kraemer farm as a site for a disposal plant. Both Mayor Townsend representing the borough and Councilman F. E. Mygatt, chairman of the trunk line sewage commission, representing the city, favored the idea. No conclusions were reached and no definte action was taken, but it was agreed to study the matter carefully and hold another meeting in the near future.

The township committee is composed of Albert Brokaw, J. M. Lewis and Mr. Archibald. These members expressed themselves as antagonistic to any proposition from the borough and city to enter the township with sewer mains connecting with sewage beds in their midst, yet they desire to learn the views of the voters in the matter. They will note with interest what action is taken by the North Plainfield Council tomorrow night, when the engineer submits a report of his investigations.

Mayor Townsend is working assiduously in favor of the plan since the estimated cost of the trunk sewer proposition has made that scheme prohibitive.

Mrs. Helen Brown, whose handsome place adjoins the Kraemer farm, has engaged Jersey City counsel and will put up a bitter fight against locating the proposed filtration beds in that vicinity. Her estate is worth $75,000, and it is said that its value would be greatly depreciated were the Kraemer farm used for such purposes.

As counsel for "Bob" Fitzsimmons, the rear of whose farm adjoins the Kraemer farm, City Judge W. N. Runyon has communicated with his client who is now starring in vaudeville in Boston, and will join with the protesting property-owners against the scheme.

NO HELL HEREAFTER.

Pastor Russell Says When a Man's Dead He's Dead and Prayers Won't Affect Him.

Pastor Russell—he does not believe in "reverend" or "doctor" talked to the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, Sunday afternoon, on "Where Are the Dead?" This appears to be his pet sermon, for he has given it in Brooklyn before, and thousands have heard it in other cities. There was a large audience, filling every part of the large auditorium, and hundreds were turned away. Pastor Russell has attached two historical names to his regular preaching place, Plymouth Bethel and Brooklyn Tabernacle.

The speaker took up the heathen beliefs, dissected the Catholic faith, spoke of purgatory, and then said:

"I don't know but I'd soqn take the heathen view and be a mouse or an elephant and take my chances dodging around. I believe I'd rather take the agnostics' view and believe in dead ends all time when I die as to be troubled about purgatory. I am ashamed to say that you and I as Protestants have the most absurd theory about where are the dead. When those who founded the Protestant religion were at work on the any purgatory. They threw it away bodily because they could not tell where it was, and their Catholic friends could not tell either.

"The reason persons do not know more about what takes place after death is because they devote too much attention to money, real estate and politics. The theory that 'when a man dies he becomes more alive than before he died' is absurd, and the Bible teaches the reverse. The first sin and death came first from the serpent in the Garden of Eden, who told Eve if she ate of the forbidden fruit she should not surely die. The lie was passed to Plato and by him on to Christendom.

"When a man's dead he's dead, and all the controversies on earth won't affect him," declared the clergyman. "It is ridiculous, however, that millions of His people who never heard of Him will be sent to Hell, by Him. There is not one word in the Bible about Hell. The words translated 'Hell,' 'Sheol' and 'Hades,' mean the grave, as every well educated clergyman knows. The Apostle Paul never mentioned Hell or Purgatory. He says the incorrigible one shall be punished with everlasting destruction. Death entered the world through one man, Adam. Death is enough punishment for you and your friends, but not for your enemies."

PLAINFIELD WINS A MEET

State Y. M. C. A. Athletic Championship Captured by Local Team.

LAWRENCE'S WORLD MARK.

Twelve Pound Shot Put Record Is Again Broken by Local Boy in Contests at Paterson.

Plainfield Y. M. C. A. won first place in the State Y. M. C. A. Athletic meet held at Paterson Saturday night, and one of its members, Russel J. Lawrence, established a new world's record for putting the 12-pound shot, hurling it 54 feet, 4 inches. The old association mark, which he made also, was 49 feet, 6 inches. At the interscholastic meet in Brooklyn a few weeks ago he threw the shot 54 feet 1½ inches, and the performance was considered wonderful at the time.

The eleven teams participating Saturday night finished in this order: Plainfield, 12 points; Paterson, 11; Trenton, 8; Orange, 6; Newark, 5; Madison, 3; Montclair, 0; Elizabeth, 0; Passaic, 0; Hudson City, 0; Ridgewood, 0.

There were 100 entries for the events, and of these twenty-five were Paterson contestants. The team from this city comprised seven men. Russel J. Lawrence, captain, competed in the shot put, standing high jump and 15 yard dash; Carl Steiner in the potato race and running high jump; Harry Rothberg and Stryker Hoagland in the potato race; John Payne, shot put; Luther M. Shepherd, potato race and 15 yard dash; and Chauncey Murphy, the 15 yard dash. George L. Listman, physical director of the local association, accompanied the team.

These are the results:

Fifteen yard dash—1, Kuhn, Trenton; 2, B. Tum, Madison; 3, Seifert, Paterson.

Running high jump—1, Curtis, Newark, 5; 8¾; 2, Wildnauer, Orange, 5; 6¾; 3, Steiner, Plainfield, 5; 3½.

Potato race, 440 yards—1, Critchley, Paterson, 1:41; 2, McLaughlin, Paterson, 1:41 1-5; 3, Seifert, Paterson, 1:41 2-5.

Standing high jump—1, Lawrence, Plainfield, 4; 8¾; 2, Kuhn, Trenton, 4; 7¾; 3, Nuemnthaler, Paterson, 4; 6¾.

12-pound shot put—1, Lawrence, Plainfield, 54:4; 2, Creed, Orange, 45:7; 3, Payne, Plainfield, 37:5.

PLAINFIELD BOWLERS DEFEAT ELIZABETHANS

The Plainfield bowling team took two games from Elizabeth in the match rolled on Johnny Campbell's alleys Saturday night, the first by a score of 897 to 886, and the third by a score of 965 to 923, losing the second game by a score of 899 to 883. Campbell was high man, putting up scores of 216 and 234. Britton also did good work by rolling a 207 in the third game, while Connoly chalked up a 199 in the first game. The young seat boys were fast, but not enough so to take away the honors. The scores:

Call Rev. W. H. Boocock.

Rev. William H. Boocock, pastor of the First Reformed church, Bayonne, and son-in-law of Rev. Dr. Cornelius Breit, has received a call to the First Presbyterian church, Buffalo, of which Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, formerly of this city, is pastor. Mr. Boocock has been asked to take charge of the moral and religious education department of the church work. It is believed he will accept. He is a graduate of Rutgers College and the Theological Seminary.

Was Jolted from Wagon.

Lewis Garthwait, of Oak Tree, who fell off a load of wood last Thursday, breaking his right arm above the elbow, is showing improvement, according to a report from the hospital, where he was taken immediately after the accident. Mr. Garthwait, who is fifty-eight years old, was jolted from his seat while passing over a stretch of rough road with the horses on a trot.

James N. Stewart.

James N. Stewart, formerly of the well-known Newark hatter, being a member of the firm of Cory & Stewart, and for several years a U. S. Marshal, died at his home in Newark, Thursday. He was born in this city and spent many years here.

McAULEY'S JAIL RECORD IS FORTY DAYS LONGER

James McAuley, "no home," left today to spend forty days as Elizabeth as the guest of the county police authorities. He will occupy a barred chamber in the county jail, and made the trip at the suggestion of City Judge Runyon, who so ordered him about the noon hour at the session of the city court Monday.

For Jim was drunk again Sunday, and Officer Charles Flynn arrested him on Somerset street at about 10:30 in the morning. A heavy night of it over the bottles made it hard for the man to navigate and he refused to keep off the streets.

It is about a month since McAuley faced the city judge, for his last drinking bout landed him in a cell the night of Lincoln's birthday. That was the first time his name had been entered on his card at police headquarters this year, so the Judge suspended sentence. That Jim likes to live at the county jail is shown by the fact that during 1908 he was in jail for 150 days for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, and would have made more time at Elizabeth, except for the fact that Judge Runyon banished him from this city for six months after one arrest during the year.

The man had been giving the borough police trouble earlier in the week, and it is said would have remarked that he stood a better chance for leniency from Judge Runyon than from Recorder Dollivet, so crossed the county line and was arrested on this side.

TO OPEN ELIZABETH'S GREAT WHITE WAY MONDAY

First street, the main business thoroughfare down-town, in Elizabeth, will be opened as a great White Way next Monday. The event will be marked by a big celebration which is now being arranged by the First Street association, through whose efforts the street is being transformed into a modern business section similar to the Great White Way in Newark.

There will be speakers from New York, Newark and other nearby cities and addresses by the officers of the association, as well as instrumental and vocal music. Bands of music will also play. The street will be ablaze with colors. All the buildings in the immediate vicinity will be elaborately decorated, and the street will be brilliantly lighted. The celebration will last the day and the evening.

According to the plans of the association the street will be brilliantly illuminated at night. There will be an arch over every corner, and several gooseneck lights on every block which will hang in a diagonal position so that the show windows of all the stores along the street will be plainly seen.

The First Street association is also urging that the thoroughfare be kept clean and in good condition. It also favors the extension of the present trolley system, and has for its main object the promotion of good fellowship among the members and their mutual protection.

The match was closely contested from start to finish. Several high scores were rolled, including Wilson's 198 and a 199 by Rogers, while Milne put up a 201 and Long a 199. The scores:

Taylor-Scudder Engagement.

The engagement of Miss Mary Louise Scudder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry D'Arcy Scudder, formerly of Trenton, to David Taylor, third, of New York, has been announced. Miss Scudder is a granddaughter of former Supreme Court Justice Edward Wallace Scudder and great-granddaughter of George King Drake of Morristown. The father of David Taylor, third, was William Francis Taylor, of Jersey City, who was a colonel in the Seventh Regiment, New York, and who served on Governor Abbett's staff.

TO ERECT APARTMENTS

OF THE PHILADELPHIA TYPE.

Need of Restricted, Low Renting Apartments Has Made Such Building Necessary—Wetzel's Plans.

Plans are shortly to be drawn for six up-to-date two-story apartment houses, to be erected at East Front and Church streets and their completion in the near future will fill a long-felt need for restricted apartment houses here at a low rent. The property, which was recently purchased by Floyd T. Woodhull and E. C. Martin, was prominently mentioned as a probable site for the proposed Federal building, but is now no longer available for the new postoffice.

The owners of the property have been making a careful study of the local needs and of modern apartment house construction, and have practically decided to have the buildings on their property of the type of Philadelphia apartment houses of the latest style and equipment. The plan of having a half dozen of the houses, each for the accommodation of two families, probably, will best meet the needs of the local real estate market.

The brokers say that it is impossible to meet the wants of the people who come here seeking homes. In many cases, strangers to this city do not care to immediately purchase property and build a home, seeking rather to "see how they like the place." The New York apartment dweller, who comes here to live, requests apartments at a moderate rent—from $25 to $35 a month—and in many cases after a "try-out" of the town, get the "suburban habit" and become homeowning commuters.

Plans for the new apartments are not definitely decided upon as yet, for the owners have been making a series of visits to other cities in an effort to determine just which style of apartment will best meet the local needs. It is believed, however, that the new buildings will be strictly up-to-date in every particular, and that as soon as they reach an ultimate decision about the plans, the contracts will be let and work of construction will be pushed forward rapidly.

It has become known that Charles H. Wetzel, who has recently purchased the property adjoining the Embury place on the east, is also planning to erect apartments there. He is considering plans and the character of the buildings to be erected by Messrs. Woodhull and Martin will probably have some bearing on the improvements to be made on his property.

PLAINFIELDERS ATTEND A STAG AT HACKENSACK.

One of the largest stags ever pulled off in Hackensack was that given by the K. O. T. M., Tent No. 12, last Saturday night. The affair was one gotten up in the pure German style, and everything from the Fatherland was in evidence. The evening was spent in a manner that no one had a chance to get weary for the lack of amusement.

Some features were the fencing exhibition given by three members of the Plainfield Fencers' club. Those taking part from this city were L. A. Clement, A. J. B. Clement and J. W. Lyman, who gave three three round contests with the foil. Harry A. Weber, of this city, also entertained the members and their friends with comic songs and monologues. There were also songs, and speeches that were well received. The stag was finished by a three round exhibition bout by two clever boys from the United States regulars at Governor's Island.

Those who went from Plainfield claim that never had a better time and felt more at home.

FICTION NEWS.

Courier-News Reporter Has Great Imagination.

Another fairy tale appeared in the Courier-News on Saturday, when with scare headlines that paper described the narrow escape of Mrs. George Mehl, of Madison avenue, from being fatally burned. The true facts of the story are that Mrs. Mehl had removed a pan of grease from the oven in her kitchen range and placed it upon the porch. The high wind fanned it into a blaze.

Just as Mrs. Mehl appeared on the porch to take care of the pan of grease, James J. Marsh, of the telephone company, came along and offered to extinguish the blaze. She thanked him for assistance, but with her own efforts put out the fire. Her dress did not catch fire, neither was she in danger of being burned nor did she run from the house screaming.

IN ST. PATRICK'S HONOR

Father Bogan Pays Eloquent Tribute to Ireland's Faith and Patriotism.

UNION CO. A. O. H. PRESENT.

Divisions from Elizabeth, Westfield, Cranford, Rahway and Elsewhere Attend Solmen Vespers.

At the solemn vesper service at St. [illegible]'s church Sunday night nearly a thousand persons gathered to participate in religious exercises in honor of St. Patrick, the occasion being the annual gathering of the various divisions of the Western D. M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's. Rev. Daniel Hogan acted as deacon, and Rev. Vincent Sciolla, as sub-deacon. The augmented church choir and chancel choir rendered the responses. The hymn to "St. Patrick" was sung by the members of the organization and the congregation.

During the service Rev. Father Bogan delivered the following scholarly address in his usual eloquent manner:

"It would be an interesting procedure, did the occasion permit, to demonstrate that throughout the world's history patriotism has been pure, enlightened and effective just in proportion as religious feeling has been genuine and intense; that, in every age they best served their country who were most devout to their gods, or to God. Of the intimate union between the Catholic religion in particular, and the most enthusiastic patriotism, there is one classic instance which the mere mention of Faith and Nationality irresistibly suggests to the student of history, and reference to which is not irrevelant in any such address as this to the American Catholics. For fifteen centuries the Irish race has stood pre-eminent among all peoples for both the fervor of their religious feelings and the ardor of their patriotic sentiment. The world has long since learned that when, in 432, St. Patrick on the Hill of Tarra wedded the cross of Christ to the flag of Erin, He, in the name of God, joined together what man, from that day to this has never been able to put asunder.

We are rather proud of Ireland's record; proud of the ancient civilization that adorned Hibernia when more that half the nations of modern Europe were but roving tribes and barbarous hordes; proud of the unrivalled splendor of her golden age, when sanctity and scholarship found in Erin a refuge elsewhere sought in vain; proud of the marshal glory of the years that followed when the invincible North men recoiled before her impetuous defenders and were swept from the sea-girdled stream-silvered Isle forever; proud of the dauntless valor that for centuries kept at bay the Norman invader and dyed a thousand battle-fields with Foeman's blood, "Ere the Emerald gem of the Western world was set in the crown of a stranger." Aye, and proud, too, of the constancy, the fortitude, the unswerving fidelity to principle that gleamed like myriad stars through the murky canopy of her penal night. True, Tom Moore, singing of that saddest era, tells us that

"While History's Muse the memorial was keeping
Of all that the dark hand of Destiny wove,
Beside her the Genius of Erin stood weeping
For hers was the story that blotted the leaves."

We, too, those of us who claim the high honor of having Irish blood in our veins, may weep at the recital of that sad story; but our tears are no bitter streams evoked by dishonor or enforced by shame. They are chrystal drops that we joy to shed o'er the countless grave of our martyred dead, as a priest of Ireland's religion and a son of Irish parents, I, for one, glory in those "blotted leaves," for that muse of history never dipped her pen in fame's golden sunshine to emblazon on the tablets of the world's heroism a grander or truer record than the victory of Irish nationality and faith which those "blotted leaves" record.

Oh, faithful Ireland, thou hast followed but too faithfully in the footsteps of the Man of Sorrows not to have shared in the glory of His agony. They shall put you out of the synagogues, yea, the hour cometh that whosoever killeth you will think that he doth a service to God."

Thus we have from His own sacred lips the prophetic declaration that those who followed Him most faithfully, will have as their peculiar mark, their special crown, the hatred of the world. Ah, surely my brethren, there must be something higher, something nobler, something that appeals more strongly even to weak human nature than any prize the world can offer. Yes, there is something, and it is the Peace of God, the Friendship of Jesus Christ.

But seeing that our Lord has uttered this prophecy is it any wonder that the Church of God should be persecuted, since persecution crown? Need I scandalize any of that scenes should be permitted as even now are saddening the heart that loved the Church, and long for the justice of God? If men, everywhere through lands that owe their civilization to the church; that in olden days sat at her feet, as at the feet of a mother, and learned there the lessons that made them great, and their history glorious; if men, with such a past behind them, have banded together to strike at the very heart of their mother, if they have lifted their impious hands against the representative of Christ among them, if they have sought to de-christianize the people around them is there in all this, I ask, any reason why we Catholics should hang our heads in shame or in dismay, when long long ago our Lord Himself prophetically told us that such things should be? Never is the church more surely the church of Christ than when she is sorely stricken, even as He Himself was stricken once; and never is Christ's Vicar more easily recognized as the representative of Him, than when He comes to the world crowned with a crown of thorns, like that which Christ, his Master, bore upon His bleeding brow. Nor do I think that there is any country under Heaven, to the heart of which this passage of the gospel will strike deeper home than that of our forefathers, that can kneel at the feet of God, and offer to Him the Chalice of a persecution more intense and more protracted than has ever yet been suffered by a Christian land. Do you want to know the history of Ireland? Well, Jesus Christ Himself has prophetically told it in this passage of the Gospel: "They will put you out of their synagogues; yea, the hour cometh that whosoever killeth you will think that he doth a service to God"—there is Ireland's history.

Go into other lands which the world deems unfavored; you will hear, the ring of a thousand hammers, you will see the smoke of a thousand factories, and you will witness on every side tokens of unbounded and ever increasing wealth, you will see a free people using their freedom in the service of the world, aye, and of the flesh and the devil. Go into Ireland; there you will find the people who have but just awakened from a sleep of slavery like the sleep of death. Their hands have felt the chains so long that its very impression is on them still. You will find the land whose glory is in the graves of those who died for the faith they handed down to us. You will come across ruins rich with memories of a race that knew how to do their work in the gun, and the sight of the dog's dead body lonely mountain passes and hidden glens, of which tradition tells that there a persecuted people fled with their priests, and left their houses to burn, and their land to pass to alien hands, and carried into the wilderness their holy faith and the altar of their God. Yes; the time came, as Jesus said it would, when the men who slew them deemed that they did a service to God. Yes; that, too, has Ireland seen; that, too, has she suffered. Her history there was a chapter of death, and to that was added a chapter of exile.

The Irish emmigrant turned with tear-dimmed eye and aching heart from the home of his father; and then God gave to these poor-outcast Irish exiles, whom tyranny first smote and then despised, and a mission like the mission of the Apostles of Christ, the land which covered their backs forever to the land that held their fathers' graves; they sailed towards the sunset, away from the grasp of tyranny and the insolence of oppression, but they bore with them the Cross of Christ, and, spreading in their thousands, to the solitudes of an unpeople land they built in this another hemisphere the altar of their God. And today his risen in a new land on a free soil a new Free Ireland. And it has been given to these Irish exiles to bear in their generous hands, and in their faithful hearts the destiny of the American church. What has persecution done at home? Just this. It has graven deeper on the nation's heart the lessons of the Gospel of Christ. It has done just this. As it sent another Ireland beyond the western wave to raise the banner of the Cross, as it has sent an Irish race to write upon the virgin soil of a new world a more glorious chapter in the long history of the church of God, so it has done more than this—it has peopled Heaven with Irish martyrs and with Irish saints. It has sent an Irish race beyond the world, beyond the stars, to sit about the throne of God, and look down lovingly upon the land where they bore the Cross and won the crown, and to put forth their prayers that God may keep the Holy Catholic faith fast rooted in the Irish heart. And, than God, their prayers have been heard. Ireland may have had to stand aside and let the prizes of the world go by, but Ireland has still one jewel shining in her crown, that makes it, crown of thorns though it be, the noblest crown of all. That jewel is the love of the world. Ah, surely my brethren, there must be something higher, something nobler, something that appeals more strongly even to weak human nature than any prize the world can offer. Yes, there is something, and it is the Peace of God, the Friendship of Jesus Christ.

Ah, poor Ireland! Man has dealt hardly with you; history has examined you, and found little to record but tears and blood; but God has dealt with you well—Angels have garnered your blood and your tears, and have offered them to Heaven; your history has been written in the Book of God. Him

CAPTOR SAN MESSINA, RETURNS FROM CRUISE

William Ross, of South Second street, a gun-sighter on the U. S. S. Connecticut on the cruise around the world, arrived home Sunday morning for a short furlough. His ship is at the Brooklyn navy yard, and the sailors are seeing "Yankee Land" for the first since they started with the Connecticut on the now world-famous cruise. The Connecticut was the flag ship of Admiral "Fighting Bob" Evans and Rear Admiral Sperry.

Ross was one of the United States sailors who was delegated to temporary land service at Messina, where *his ship touched shortly after the re*cent earthquake. Several of his friends took occasion to call on him yesterday to give him a "welcome home," and got him to spin the yarns of his experiences in the various countries of the East and his impressions of the disastrous earthquake.

BOW-WOW SLAUGHTERS SOME FIFTY CHICKENS

A scrubby mongrel dog, said to belong to Charles Debele, of North Plainfield, started on a murderous chicken-killing expedition all by himself in the early morning hours Sunday and spilled pullet blood in three chicken coops in the West End. William Kitchen, who lives on Everett place, heard a Gallinacean disturbance in his chicken coop at about 7:30 yesterday morning and securing his shot-gun, marched out and slew the ravaging dog, which had gained entrance to the coop and fatally niped the necks of fourteen fowls.

The total list of chicken-house fatalities reached fifty. Of these, twenty-four fowls belonged to Mrs. Lewis, of 320 Evona avenue, were found dead, and across the street, at Charles Sandburg's chicken coop, there were an even dozen dead hens. The dog evidently did the killing in a spirit of "pure divitry," for none of the fowls were eaten, and the animal worked very rapidly. Mr. Kitchen is hailed by his neighbors as a public benefactor for his quick and effective work with the gun, and the sight of the dog's dead body proved a real balm to the bereaved chicken raisers, for cackling is scarce in that section of the West End today.

CHURCH ABETS HABITS THAT LEADS TO CRIME

The Rev. William P. Squires, of the First Church of Christ, in his sermon Sunday, criticised the attitude of many of the present day churches toward dancing, card playing and drinking. He declared that he was opposed to the custom of instructing the police to arrest gamblers and drunkards, so long as the church continued to teach and encourage the forming of those habits.

He bemoaned the fact that some churches have dance halls in connection, and that women of respectable families gamble at bridge whist, often neglecting their children to the care of nurses. "Bor cards and cards gambling now drink and dancing and reap crime," he declared.

New Soprano Soloist.

Miss Jeannette Grant, of Springfield, Kansas, has been engaged as soprano soloist at the First Presbyterian church, to succeed Miss Anna Lucretia Case, and will begin her duties on May 1. Miss Grant is now living at Roselle, while pursuing a musical education in New York, being a pupil of Edward Johnson. She has a sweet voice of great possibilities and those who have heard her have been much pleased with her singing.

Gift to Church.

A tablet suitably lettered in gold, and bearing the name of the church and that of the pastor as well as hours of service has just been placed on the front of the Temple Baptist church, on East Third street. It is the work of Jeremiah VanWinkle, the sign artist, and was presented to the church in the name of his "shut in" daughter, Miss Bessie Van Winkle, of East Seventh street.

Will Give a Musicale.

Under the direction of Clifford A. Braider, organist of the First Presbyterian church, a musicale will be given by the quartet choir on Thursday night, April 29, assisted by the Mendelssohn Glee Club, of Elizabeth. This will be Miss Anna Lucretia Case's last appearance at the church as a member of the quartet.

Baptized at Trinity Church.

Harry Wolf, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schwartz, of West Front street, and Stanley, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Higgins, of Somerset street, were baptized Sunday morning by Rev. John Y. Brook, pastor of Trinity Reformed church.

DAY NURSERY'S BENEFIT ORGAN RECITAL PLEASES

The Edgewood Club Gives Musical and Tea for a Worthy Cause.

PROGRAM DELIGHTS AUDIENCE.

Entertainment at the Home of Mrs. P. A. Weeks provided by Young Women.

Under the auspices of the Edgewood Club, composed of young women, and for the benefit of The Day Nursery, a charming musical and tea were given Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. A. Weeks on West Seventh street. Despite the inclement weather nearly one hundred persons attended the affair and the profits amounted to $65.

The first part of the afternoon was devoted to the musical. The program was a choice one and it was rendered in a finished and perfect manner. The audience was enthusiastic and the artists responded cheerfully to the numerous encores. It would be difficult to decide upon the features of the musical, there being such uniform excellence. Miss Elizabeth Martin, who is but eleven years of age, delighted all *with her piano playing. She is re*markably far advanced for one so young and her interpretation of the most difficult numbers always incites admiration.

Miss Grace Carroll, contralto, who is always a favorite, favored the audience with several of her best selections, while the violin numbers by Miss Helen M. Patterson pleased everyone. Other features were the piano selections by Miss Martine Weeks and the baritone solos by Arthur H. Chamberlain. They added greatly to the enjoyment of the program which was as follows:

Piano solo, "Spinnlied," Bohm, Miss Elizabeth Martin; contralto solo, "Jess MacPharlane" (Old Scotch), "All Through the Night," (Old Welsh), "The Little Red Fox," (Old Irish), Miss Grace Carroll; violin solos, "Romantiache Stricke," Dvorak; "Canzonetta," d'Ambrosio, Miss Helen M. Patterson; baritone solo, selected, Arthur H. Chamberlain; contralto sols, "If Thou Wert Blind," Johnson; "Myrra," Clutsam; "Happy Song," Del Riego, Miss Grace Carroll; piano solo, "At Morn," Miss Martine Weeks; baritone solo, selected, Arthur H. Chamberlain; violin solo, "Gypsy Dance," Miss Helen M. Patterson.

After the program there was a tea and sale of candy. Mrs. Joseph Field, of Bound Brook, poured tea and Mrs. J. R. Martin poured coffee. Ice cream was also served by the members of the club. Those in charge of the candy table were Miss Marie Sullivan, Miss Martine Weeks, Miss Elizabeth Martin and Miss Dorothy Bisle. The room was elaborately decorated for the occasion, yellow being the prevailing color and gonquils being used with excellent effect in the dining room, where the reception was held.

CHRIST WAS A MODEL OF MANLY VIRTUE.

Frank H. Sincerbeaux, of New York, was the speaker at the Y. M. C. A. men's meeting Sunday afternoon. His subject was "The Manliness of Christ." He believed sought to demonstrate that Christ was a combination of goodness and greatness; that, though he was gentle in manner, he possessed a strong and determined mind.

Abraham Lincoln was suggested as a modern example of such a combination. Other men, like Napoleon, were powerful in mind but weak morally; while some were strictly righteous, but lacked force.

Annual Meeting Baptist Church.

The annual meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist church will be held Wednesday night, March 24, for the purpose of electing three deacons, each for the term of two years, to succeed William M. Tallman, Isaac R. Lyes and Charles F. Dayton and for the election of a church clerk for one year to succeed H. C. Runyon and for the election of a treasurer of benevolent fund, for the term of one year to succeed James F. LaRue, all of whose terms expire.

Jonathan Belcher's Picture.

The historic First Presbyterian church of Elizabeth, has received from Miller Crane Earl a likeness of Jonathan Belcher, Colonial Governor of New Jersey for ten years under King George II. Governor Belcher made his home in Elizabeth from 1751 until his death, in 1757. He occupied the house now the residence of Warren R. Dix, in East Jersey street. The picture is an excellent photograph copy of an oil painting cherished by Princeton College.

Birthday Party.

Fifty friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Angerbauer in East Third street Sunday, having arranged to tender Mrs. Angerbauer a shower postal in honor of her birthday. The afternoon was spent enjoyably, a musical program being provided. After refreshments were served, music and humorous recitations were enjoyed. Mrs. Angerbauer received more than fifty souvenir post cards.

ORGAN RECITAL PLEASES

Hope, Warren and Bethel Chapelites Hear Crescent Ave. Church Instrument.

S. A. BALDWIN GIVES PROGRAM

C. C. N. Y. Organist Shows Range and Possibilities of Gift Instrument at Largely Attended Concert.

That the congregations of the various chapels of the Crescent Avenue church might have opportunity to hear the new organ at the main church, a recital was given upon the instrument Monday by Samuel A. Baldwin, professor of music at the College of the City of New York. Admission to this recital, the second upon the new instrument, was by numbered tickets, and the edifice was filled to its utmost capacity, the audience for the most part comprising members of Mr. Warren and Bethel chapels.

The program comprised eleven numbers, which generally strengthened the impression made by the first recital that the instrument is rich in fine solo stops and pleasing combinations. Mr. Baldwin's playing was marked by excellent technique, and he showed marked skill in his manipulation of the pedals.

The first number was Wolstenholme's sonata in the style of Handel and this selection in itself brought out the possibilities of the instrument. It comprised a stately introduction and charming allegro, largo and minuet passages. Particularly pleasing was Mr. Baldwin's selection of the adagio pedal passages of the andante from Beethoven's fifth symphony, which followed the opening number, and the tones were clear and smooth. Two numbers from Bach, an air in D and the Fugue a la Gigue, were received with great appreciation.

Of particular interest was the Benediction Nuptiale, by Hollins. This selection was written for the marriage of Rev. Hugh Black. The theme is composed on the tones B, E and B flat, which in German nomenclature are H, E and B.—the initials of Hugh and Edith Black. Its rendition was used with commendable restraint in this number and in Rubenstein's Kamennoi Ostrow, which followed the Etude Symphonique by Bonnet.

The Pilgrim's chorus and song "To the Evening Star," from Tannhauser, Wagner's arrangement, was familiar to many, and for this reason the possibilities of the organ in its rendition were the more keenly appreciated. Moment Musical by Schubert, which followed Dubois' Toccata in G, was another occasion for the use of the echo organ, and Mr. Baldwin produced an exquisitely beautiful and etherial tone effect by combining it with the swell vox humana. The program concluded with the rendition of Guilmant's "Marche Religieuse, the subject of which is taken from the first motif of the chorus. "Lift up Your Heads," from Handel's "Messiah."

Another organ recital will be given at the Crescent Avenue church next Tuesday evening. On that occasion Archer Gibson, organist of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York, will play, and he will be assisted by Frank Croxton, bass, of New York.

WOULD HAND SCHOOLS OVER TO POLITICIANS.

The bill to take the appointment of the county superintendents out of *the hands of the State Board of Edu*cation and vest them in the executive is a political move that is causing the educational circles great uneasiness.

The Republicans accused Governor Abbet of endeavoring to make a political machine out of the county superintendents, and when they got in power they made it impossible, by law, for politicians to dictate the appointment of these educators. Since that time it has been the policy of the Republican party to keep politics out of schools.

This partisan movement to politicians in the offices of the county superintendents is strongly resented by all the educators of the State and it is receiving the attention of the patriotic orders.

ELOPING NEWARK WIFE FINED AT WASHINGTON.

Mrs. Matilda Slockbower, of Newark, N. J., who, with James P. Mead, of Philadelphia, were arrested while living together in Washington, on March last, by Detective Robert A. Haggerty, of Newark, and Detective Ray Kliendienst, of Washington, was arraigned in the police court, Washington; and fined $60. Mead forfeited $50 collateral. The man paid the woman's fine.

Mrs. Slockbower and Mead were arrested in a room in a boarding house at 810 H street, northwest, Washington, where they had been residing as man and wife since January 25.

The police say Mrs. Slockbower deserted her husband and several children last January and went to Washington, where she met Mead, who is alleged to have deserted his wife and children.

INSULT AVENGER IS HELD

HIS BAIL FIXED AT $250.

Aleck Kane, Who Was Badly Mauled in Sewer Trench Fracas, Has Array of Italian Witnesses at Court.

Ruling that Thomas Brennan, of West Third street, was not justified in taking the law in his own hands to avenge an alleged insult of Aleck Ander Kane to his invalid sister, at Brennan's home on February 25, City Judge Runyon Monday held Brennan under $250 bond to await the action of the grand jury at the April session. The bond was furnished by Zebulon Chadbourne.

The hearing of the case, which has been twice postponed at the city court, developed the fact that the attack on Kane was premeditated, and that Brennan had resolved to "lay for" the contractor after hearing his sister's story of the insult. The court's realization that Brennan had been given ample opportunity, and as time was concerned, to have the insult avenged by bringing Kane to court about the matter made his "beating up" into an attack upon the man.

Kane was on hand bright and early at court today, with an army of Italian witnesses. These were those for whom Lawyer Arthur Murphy, Brennan's counsel, paid $5.10 for issuing and serving warrants, when the case was postponed a week ago. It turned out that but one Italian was on hand when the insulting remarks are alleged to have been passed out by Aleck. This Italian, whose name is Dominick, meekly swore that he had never heard the contractor swear.

When the hearing was begun Dr. Norman H. Prudasco, who attended Aleck after the one-sided fistic encounter, testified that the contractor had "general contusions about the chest, face and right eye." He said that it took four stitches to close the "general contusion" of the eye. As far as the testimony of the other witnesses were concerned, it proved a maze of counter allegations, as far as the principals were concerned, mingled by legal cross-examination meant to entangle the witnesses, but in reality only arousing wrath in the case of Brennan. A feature of the testimony by Miss Brennan was the fact that all "cuss-words" were repeated by initial only. Practically the entire alphabet was utilized.

The witnesses for Brennan were Mrs. Kane, a neighbor, the defendant himself and his sister. Brennan declared that he only struck Kane "two or three times," and that the contractor was prepared for the attack. Kane looked as if he'd got caught under a pile-driver after the encounter, and said he had his hands in his pocket when Brennan set upon him. The physician, Dominick and Aleck were considered sufficient witnesses to establish the contractor's case and the Italians were not brought to the stand.

Francis J. Blatz was Kane's attorney, and called attention of the court to the deliberateness of the Navy Yard's foreman's attack on his client in his summing up. Arthur Murphy represented Brennan.

CIRCUS COMES TO TOWN

The Y. M. C. A. Presents a Really Meritorious Ring Show and Menagerie.

G. L. Listman's big aggregation of circus performers, clowns, barkers, freaks, oddities and rare animals came to the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night with all the pomp and glory of a modern spectacular pageant. Exhibitions of former years were eclipsed by this most complete, stupendous presentation.

The first feast for the eyes as one entered by the grand entrance on Washington avenue, was the marvelous array of curiosities, beasts and wonders of the orient and occident, filling the spacious auditorium.

Among the most noteworthy features here displayed and which the lusty voiced barkers endowed with personal idiosyncrasies were:

Magician and conjurer, Clifford de Beres; bearded lady, Mme. Harryface, R. D. Carper; tiger, only one of its kind in existence, H. Black; monkey, eats peanuts, Clarence Steiner; giant, found wild and rare on Monmouth avenue, F. O. Dunning; fat man, weight 912 pounds, G. H. Volk; barker, living machinery of silence, William Russell; frog, Tiera Lake, B. Naylor; three legged man, A. Newmiller and F. Line; skeleton, captured in Cuddlemen, Harry Rothberg; fat woman, Mme. "Lesno," F. H. Howard; bear, "Bunco," F. Harding; Clarence, the cop, Chauncey Murphy; special attractions—barrel jumping, C. H. Line; wire walking, Blondy, C. S. Hoagland.

Pupils of the broad staircase and turning twice to the right and three times to the left, the throngs of delighted spectators, on emerging from a long hallway, found themselves in the gymnasium, transformed into a brilliantly lighted amphitheatre. The band struck up a lively tune and the excitement began with a rush.

A half dozen stalwart Y. M. C. A. gymnasts sprang into the arena and lightly leaped over towering elephants, varying the performance with somersaults and hand springs.

Six agile chaps of the New York Turn Verein gymnastic team brought thunderous applause by performing dangerous and difficult feats on the horizontal bar. Always between the acts funny clowns swarmed over the parapet rails and executed mirth provoking antics to the intense delight of the small boys eating peanuts in front of the Y. W. C. A. private box.

Next came an exhibition of artistic tumbling by R. J. Hansen, who it is understood by the management, has no equal.

Two skillful club swingers, George Flynn and R. O. Phillips, specially transported from the New York University, swung themselves into popularity and for a time had a opponent on all the applause in the house.

William Banks and Carl Steiner covered themselves with glory, if not with water, in their high diving act from a lofty perch among the rafters of the softly padded mat.

The New York Turn Verein team had a second turn before the arc lights when the parallel bars were pushed into the ring, and afterwards did some brilliant work on the horse.

One of the things that will be talked about in homes for some days to come is the educated dog "Trixi*tinia,' which was almost as human as* its master, William Briggs.

A big act was the pyramid building by a troop of Y. M. C. A. athletes in full fighting kilts, also giving artistic poses in muscle straining positions and maneuvers.

Sole owner and manager, G. L. Listman; ring master, George C. M. Smith; chief announcer, Charles B. Moore; box office manager, Charles A. Steiner; chief barker, William Russell; chief ticket seller, C. B. Batchelor; chief ticket taker, C. H. Schermerhorn; ushers, Clarence Lawrence, H. H. Woodland, Horace Valli; chief electrician and engineer, W. A. Weile; C. S. Hoagland, chairman; Charles H. Line, Secretary; Carl Steiner, R. H. Collins, William P. Banks, Horace E.Vail, Henry Viebrock, Walter Sampson. Members—C. C. Burgess, Martin Stutsman, F. H. Howard, C. Murphy, Harry Rothberg, Harry Black, George Volk, Alva Dunham, W. H. Cubberly, A. Newmiller, Frank Line, A. B. Price, R. D. Carver, P. J. Harding.

Boys—Clifford Vail, L. W. Ulmer, Rudolph Wahls, Raymond Manley, Alfred Manley, Theo. Champlin, Bergen Naylor, A. Kluney.

New York University gymnastic team—George Flynn, captain, national champion in club swinging; R. O. Phillips.

BULLDOG VICIOUSLY ATTACKS LINCOLN MAN

William Waberton, of Henry street, Lincoln, was attacked by a bulldog which he had taken home as a present to his wife a few days ago. The vicious animal sank its teeth into his right leg above the knee and set its jaws like a vice. Efforts to pry it loose were unavailing and it was necessary to kill the dog to release its grip.

Mr. Waberton was hurried to a physician, who cauterized the wound and it is believed no serious results will follow, though he will be confined to the house for a time.

The dog was originally the property of C. H. Lumsden, of Wood avenue, Lincoln, who disposed of it because of its bad disposition, especially as it exhibited vicious tendencies towards his little daughter. He presented it to Mr. Waberton who turned it over to his wife, and it was during the dog's first arrival at his home that he was attacked as he entered the yard, the dog failing to recognize him and refusing his friendly advances. With a low growl it sprang upon him and bore him to the ground. Mrs. Waberton rushed to his aid and some passerby made every effort to free the man, but found that their only recourse was in killing the beast.

R. BURNS EGLINTON'S ORGAN RECITAL TODAY

The first of a series of four Lenten organ recitals was given this afternoon at Holy Cross church, where a program of five instrumental numbers was rendered on the recently remodeled church organ by R. Burns Eglinton, the church organist. The recital was well attended and the various selections were well adapted to show the possibilities of the instrument. Mr. Eglington's rendition was most keenly appreciated and his technique of a high order. He was a pupil of Felix Lamont.

The first number of today's program was a sketch by Bertram, and this was followed by two selections of Weley, an andante and a postlude. The combination of Lohr followed this and the recital concluded with an excellent rendition of Munroe's "Faith."

Mr. Eglinton said that the recital was primarily to show the instrumental possibilities of the organ and that a series of recitals which are to follow on Saturday afternoons he will be assisted by soloists.

HORSE THIEVES BUSY AT MARTINVILLE NOW

Horse thieves have again been busy in the vicinity of Martinville. Thursday night two valuable horses were stolen. One belonged to Geo. Bolmer and the other to Warren Coddington, both of Martinville. The county authorities have been notified and are on the trail.

Both animals were taken at the same time. Mr. Coddington was accompanying a friend home early in the evening when he passed two men driving a horse and leading two other animals. He thought he recognized one of the leaders as belonging to him, but did not stop to make any inquiries. After reaching his friend's home he became convinced that one of the horses was his and going to his barn found that the thieves had visited his barn. He quickly notified the county authori*ties and telephoned to all his neigh*bors, who are now on the lookout for the stolen animals.

LOCAL SPORTMEN'S CLUB ENTERTAINS ITS FRIENDS

The Plainfield Sportsmen's Club gave a supper and dance at the clubhouse on Albert street, last night. The affair was largel yattended by the members and their friends. Dancing, singing and instrumental music were the features after the supper. Those who entertained with dancing were John Duffy, Edward Breckenridge, Albert Coddington, James Neal, George Neal, Edward Bimble and James Camiskey.

Those who sang were Timothy Carroll, Eugene McKenna, August Bremmer, Frank Mowhart and John Duffy, while Eugene Kenna and August Bremmer entertained with instrumental music. James Carroll and George Perry gave an athletic exhibition. Edward Bimble prepared the supper. The officers of the club are President, Edward Bimble; vice-president, Eugene McKenna; secretary, James Neal; treasurer, Charles Lubeck; manager, Frank Frazier.

The proposed plans of J. Edmund Skiff to organize a choral society in this city have been abandoned for the present. About fifty persons were invited to *form such an organi*zation, but the response was not such as to warrant going ahead with the matter.

HORSES STAND 4 DAYS IN A HITCHING SHED

A team of horses stood hitched to a wagon from Tuesday until Friday without food or water in the hitching shed of the New Market First Baptist church. It had been stolen and then abandoned by the thieves. Constable Robert Pierce chanced to find them yesterday and relieved their suffering.

The animals were gaunt and hollow eyed and had worn great holes in the earth under their feet, stamping and pawing. The entire outfit was stolen at Somerville by piecemeal. The owners of the different parts identified and secured their property today. One horse belonged to Peter Schwartz and the other to J. L. Boden, while the wagon and harness had been taken from the farm of John Bowers. All of the men live in or near Somerville, and are grieved over their losses, which resulted in the goods being returned to the owners.

BOWDEN'S SCCESSOR TO GET $960. A YEAR

The Councilmanic street committee met last night and further con*sidered* plans for street improvements during the coming season, as outlined early in the year. It is proposed to macadamized a number of streets throughout the city and a material which will have a tendency to preserve the roadbed and keep the dust down will be used in the future. This will be in accordance with plans adopted by the State road commissioner and it is believed will give satisfactory results.

The question of putting Frank Day, an assistant in the street de*partment*, on a regular salary of $80 a month, instead of $3 a day, which he has been receiving, was agreed to by the committee and will come up for Councilmanic approval at the next *meeting of the Common Coun*cil. Mr. Day has been in the street department since David Bowden resigned and he is put in charge of the street work under the direction of Street Commissioner Gavett.

MOTHER GOOSE AFFORDS A WHOLE LOT OF FUN

Under the auspices of the younger members of the First M. E. church Sunday-school, a Mother Goose song recital was given in Vincent chapel last night, before a large and enthusiastic audience. In all about seventy-five children took part in the affair, representing the various characters in the Mother Goose story. Miss Helen Joy made an excellent "Mother Goose," while all the other children took their parts well. All were in appropriate costume.

During the first part the Mother Goose songs were rendered, after which the characters appeared in pantomime. Features were a minuet by the children from Miss Edna French's kindergarten class, duets by Virginia Smiock and Wallace Zimmerman and Mildred Burnet and Edward Crone, a vocal solo by Miss Marion Wilson assisted by Nathan Bingaman, Gertrude Prior and Lucile Ewart, who acted the parts.

There was also a pleasing song *drill by Edward Crone, Mildred Bur*net, Alling Campbell, Elizabeth Hicks, Harold Hile, Ruth Neal, Clarence Skiff and Miss Lillie Allen. Elsie Schwed delighted all with a vocal solo, Mistress Mary," and a piano solo by Frank Rowley won much applause. The affair was a great success in every detail. In addition there was a sale of candy, Miss Irene Miller being in charge.

The women in charge of the whole affair were Mrs. M. H. Ewart, Mrs. Arthur E. Crone, Mrs. Thomas MacDonald, Mrs. A. W. Burnet, Mrs. Maurice Wilson, Miss Edna French, Mrs. J. R. Roundy and Mrs. Myra Emmons. The last two named assisted at the piano. The profits from the entertainment, which will be about $70, will go to the missionary societies of the church.

To Preserve the Rock.

From a reliable source comes the information that there never has been any purpose to locate a stone crusher at Washington rock nor has it ever been intended to desecrate that historic spot in any way. The truth of the matter is that the Rock will be made more attractive than ever after some contemplated improvements are made in the immediate vicinity. Also that the syndicate about to develop the Debele-Smalley tract in North Plainfield will organize a new corporation to develop this tract which corporation will have no connection with the Washington Rock property.

"I refuse either to affirm or deny that I am to marry the lady you mention," said the society bachelor. "Have you any objection to my asking the lady about it herself?" ventured the reporter.

"Not the slightest. And, say, come back and tell me what she says, won't you?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

H. B. SUYDAM'S SLAYER GIVEN EIGHTEEN YEARS

John C. Lumsden, the young invetor from Raleigh, N. C., who shot and killed Councilman Harry B. Suydam, of this city, a curb broker, in the latter's office at 39 Broad street, New York, on December 19 last, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Malone in General Sessions to serve not less than eighteen years and not more than nineteen years and six months in Sing Sing. Lumsden was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree, the maximum penalty for which is twenty years. Judge Malone made the sentence as long as possible under the law, which says that an indeterminate sentence must be imposed in case the convicted man is a first offender.

Lumsden's wife, who sat in the court room during her husband's trial, was not present yesterday. Former Governor Aycock, of North Carolina, who helped defend Lumsden, and James J. Fitzgerald, who was also of counsel, made the usual motions for a new trial. These were denied, and it was announced by lawyers that there would be no appeal.

Lumsden showed no emotion when he was sentenced. After shaking hands with his lawyers he walked out of the court room with head erect, and was taken to Sing Sing this morning.

LIKELY TO DISSOLVE MANGANESE COMPANY

The fact that the Maganese Steel Safe Works is heavily in debt to the Taylor Iron Company, of Hill Bridge, whose products were used in the manufacture of safes, has given rise to a rumor that the Taylor company will acquire the plant in this city. It is alleged that a majority of the stockholders of the Taylor company also own a majority of the stock in the safe company. A call has been issued for a meeting of stockholders of the safe company to be held on April 6 in this city, for the purpose of considering the question of dissolving the concern, according to a resolution adopted at a meeting in March.

Samuel Rodman and his wife, Martha Rodman, minority stockholders, are responsible for this latest action. They have opposed the appointment of a receiver or any action that might lead to a sale of the plant to the Mosler Safe Company, of Hamilton, Ohio. It has been understood that the Mosler company was anxious to get control of the Plainfield plant, and this was substantiated when the majority stockholders attempted to dispose of the assets as a whole. This was defeated through an appeal to the courts by the Rodmans. It was then agreed by the board of directors to try and dissolve the company after which the Taylor Iron Company may gain control and re-open the plant and resume the manufacture of safes as before. There is no indication that the move to dissolve the company will be opposed.

From the present outlook it would appear that the Rodmans stand little show of realizing anything from the stock held by them in the company. If the plan to dissolve goes through the first action will be to sell the property and make an equal distribution of the money to the stockholders. On this basis it would appear that the minority stockholders will receive little if anything.

LACKED PRESENCE OF MIND.

In the criminal court in Baltimore a darky was on trial for stealing a watch which he had pawned. He was identified by the owner as the person who grabbed the watch out of his pocket, yet the darky claimed he was innocent. When asked how he came in possession of the watch, he said:

"I was standing on the corner when a man comes up to me and says he is hard up and hasn't a cent to buy food with, and he wants to sell me this watch for $3. I know I could get $4 on it in pawn, and I felt sorry for him and bought the watch from him to pawn for $4. That's how I got the watch."

The prosecutor then asked if he had bought the watch for $3, knowing he could pawn it for $4, simply to help the man along because he felt sorry for him, why he did not advise him to pawn it himself, and then he would have had $ 4instead of $3.

"Well, you see," said the prisoner, "I didn't have the presence of mind to do dat."

CHAMPION TEAM HONORED BY SUPPER AND DANCE

An oyster supper was tendered to the victorious N. P. H. S. basketball team last night by W. J. Conroy, father of Russel Conroy, captain of the team. The members of the girls basketball team presided at the tables, and Messrs. Henry C. Krebs, Benjamin J. Phelps, George Webster and R. Kiefer of the school faculty were honored guests, each responding to a toast. Mr. Conroy, the host, also made a short speech.

Following the supper, which was held at the Conroy home on Linden avenue, the party went to Debele hall and spent the balance of the evening dancing. The event was in celebration of the winnig of the inter-scholastic championship by the borough five in the season's series of games just completed. The official presentation of the cup to the champions will be made during the coming week by President J. E. Kimball of the Y. M. C. A., when the names of the players will have been engraved thereon.

COUNTRY CLUB CHANGES COMMITTEE MEMBERSHIPS

At a meeting of the trustees of the Plainfield Country Club this week, George F. Schoonmaker resigned as chairman of the green committee, and George S. Ring re*signed from the tennis committee*. Mr. Schoonmaker has removed to New York, while Mr. Ring has business interests which will keep him away from the city much of the time.

Councilman George S. Clay has been elected to fill one of the vacancies and he was also elected chairman of the House committee for the coming season. R. S. Rowland succeeds Mr. Schoonmaker as chairman of the Green committee and Willard Wadsworth was elected chairman of the Golf committee. Both are expert players and the golf and tennis departments will be well looked after. One vacancy now exists in the board, which will be filled soon by the selection of a chairman for the tennis committee.

Several new members have been elected. Those joining the club now will pay an initiation fee of only $25, instead of $30 which will be charged a few weeks hence. Those joining the new members will also have the use of the grounds with*out charge until April 1, when the* dues for the coming year will be payable.

The greens will be thoroughly seeded and top dressed next week and temporary greens will be used for a short time. But as there is no frost in the ground the course is dry and even playable. Except for the greens, the course will not be closed at all.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS AT ELIZABETH MEETING

A delegation of about a score of members of the local Christian Endeavor Union journeyed to Eliza*beth last night to attend the meet*ing of the Union County Extension Committeee, which was held in the First Baptist church there. A feature of the affair was a series of sectional conferences led bl various members of the county societies. Charles F. Windham, of the local union, conducted the conference of the look-out committee, and Clarence B. LaRue was in charge of the officers' conference.

After the devotional exercises, which were led by Howard Riley, of the First Baptist church, Elizabeth, Purdy Benedict, president of the Roselle Baptist Christian Endeavor Society delivered a ten-minute address. A quiz was conducted by Miss Della Chapman, of Elizabeth, and in this the honors for the most correct answers were awarded to the Society from the Roselle Baptist church.

Following the session came a delightful social hour in the church. The Plainfield delegation got together and sang their song, "We'll Have the Convention in Plainfield in 1909, which made such a hit at the recent convention at Atlantic City.

The semi-annual meeting of the Boys' club of Hope chapel was held last night when these officers were elected for the coming six months: President, Clinton Firstbrook; first vice-president, Howard Firstbrook; second vice-president, James Dolg; *secretary, Arthur Hoffman; treasur*er, Earl Huff; chairman entertainment committee, George Patterson; athletic, LeRoy Bliven; membership, Arthur Mundy; house, Bertram Smith; initiation, Alfred Patterson; games, John Heron; lookout, Thos. Heron.

The officers will be installed Friday night, March 19, to be followed by a supper. Speeches will be made by G. Herbert Condict, Rev. L. R. Howard, Ira W. Travell and W. H. Webster.

TO COOK AND SERVE OYSTERS.

Two Recipes That Seem to Promise Something Good.

Plump oysters being among the pleasures of the winter table, they must be treated with respect. What to Eat gives two recipes. The first of French panned oysters is tempting even in the reading.

Drain 25 good-sized oysters. Run a ounce of the latter's to a smooth paste with a teaspoonful flour and a teaspoonful minced parsley. Place in a stew pan or chafing dish with the oysters, add a pinch of cayenne and seasoning salt and stir and cook until the gills begin to curl, then add the yolk of an egg, and, still stirring, pour the oysters over some nicely toasted squares of bread and serve at once.

This is an epicurean bake: Put half a cup of heat butter in a small stew pan with cup of cream and stir over a good fire until hot. Add a table spoonful anchovy sauce, a tiny pinch of cayenne, a light grating of lemon rind and stir and cook, until it boils; then add a gill of sherry and turn half the mixture into a baking dish. Arrange the oysters on top the sauce and add the rest, a layer of bread crumbs and grated Parmesan cheese and season with salt and pepper. Cover with remainder of the sauce, bread crumbs, etc., and brown nicely in a hot oven.

Trim and toast delicately some thin slices of bread, first removing the crusts. Take the smallest oysters you can get, but a well-flavored variety, and wipe perfectly dry, place in a well greased broiler and, broil until they begin to shrivel all around the gills, then place closely together over the toast and sprinkle with finely minced celery and dust lightly with salt. Thicken some cream, ever so little, with corn starch wet with milk and pour over the oysters and serve immediately.

The Home.

Oranges and lemons will keep well if hung in a wire net in a cool, airy place.

If five or six potatoes are added to the sponge, the bread will keep moist much longer.

For boiling salmon the water must be boiling, but for all other fish it should only be warm.

When making apple pie the flavor is much improved and the apples will keep a good color if a few drops of lemon juice are squeezed over the apples just before the paste is put on.

It is claimed that woody house plants that grow a back can be strengthened and made to flourish like the proverbial bay tree if given iron water, soaked from rusted iron and mixed into the soil.

When eggs are broken and cannot be used at once they will keep better if the shell be removed and a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt be beaten into the egg. They later can be used for cakes or puddings.

Oyster Pie.

Line a dish with puff paste. Lay a plate the same size as the dish on top of it; over this put the top crust, the dish supporting it, as the paste must go into the oven before the oysters are put in.

Prepare oysters while crust is cooking. Strain the liquor; thicken it with the yolks of eggs, boiled hard and grated; add a piece of butter and a few fine breadcrumbs; season with pepper, salt and nutmeg.

Stew for five minutes. As soon as the crust is done remove the cover, take out the plate, pour in the oysters and gravy and replace the cover. Serve at once hot.

Pork and Apple Stew.

Cut a joint of pork in thick pieces. Peel and slice two baking apples, four onions and six potatoes. Lay the slices of meat and vegetables together in a pie dish, sprinkle with pepper, salt and powdered sage. Cover with water or gravy, tie down with greased paper, and bake for two hours. The meat should be dipped in flour before putting it into the dish, so as to give a little thickening to the gravy.

Eggs a la Creme.

Required: For each egg allow two spoons of cream, a teaspoonful of grated cheese and a pinch of nutmeg.

Butter some small china cases, break an egg into each, sprinkle with salt and grated cheese (Parmesan), put a dessertspoonful of cream and a little nutmeg on each. Put the cases in a quick oven just long enough to set the eggs. Serve at once.

Baked Calf's Tongue.

Take one good sized tongue, throw into boiling water and boil until tender. Remove the outer skin, put into a baking pan with one cup of ripe tomatoes, two cloves of garlic, three or four of those little red hots, some salt and a piece of butter the size of a walnut and bake half hour. Serve hot.

Glazed Carrots.

Wash, scrape and cut into even slices; simmer until nearly tender in salted water; drain, put into a saucepan with one tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of sugar, and have enough stock to cover. Boil uncovered until the stock is reduced to a glaze.

Celery Sauce.

This sauce is to be served with vegetables. Take cream or rich milk and boil with pieces of celery till flavor is extracted. Remove it and season sauce with salt and pepper. Add butter, then a little flour for thickening.

AGAINST SEWAGE SCHEME

COUNSEL TO BE ENGAGED.

Mayor Samuel Townsend Outlines Scheme to Remedy Borough's Condition.

More than eighty interested property-owners attended the meeting of the Greenbrook Protective Association at the Greenbrook school-house last night to enter a protest against the location of sewage beds in North Plainfield township, especially on the Kraemer farm as proposed by North Plainfield borough. W. L. McCauley, as president of the association, presided at the meeting.

Vigorous remarks in protest against the scheme were made by Mr. McCauley, Seymour Smith and Dr. Tuttle, of Greenbrook, and Mayor Harry Swackhamer, of Dunellen. A letter of protest was received from Mrs. Emma G. Brown, a wealthy resident of Dunellen, whose 150 acre farm known as the Rice property. She stated that she had employed counsel and would fight the proposition and also promised to assist the association.

A communication was received from Mayor Samuel Townsend in which he asked Councilman Brokaw to meet him in his office this afternoon to go over the situation. Mr. Brokaw will express the sentiment of the meeting to Mr. Townsend today.

A resolution was adopted putting the association on record as unalterably opposed to the borough's plan to locate sewage beds on the Kraemer farm and pledging every member to use every effort to defeat the proposition. Mr. Kramer was asked to state again what that when the option was secured on his farm he did not know of the plans or he would have refused to consider the offer.

The fact that Mrs. Brown has joined her issue with that of the association, is a source of encouragement for it adds considerable strength to the opposition forces. The option on the Kraemer farm was for ninety days and was only secured a few weeks ago.

Among the other objects received against the plan of North Plainfield were those from the Palmer estate and the representative of Robert J. Fitzsimmons' large farm at Dunellen. The property backs up to the proposed site for the sewage beds and as "Bob" is planning for extensive training quarters there, he naturally would be opposed to the scheme. At present he is abroad, but he will be advised at once as to what is being done.

Mayor Samuel Townsend has outlined the plans for North Plainfield as regards the sewer question in the borough. "In the first place, nothing whatever has been proposed so far," says Mr. Townsend. "Plans have been suggested whereby Plainfield and the borough shall combine in an up-to-date sewer system, and thus do away with the present beds now in use by the city. A committee was appointed to make a thorough investigation of the different systems and report with the necessary adjuncts. No action has been taken by the Borough Council, and of course that is the only body which can take action.

"The cost of a trunk sewer to take the sewage to the tide-water is prohibitive, so a trunk line to some nearer point seems to be the only practical solution of the question.

"So far as the township is con*cerned in this matter*, we have considered all sides of the question, and there is no doubt but it would be better for the township to have one disposal bed at the lower end of the township rather than the one now located just across the township line, at the upper portion of this section. Not only this, but unless a new location is decided upon, we may mean another tank line across the brook from the present one, so that the township might have two instead of one, and that, too, right in the centre of valuable building sites; whereas the proposed location is to be on low ground, far away from any point of use, and, in case any property should be damaged by reason of such location, proper redress will be given without the necessity of going to court with it."

FUNERAL SERVICES OF CHRISTOPHER M. FINE.

The funeral services of Christopher M. Fine were held at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son on Park avenue. There was a large attendance of friends. Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Mr. Fine was a member for many years, officiated, making impressive remarks about the life of Mr. Fine.

During the service, E. E. Runyon sang, "I Found a Friend," and "Fade, Fade Each Earthly Joy." There were two beautiful floral tributes. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were Julius G. Williams, Alfred K. Willett, John Goodman, George Westervelt and Robert W. Barnes.

PLEA FOR LOCAL OPTION

Former Assemblyman Swackhamer's Brilliant Speech Arouses Enthusiasm.

LIQUOR THE GREATEST CURSE.

He Declares Local Option to Be a Political and Moral Right—Becomes Eloquent in Making His Argument.

Considered a masterpiece on the subject of local option, the speech of former Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of this borough, before the Senate judiciary committee at Trenton on Tuesday made a marked impression on the big crowd present to hear the pleas.

Mr. Swackhamer's plea for local option legislation follows:

"I am glad to have a word on a measure of such vast and commanding importance; a measure which if passed into law, would rescue this State from the grasp of a merciless monster and would be an Emancipation Proclamation to the slaves of the poison habit within her borders. In this argument, it will be assumed that we all have a common desire, namely, for the overthrow and suppression of the evils of the saloon.

"We know and you know that the greatest menace to our State today is the legalized sale of intoxicating liquors. We know and you know that it is a blighting, withering curse to the commonwealth of New Jersey. We know and you know that it lays its unholy hands upon everything that is understanding the very foundations of social safety and poisoning our government at its fountain head.

"It is no exaggeration to say that 'If Satan should call a convention of all the haters of humanity, of all the cruel and malignant spirits on earth and in hell, their combined intelligence could not devise a thing more deadly and damning than the traffic in intoxicating drinks.' The record of the saloon has come down to us, written in tears and blood; an institution filled with crime and dead to shame. Then, as the honored representatives of your State, as the defenders of her rights, the champions of her happiness, how are you going to deal with this, her deadliest foe? Is his celebrated 'Give me Liberty, or Give me Death' speech, the immortal Patrick Henry said: 'I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, and that is the lamp of experience. I know of no way of judging of the future, but by the past.'

"What then, is the testimony of experience, the logic of facts?

"Thirty-five million of people in the United States are living in territory from which the saloon has been driven by local option law, and such is the efficacy of local option legislation, that during the last twelve months an average of thirty saloons per day have been voted out of existence. But the bitterest and most relentless enemies of local option, and the most interested and persistent advocates of the saloon are the strongest witnesses, and their testimony will not be questioned. Who is opposed to this measure? Is it the teacher in the public school? Is it the professor in the college? Is it the minister in the pulpit, reasoning of temperance, righteousness and a judgment to come? Is it the maiden who sees for the first time the unnatural flush in the face of her lover? Is it the mother, with her cooing infant in her arms? Is it the wife who, in the silent watches of the night waits and listens for the unsteady step of the husband who was once a stranger to the wine cup? Even the ensnared victim of the poison habit longs for the law that will drive out of his path the serpent of the winecup. These men know that their business feeds upon the boys and girls of this State; and they know that the legal voters of this State know this.

"Now what do these men fear the most? Not the Christian mother as she kneels at night by her little son, and lifts her petition to the Throne of Grace; not the Minister in the pulpit, as he opens the Word of God and reads: 'Woe unto him that putteth the cup to his neighbors.' What they dread the most is the thing we are asking of you; the thing that has made it possible for a bird to fly from the Mississippi river to the Atlantic ocean, and from the borders of Tennessee to the Gulf of Mexico without looking down on a single licensed saloon.

"What they dread, is an aroused public conscience, expressing itself through the silent, omnipotent agency of the ballot box. Listen! President Dolan, in his report at Newark, to the National Liquor Dealers' Association in 1906, is reported to have said: 'Under Governor Hoke Smith, of Georgia has become prohibition, and of Texas and Kentucky, the same may be said; in Ohio and Indiana, thousands have been voted out of business, and many ruined.' And the following language is attributed to President Hayes, of the New Jersey Liquor Dealers' Protective Association: 'Local Option is fast getting a foothold in New Jersey, and unless something is done by the saloonkeepers soon, you will have county option in every county in the State.'

"There is your demonstration, strong as the proofs of Holy Writ. The argument becomes an axiom.

Is Local Option Legal?

"Reason, Justice and Common Sense say yes!

"But this question has been answered in the authoritative and decisive language of the highest courts, and from their decision there is no appeal. It is the fiat of the law. The United States Supreme Court, in Crowley vs. Christianson, says: 'There is no inherent right in a citizen to thus sell intoxicating liquors by retail. It is not a privilege of a citizen of the State, or of a citizen of the United States. As it is a business attended with danger to the community, it may as already said, be entirely prohibited or be permitted under such conditions as will limit to the utmost its evils.'

"The Court of Last Resort in this State has said: 'The sale of intoxicating liquors has from the earliest history of our State, been dealt with by the Legislature in a special way; it is a subject by itself, to the treatment of which the Legislature has law appropriate to other topics, cannot be applied. The Legislature has a right to grant to municipal corporations the power to regulate and prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors. No one has a right to demand a license; license is a special privilege, granted to the few, and denied to the many.'

"It is idle to consume time in demonstrating a proposition which has been established by the dictates of reason and of justice, the verdict of history, and by the authority of the law. If as declared by the Court of Errors and Appeals, a license is a special privilege to be granted or denied at discretion, then local option would be merely the withdrawal by the people of a municipality of this legal right to grant or deny.

Is Local Option a Political Right?

"Now, with the situation clearly comprehended, with the demonstration of experiment on the one hand, and the confession of the liquor dealers on the other, that local option law is death to their trade, remembering that New Jersey, where Local Option has been denied, is the home of more saloons than exist in the whole South, and the conclusion of the liquor dealers on the other, that local option law is death to their trade, remembering that New Jersey, where Local Option has been applied; and remembering further, that seventy-five per cent. of the insanity, pauperism and crime for which New Jersey is taxed, and under which she staggers, is the legitimate offspring of the dram shop, upon what theory could the Legislature of this State deny to the people this most reasonable, legal, constitutional and valuable law? Surely, they will grant it in pursuance of constitutional authority.

"The first article of that instrument declares that all political powers is inherent in the people; that government is instituted for the protection, security and benefit of the people, and that they have the right at all times to alter or reform the same whenever the public good may require it. The organic law of the State thus vests the absolute right of sovereignty in the people. This principal of popular sovereignty was cradled in the Mayflower, and it became the soul of our free institutions. Our fathers said: 'Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.' And it has been our proudest boast that in this country, the will of the majority is the supreme law. For this sacred right, the Pilgrim fathers sailed the wintry sea, and faced the savage wilderness and the pitiless tomahawk; for this Washington and his soldiers endured the agonies of Valley Forge, and left their bloody foot prints on the ice and snows of New Jersey; for this our Fathers pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor.

"Let us be thoughtful; let us reflect. You are deciding a question that involves the weel or woe of your State. You are writing a verdict which future generations will read. In 1862, Abraham Lincoln, referring to the subject of Emancipation, said: 'We of this Congress, and of this Administration, will be remembered in spite of ourselves. No personal significance or insignificance can spare one or another of us. The fiery trial through which we pass will light us down in honor or dishonor to the latest generations.

"We say we are for the Union. The world will not forget that we say this. We know how to save the Union. The world knows we do know how to save it. We—even we here—hold the power, and bear the responsibility. In giving freedom to the slave, we assure freedom to the free, honorable alike in what we give and what we preserve. We shall nobly save, or meanly lose, the last best hope of earth. Other means may succeed; this could not fail. The way is plain, peaceful, generous, just—a way which, if followed, the world will forever applaud, and God will forever bless.

"A gentlemen, this is an epoch-making session of New Jersey's Legislature. The people are asking but a pittance of the power which was delegated to you in strictest trust. The law says it is a legal right. The constitution says it is a constitutional right. Experience says it is an inestimable right. This then is the question we must face: Are the people fit to exercise this right? This single issue lies square across our path. We cannot climb over it. We cannot crawl under it. We cannot go around it. Either the people can be trusted, or the people cannot be trusted. Either they have the brains and the virtue to govern themselves, or they have not the brains and the virtue to govern themselves.

"If six councilmen or a single judge miles away from the question can be for the people better than the people can decide for themselves, then it is fortunate that guardians for the imbecile and feeble-minded can thus be provided.

"Gentlemen, the pulpit and the people are for this bill. The brewer and the boss are against it. But we say to the opponent of this measure what Charles Sumner, speaking on the crime against Kansasa in the Senate of the United States said to the Little Giant of the West. He dreams that he can defeat this measure by little by undermining himself, or the cause which he opposes. He is but a mortal man; against him is an immortal principle. With infinite power, he wrestles with the Infinite, and he must fail. Against him are stronger battalions than any marshalled by mortal arm; the inborn, ineradicable, invincible sentiments of the human heart, against him is nature in all her subtle forces; against him is God. Let him try to subdue these.

"Gentlemen, the decision of this momentous question rests with you."

HUGH F. FOX TALKS ABOUT CHILD LABOR

Hugh F. Fox, president of the State Charities Conference, gave an address before the Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest at the regular meeting last night. His topic was "Child Labor," and he spoke particularly of the legislation in this State to control the conditions existing in the factories.

The speaker told of the beneficial legislation to control conditions in the glass factories, notably among the glass blowers at Camden and in the silk mills at Passaic and Paterson. While conditions are not as yet what they should be, the speaker said, New Jersey is ranked among the States that do the most in results of child labor legislation.

In connection with the objections brought forward by parents who declare that the State has no right to interfere with the work of children where they are needed as supporters of the family, Mr. Fox said that it was no more a ground for complaint than compulsory school attendance. "Patriotism," he said, "does not today constitute a willingness to die for our country, but to live for it, and live an efficient life. It is the duty of the State to care for New Jersey's children."

Juan A. Babcock, president of the association, was in charge at the meeting, and introduced the speaker. Routine business was transacted at the short business session.

At the conclusion of Mr. Fox's talk, a social hour followed, during which a juggler and prestidigitator entertained the audience.

SOMERVILLE COURT INSPECTION, APRIL 3

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met for the first time in its new apartments in the handsome white marble court house, Somerville, yesterday, Saturday, April 3, afternoon and evening, was the date selected for a public inspection of the new structure. The building committee was authorized to make the necessary arrangements for appropriate exercises. All of the county officials will be invited to be present and it is proposed to make it a memorable occasion.

Former Freeholder William J. Logan, of Somerville, who was a member of the building committee, was appointed as the custodian 'of the new court house at a salary of $2 a day. He was empowered to employ such help as may be necessary on approval of the board. The new court house, which has been a long time in construction is one of the finest in the State and takes the place of an historical structure which was an object of great interest on the part of all visitors to the county seat.

$1,000 on First Appeal.

The finance committee of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, is renewing its appeal for individual subscriptions. Over $1,000 was returned through postal cards sent on the first appeal. The committee announces that no person is refused admission to the hospital because of liability to pay and it is desired that everyone so far as possible contribute toward its support. In this way the board hopes to be able to give up the annual form of entertainment as a means of securing funds.

WILL VACCINATE PUPILS

TO PREVENT AN EPIDEMIC.

No Occasion for Alarm But Board Considers That Precaution Should Be Taken.

While the Board of Education is not unnecessarily alarmed by the presence of two cases of smallpox in the city, it has advised that the Board of Health feel that all who have not been vaccinated within five years should be at this time. Acting upon this suggestion, Superintendent H. M. Maxson of the Plainfield Public Schools, has caused notices to be sent to the parents of children attending school.

This letter states that the Board of Health urges that all children who have not been vaccinated within five years should be now, as a safeguard against the spread of the disease. If the disease should become epidemic it would be probably necessary to exclude from school for a time all children whose vaccination is not satisfactory.

Superintendent Maxson then suggests that the parents take their children to their family physician at once and have them vaccinated. If desired, it will be done by the school physician, but not until the parents make such request by signing a blank which accompanies the letter, and returning it to the teacher. All subsequent vaccination must be given by the family physician.

The parents are further advised that the school vaccination will be done with the same kind of material and with the same care that the physician uses in his private practice and a nurse will be present to assist and provide every possible precaution. No child will be vaccinated unless the parents request is given. At present there is no indication of any further spread of the disease, the health authorities having taken every precaution by isolating the two cases and vaccinating those who were likely to contract the disease.

Wallace, manager of the Wayclark Wire Company, of Elizabethport, who has been residing here for several months has purchased a valuable tract of land at Prospect and Hillside avenues and will erect a handsome residence there, the cost of which will be about $30,000. Alexander Milne has received the contract for the work.

The Wayclark Wire Company is owned by Senator W. A. Clark, of Montana.

Local Option.

"You say that local option has been of great benefit to this section of the country?"

"Yes, sir," answered Colonel Stillwell. "As soon as a lot of us citizens realized how far anybody would have to go for a drink we organized a good roads movement."—Washington Star.

DIXIE MINSTREES TO PRESENT 'BANG-UP' SHOW

After two months' rehearsals, the Dixie Minstrels, an aggregation of talented young Plainfielders, will will make their bow to the local public at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium on Thursday night, March 25. The troupe consists of twenty members, some of whom made their mark as members of Muir's Gold Medal Minstrels, and some of the blackface artists have had goodly experience in this line of entertainment.

Elmer G. Cutting, the capable manager of the Dixies, has arranged for a two hours and a half program and has divided his show into two parts, minstrelsy and an olio. A feature of the olio will be an afterpiece in the shape of a skit entitled "The Manager's Dilemma, or How Two Canal Boat Drivers Tried to Butt Into the Theatrical Business." The Quartette is said to be a hummer and it will take a prominent part in the show.

Mr. Cutter's end men and jokesmiths are Harry Blimm, Harry Messersmith, Hugh Rickett, John Todd, George Cose and Edward Bennett, while Joseph Martin will act as interlocutor. The quartette will consist of William Smith and Messrs. Cutting, Blimm and Messersmith. The cast for the farce will be composed of Messrs. Martin, Blimm, Cutting and Cose. Others who will take feature parts in the performance will include Edward C. Searing, William Briggs, Thomas DeMeza, John Horatio Hall, Archie Davie, Charles Martin, Arthur Martin, Joseph Randall and James Neary. Al. Squires will be the pianist.

The Dixie Minstrels have booked engagements for appearance in five surrounding towns and villages.

SMALLEY MAKES PLEDGE

The Somerset Assemblyman Goes on Record as Favoring Local Option Bill.

That Assemblyman W. W. Smalley, of Somerset county, is to be a prominent antagonist of "the liquor interests" of the State in the fight being made by the Local Optionists, is shown by a letter he has written to the local Christian Endeavor Union, in which he has pledged himself to support the Plummer Local Option bill and to work for the defeat of all measures favoring Sunday amusements. The letter was read at the joint meeting of the local Union with the general and finance committees for the State Christian Endeavor convention, held at the Temple Baptist church last night, and was greeted with applause. The communication was in reply to a letter sent to senators and representatives by the local union. Communications from Senator Ackerman, Assemblyman Pierce, Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, and Assemblyman Silzer, of Middlesex, contained statements that they would give the matter their careful consideration.

Miss Nettie K. Foote, of Elizabeth, who is district secretary of the Endeavorers of Union county, spoke at the meeting last night, urging all the members of the societies to attend the meeting of the Union County Extension Committee to be held tonight at the First Baptist church of Elizabeth. A delegation of about twenty endeavorers from here will be present.

The plan of inter-visitation among the societies, which provides that joint meetings shall be held from time to time, was discussed at length, and will be adopted. It was recommended that each society of the Union take up the course in Christian Endeavor fundamentals prepared by the State secretary.

It is expected that H. A. Kinports, president of the New York State Christian Endeavor Union, will be the speaker at the next mass meeting of the Union, which will be held early in May. Plans for the State convention, to be held October 6, 7 and 8, were discussed, and it is probable that a large delegation from the local union will attend.

GIVES AN ICE PLANT TO LOCAL HOSPITAL

Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, who has shown a deep interest in Plainfield charities and is a liberal giver to benevolences, has made a handsome gift to Muhlenberg hospital. She has arranged for the installation of a model artificial ice-making plant at the institution and will defray the entire expense.

The machine will cost approximately $2,000 and will answer the needs of an institution at least double the size of Muhlenberg. Work on the plant will be begun at an early date in order to have the machine in operation before the warm weather sets in. The improvement will be the means of making a great saving for the institution.

FAMOUS INN NO MORE.

Ye Old Wheatsheaf Inn' at Rossville borough has been closed for the first time in the existence of more than a century. Among the notable guests who occasionally were entertained there were Washington and Lafayette.

The lace has changed hands several times since the Revolutionary period, but the business never halted. The present owner is Mrs. C. V. Bonte from whom it was leased by the last tenant, Herman J. Saar. The old structure stands at Chestnut street and Rahway avenue and was still well patronized but complaint was made by the residents of the neighborhood that it was not being conducted on the same strict principles as of yore and their action has resulted in its being closed. The signs which have creaked and guided the lady and the knight for so many years have disappeared and rough boards cover the vacant staring windows.

MRS. EGE'S FUNERAL WAS LARGELY ATTENDED.

The funeral services of Mrs. Emma F. Ege were held Wednesday afternoon at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, the pastor, officiating. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. Joseph McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, assisted in the service by reading Scripture selections and offering prayer.

During the service a quartet comprising Miss Grace Carroll, contralto; Miss Nora Schenck, soprano; Charles Lewis, tenor and Elmer D. Cuting, tenor, sang "Peace, Perfect Peace," and "Sometime We'll Understand." Mr. Lewis sang as a solo. "Crossing the Bar."

There was a beautiful display of floral tributes. The interment was in Hillside Cemetery and the pallbearers were T. J. Mumford, L. N. Lovell, Irving Brown, A. N. Scher, William Sandford and William F. Arnold.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. JULIA LAING FORCE.

The funeral services of Mrs. Julia Laing Force, widow of James H. Force, were held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Will F. Williams, 66 Westervelt avenue. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends, and there was a beautiful display of floral tributes.

Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, conducted the service and after reading Scripture selections, he offered prayer and spoke impressive words of comfort to the bereaved ones and also dwelt on the beautiful Christian life of Mrs. Force and of the peaceful sleep that had come to her and of the joy of her awakening in the presence of her Saviour. The interment was in North Plainfield cemetery and the pall bearers were Fred M. Smalley, James A. Martin, A. L. Force, B. D. Newell, W. C. Startup and W. A. Millard.

Pumpkin Turnover.

A modernized form of the pumpkin pie is the pumpkin tartlet, which, while none the less savory than the old time pie, is a little more dainty and attractive to the eye, and, when the company to be served is large, it is much more economical because there is no waste in cutting. To make pumpkin tartlets, prepare a mixture as for pumpkin pie. Have patty-shapes baked empty, but not browned. Half fill each shape with the custard, then bake until well "set." Take from the oven and cover each with the meringue heaped high in the centre; return to the oven and brown slowly.

UNION'S SHARE $20,379.

$8,891.27 AWARDED ELIZABETH.

Union County Turned Over to State $251,000 Under Last Apportionment.

The amount due Union county in school moneys under the apportionment from the ten per cent. reserve fund was paid yesterday. It foots up to $20,379.88, nearly $5,000 less than the county would receive if it was given the full ten per cent. figured under the State school law.

Owing to the fact that the ratables of certain counties, particularly in the southern section of the State, are so low that the required sum is not made up, a percentage of the funds due other and more affluent counties is annually turned over to swell the school moneys of the poorer districts. Union county is rated high in this connexion and it has been contributing to the support of schools in some of the southern districts for years past in company with other northern counties.

Union county turned over to the State authorities about $251,000 in school money under the last apportionment. The amount due Elizabeth on the ten per cent. basis is $8,891.27, and this city is next highest in the county list with a claim of $3,424.87.

The appropriation of school moneys for Union county for the school year ending July 1, 1909, is as follows: From the $200,000 State School Fund, $9,892.77; from the $1,012,840.40 State fund, $83,949.70; from ninety per cent. of the State school tax, $226,618.92; from ten per cent. of the reserve fund, $20,379.88; from the main stem railroad tax of 1907, $150,678.35; $200 for each teacher in a three-year approved high school, $400 for each teacher in a four-year approved high school, $400 for each supervisor, except manual training; $200 for each permanent grade teacher, $25 for each pupil attending high school in adjoining district; $5 for each pupil attending school in adjoining district; seventy-five per cent. of the amount paid for transporting pupils to other districts, and $0.1702175 for each day of attendance at school.

The 1907 railroad tax previously apportioned was paid out of the custodians of school moneys on June 1, 1908, and is available for current expenses only during the school year, beginning July 1, 1908, and ending in July of this year.

DISPUTE OVER FARM IS SETTLED AT LAST

W. H. Rogers, of Highland Farm, who has been in charge of the Bloomfield farm at East Spotswood, returned home yesterday for a brief stay. The condition of affairs there were peculiar. It seems that two real estate brokers named Dawson, unauthorized, sold the large and valuable farm to a man named Dodson, of New York, for $10,500. Dodson paid $1,000 down to bind the bargain.

Now Dodson wanted the deed, but the brokers could not deliver it, because the present occupant, Duval Perry, has a one year lease and he as well as the three alleged rightful owners were unwilling to sign off.

Mr. Dodson, who paid $1,000 down wanted his money back, but Dawson brothers, it is said, claimed that they have spent half of the amount and cannot return the sum.

Last night there was an amicable agreement reached by all the parties concerned and W. H. Rogers and William Jeffery, who have been in charge of the farm, were released from further duty. Mr. Dodson will receive the money he paid on account of a purchase and the property is now in possession of the rightful owners.

MRS. EGE REMEMBERED THREE INSTITUTIONS.

By the will of Mrs. Emma F. Ege, whose death occurred Sunday night, three Plainfield institutions are generously remembered. Muhlenberg Hospital receives $5,000 and the Children's Home $1,000, while Bethel chapel is left $500. Mrs. Ege was particularly interested in all three institutions, and also in Warren chapel to which she gave a handsome pipe organ costing $2,500 before her death. The balance of the estate is left to relatives.

While the true value of the estate is not known it is believed to be large. During her thirty-five years residence here, Mrs. Ege was a steady contributor to charity and was always helping the unfortunate. William F. Arnold is the executor and Craig A. Marsh the counsel for the estate.

MAD DOG FINALLY SHOT

AFTERNOON OF EXCITEMENT.

Police of City and Borough Watching for Development of More Cases—Bitten Canines Locked Up.

Running amuck through the borough, afflicted with rabies, the bull terrier belonging to Miss Alice Higgins, of West Fourth street, bit seven other dogs and snapped at several pedestrians Monday afternoon before it was finally shot by Adam Fritz, of Howard street, who spied the animal after it had bitten the dog belonging to his neighbor, John Lowry. Police of both city and borough had been on the watch for the canine since noon.

As a result of the publicity given to the animal's wild run, city and borough dog owners kept careful watch over their pets Monday. Mayor C. J. Fisk this morning issued a proclamation forbidding owners to allow their canines to run at large without a muzzle, calling attention to the ordinance providing for a fine of $10 for each violation. Any unmuzzled dog found running at large will be impounded, according to the city's regulations and it will cost the owner $1 additional to again secure his dog, in addition to a charge of twenty-five cents a day for the animal's keep. Unclaimed dogs will be shot at the expiration of four days.

The canines which were bitten yesterday have been locked up by their various owners and are being carefully watched to see if hydrophobia will develop. It is believed that this precaution has been taken in the case of each animal bitten by the Higgins dog, but should dogs be found with open wounds, the police order that they be confined immediately, or else that their discovery be at once reported to the police.

The dogs bitten were owned by Mrs. Henry Rummel, of Park place; Lewis, M. VanDyke, of Linden avenue; Charles H. Lowry, of Linden avenue; John Lavinsky, Mrs. Maggie Wilson, of Linden avenue; Frank DeCamp, of Linden avenue; John Lowry, of Howard street and Charles Barry, of Howard street. The dog afflicted with rabies secured admittance to the house of Mr. Lavinsky, rushing into the kitchen and biting the ten pet puppy, which was lying by the stove. The other canines were all attacked in the streets.

Miss Alice Higgins, who owned the dead doggie told a Daily Press reporter today that the animal was valued at $40 and was given to her as a present about a year ago. The animal's name was "Beau Brummel." "Beau was always my pet," she said, "and I don't believe he had hydrophobia. He was always getting in fights with other dogs, and was cross because he had been torn in an encounter. We had Dr. Butler come to the house Sunday to see what was the matter with Beau's jaw, which was so disfigured that he couldn't eat or drink. I examined his mouth, and took care of him Sunday and Monday myself. He ran out of the house Monday and got in a fight with another dog right across the street. Then he went away. Beau always slept on the foot of my bed at night and wasn't bad tempered at all. Dr. Butler didn't tell us he had the rabies, but when he heard that Beau had gone away, he said that his cut mouth had probably been infected and the disease had developed."

TENNIS EDITOR ELECTED TRUSTEE OF THE P. C. C.

R. W. Merrihew, of this city, has been elected a trustee of the Plainfield Country Club in place of George S. Ring, who resigned, and has been made chairman of the tennis committee. Mr. Merrihew is the editor of "National Lawn Tennis," the organ of the game in this country, and is also an expert player. The club members are greatly pleased over the selection for it means that the tennis department will be well taken care of in the future.

The temporary putting greens and teeing grounds on the golf course are now in commission and golfers are requested to play under whichever the green is opened in order to spare the turf. A new club book is to be issued shortly and all changes of address since 1905 should be reported promptly to the secretary.

Gave a "500" Party.

Mrs. James A. Wotton gave a "500" party at her home on West Sixth street, Saturday night, to twenty of her friends. The home was decorated with flowers and ferns. After the play refreshments were served. Those who scored the greatest number of points were Mrs. R. H. Gow and Mrs. E. A. Gildes, H. E. Hudson and Frank Kelley. There were guests from New York, Brooklyn, Bayonne and this city.

Dutch Arms to Meet.

The monthly meeting of the Dutch Arms, the men's organization of Trinity Reformed church, will be held Friday night in the lecture room. There will be an entertainment and refreshments will be served.

ACKERMAN'S AMENDMENT BENEFITS WORKINGMAN

When Senate bill known as the Employers' Liability bill, came up on second reading in the State Senate Monday, Mr. Ackerman's amendment relieving employers of the necessity of furnishing "safe tools and implements," was adopted. Mr. Gebhardt's amendment giving injured employes the privilege of instituting action within two years, instead of restricting them to 120 days, was defeated.

Mr. Osborne, who practically made a single-handed fight against the bill, resented Mr. Ackerman's assertion that the measure was in the form of a compromise. "It's no compromise," fairly shouted Mr. Osborne; "it's a vicious bill and is merely a sop to the workingman."

Mr. Hillery opposed legislative action at this time, asserting that it should be deferred until next year. He admitted the fairness of giving injured employes damages, but added that there was also a danger of imperiling the future of manufacture in this State by indiscriminately penalizing employers for accidents.

Three amendments by Mr. Gebhardt were also defeated. They were intended to change the date when the bill would become operative and also to lengthen the period of time for injured employes to bring suit.

PRINCETON'S OLDEST.

Dr. Hepburn, Now 91, Was Graduated in 1832—Japanese Missionary.

Dr. James C. Hepburn, noted as a pioneer missionary to Japan, and the oldest living graduate of Princeton University, celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday Sunday at his home in Glenwood Avenue, East Orange, many friends called and left gifts.

Dr. Hepburn was graduated from Princeton in the class of 1832, and then studied medicine. After a few years' practice in New York city, he entered the medical staff of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions and went to Japan. In recognition of his services in that country the Mikado specially honored him.

Collected Many Curios.

Edward Mattox, of the U. S. S. Battleship New Jersey, has returned to his ship after a furlough of twelve days, visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Mattox, of Stebbins place. He was promoted twice on the long trip of the fleet. He brought home many beautiful things from foreign countries, including rugs, tea sets, pillow covers from Japan and beads from Egypt.

Credit Note.

An old toper, being very hard up, went into his favorite bar and asked the publican for a glass "on tick." "No," said the proprietor. "I won't give you whiskey on credit, but there's a dime. Now, what do you want?"

"Nothing here," replied the tippler lifting the coin and putting it in his pocket. "The man who refuses me credit won't get my ready cash," and he marched out at the door.—Lippincott's.

TAFT'S TARIFF MESSAGE

FOR COUNTRY'S INTERESTS.

Party Pledged, Says President Taft, and Business Community Demands It Be Done.

The President's special message on the tariff sent to Congress at Washington Tuesday is as follows:

"To the Senate and House of Representatives:

"I have convened the Congress in this extra session in order to enable it to give immediate consideration to the revision of the Dingley Tariff act. Conditions affecting production, manufacture and business generally have so changed in the last twelve years as to require a readjustment and revision of the import duties imposed by that act. More than this, the present tariff act, with the other sources of Government revenue, does not furnish the income enough to pay the authorized expenditures. By July 1 next the excess of expenses over the receipts for the current fiscal year will equal $100,000,000.

"The successful party in the late election is pledged to a revision of the tariff. The country and the business community especially expect it. The prospect of a change in the rate of import duties always causes a suspension or halt in business because of uncertainty as to the changes to be made and their effect. It is therefore of the highest importance that the new bill should be agreed upon and passed with as much speed as possible consistent with its due and thorough consideration. For these reasons I have deemed the present to be an extraordinary occasion, within the meaning of the Constitution, justifying and requiring the calling of an extra session.

"In my inaugural address, I stated in a summary way, the principles upon which, in my judgment, the revision of the tariff should proceed, and indicated at least one new source of revenue that might be properly resorted to in order to avoid a future deficit. It is not necessary for me to repeat what I then said.

"I cannot too strongly urge that the vital business interests of the country require that the attention of the Congress in this session be chiefly devoted to the consideration of the new tariff bill, and that the less time given to other subjects of legislation during this session the better for the country.

make the total amount necessary $24,884.95 to meet which will receive in taxes an amount of $27,-537.64, or $7,347.31 less than our requirements.

"The expenses of lights, water, police, fire department and street work make up the bulk of borough expenditures. To reduce the number of street lights would cause much inconvenience. To cut off the use of water would render our fire department useless. The police force is now as small as it can with safety be maintained. It is difficult to see where any saving can be made except by stopping work on the streets. The Council has now before it petitions asking for the macadamizing of two streets and others are to be presented; but unless relief be afforded it may be necessary to cancel the contracts made.

"In conclusion I want to say that it is not my desire to appear in opposition to the Board of Education, the members of which I esteem highly, and because of this feeling I have refrained from mentioning to anyone that this matter was to be laid before you tonight; but I feel that I would have been remiss in my duty had I not made this statement and at this time before final action was taken. I do not doubt that the estimates of the board have been carefully made up; but if they could see their way clear, with this statement before them, to recommend some reduction in the amount asked for, it would greatly relieve the situation."

ZALA

By THE COUNTESS OF CROMARTIE.

They had met on a long Phoenician clavership. He was a swarthy young Scythian with clean-cut, keen face, an aquiline nose and black hawk's eyes. She was a little fair Greek, with dark-fringed blue eyes, and a pretty soft way of smiling that she still had even now, in the midst of fear and haunting memories of a happy home. The fact of their both being highly born may have drawn them together. For Zala, the Scythian, was a prince's son, and had known a happy life, till one day, after hunting, he awoke from a heavy sleep among the sand dunes to find the slippery ropes about his neck and ankles. He had fought like a young tiger, but it had been no use, and now—his slim highbred beauty and his courage and strength would doubtless fetch a high price. Just now he spent part of his time in chains, for he still had fits of violence. Lying on the deck one sunset, his black curly head against the mast, his eyes gazing sullenly at nothingness, he caught sight of the girl Zoe. One of the other slave women, a footless crippled young fury, was mocking her for a soft-hearted little fool that did not know what fate had in store for her. Zala knew well why the other girls hated Zoe. The Phoenician trader spared her a few of the hardships that would fall to the lot of many slaves, because he knew well enough if he did not he might lose what promised to be the best of his female merchandise (for the little Greek's steady bravery and endurance covered a frailty of body and nerves that Zala, born horse-man as he was, recognized at once. A touch of the whip and she'll die, he thought, as he watched the girl face the woman's gibes. The cool brave of her race was in her eyes, but the lovely, slender lines of her little figure were those of a feminine weakling. Zala had been a fighter and, young as he was, had been in many strange camps, so he was able to speak to Zoe, who, as soon as her enemy had departed, collapsed into a frightened, trembling little female, and he was her friend. She would bring him her share of food and drink, for Zala, being rebellious, was often half-starved. Sometimes he would eat wolfishly, for he was no saint to deny himself. But then he would look at the sweet delicate face, and demand half angrily, "Hast thou eaten?" and she would lie to him and say, "Yes, Zala, yes."

It was on one of these occasions that he threw to him fiercely and put his lips to hers. It was enough to him that she returned his kisses before he felt the slave merchant's whip across his shoulders. That also was enough for his passionate nature, and fierce unsubdued pride. He gripped the girl to him tigerishly, and she clung to him though he was bruised and hurt in his savage embrace. They tore her away from him at last and Zala was tied up and thrashed, then flung under the deck to meditate upon his sins, faint and sick, but absolutely unrepentant. What he could or can be certain of was a heavy storm, the slaves were driven below, and discipline was somewhat relaxed by imminent danger.

The storm had driven the galley out of its course. For Zala and Zoe the inevitable separation was delayed, perhaps for months. They were both in a way not of earth in the girl's blue eyes. The trader grunted with satisfaction; she was growing fairer every day, she would fetch much gold. As for Zala, he was more amenable. The trader did not guess at the reason that made the Scythian put aside his fierce pride —because with tied limbs he could not, with all his cunning, arrange those desperate stolen meetings that were life to two souls on the slave ship. In a small hut of these things, Zala noticed how Zoe coughed—a hacking little cough—and how the cold air was making her shiver. She was made for warmth and light. A chill November in the northern sea was not good for her, he thought anxiously. So one night he rose and made his way to the trader's cabin in the fore part of the galley. Under the light of a swinging lamp sat the Phoenician casting up accounts on a huge sheet of parchment. He looked up. Zala stood with his back to the door, and his dark eyes burning fire in the pallor of his face. The trader had merely to call his men to have him dragged back to the lower deck. But he did not call. He had lived a fearless and eventful life, and he feared his foe. He said afterward that Zala had the very fire of Bael in his eyes, that night as he spoke—quickly and hoarsely like a man in a fever.

"What hast thou done with the child?" Answer me, man, answer!"

The young Scythian had once commanded men. The sense of that made his tone like a whip-lash, for all his present fate. The trader could cope with that, so he shrugged his shoulders and answered: "Ah, ha, so it is that, is it?"

The terrible burning eyes fixed him again. "Give her to me," said Zala, "give her to me, or by the gods 'tis my dead body thou shalt take on thy ship to Tarsa and—I am valuable. See!" He rent the tattered tunic from him, and stood in his lithe half-naked beauty under the lamplight. "See! They said long ago I had beauty and strength. Man, I will make thee rich if I live. My body is thine to sell or slay, only give her to me."

"Well, have thy way," said the trader, "I would send thee to sleep with whips if she was not dying. But as it is, Bael cannot say that I stood against his fire even with cattle like thee and thy fight o' love, so come."

"It is well," said Zala calmly, and he followed the trader.

In a smaller cabin lay little Zoe, while near her watched the woman who had mocked her that day. She was not in any actual physical discomfort, for the superstitious reverence of that day for the beauty of Zala's race had led the trader to add to the trader's hope of saving a valuable bargain, had made him comply at last with the child's piteous appeals for Zala. The one name was coming from her lips over and over again, even as her lover entered the narrow cabin. "Zala! Zala! Zala!" With a savage gesture Zala took the attendant by the shoulder and sent her cowering out of the door. The trader, suddenly grown human, turned and went, leaving them together.

"My love, my child, my sweet!" Zoe came back from dark wanderings at the sound of Zala's voice, and he forgot that he was working in the Phoenician's interest, not his own, when he tried to hold her back from the shadow—and the Phoenician, with his dark racial knowledge of human nature and economic values, left them alone, save that he gave Zala all he asked for. But there came a calm starlit night when Zoe had seemed stronger for a little while, only Zala knew, with the strange knowledge of his time, that it was the last flicker of the life before it went—elsewhere. The starlight shone into the place where they lay. Zoe was stroking his face with her thin little hand. "It is better so, most dear," she whispered. "It would have troubled thee to part with me and—it must have broken my heart. The gods have been very good. I have had a happy life, and here have I had thy love. Is it not best that we do not part and because I am thine?"

Zala could not say it was not best. To have Zoe torn from him at the end would have been even harder to bear than this.

Zala was bought for the king's service, and one day the two met face to face. The Scythian had come with a message to where the young conqueror sat planning bloody destruction for the Picts. He looked at Zala as the latter rose from a proud, impassive obeisance. "Thou hast not always been a slave?" said the king suddenly.

"No," said Zala. "Once, long ago, I was a prince of the Scythians."

"Long ago," said the king. "Why, thou art young, younger than I."

"Ay, but my heart is old," said Zala, with a smile that was sadder than any tears. The king turned restlessly on his great golden chair. "Was it love?" he said coldly, as one who asks a riddle.

"It was love," said Zala, and told him all to the end, for he saw a shadow in the Milesian's dark eyes that was as the reflection of the shadow in his own soul. The king drew parchment toward him and wrote. Zala thought he was an answer to the message he had brought. "Yet he understood," thought the Scythian as he waited with bent head while the king stamped the letter with the ring he wore. He looked at Zala and again their eyes met. The king spoke briefly. "There is a Phoenician galley in the harbor. Take this to the captain and say thou art to have safe passage homeward. He will take thee safe or his life pays the forfeit. Thus have I written, so do I command him by his life." My mother was a Tyrian, therefore, they love me, also fear me, which is better, sometimes. Now go—nay, thank me not, I would keep thee, but I have lost even as thou hast lost. Farewell!"

Thus a Scythian prince regained his home and his rights. But love he never knew truly again, because for him it lay hidden in the far Ionian sea.

Illustrated Card Not Popular.

The illustrated visiting card, which was introduced in Munich last year, under the patronage of several members of the royal family, has not shown any marked popularity, says a Berlin paper. A number of artists have become converts to the fashion, and it seems probable that the most elaborate designs appear on the cards of the least known painters, while people who have no claim on the public because of worth or standing also indulge in conspicuous pasteboards. It seems as though the plain, modest visiting card could not be improved upon. When these are studied they usually indicate, despite their seeming similarity, the character of the owner quite as well as the illustrated or decorated kind.

Pennsylvania's Pioneer.

SAVED HER JEWELS

AUNT MAT'S SCREAMS TERRIFIED BURGLAR.

Imitation of Calliope Proved Effective Once, But the Diamonds Are Now Safe in the Vaults of the Bank.

"You never heard Aunt Mat's burglar story, did you?" said the girl. If you only could hear her tell it! It was a real burglar, you know. That is how it was: You know, Aunt Mat has more diamonds than anybody in her town. You've seen them. Regular robin's eggs. Well, that night Philip was away, and she and little Mattie were all alone in the big house. Mattie was asleep in the big front room that is on the front porch, and Aunt Mat had the folding bed in the dining-room made up and was sleeping on that, with her diamonds in a little chamois bag under her head.

"Long after midnight Aunt Mat was awakened by a creepy sound. Like a branch of a tree sweeping back and forth against the window, in the big room where Mattie was sleeping. There was a tiny night lamp in that room, in a far corner.

"She lay there perfectly paralyzed by this sound, feeling that something awful was in store. You can understand that feeling. That something terrible was about to happen. She couldn't move, she said, listening to that awful sound. Pretty soon she began to realize what it was. The opening of the window in the big room. It kept up and on, and then the sound stopped, and she lay on her bed with her eyes on the door of the big room, waiting. It wasn't long before she saw the shadow of something coming into the doorway.

"The shadow came across the threshold first, then there began to creep across it into the dining-room on all fours—a great black negro.

"Well, Aunt Mat said she thought she nore almost fright. She lay perfectly still, hardly breathing, as this thing on all fours came creeping across the room to her bed, where she knew her diamonds were under her pillow. He came nearer and nearer, she lying there staring at him, unable to move from fright. He came nearer and nearer, and then, just as he was preparing to spring at her, she sat straight up in bed, she says, and yelled!

"She yelled: 'Philip! Philip!' Then she fell to screaming, screaming, screaming! She says Philip must have heard her, wherever he was, she screamed so loud.

"Then what? Why, the negro was more terrified than Aunt Mat. He looked at her for a moment and then he made for the window. Out of that he went head first.

"He was one of a band of negro robbers abroad that night. All of them were caught within a few days. Eight houses had been broken into during the night. In the morning on the five gates of the finest houses in the town there were arrows drawn in charcoal, showing which were to be broken into.

"Long, bet your life Aunt Mat went straight to the bank the next morning and put her diamonds there. No more sleeping in diamonds for her after that."

A Camera in the Stomach.

Perhaps the most remarkable of the recent inventions in the medical line is an apparatus by means of which the stomach may be photographed from within. It is the discovery of a Munich doctor, and is thus described in action: "The camera, which is swallowed by the patient, and when it reaches its destination the interior of the stomach is illuminated by a small electric lamp attached to the apparatus. At the bottom of the camera is wound on a photographic film 50 inches long and a quarter of an inch wide. The physician pulls a cord which runs the film past the lens, the electric lamp is turned on, and the impressions made on the sensitive film. The procedure is repeated until the requisite number of pictures have been taken."

Doctored an Alligator.

A novel surgical operation took place recently on an alligator in Bostock's jungle, in London, the menagerie's veterinary surgeon officiating. The alligator in question had been attacked by another alligator, and had suffered a compound fracture of the lower jaw. After the wound had been sterilized a padded splint was applied along the under surface of the lower jaw. The splint was held in position by means of adhesive plaster bound around the jaw and passing over the tongue.

Perfectly Equipped.

When the large and healthy-looking individual who had asked at the door for "a little something to eat" was told that he might have it if he would work a while at the wood-pile, he shook his head mournfully.

"I've got the ague," he explained, "and my hand is that unsteady I couldn't hit more'n one stick in seven."

"All right!" exclaimed the mistress of the house. "Go out in the back yard and shake those ashes for me."—Youth's Companion.

Respite.

"What sort of a time do you expect to have during the social season?"

"Fine," answered Mr. Cumrox; "Mother and the girls will be so busy thinking about their clothes that they won't have time to notice my grammar."

SUGGEST DOG LICENSES

Kennel Club Makes Recommendations for Provisions of Proposed Ordinance.

TO CHANGE PRESENT TAX

Leather Muzzles, Instead of Iron Contrivances, Urged by the Local Canine Fanciers.

As a result of the conference of members of the Plainfield Kennel club and the Councilmanic laws and ordinance committee, Monday night, valuable suggestions were offered and doubtless will be incorporated in the proposed new dog ordinance. The club, with a membership of 135, has as its principal objects to secure local legislation that will tend to protect valuable dogs.

Members of the club believed that some of the provisions of the proposed ordinance were too drastic and having gathered data on the subject were invited to attend a conference and make suggestions. As now drafted it will have the hearty support of the club and undoubtedly all lovers of dogs.

One of the provisions that has caused some discussion is that of license fee to be imposed. In most cities it is $1, but the committee suggested making it considerably more. It was finally decided to let that matter rest for the present and later a fee that will be satisfactory to all concerned will be determined upon.

Another feature discussed was that relative to muzzling dogs. It was stated by the dog fanciers that muzzles of any kind were only an irritation and the best of them were inadequate. However, it was agreed that the old fashioned leather muzzle was the best. It was explained that inasmuch as a dog does not perspire through its skin, but solely through its mouth, it is quite necessary that the dog should not be seriously interfered with in this respect. The committee agreed with the representatives of the club on this point and it is believed that the ordinance will not be made too severe in this particular.

The club has the interest of all dog owners at heart, and not only those of the organization as some people believe. It has been suggested that some arrangement be made to issue a license covering all kennels where there are five or more dogs and this may be done. The club is getting ready to hold its first annual bench show here and it promises to be one of the best in this part of the country. It is hoped that in this way a more general interest may be aroused in behalf of better protection for dogs and will encourage the raising of thoroughbred stock.

EDWARD KIELY ARRESTED.

Henry Voehl, Jr., Has Him Brought Before Recorder.

On the complaint of Henry Voehl, Jr., Chief Marshal George Weiss, of the borough, arrested Edward Kiely, of that place, this morning, charging him with the theft of some harness from Voehl's barn two weeks ago. Mr. Voehl claimed that when returned the harness was cut in pieces. It was also alleged that a wagon had been borrowed nocturnally. The prisoner admitted taking the things but said that it was according to an understanding.

Recorder Dolliver said the man had no right to take the things without permission and advised Mr. Voehl to secure a warrant from a justice of the peace for Kiely's arrest if he did not settle.

It was the thirty-second concert given by the organization, and besides the instrumental program, vocal solos were rendered by Miss Edna Mae Stoeckler, of the P. E. church of St. John the Evangelist, New York.

Miss Stoecker is a soprano singer, remarkably sweet voiced and gains the popularity of the audience from the beginning.

Her "Song of the Nightingale" was especially good, and her encore response was: "If None Ever Marries Me."

The orchestra invariably received spontaneous applause and was obliged to render a number of extra selections.

Many Protests Against Bills.

Senator Ernest R. Ackerman has presented to the Senate protests against the passage of Assembly Bills Nos. 179 and 180, by Mr. McKeag, from the board of education of Cranford, Linden, Roselle, Springfield, South Plains and other places. The bills if passed would terminate the terms of all county superintendents of schools and take away the appointing power from the State Board of Education and place it in the Governor's hands. Senator Ackerman has also received protests against the passage of Senate bill No. 231 as being unfair to the practice of osteopathy.

Fined $1 for Fibbing.

Borough Recorder Dolliver fined George Hartfelder, aged fifteen years, $1 last night, because he fibbed about his name and then ran away from the police when he was arrested at the Park Golf grounds on Sunday. Percy Simmonds, ten years and Thomas, Joseph and Paul Carey, aged fifteen, thirteen and eight years respectively, companions of the white boy, were given suspended sentences. The boys did considerable damage about the golf club grounds and house and were arrested by Special Marshal Eric Sohl.

George Lucy Was Drunk.

George Lucy, who lives on Prescott place, was arrested last night for drunkenness and released with suspended sentence at his hearing before City Judge Runyon today. Lucy said he had only been in Plainfield about a week. He said he had been told by a man in New York that Plainfield was an easy place to get work, so he came here. The strange part of it all is that he did get a steady job. The Judge continued his streak of luck by suspending sentence.

Randolph Shows Up Well.

Clifford Randolph, who is now with the Newark Eastern League club, appeared in the limelight of a big game yesterday for the first time and won many honors as a twirler. TWO BIBLE CLASSES HAVE A SOCIAL TIME

Under the auspices of the young men's Bible classes of Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry and Mrs. William Clark and the young women's Bible class of Mrs. S. A. Krom a delightful entertainment and social was given at the Park Avenue Baptist church, last night, to the Sunday-school and their friends. The whole affair was arranged by the members of these classes and was a great success. The attendance was large.

During the evening there were two sketches, one being "A Lesson in Obstancy," and the other "An Interrupted Proposal." Both were exceedingly amusing and kept the audience in continual laughter from beginning to end. Those taking part in the sketches were Miss Marjorie Brown, Miss Eleanor Stutsman, Miss Mae Whitney, Miss Sarah Boyd, Martin Stutsman, Augustus Nash and Charles Hillyer. Another amusing feature of the program was "A Musical Romance," given by Miss Maude Clark, Miss Arlees Brown and Miss Marjorie Brown. They played various selections on the piano descriptive of courtship, marriage and bridal tour of a young couple. The selections included "Soldiers' Farewell," "Friday," "Merry Widow Waltz," and "America," the last named one indicating the future home of the couple. The interesting part of this feature was that those in the audience were expected to guess the titles of the musical numbers. Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry had charge of this portion of the program. After the entertainment, refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

ARCHER GIBSON GAVE A PLEASING RECITAL

Archer Gibson, organist of the Brick Presbyterian church, of New York city, gave a delightful organ recital at the Crescent Avenue *church last night, when he was as-*sisted by Frank Croxton, basso of the New York church. The affair was the first public recital with the new church organ, the previous recitals having been primarily for the church people.

The organ numbers of last night's program were especially suited to the instrument, and Mr. Gibson's playing won the keenest appreciation. Mr. Croxton sang three times, rendering the aria from Handel's "Julius Caesar," "The Two Grenadiers," by Schumann, and Haydn's aria from "The Creation." He was in fine voice, both his full tones and his wide range winning the heartiest appreciation.

At the organ, Mr. Gibson delighted by his successful use of the various stops which produced a rare tone effect in several of the selections. The various numbers on the program were transcriptions for the modern organ by Mr. Gibson. The program follows:

Handel, from Organ Concertos, (a) Larghetto, (b) Allegro ma non troppo, (c) Siciliano, (d) Minuetto; Handel, Aria from "Julius Caesar;" Dubois, Cantilene Nuptiale; Bizet, Intermezzo (Suite "L'Arlesienne"); Mascagni, Prelude and Siciliano; Schumann, "The Two Grenadiers;" Soederman, Swedish Wedding March; Puccini—Gibson, Rhapsody on "La Boheme;" Haydn, Aria from "The Creation;" Guilmant, (a) Elegy Spring Song (by request), (d) Improvisation; Wagner, (a) Prelude, (b) Good Friday, "Parsifal, (c) Liebestod ("Tristan"), (d) Evening Star ("Tannhauser"); Rossini, Overture "William Tell."

CHILD'S BURNS FATAL

SHE INHALED THE FLAMES.

Mother's Heroic Efforts to Save Child's Life by Pumping Water On Her Were of No Avail.

Victoria De Nizio, the year-old daughter of Mrs. Mary De Nizio, of Scotch Plains, died last night as the result of burns received when a red-hot coal from the kitchen stove set fire to her dress yesterday. County Physician Westcott, who attended the child, said that death was caused by inhalation of flames, which completely enveloped the little girl as she ran screaming from the house. The efforts of the mother, who seized the blazing child and carried her to a near-by pump where she extinguished the flames by pumping water on her, were of no avail, for the little one was horribly burned about the limbs.

The little girl, who was an only child, is the daughter of Felix De Nizio, who was killed at Hetfield & Weldon's stone crusher at Scotch Plains about two months ago. She was helping her mother yesterday and was in the kitchen shaking the fire in the stove, when a red-hot coal dropped out on the floor. The child did not notice her danger until her dress burst into flames. Crazed with fright, she dashed screaming out into the back yard. Her mother saw her, enveloped from head to foot in flames, which were fanned by the high wind, and rushed to her assistance, seized the girl and carrying her to the pump, which stood nearby, she held her under the spout and pumped water on her until the flames were extinguished.

Although the child's limbs were terribly burned, her condition was not considered serious at first. Dr. Westcott was summoned and dressed the burns, but his fears that the little girl had inhaled the flame proved true, and she died last night. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock from the church at Stony Hill. Burial will be in the Stony Hill cemetery.

The friends of former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, the borough's leader, are solid for Runyon and their petition urges Frelinghuysen to recommend him to Governor Fort for appointment provided the bill becomes a law.

The Somerville contingent favors Frederick E. Pope, of Bridgewater township, but there is a general feeling through the county that the plum should go to North Plainfield.

DISAPPEARED FROM HOME

Miss Donna Campbell's Absence Explained by Her Dislike for School Life.

AT UNCLE'S IN NEW YORK.

Without Telling Her Mother She Went on a Visiting Trip and Parent Became Alarmed.

Donna Campbell, the fifteen-year old daughter of Mrs. Louise A. Campbell, of 249 East Front street, who disappeared from her home Monday morning, was located last night in New York city, where she was visiting her cousin, Miss Hilda Lynch. The girl's trip was a truancy prank, and Miss Campbell spent Monday at the homes of two girl friends in Elizabeth before going to her uncle's home. She is a member of the freshman class at the Plainfield High School, and has frequently complained to her mother about the irksomeness of the school life.

The girl left home Monday morning with her school books, and her mother supposed that she was going to school. She met a girl friend and told her that she was going visiting in Elizabeth. Still carrying her school books, Miss Campbell took a train for Elizabeth and lunched with a friend there. In the afternoon, she left this girl's home and went to the home of another friend on South Broad street, where she took supper. In the evening she took a train for New York, saying that she was going to visit her cousin, Hilda Lynch. Mrs. Campbell says that her daughter has not seen Miss Lynch for more than five years, and the girls are practically strangers. To the Lynch's home Miss Campbell went, nevertheless, and spent the night and all of yesterday.

Mrs. Campbell, the mother, went to New York Monday, and did not learn of her daughter's disappearance until late in the evening, when she returned home. She reported her daughter's absence from home to Chief Kiely, and he notified the police of Newark, Elizabeth and New York city to be on the look-out for the girl. Yesterday a letter came from New York in reply to a telegram sent to Mr. Lynch by Mrs. Campbell. Mr. Lynch wrote that Donna Campbell was at his home, and wanted to know what was the matter, for he saw at a loss to explain her appearance there Monday night and her visit with the cousin whom she had not seen in so long.

"My daughter will be home today," said Mrs. Campbell, in speaking to a Daily Press representative about the girl's disappearance today. "The whole affair is simply a school-girl's prank, for Donna got tired of school and went off on this little visiting tour. I think that she was afraid that I would not let her go, so she just started off without telling me."

PROCTOR'S THEATRE PLANS FOR A SUMMER GARDEN.

Harry S. Sanderson, who is associated with F. F. Proctor, at Proctor's theatre, has decided upon elaborate plans for the coming season which will make the playhouse more popular than ever. The theatre, which opened on November 30 last, it was the original intention to eventually produce high-class plays, although the plans decided upon then were temporarily for a moving picture entertainment exclusively.

Since the opening Messrs. Proctor and Sanderson have become convinced they say that the people of Plainfield and vicinity like the present form of entertainment and have decided to continue it indefinitely. The playhouse will remain open throughout the summer season and improvements will be introduced which will make it a cool and comfortable place during the hot weather. The vacant strip of land adjoining the theatre on the southwest will be transformed into an attractive summer garden through the use of flowers and shrubbery. Seats and small tables will be provided for the serving of ice cream and temperance *drinks for those who desire refresh*ments.

FEAST OF GET-TOGETHERS

G. O. P. Organization Club Celebrates in Honor of Ireland's Patron Saint.

GEORGE J. TOBIN TOASTMASTER.

Factory Inspector McCardell, Judge Newcorn and Others Make Informal Speeches.

Though many of the old stagers among the membership of the Get-Together Club, the local Republican leaders' aid society, went to Elizabeth Wednesday to attend St. Patrick's day dinner, a jolly good time was had by that organization in honor of Ireland's patron saint at its headquarters. The banquet, held in the Green room, lasted until midnight and was voted by the twenty-six survivors to be the best ever held in the city since the Board of Trades feast.

Past Chief Sagamore George J. Tobin acted as toastmaster and the twenty-six voted that he filled the bill admirably. Chief Ranger William Newcorn made a speech; so did the other twenty-five. Besides telling the stories of their lives and what they thought of the proposed new tariff law, the speakers incidently referred to St. Patrick. Keeper of the Forest William L. Gloak, who spent his boyhood near Paris, claimed that the saint was a Frenchman and had been imported by Ireland. The chief ranger took issue with him, declaring that St. Patrick's ancestors were Hebrews for he got the best of the snakes, while Assistant Keeper of the Wampum John Bowman argued that St. Patrick came from among the Pennsylvania Dutch, who never knew what it was to "see snakes."

Among the others taking part in the discussion were Squaw S. P. T. Wilbur, Grand High Chief Sachem Andrew McCardell, First Sanap Elias Bird, Second Sanap Robert Parnell Craig, Keeper of the Wampum James Burns Stewart. Those who had to listen to the speakers were William Craig, A. W. Clifton, C. J. Ward, David J. Carney, M. J. Whelan, Alexander McPherson Ayres, John Mortimer, John Henschel Cone, Dr. Albert E. Gildner, Charles Harris Dunham, Frederick, W. Hand, John Slevin John Bowman, John Casper Trayner, Edward Brown, Joseph Tipperary Harrigan, Charles Cork Randolph, Frank W. Randolph and Dr. A. K. Brennan.

NEW WHITE GOODS
HERE FOR SPRING.

Newest of the new is the white cotton crepe that Paris has taken to her heart. Years ago, perhaps, it was worn, but the present generation knoweth it not, and to them it has all the charm of new-ness. Soft, fine, "crinkly," it is being used to make both waists and dresses. For trimming it takes preferably a lace of the nature of Cluny rather than filmier kinds.

Another exquisite white goods is the embroidered French pique. Vanish all former ideas of pique when one sees it. With its tiny ribbed cords of a wonderful softness and fineness, with delicate, almost lacy, stripes and scattered tiny embroidered designs, it has a style individual and fascinating.

Our old friend white madras has taken to itself this spring the chevron stripes and diagonal weaves of the winterime fabrics. Very smart they are, too, in her snowy material.

Stripes seem to preponderate in the new styles, though, of course, figured effects in this favored fabric are always popular.

The new embroidered swisses are daintier and lovelier than ever. Designs are smaller. There is a tendency to stripe and block effects and conventional and geometrical figures.

Fine sheer lines embroidered daintily is always useful in the summer wardrobe. Designs are small this season and frequently with a note of eyelet.

The dainty plaid muslins are ever lovely in their fine sheer prettiness, cross-barred and striped in shadow beauty. Then there is the whole army of plain white goods, the Paris muslins, chiffonettes, batistes and such old-time favorites.

The white goods counters just now are happy hunting grounds for the woman in search of snowy prettiness for summer wearing.

SAY THAT MORTGAGE WAS LEGALLY GIVEN

Answering the charge that a chattel mortgage for $2,500, held by Harry Dreier is fraudulent against the creditors of the National Brewing Company, as claimed by that firm's receiver, Eldwood W. Moore, Jr., Frank E. Bradner, of Newark, has filed an answer in the Chancery Court for Harry Dreier and Charles P. Senger, the principals, in which he denies that there is anything wrong with the transaction. The case will now be referred by Chancellor Pitney to one of the vice-chancellors, who will be assigned to hear the case.

The charge of fraudulency, which caused a suit in the Chancery Court at Trenton some time ago by the brewing company's receiver against Dreier and Senger, stated that the mortgage was given under the color of a resolution passed at a directors' meeting at which only Samuel Dreier, father of Harry Dreier and father-in-law of Senger, was present with Senger. It was claimed that no money was passed for the mortgage.

The answer alleges that the money was paid over by Mr. Dreier, the elder, and was used in the business of the brewing company. It is further stated in the answer that the fact that only two were present at the meeting can make no difference, for Mr. Dreier has the mortgage and proposes to keep it. Senger's answer corroborates these statements.

THIMBLE CLUB SURPRISE FOR MRS. F. T. WOODHULL

A delightful surprise party was tendered to Mrs. Floyd T. Woodhull, of West Front street, by the members of the Thimble Club last Wednesday afternoon, when eighteen of the club members "dropped in" at her home unexpectedly. The affair was arranged by Mrs. E. C. Martin and Mrs. Frank Wynkoop, of Dunellen, and proved a complete surprise.

It was St. Patrick's Day, and the Emerald Green played a prominent part in the lavish decorations of the house. The luncheon was the feature of the affair, and the dining-rooms presented a gala appearance, decorated with green. The place cards were painted by Mrs. Wynkoop and made attractive souvenirs of the occasion. The favors were little baskets made of green crepe paper, and a potted shamrock, surmounted by a miniature hod was the centre-piece ornament. The chandelier was draped with green ribbon, from which hung clay pipes.

Following the luncheon, the guests played flinch and later there was singing. Those present were Mrs. F. T. Woodhull, Mrs. Lindsey Leek, Mrs. Littell, of Dunellen; Mrs J. E. FRIENDLY SONS' BANQUET

Union County Irishmen Addressed by Governor John Franklin Fort.

SPEAKERS LAUD OLD ERIN.

James E. Martine Responds to a Toast—Many Plainfielders Attend Annual Function.

"America, Our Country," was the theme followed by Governor John Franklin Fort, Wednesday, in his speech at the fifteenth annual banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, held in the Y. M. C. L. A. Hall, in Elizabeth. He was introduced by General Dennis F. Collins, who said that the people of Elizabeth were always glad to greet a Governor of New Jersey, and especially Governor Fort.

The Governor said in part:

"America was the first country to have a written instrument for the government of its people which was based on the fundamental principle that all men are created equal. The Articles of Confederation were a failure because they were not raised to the heights of the Declaration of Independence. They were adopted 'for all free men' and not for all the inhabitants. The Declaration of Independence was molded to meet any conditions that may arise—so molded that it has met every condition and every emergency that has arisen in the republic up to the present time. What would your forefathers in old Ireland have given for such an instrument?

"The great problem of today is: Shall the people rule? Party lines are no longer as strong as in the old days—the independent units of government count for something—the man counts for something. Disraeli said: 'England puts too much faith in systems and not enough in men.' That has been the fault in our republic, if any. Now I am not discussing corporations. I am not in any sense an anti-corporation man, if the corporation conducts its business the way it ought to. There is no sovereignty in our Congress, no sovereignty in the judiciary, in the President or in the State. The only sovereignty is in the people of the State and nation. There is no such word as 'sovereignty' in the Constitution of the State or nation."

The Governor referred to an Assemblyman who had sent his regrets to the banquet committee, saying that his absence was due to a special call of the Legislature, commending him for his action, and declaring that it was the spirit that should animate all public officials. He was vigorously applauded and was cheered lustily as he left the hall to attend the Legislature.

General Collins reviewed the history of the Friendly Sons, and told of their early origin. He extended a welcome to the new members. There were other speakers of note, who lauded the Irish race.

James E. Martine, the "farmer orator," responded in place of Joseph Tumulty, who was unable to attend. "Jim" was given a rousing ovation and delivered a great speech.

The affair was a pronounced success, the hall being thronged with guests. It was decorated with the American flag and the green of Ireland. The guests of the evening were the Governor, Colonel Austen Colgate, the Rev. John A. Dillon and Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan.

Lawrence T. Fell, president of the Friendly Sons, of the Oranges, sent a telegram of congratulations, as did John L. Carroll, president of the Second Celtic Club, and Michael P. Devine, president of the local Sons of Erin. They were replied to by the committee, who extended like greetings. The dinner was the fifteenth the society has held, and there were present practically every prominent official in the city and county.

Those present from this city were James E. Martine, Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, Amos Andrews, William J. Whelan, H. W. Marshall, Councilman Clement, County Collector Garret P. H. Smith, Rev. B. M. Bogan, Chief P. S. Kiely, Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., James F. Buckle, E. C. Westcott, George Johnston, Tax Collector William R. Townsend.

FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENTS

Thoroughfares to Be Macadamized in the Vicinity of Plainfield.

THE WORK WILL BEGIN SOON.

Stretch From Terrill Road to Two Bridges—West Seventh Street Extension.

Many road improvements, which will benefit Plainfield, have been sanctioned by the State road department, according to State Supervisor of Roads Robert A. Meeker. In addition to that known as the Stirling road, which, when improved, will make a through macadamized thoroughfare to Morristown and Bernardsville, one to Rahway by way of Willow Grove is planned. Fanwood township has condemned the land necessary for the straightening out of Terrill road from the city line to Two Bridges, a stretch of two miles. The macadamized connection from Two Bridges is through Willow Grove to Westfield avenue and into Clark township, where it is improved already into Rahway. The improvement will cost $14,000 and the work will be begun next month.

The road department has also approved the plan to macadamize Jefferson avenue, between Plainfield and Dunellen, and the paving part of the expense will be borne by Middlesex and Union counties. The strip is only 2,000 feet in length and the cost will be $2,500. Surveys and specifications are to be made before the work is started early in the spring.

Middlesex county has decided to improve the extension from West Seventh street, at the city line, which, when macadamized, will make another route to New Brunswick from Clinton avenue to New Market road connecting with the New Market stone road. The unimproved strip is but a mile in length and the work will cost $15,000.

LONGFELLOW EVENING PROVES ENTERTAINING

"An Evening with Longfellow" was enjoyed at the Seventh-Day Baptist church Wednesday, when a program of exceptional interest was presented under the direction of Miss Mary T. Green and Mrs. William C. Hubbard. The affair was largely attended and everyone thoroughly enjoyed the many features provided. It was under the auspices of the Woman's Society for Christian Work.

The program opened with a piano duet, sextette from "Lucia," Donozetti: Mrs. Theodore G. Davis and Miss Ruth Green. Then Miss Carrie E. Randolph read a biography of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, after which a quartet, comprising Mrs. D E. Titsworth, Mrs. William C. Hubbard, Dr. O. B. Whitford and Roy E. Titsworth, with Miss Jessie Utter, accompanist, sang "Stars of the Summer Night," Longfellow-Smart.

Mrs. William C. Hubbard read a number of Longfellow's poems and they were illustrated by living portraits. The pictures were shown from a gilded frame 4x6 feet, the frame being illuminated from the inside by electric lights, while the main room was darkened. The effect was pleasing. The poems and those illustrating them were as follows:

"Night," Miss Ida L. Spicer; "Village Blacksmith," Roland Davis; "Priscilla," Mrs. W. O. Moore; "Minnehaha," Miss Mildred A. Green; "Santa Filomena," Mrs. Sarah L. Wardner; "Gov. Endicott," George L. Babcock. During an intermission, Mrs. Theodore G. Davis sang as a solo, "Beware," Longfellow-Moulton. The program was then continued as follows:

"Maidenhood," Miss Eva Rogers; "Lady Wentworth," Mrs. Starr A. Burdick; "John Alden," Frank J. Hubbard; "Evangeline," Mrs. Geo. L. Babcock; "Paul Revere," Charles F. Neagle.

The concluding number of the program was a selection, "The Day Is Done," Longfellow-Carter, by the quartet. The entertainment took up the greater part of the evening, but sufficient time was left for social hours, which were enjoyed greatly. Those taking part in the program, as well as the committee, deserve much credit. They all appeared in costume and faithfully portrayed the poems.

Fore Careless Persons.

One housekeeper who has mahogany bedroom furniture add a careless family has hit upon a way to protect the top of her bureaus. She buys a remnant of white oilcloth and has it cut to fit the top of the bureau. This is put on beneath the ordinary bureau cover.

Naturally a cover that is not transparent must be used, but those of pique or heavy linen are both smart and serviceable and the oilcloth not only keeps the wood from scratching, but prevents more serious scarring from hit curling irons and ropped matches.

Trained Nurses at Sea.

HOLY CROSS BOYS' BASEBALL SCHEDULE

The Holy Cross Club will not go South, so the players say, to warm up for baseball, but in view of President's Taft inauguration and weather conditions prevailing South the boys will limber up on the cricket field before the firing of the first bat at the umpire to signal the opening of the season of 1909. This is the third year of baseball for the youngsters and some by this time are pretty husky and well seasoned. The club is now so large that three teams will be represented on the diamond, known respectively as Holy Cross, Holy Cross Seconds and Holy Cross Thirds.

The schedule for the first team is entirely filled up to July 1. The seconds will fill out some open dates. The manager of the seconds, Raymond Kenyon, is looking for fine material in the way of opponents and the youngsters of the thirds under the management of George Ball, Jr., are seeking bantam weights that can fall on a ball and hit it remembered that this team will be a bright and fresh (?) as their new uniforms.

April 3 and April 10, practice games with Trinity Reformed on Cricket Field; April 17, Rahway High School at Rahway; April 21, Bound Brook High at Bound Brook; April 24, Hamilton A. HOPE'S AID SOCIETY HOLDS ANNUAL SESSION

Officers were elected and other important business transacted at the annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel Wednesday afternoon. Reports were presented by the secretary, treasurer and committees which showed the society to be in excellent condition. The society has raised during the year $178.21, of which amount $25.35 was secured by penny subscriptions from members and friends and the balance was raised through miscellaneous channels.

By way of disbursements, $100.00 was given to the organ fund. The society also settled its obligation to the music fund, leaving a small balance in the treasury.

After reports were received and adopted these officers were elected for the year:

President, Mrs. Robert Hedglicher; vice-president, Mrs. Gertrude Rittenhouse; treasurer, Mrs. Lawrence R. Ward; secretary, Mrs. Marcus W. Clark. The officers were congratulated upon the efficient and careful way in which they filled their positions during the past year. At the conclusion of the business supper was served in the dining-room of the church by the officers and others. The attendance was large and several new members were elected.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. SUSAN B. STRONG.

The funeral services of Mrs. Susan B. Strong, wife of Albert H. Strong, were held at the home of her sister, Mrs. F. W. Westcott, at Fanwood, at 3 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon and were largely attended by relatives and friends. There were a great many floral tributes. Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Baptist church, Scotch Plains, officiated, reading Scripture selections, offering prayer and making a few remarks.

During the services, Miss S. Etta Raybert, soprano soloist of Trinity Reformed church, sang two impressive selections. The burial was in the Baptist cemetery, Scotch Plains, and the pall-bearers, all nephews of Mrs. Strong, were Nathan S. Taylor, of Newburg, N. Y.; G. B. Taylor, of Brooklyn; George H. Strong, of Warwick, N. Y.; Nathan Strong, of New Milford, N. Y.; Edward C. Fancher, of Fanwood, and Daniel Wray, of New Brunswick.

P.H.S. WINS DUAL MEET

CHAMPION ATHLETIC TEAM.

Lidgate Makes 15 Points for Locals —Visitors Depend on Class and Clark.

P. H. S. won supremacy in athletics over Westfield High School Friday afternoon at Y. M. C. A. gym with a final score of 35 to 27 points. It was the annual interscholastic meet, usually including four schools, but N. P. H. S. and Leal's did not participate this time.

Westfield brought a large crowd of rooters and the locals were backed by an even noisier bunch, so that the spirit of rivalry was intense and was manifested by constant cheering.

The events were all closely contested, which fact kept the interested spectators on edge during the entire meet. In the potato race enthusiasm reached a maximum height and when Snyder and Ricketts of the local team saved the mile relay for P. H. S., the gallery thundered much applause.

Lidgate was the most valuable man for Plainfield, securing 15 points, while Class and Clark were the main stay of the visitors.

These were the results:

Standing boad jump—Howard Runyon, first, Plainfield, 9 ft. 6¾ in.; Eugene Lidgate, second, Plainfield, 9 ft. 2½ in.; Bull, third Westfield, 9 ft. 1¾ in.

Running high jump—Eugene Lidgate, first, Plainfield, 5 ft. ¾ in.; Class, second, Westfield, 4 ft. 11 in.; Clark, third, Westfield, 4 ft. 11 in.

Three standing broad jump—Clark, first, Westfield, 28 ft. 4½ in.; Davis, second, Plainfield, 28 ft. 11 in.; Lidgate, third, Plainfield, 27 ft. 9½ in.

Standing high jump—Runyon, first, Plainfield, 4 ft. 5 in.; Lidgate, second, Plainfield; Class, third, Westfield.

12-pound shot put—Bull, first, Westfield, 32 ft. 5¾ in.; Class, second, Westfield, 32 ft. 3¾ in.; Lidgate, third, 32 ft. 1¾ in.

THE BIG NAVY CRY.

Land-Batteries, Says a Correspondent, Are More Economical and Effective.

The following communication appeared in a New York paper a few days since:

I was much pleased to read, in your yesterday's issue, the letter of "Hague" on The Cry for a Big Navy. I sincerely hope that it may generally read and appreciated. His comments on Congressman Hobson, I think, are quite proper, and that a further increase in our navy is not at all necessary for home defence, that land batteries are more economical and effective. He points out that mines and land batteries prevented the Japanese from entering Port Arthur in 195, and that a large navy is built for offence, on the principal that a man who goes around armed is more likely to pick a quarrel than one who is unarmed, that in sending our navy around the world we are stimulating an increase of the navies of other Powers, which means increased taxation in over taxed countries, and now it is proposed to have this country build four monster war vessels, which are to cost about $10,000,000 each, "to maintain peace." It seems to me that it is an insult to the intelligence of right thinking people to thrust such a reason upon them, and to increase the expenses by the extravagance of the government has been such that it is proposed to tax coffee and tea to help meet the deficiency in revenue this year and next. The Financial Chronicle, in issue of December 5 last, states the deficiency of peace, to be met for the fiscal year ending June 30 next will be $110,600,000, and the follow year $143,900,000. I think it is time for the people to call a halt, that Congressmen should be asked to stop squandering money, particularly in times of peace. In view of present expenditures, I would ask, what would they be in case of a war? It is to be hoped that public opinion will be educated to oppose wars, and have all international disputes and difficulties settled by the Hague Tribunal.

I think it is almost forgotten that, about forty years ago, the Geneva Arbitration settled a question which had it not been settled by such a court, would have led to a war between the United States and Great Britain, which would have been disastrous to both nations.

AGITATING FOR SEWERS

Another Conference Planned Among City, Borough and Dunellen Representatives.

PLANT TO COST ABOUT $230,000.

The General Opinion that It Would Be Located in the Green brook Valley Section.

The question of sewage disposal in North Plainfield is being agitated in a lively way at present, chiefly because the borough has come to a full realization of the fact that it must have a system of disposal and that within a short time. The plan is one that has interested Plainfield and Dunellen as well, all three municipalities being concerned in a proposition to establish one large plant, thus preventing, if possible, the location of several smaller ones.

North Plainfield township is also greatly interested in the scheme, so much so that it has appointed a committee to look after the welfare of that community. Mayor Samuel Townsend, of the borough, has invited Plainfield, Dunellen and the township representatives to attend a conference to be held within a few days to consider detailed plans.

The latest proposition is to establish sewage beds in the extreme southern portion of North Plainfield township in the vicinity of the Bound Brook line. There is some opposition to this on the part of property-owners in that vicinity, but it is argued that those who favor the plan are largely in the majority and if this be the case seems to be grounds for the report that the new arrangement will be adopted and become a fact.

Dunellen is also much concerned about the matter for it would mean that Plainfield's sewage beds would be removed from its backdoor and located a couple of miles away. This change would open up a large tract for building purposes in the west end of the city, and would make it an attractive place. It would also benefit Dunellen, as well as give the residents of the place a sewer.

It is estimated that the total cost of the new plant which would take care of Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen, as well as North Plainfield township, possibly, would be $230,000. Divided among the several municipalities it would make the expense on each one comparatively light when the cost of the trunk line sewer is considered. Besides the cost of maintenance would be small as compared with the other scheme. Many if not a majority of the largest property-owners concerned favor the building of one large system into which all three municipalities can sewer and it is agreed that it is to what it will have to come to eventually.

MR. AND MRS. WHEELER PLAN A SUMMER CRUISE.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Wheeler, of Park avenue, have returned home from Florida, having been there since December 1. Mr. Wheeler had good success shooting, getting deer, turkey, quail and ducks. Just before leaving for home he purchased a large cruising yacht. The captain will leave Daytona on April 1 and bring the yacht to New York, where it will be refitted and go into commission June 1. The yacht has four double state rooms below, dining-room, 17x16, large galley and storeroom, two bathrooms and toilets.

On the upper deck there is a saloon or smoking room, 15x13, and aft of that the owner's quarters. Mr. Wheeler will use the yacht on Long Island Sound this summer and send it back to Florida in the fall for winter use.

RAILROAD TAXES FOR MUNICIPALITIES—STOKES

Former Governor Edward C. Stokes has given out a statement discussing the fundamental principles of the 1906 act, under which main stem railroad taxes are collected and distributed, in part, to the municipalities for school purposes. Among other things, Mr. Stokes states:

"The dedication of the increase in the main stem tax to the taxpayers for the use of the public schools has apparently overshadowed the fundamental fact that these moneys belong now to the State for State uses, but to the localities for local uses. This distinction is of the highest importance. The agitation for equal taxation, in reality for increased tax on the railroads, was not begun by the State, but by the localities. The State made no claim that it was not receiving a sufficient amount of tax from the railroads. It was the localities, who claimed that they were not receiving a sufficient amount of tax therefrom nor a fair amount of tax, as compared with the amount they were receiving from individuals. As an illustration, Jersey City insisted, not the State should receive more revenue from the railroads, but that municipality should receive an increased revenue therefrom, and in localities. This State made no calculation to the individual taxpayer. The whole object of Jersey City's contention was to increase their revenues, not the revenues of the State.

"The Republican party in 1904 promised, specifically a modification of the railroad tax law for the benefit of the municipalities in the case of second-class railroad property, and promised generally, after investigation, to remedy any inequalities in taxation, so far as the main stem was concerned, so that all property, except that used for religious, educational and charitable purposes, should 'bear its full, equal and just burden of taxation without discrimination.'

"The history of the equal tax movement, the party pledged, the legislative declaration, mean, if they mean anything, that the increased tax upon the main stem was not made for the benefit of the State treasury, but for the localities for their uses."

GIVES HIS GAS REBATES FOR WHITE PLAGUE WORK

Charles A. Clark has sent to the Daily Press his batch of receipted gas bills amounting to $1.50 each from the Central Union Gas Company, of New York City, for gas consumed at his former home, 1071 Franklin avenue, Borough of Bronx, between December 14, 1906 and October 1, 1907. It is the wish of Mr. Clark that the money paid him on the rebates shall be devoted to the fund started for fighting tuberculosis here, and accordingly the bills have been turned by this paper over to Leon R. Thurlow, treasurer of the Plainfield Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis, for collection.

The practise of donating the gas rebates to the work of the New York White Plague agents has been the means of swelling the fund being raised in New York to stamp out the dred disease. Mr. Clark, who removed to Plainfield from the city, is much interested in the work of the local tuberculosis society and decided to donate his rebate to the local work. New Yorkers are securing affidavits of their rights for rebates in great numbers, and in many cases as rent-payers and paying them the rebates shall be paid to Gotham's tuberculosis society.

The firm of E. L. Suffern & Sons, public accountants, of New York, the members of which are Plainfielders, is in charge of the refunding of the gas rebates, and much of this work is attended to by H. J. Cochran, of Hillside avenue.

The Englishwoman.

The searching glare of the law courts has been brought to bear upon the subject of the English woman's figure. During the progress of a case between a wholesale customer and a draper expert opinion was called to compare the figures of English women to those of the American and French.

It was discovered that Americans lack the Englishwoman's height, though their waists are longer and waists larger; the stock shoulder size for American ladies is six inches, while the English woman can boast of but four and three-quarters.

But the length from neck to waist for the average woman in America is only fourteen and a half inches, while in England it is sixteen and a half.

GREET PASTOR AND WIFE LENT QUEERLY OBSERVED IN CLEVELAND'S MEMORY

First Baptists Hold Annual Reception for Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Chambliss.

MUSICAL PROGRAM PROVIDED.

Mrs. David J. Yerkes Assisted in Receiving—Refreshments Were Served to Visitors.

The annual reception to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss at the First Baptist church Thursday, was attended by nearly three hundred members of the church and congregation and proved a happy affair, affording all an opportunity to become better acquainted with the pastor and his wife. They were assisted in receiving by Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, wife of the late beloved pastor.

The reception was held in the Sunday-school room and this was elaborately decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns and potted plants, while the platform, where the guests were received, was made attractive with handsome rugs, easy chairs and flowers. The numerous incandescent lights were shaded by red crepe paper giving a soft subdued light.

During the evening there was an informal program of music furnished by William E. MacClymont at the piano and William Van Eps on the mandolin. A program of classical and popular selections were rendered to the pleasure of all. Sociability was the predominant feature of the affair and everyone joined in making it a success. There were several committees, as A. E. Finn and members of the Park Avenue Baptist church and Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Musson and members of the Temple Baptist church to extend greetings.

Miss Ida Yerkes was chairman of the general committee and Mrs. Harold Serrell was chairman of the refreshment committee with the following as assistants: Mrs. Louis Matlack, Mrs. George H. Robins, Mrs. F. O. Dunning, Mrs. S. St. John Butcher and Mrs. Walter C. Dobbins, Miss Jennie Whitney. The following women were waitresses, serving ice cream, cake and coffee: The Misses Helen Armstrong, Helen Adams, Ada Fountain, Carrie Coombs, Alice Drake, Marguerite Dodge, Alene Carver, Ruth Moore, Carrie Demler, Gladys Leland and Leona Billion. Mrs. Robert Lowry was in charge of the musical program for the evening.

Automobiles Not in Experimental Stage.

The question of equipping the new East End fire house with an automobile apparatus is by no means certain. The Councilmanic fire committee, or at least some of the members, are not convinced that it would be a wise move. Mr. Mygatt, who has made more or less of a study of the question, had a personal interview with Chief Croker of the New York fire department a few days ago, and the latter informed him that in his opinion the automobile apparatus is still in the experimental stage and is not considered absolutely reliable for fire purposes. However, he believes that it will be the coming thing for fire-fighting. This opinion does not agree with that of Chief Doane, who says that he now believes the automobile apparatus to be the only thing, although it was not long ago that he had the same idea as Chief Croker. Chief Doane says that the machine has passed the experimental stage and that the installation of one in this city. Still, while the fire committee is undivided in its opinion the Common Council is not likely to purchase an auto machine. The committee now intends to advertise for bids for a combination chemical and hose wagon.—Plainfield, N. J., Press.

Thirty-five years ago chemical engines were first used. Every large city in the world except New York many years ago learned that chemical engines had passed the experimental stage, and from fifty to eighty per cent. of all fires outside of New York are now extinguished by chemical engines. It may take New York thirty-five years to learn that automobile apparatus has passed the experimental stage. Auto fire apparatus has passed the experimental stage and many auto hose and chemical wagons, underwriters' salvage corps wagons and chiefs' vehicles have been in successful operation in many cities, New York included, for long periods and the chief of Plainfield knows much better than does the chief of New York what is adapted to the requirements of the Plainfield fire department. New York is neither a leader nor a good advisor on modern fire apparatus and fire department methods.—Plainfield Herald.

AT WARREN CHAPEL MEETING.

Balls, Parades and Festivals Except on Ash Wednesday and Good Friday, She Says.

The work of the past year was reviewed in the annual reports by the officers of the Ladies' Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel held in the church auditorium Friday afternoon, when officers for the coming year were elected. The reports show that the society, which numbers 102 active members and 35 honorary members, has been doing a valuable work in both foreign and domestic fields during the past year. The speaker of the day was Miss S. F. Conklin, of Roslyn, L. I., who has been a missionary under the direction of the New York board for the past eight years.

The annual election of officers resulted in the choice of Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman to act as president of the organization in continuation of her work in this office for the past seven years. Mrs. George Hoagland and Mrs. William Newmiller were chosen as the vice-presidents, succeeding Mrs. Theodore Martin and Mrs. John Higgins. The balloting for the other officers resulted in each case in a re-election, as follows: Recording secretary, Mrs. Gibson Smith; treasurer, Mrs. John Green; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. W. Gavett; secretary of literature, Mrs. Austin Jenkins.

During the year the society has raised $229 for mission work; of this amount, $153 has been turned over to the New York board for use in the foreign mission field, and the balance has been turned over to the synod of New Jersey for use in the home field. Boxes of clothing and useful articles have been sent off for the benefit of Dr. Grenfell's work in Labrador, the home mission field, in Missouri and the Freedmen.

Of especial interest was Miss Conklin's talk of the work among the Cubans at Havana. She told of the observance of Lent there as a period of fasting and rejoicing, stating that the only fast days are Ash Wednesday and Good Friday. On the last-named day, the people wear mourning and are strict about their church attendance. But all during Lent, balls and festivals are held with great frequency. The Sunday d

FOR BETTER METHODS OF ROAD CONSTRUCTION.

State Road Commissioner Frederick Gilkyson has planned a campaign of education which, it is expected, will result in improved methods of road construction being introduced in some of the North Jersey counties. Mr. Gilkyson, State Road Supervisor Robert Winsor, of this city, the county engineer of Camden county and members of the Camden Board of Freeholders, will meet tomorrow with the engineers of Sussex, Hunterdon, Morris, Passaic, Middlesex and Monmouth counties, the purpose being to inspect several roads built in Camden county the past year in the construction of which new methods and ideas were used.

The Mayor, the street commissioner and the Street Committee of Morristown will join the party. The officials will be taken over the roads in automobiles. The highways to be inspected are the Imperial road, running into Westville; the Blackwood turnpike, upon which heavy asphalt oil was used as binder of the macadam, and the Evesham road, a section of which was constructed of Amesite.

SEEK SHORE FORGER.

A forger's doings have just been made public at Atlantic City. He first stole printed private checks from Donato Innelli, proprietor of Innelli's Hotel, at Atlantic City, forged the papers and secured nearly $1,000 from trusting New York furniture dealers, who supposed the man to be a prosperous hotel man and gave their goods and change in return for the forged checks.

None of the checks which have been coming to Innelli's Bank at Atlantic City for several days have been cashed, the forger making the mistake of signing them D. Innelli, following the printed name on the checks instead of the full name which Innelli uses in his banking. Detectives are in search of a tranger who spent several weeks at Atlantic City and who is suspected.

Jeremiah Boylan Surprised.

In honor of the fifty-ninth anniversary of his birth, a complete surprise party was given to Jeremiah W. Boylan, of Roesler street, Saturday night. There were about fifty relatives and friends present from Newark, Metuchen, New Dover, Oak Tree and this city. The affair was a delightful one and Mr. Boylan was showered with best wishes for many happy returns of the day. During the evening there were vocal and instrumental music and games were played. Mr. Boylan received a number of suitable gifts.

AMUSEMENTS.

The lesson of common-sense taught in "A Woman's Way," Miss Grace George's new comedy by Thompson Buchanan, now playing at the Hackett theatre, New York, promises to be taken to heart by the young women of New York city. Already the play has established the unique record of drawing more bridal couples than any piece produced in years. No less than thirty-five brides and prospective brides appeared at the box-office last week for seats. The remarkable feature was that each time the young woman came alone. One of them explained —"This is a piece that all young husbands should see. I want John to know what I will do if he stays out nights." The teaching of Marion Stanton will doubtless bear fruit in the new handling of that generally uncomfortable person—the other woman. Instead of hysteria and the divorce court Marion Stanton uses common sense and good humor, with the result that when she has gotten through making her husband and the other woman ridiculous, hubby is only too glad to come back, and be good, with never a thought of the woman who at the beginning of the play he felt sure he loved. Marion's receipt is very simple—"Give him so much of the other woman that he becomes heartily sick of the subject, and then when he is properly repentent, be good and forgiving."

With its new circus bill of all imported acts, a new impetus has been given to the already long lasting prosperity of the Hippodrome season. Every performance is one of crowds and never before has a bill at the big playhouse delighted and so thoroughly satisfied so many people. Not only is the new circus one of novelties, but it is unique in the feature that never before were so many really beautiful women seen together in arenic acts. The three Athletas, whose feats of strength are marvelous, are beautiful women with figures rivaling the heralded models of these days. The Pasanitis riding act is a gem and presents two women of wonderful grace and loveliness. The musical elephants have made a tremendous hit, as has also Loyal's riding dog. The big spectacle of "Sporting Days" is brilliant and alive as ever, with its realistic scenes showing the nation's favorite games. The Ballet of Birdland is the talk of the town, and "The Battle in the Skies" is full of realistic scenic wonders. The Golden Gardens show the great tank with the mermaid a mystery and living pictures rising from the water. The big flag number, with the stars and stripes made of girls, is another sensation. Marceline, Holland and a score of clowns furnish plenty of merriment.

Julia Marlowe inaugurated her New York season under the management of the Messrs. Shubert Monday evening at Daly's theatre, New York city. Mary Johnston's poetic drama of the French Revolution, "The Goddess of Reason," which the Messrs. Shubert announce that Miss Marlowe's New York engagement is limited to four weeks. Apart from the interest attached to any presentation by Miss Marlowe, and apart from the great literary interest in "The Goddess of Reason," which was highly commended by the most authoritative critics when first given to the public in book form, this appearance of Miss Marlowe is of special importance as her first New York appearance within five years as an individual star. Mary Johnston, the author of "The Goddess of Reason," is widely known as the author of such eminently successful novels as "To Have and To Hold" and "Audrey," both of which in charge the date of the inauguration of President from March 4 to the last Thursday in April. The movement was started as a result of the bad weather that marked inaugural day this year and before.

Among the Governors who approve are Hughes, of New York; Draper, of Massachusetts; Fort, of New Jersey; Pennewill, of Delaware; Stuart, of Pennsylvania; Swanson, of Virginia, and Noel, of Mississippi.

Senators Depew, of New York; Aldrich, of Rhode Island; Crane, of Massachusetts; Bailey, of Texas; La Follette, of Wisconsin; McEnery, of Mississippi, and Fletcher, of Florida, approve.

Indication are that a constitutional amendement will be passe, upon by Congress this session fixing the third Thursday in April as the inaugural date.

Foulard Silks.

After years of suppression the foulard has come back to its own. It is reappearing for the spring trade in all styles, figured and plain, and deserves the popularity which is expected for it. It is at once the coolest and the most durable of the summer silks, while looking far more elegant and draping more gracefully that the raw silk varities.

LITERARY

Lindsay Denison, the well-known newspaper and magazine writer, contributes to the March number of The Circle Magazine a remarkable article, in which he details a hitherto unreported conversation with Theodore Roosevelt. The conversation took place at a time when the President little expected ever to be elected to his office, believing that the machine of his party had marked him for destruction.

The Red Book Magazine for March contains several features of more than ordinary importance. First of them, perhaps, is an extremely frank article by Professor Frederick Starr of the University of Chicago on "Women's Morality—Savage and Civilized." What Professor Starr would have us understand is that so far as her morality is concerned the woman of civilization has nothing to boast of over her sister of the jungle.

We are in receipt of an unusually attractive calendar for 1909 from the publishers of Recreation, 24 West 39th Street, New York. The calendar is composed of two heavy mounts of art paper, on the smaller of which is tipped an attractive picture printed in double tone sepia, showing two children leading a younger one into the ocean; the youngsters are accompanied by a dog who seems as interested as the boys.

Legislation which is wanted by the whole nation cannot be obtained. Why? A. E. Thomas' article, "The Barnacles on the Ship of State," in the March number of "Success Magazine," answers this question and throws interesting side-lights on prominent politicians of the day. In the same number Ernest Poole in his article, "The Vegetable Factories of Paris," shows us what can be accomplished by intensive cultivation of the land.

The two series which gave distinction to the February Atlantic continue with increasing interest in the March number. The Diary of Gideon Welles relates very fully the Cabinet debates over the Emancipation Proclamation and describes with perfect frankness the various intrigues of Cabinet members which constantly threatened to destroy the success of the Lincoln administration.

Lippincott's for March is as fresh and vigorous as the month's bracing winds. More than half its substantial bulk is given up to the complete novel—"A Knight Errant in Broadway," by Rupert Sargent Holland, whose book, "The Count at Harvard," was well received a couple of years ago. Mr. Holland takes as his theme the career of a rather scrupulous young man who comes to New York from a small country town to seek his fortune.

That most interesting and unique of all magazines—The Wide World —each month contains an astonishing amount of attractive material gathered from all the quarters of the globe. To travelers no less than to those who are unable to penetrate beyond the confines of their own country this world has become a necessity, for it contains information about out-of-the-way places, customs, and peoples which are to be found in no other magazine.

The Popular Science Monthly for March contains the following articles: "The Electric Operation of Steam Railways," by Professor J. B. Whitehead; "The Influence of Radium Rays on a Few Life Processes of Plants," by Professor C. Stuart Gager; "The Work of Boards of Health," by Dr. George A. Soper; "A Biographical History of Botany at St. Louis, Missouri," by Dr. Perley Spaulding; "Fire's Havoc a Senseless Waste," by F. W. Fitzpatrick; "The World's Annual Metal Crop," by Theo. F. Van Wagenen; "Science and Morality," by Professor Albert P. Mathews.

The Strand Magazine for March provides its readers with a budget of good things and is particularly strong in fiction. Hall Caine's latest novel, "The White Christ," is continued and increases in interest as the plot thickens. The present instalment is rendered intelligible to new readers by the addition of a short synopsis of previous chapters —an excellent plan which might be adopted with advantage by other magazines.

In the March American Magazine, Mrs. L. H. Harris states a very old truth in a new way. She says: "The more lonesome a man air, Mister, the more he's got to git Eve-hungry. Adam hadn't et his first meal in Paradise before the Lord knowed that was the seat of his trouble; and every man since then gits a tech of it soon or late."

Edith Wharton contributes the most striking feature to the March number of Scribner's Magazine. It is the first complete short story in a series to be called "Tales of Men." It is a powerful description, ingenious and pathetic, of the attempts which a man makes to escape from what Henry James has called "this moral predicament." Mrs. Wharton has never done a more original short story than "The Bolted Door." Professor J. Laurence Laughlin discusses the next great monetary question—whether our currency should be issued by the [illegible] ment, or by the National Banks chartered by the Government.

"Let the buyer beware!" John Parr says is the watchword of the Wall Street manipulator. His article in the March Everybody's is called "The Stock Yards of New York," and is the second shot fired against the ruinous practice of margin gambling. It shows by the citing of actual cases how the big speculators beat each other out of money that they have wrested from the unsophisticated outsider.

ALMS HOUSE HEADS NAMED BY COUNCIL

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McDowell, of Clinton avenue, have been engaged as superintendent and matron for the city alms house to succeed Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Wolverton, who have resigned. The change is effected April 1. This action was taken at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council Monday, in accordance with a resolution offered by Councilman C. C. Randolph, chairman of the alms committee, who explained that they were selected out of seventy applicants.

The appointment of Mr. and Mrs. McDowell caused considerable fun. Councilman Herbert Buxton was president pro tem, Mr. Tolles being detained at home by illness, and when Clerk MacMurry read the names, Mr. Buxton understood them as "Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McCardell." This provoked a hearty laugh on the part of those present. The misunderstanding was quickly explained.

Mr. and Mrs. McDowell have been employed at the Watchung Hunt Club and have had experience in the line of work they will be required to do at the city alms house.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS EXEMPLIFY DEGREES.

About twenty members of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, attended the exemplification of the second and third degrees of the order in Music Hall, Elizabeth, Sunday, including District Deputy O'Keefe, who assisted in the ceremonies. The second degree work was done under the direction of Elizabeth Council, while both Elizabeth and Bayley councils conferred the third degree. Nine candidates received the second degree.

Practically every municipality in *the tale was represented in the gath*ering. The Elizabeth Knights entertained the visitors after the ceremonies. It was reported that all of the councils in the State are in a flourishing condition with bright prospects for the future.

NEWSPAPER TO PUBLISH ALL ASSESSMENTS FREE.

Taking advantage of the offer of a weekly paper to publish the list of property assessments free of charge, the Easton, Pa., Councils unanimously passed a resolution authorizing the special commission appointed recently on equalization of taxes to have typewritten copy prepared.

Mayor McKeen was sitting in the Common Council chamber at the time. "Well, I've got my fountain pen, and I guess I'll sign that," he said. The whole transaction occupied three minutes. One of the daily papers will publish the list, as there is a sentiment among the taxpayers that each person should know what his neighbor pays in taxes, and the publication of the list has not been tried at Easton.

The Care of House Plants.

A mistake that causes many failures in the growing of ferns and other plants that are stood in pardinieres, is that the water which drains through the earth and the hole in the bottom of the earthenware pot is allowed to accumulate in the jardiniere.

In this way a plant is often soaked in water for days at a time and naturally it becomes soggy and sickly. An easy way to overcome this difficulty is, about fifteen minutes after a plant has been thoroughly watered, to turn the jardiniere and wipe out all moisture that has drained through. This may seem like trouble, but it is not half the bother of dickering with sickly plants.

The Umbrella Handle.

One ingenious housekeeper has hit upon a novel rack for her bathroom, much used by the children. She unscrewed the curved wooden handle of an old umbrella, bored a hole through the upper part for a hanger and stuck small screw hooks in the handle at intervals. A large wooden spool was slipped on the cut off part of the handle for an ornament and was covered with several coats of gilt paint. This rack, when hung on the way made a convenient holder for towels, and some of the smaller hooks were even utilized for toothbrushes.

The Bill Outside.

"Why don't you come in occasionally between drinks," demanded the wife, "and see the play?"

"I don't need to," replied the bibulous husband. "The bartender is familiar with the plot, imitates the actors, and also knows a lot of gossip about their personal and family affairs."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

WON'T REVIVE CHARTER

PLAINFIELDERS AT HEARING.

Passage of Measure Drawn for Giving Life to Dead Charter Would Be Disastrous.

Efforts Monday at Trenton on the part of those particularly interested in the House bill introduced by Rene P. F. Von Minden, of Middlesex, and generally supposed to revive all defunct perpetual franchises of street car railroads in the State, to get the House committee on municipal corporations to report the measure met with no success. The bill, House 344, was introduced last Monday night, and reported out Wednesday afternoon. It was represented to the committee members that one Mary W. Board, of South Plainfield, desired the passage of the measure to permit the completion of a little horse car line in Middlesex and Union counties, and accounted for the hasty report, it was said.

When the real possibilities of the bill became known, there was hastening to and fro and the bill, through the efforts of Chairman H. Stacy Smith, of the municipal corporations committee, Speaker John D. Prince and Assemblyman Amos H. Radcliffe, of Passaic, was withdrawn from the House and taken back to the committee. The delegation here to urge the committee to report the measure again was numerous. At the conclusion of argument Chairman Smith told Frederick Albert Duttenhofer, of this city, that there was no use expecting a favorable report, as the members were unanimously in favor of either reporting adversely or holding the bill.

His advice was that Assemblyman Von Minden and his friends see the Attorney General and have a bill drawn that would not be so general and would affect only the charter of the company proposing to run a line from Plainfield to Metuchen, by way of South Plainfield. It was too late to accomplish anything last night. Mr. Smith said that if the measure came to them in proper form the committe members would probably report it as a committee substitute for it.

City Counsel James R. Nugent, of Newark, was one of those who declared the Von Minden bill bad. He gave it as his legal opinion that the Attorney General's department could draft a measure affecting only the Plainfield case.

An affidavit by Miss Broad was offered by her in person, setting forth that search had been made by her lawyers and that to the best of her knowledge and belief based on records, there would be no charter that that her street railway company affected by S 344. The search covered grants from 1856 to 1908, it was stated.

George L. Record, of Jersey City, said it had been his experience when he got into court that such bills as Von Minden's revived a lot of old charters, "giving life to things that were dead." Mr. Dutenhofer said that he and his associates for Miss Broad and others had engaged Charles L. Corbin, whose home is in Metuchen, to draft the bill.

"We had no axe to grind and are interested in but the one proposition," said Mr. Dutenhofer to a reporter for this newspaper. "We wanted to revive our old perpetual franchise. I do not believe in these limited franchises. The limited franchise law of today is ruining New Jersey. You cannot get a dollar of investment in a road that has only a 20-year franchise."

Here is the Von Minden bill, brief, to the point, and sweeping:

"When the time limited for the completion of any horse or street car railroad or any part thereof has expired by the provisions of any statute of this State or the charter of the company authorized to construct such railroad has expired by reason of delay in construction, such charter shall be revived and such time shall be and the same is hereby extended to the first day of July, one thousand nine hundred and ten."

FIRST BAPTIST MEN'S CLUB MAKES SOME CHANGES.

*The Men's Club of the First Bap*tist church met Monday and discussed the problem of creating more life and spirit in the organization. Each of the members present expressed his views and made suggestions, the outcome of the conference being that instead of one lecture the programs of the future will contain several interesting features.

Luncheon will be served at the conclusion of the entertainment and the balance of the evening devoted to social chat. The next regular meeting of the club will be held Monday night, April 5, and for that occasion the program committee promises to have something especially attractive.

DOMESTIC TO SHARE IN A $7,000. LEGACY

Good news has come out of the far West for Miss Sarah O'Brien, of the borough, for she has received word that her sister, Bridget O'Brien, who died about a year ago in Rochester, Minnesota, left an estate valued at more than $7,000 and made no will. The borough woman, who is employed as a domestic, has not seen her sister since nearly twenty years ago.

Bridget O'Brien, who was also a domestic, made her money in mining stock, which she bought on a "tip" from her employer, a man named Richardson. The Richardsons engaged the woman when they lived in Paterson about twenty years ago, and shortly afterward moved to Minnesota, where he was successful in various mining enterprises. At his suggestion, the woman invested her wages in mining stock, bought at a low figure, and was particularly fortunate in her investment.

The estate will be shared by the borough woman, a sister in the West, and several others in North Dakota. Surrogate Latimer, of Rochester county, Minnesota, has notified Harry C. Runyon, Miss O'Brien's attorney, of the legacy, and urges him to make an effort to locate the children of two other sisters of the dead woman.

PLAN DINNER IN HONOR OF HARVARD PRESIDENT

The Howard Club of New Jersey will give a dinner Friday, April 2, to President Charles W. Eliot, of that institution of learning, at the Morristown school, Morristown. The affair will be under the supervision of Dr. Richard P. Newton, of Montclair, president of the school, and Francis Call Woodman, head master of the school. The dinner committee will consist of Mr. Woodman, Arthur P. Butler, T. Quincy Browne, Jr., Grinnell Willis and Robert D. Foote.

It is expected that Harvard men from all over the State will be present, as well as Governor Fort and other distinguished guests.

President Eliot will speak before the Schoolmaster's Club of Morristown, in Central Presbyterian church on the afternoon of Thursday, April 1, and before the Montclair High School Alumni Association in the First Congregational church, that town, on the same night.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE GETS JOLT.

Woman suffrage received a setback at Washington, N. J., in a debate between teams representing the Epworth League and the official board of the Methodist church, Saturday night. The league, on the affirmative side, presented forceful arguments as they like housewife and other members of her sex should not be given the right of franchise, and the judges awarded them the decision by a vote of 2 to 3.

"Ladies' Night" at Trinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter David will furnish the entertainment for the "ladies' night" meeting of the Dutch Arms of Trinity Reformed church on Friday night, April 16. Mrs. David is a harpist and Mr. David is a humorist. Both are very talented. The affair will be held in the main auditorium.

Martin Stuisman, who was recently admitted to the New Jersey Bar, following his graduation from the New York University last June, has taken desk room in the office of Assistant Prosecutor Frank L. Hetfield, Jr., in the Vanderbeek building.

Vineland Daughters of Liberty celebrated their fifteenth anniversary Monday evening with a literary program and banquet.

Mrs. Anna W. Bullock, widow of Anthony Bullock, was found dead in bed at her home at Chesterfield yesterday, aged sixty-five.

In search of better health, Judge Joline, of Camden, is on his way to California, where he expects to remain about five weeks, through the advice of his physician.

Through a resolution the Camden Board of Health Monday afternoon decided to arrest all milk dealers who fail to take out a license by April 1. The license fee is $1. The fine for neglecting to take out a license is $20.

Claiming it would put the glass factories out of business, a Millville mass-meeting of glassblowers adopted a resolution to protest against the factory bill pending in the Legislature, to raise the age limit of child labor.
